PREFACE.

NINE EDITIONS having been ſold of this LARGE WORK is a clear proof that it ſtands high in the public opinion. The laſt was greatly enlarged and corrected by Mr. RUFFHEAD, and the EDITOR of this Tenth Edition: among other Improvements, one of very great Importance was made, viz. the ſubject-matter throughout, wherever neceſſary, was divided and arranged, under proper heads, very much to the reader's accommodation.

As the laws of a great commercial ſtate are perpetually varying, and the ſcience of juriſprudence continually improving, thoſe variations and improvements were introduced: a great variety of extracts from, and references to the beſt authors, were alſo made; many of which were publiſhed ſince the Eighth Edition, others not conſulted by the former EDITORS. The ſame plan hath been here purſued.

The original WORK contained a great fund of learning, uſeful and curious, relative to our ANTIENT HISTORY, LAWS and CUSTOMS: Many additions were made on thoſe ſubjects in the ninth, which have been conſiderably increaſed in the preſent edition.

The rapid ſale of that, induced the proprietors to apply to the editor for his aſſiſtance in the publication of a Tenth Edition. Their offers were liberal, and he was induced to comply.

He hath been enabled by the kindneſs of his friends, and his own experience, to make many additions, with ſome corrections, and to introduce various deciſions of a late date: he hath likewiſe given the ſubſtance of ſeveral ſtatutes paſſed, ſubſequent to that publication.

Perhaps it may not be preſuming too far to ſay, that the work, in it's preſent form, is the beſt and moſt extenſive of the kind. That it will be very uſeful to the Lawyer, the Magiſtrate, the Merchant, the Gentleman, the Tradeſman, and to every one who is deſirous of being acquainted with the Laws, the Cuſtoms, and the Conſtitution of his Country; the ſubſtance of which is here arranged in a form the moſt uſeful, that of a Dictionary; of all other forms, the moſt convenient. It is obviouſly ſo in a work treating of ſuch peculiar and extenſive ſubjects, and therefore, on that head, it doth not require recommendation.

As it is impoſſible for one volume to contain every thing on ſuch ſubjects, to render the work as uſeful and valuable as may be, REFERENCES are made, on every Occaſion, where neceſſary, to the moſt approved Authors.

It may with truth be affirmed, that the NINTH EDITION hath received the approbation of the beſt judges in this kingdom, as to it's value and utility. It is hoped that the preſent will merit their approbation.

The EDITOR craves for himſelf the indulgence of the public: he hath gone through the preſent (as through the former) edition, with labor and difficulty, beyond expreſſion: The avocations of his profeſſion engaged much of his time; yet he hath done every thing his leiſure and abilities would permit, to render the work worthy of acceptance.

It is much to be wiſhed that men of Buſineſs would ſometimes employ a few leiſure hours in productions which might be uſeful to their country; for, although the man of reading may underſtand the theoretic, yet he who is converſant in the practical part of any profeſſion, muſt poſſeſs advantages that can be acquired by experience only.

Although the EDITOR doth not preſume to think that this work is perfect (for what human compoſition is ſo!) yet he may, without preſumption, ſay, it contains a great body of antient and modern learning; (not the production of him alone, but of many able men,) much more, perhaps, than any performance of the kind, hitherto publiſhed in this Country; and he thinks it will, upon a cloſe examination, appear to be by far the beſt Law-Lexicon, and the moſt extenſive Repertorium, extant.

The Proprietors have, with reſpect to this, as well as the former EDITION, been at very great expence to give the WORK that ſuperiority they wiſhed it ſhould poſſeſs, and for their ſakes the EDITOR hopes it will be kindly received.

As to himſelf he hath only farther to add, that he wiſhes ſome abler hand, more at leiſure, had undertaken the preſent publication. Such however, as the performance is, he truſts it, with the greateſt diffidence, to the candour of an indulgent public.

The Whole Law, and The Practice thereof, under all the Heads and Titles of the Same.

A.

A, The firſt letter of the alphabet, which being prefixed to words in Engliſh, ſignifies as much as un in French, as a man, un homme.

Ab, From the word abbot, and in the beginning of any place ſignifieth, that the place belonged to ſome abbey.

Abacot, A cap of ſtate, wrought up in the form of two crowns worn by our ancient Britiſh kings. Chron. Angl. 1463. Spelman's Gloſſ.

Abactors, (abactores, derived ab abigendo) Stealers and drivers away of cattle by herds, or in great numbers. They are thus diſtinguiſhed from fures: nam qui ovem unam ſurripuerit, ut fur coercetur, qui gregem ut abactor. MS.

Abacus, arithmetick, From the abacus, or table ſtrewed with duſt, on which the ancients made their characters and figures. Omnium liberalium artium peritus, abacum præcipue, lunarem compotum & curſum rimatus. Knighton's Chron. lib. 1. c. 3.

Abandum, (abandonum) Any thing ſequeſtred, proſcribed, or abandoned. Abandon, i. e. In bannum res miſſa.—A thing bann'd or denounced as forfeited and loſt; from whence is to abandon, deſert, or forſake as loſt and gone.

Abarnare, From the Sax. Abarian, to diſcover and diſcloſe to a magiſtrate any ſecret crime.—Si homo furtivum aliquid in domo ſua occultaverit, & ita fuerit abarnatus, rectum eſt ut inde habeat quod quæſivit. Leg. Canuti Reg. cap. 104.

Abate, As derived from the French Abbatre, ſignifies to proſtrate, break down or deſtroy; and in law, to abate a caſtle or fort, is interpreted to beat it down. Old Nat. Brev. 45. Weſtm. 1. c. 17. Abater Maiſon, is to ruin or caſt down a houſe, and level it with the ground. Thus, to abate a writ, is to defeat or overthrow it, by ſome error or exception. Brit. c. 48. In the ſtatute de conjunctim feoffatis, the writ ſhall be abated, that is, ſhall be diſabled and overthrown. 34 Ed. 1. ſtat. 1. The appeal ſhall abate, and be defeated by reaſon of covin or deceit. Staundf. Pl. Cr. 148. And the juſtices ſhall cauſe the ſaid writ to be abated and quaſhed. 11 H. 6. c. 2. The word abate likewiſe is ſometimes uſed in contradiſtinction to diſſeiſe, and as he that puts a perſon out of poſſeſſion of his houſe, land, &c. is ſaid to diſſeiſe; ſo he that ſteps in between the former poſſeſſor and his heir, is ſaid to abate. Kitch. 173. Old Nat. Br. 115.

Abatement, (from the French) in Latin intruſio, or rather interpoſitio, to diſtinguiſh it from intruſion after the death of tenant for life; is uſed in that ſenſe for the act of the abator, as the abatement and entry of the heir into the land before he hath agreed with the lord. Old Nat. Brev. 91.

Abatement, when it relates to writs or plaints, is the quaſhing or deſtroying of the plaintiff's writ or plaint; and under this ſignification, which is moſt general, it is uſed to denote a plea put in by the defendant, in which he ſhews cauſe to the court why he ſhould not be impleaded or ſued, or if impleaded, not in the manner and form he then is; therefore praying that the writ or plaint may abate, that is, that the ſuit of the plaintiff may for that time ceaſe. Co. Lit. 134. b. 227. a. F. N. B. 115. Cowel. Gilb. H. C. P. 186. Terms de Ley 1.

Herein it is material to conſider,

1ſt, What may be pleaded in abatement.

2dly, The time and manner of pleading in abatement.

3dly, The judgment in abatement.

As to what may be pleaded in abatement, the defendant may plead,

I. To the juriſdiction of the court.
II. To the perſon of the plaintiff, as
  1. Outlawry.
  2. Excommunication.
  3. Alienage.
  4. Præmunire.
  5. Popiſh recuſancy.
III. To the perſon of the defendant.
IV. To the writ.
V. To the count or declaration.
VI. Abatement by demiſe of the king, marriage, or death of parties.

I. With reſpect to pleas in abatement to the juriſdiction of the court, it is to be premiſed, that the courts of Weſtminſter have a ſuperintendency over all other courts, and may, if they exceed their juriſdiction, reſtrain them by prohibition; or if their proceedings are erroneous, may rectify them by writs of error and falſe judgment. Nothing ſhall be intended within the juriſdiction of an inferior court, but what is expreſsly alledged; ſo that where an action is brought on a promiſe in a court below, not only the promiſe, but the conſideration of the promiſe, muſt be alledged to ariſe within an inferior juriſdiction; diction ; becauſe ſuch inferior courts are bounden in their original creation, to cauſes ariſing within the limits of ſuch new-erected juriſdiction ; and therefore if a debtor, that has contracted a debt out of ſuch limited juriſdiction, comes within it, yet they cannot ſue there for ſuch debt, becauſe the cauſe of action did not ariſe within ſuch juriſdiction ; and therefore it is not within the limits of their commiſſion to try and determine ; for which reaſon the conſideration of the promiſe, which is the cauſe of action, muſt be alledged to be within the juriſdiction of the court ; and not only ſo, but it muſt be proved upon the trial ; and if the plaintiff prove a contract out of the juriſdiction, that cannot be given in evidence ; and if it be, the defendant's counſel may tender a bill of exceptions.

There are no pleas to the juriſdiction of the courts at Weſtminſter in tranſitory actions, unleſs the plaintiff by his declaration ſhews the cauſe of action accrued within the county palatine, or it be between the ſcholars of Oxford and Cambridge. 4 Inſt. 213. 1 Sid. 163. There is a difference between a franchiſe to demand conuſance, and a franchiſe, ubi breve domini reges non currit. For in the firſt caſe the tenant or defendant ſhall not plead it, but the lord of the franchiſe muſt demand conuſance ; but in the other caſe, the defendant muſt plead it to the writ. 4 Inſt. 224. See titles Franchiſe, Conuſance, County Palatine.

Where a franchiſe, either by letters patent or preſcription, hath a privilege of holding pleas within their juriſdiction, if the courts at Weſtminſter intrench on their privileges, they muſt demand conuſance, that is, deſire that the cauſe may be determined before them ; for the defendant cannot plead to the juriſdiction : and the reaſon is, becauſe a defendant is arreſted by the king's writ. But within a franchiſe, where the king's writ doth not run, he is not legally convened, and therefore he may plead it to the juriſdiction.

The pleas to the juriſdiction of the courts at Weſtminſter, according to chief baron Gilbert, are,

Held of the king's manor. Hanſ. 103.

Cinque ports. See title Cinque Ports.

The plea of privilege is likewiſe a plea to the juriſdiction of the court, though it doth not ariſe from the matter in variance, not being within the juriſdiction of the court, but it ſubmits to the court, whether it ought to take conuſance of the action, or proceed againſt the defendant in that court, by reaſon of his being a perſon privileged by another court, where he ought properly to be ſued. But the law on this head will properly fall under the diviſion concerning pleas in abatement reſpecting the perſon of the defendant.

II. As to pleas in abatement to the perſon of the plaintiff, 1. Outlawry may be pleaded in abatement, becauſe the plaintiff having refuſed to appear to the proceſs of the law, thereby loſes its protection ; but this is only a diſability 'till the outlawry is reverſed, or 'till he has obtained a charter of pardon. Co. Lit. 128. Lit ſect. 197. Dy. 23, 222. Aſſ. 49. Br. Nonability 25.

But this diſability is only pleadable when the plaintiff ſues in his own right ; for if he ſues in auter droit, as executor or adminiſtrator, or as mayor with his commonalty, outlawry ſhall not diſable him, becauſe the perſon whom he repreſents has the privilege of the law. Co. Lit. 128. Nor when the plaintiff brings a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry, ſhall outlawry in that ſuit, or at any ſtranger's ſuit, diſable him ; for if he were outlawed at ſeveral mens ſuits, and one ſhould be a bar to another, he could never reverſe any of them. The outlawry itſelf is no objection ; for that would be exceptio ejuſdem rei cujus petitur diſſolutio : nor is another outlawry pleadable in bar to ſuch writ of error ; for then two erroneous outlawries would be irreverſable. Co. Lit. 128. Doct. Plac. 396.

When outlawry is pleaded in abatement, the plaintiff ſhall not reply that the outlawry is erroneous, for it is good till reverſed. 1 Lutw. 36.

As outlawry is a dilatory plea, when it is pleaded in another court than that from whence the outlawry iſſued, the defendant muſt bring in the record immediately. For this being in delay, if the court ſhould give time, and it ſhould not be brought in, then the delay of juſtice would be from the court ; and ſince there is a way of having it immediately, by producing it under the great ſeal, no time ſhall be given to bring it ſub pede ſigilli ; but otherwiſe when it is in the ſame court ; for then the record is already in court. Doct. Placit. 393. Stamf. 103. Fitz. Coron. 235.

Outlawry in a county palatine cannot be pleaded in any of the courts of Weſtminſter ; for he is only ouſted of his law within that juriſdiction, and it ſhall not extend to diſable a man in another county, where they have no power ; for the county palatine being a royal juriſdiction within bounds, the loſing the privileges of law within that juriſdiction, can be no diſadvantage to him in another county ; and if he does not live within the palatine juriſdiction, he is not obliged to attend there. But it ſeems that outlawry in the county palatine of Lancaſter may be pleaded in the courts of Weſtminſter ; becauſe that county was erected by act of parliament in the time of Ed. 3. but Durham and Cheſter are by preſcription. Fitz. Coron. 233. 12 Ed. 4. 16. Doct. Placit. 396. Yet query, as to this doctrine ? for the ſame reaſon militates againſt it.

Outlawry may be always pleaded in abatement, but not in bar, unleſs the cauſe of action be forfeited. Co. Lit. 128. b. Doct. Pl. 395.

In perſonal actions, where the damages are uncertain, outlawry cannot be pleaded in bar ; but in actions on the caſe, where the debt to avoid the law wager, is turned into damages, there outlawry may be pleaded in bar, for it was veſted in the king, by the forfeiture, as a debt certain, and due to the outlaw : and the turning it into damages, whereby it becomes uncertain, ſhall not diveſt the king of what he was once lawfully poſſeſſed of. 2 Lutw. 1604. 3 Lev. 29. 2 Vent 282. 3 Leon. 197, 205. Cro. Eliz. 204. Owen 22.

2. Excommunication is a good plea even to an executor or adminiſtrator, though they ſue in autre droit ; for an excommunicate perſon is excluded from the body of the church, and is incapable to lay out the goods of the deceaſed to pious uſes. Co. Lit. 134. 43 E. 3. 13. Theol. 11.

But in an action brought by bailiffs and commonalty, the defendant ſhall not plead excommunication in the bailiffs ; becauſe they ſue as a corporation, and a corporation cannot be excluded from the communion of the viſible church. Theol. 11. 30 E. 3. 4. Co. Lit. 134.

Excommunication is no plea in a qui tam, becauſe it is for example ; and the ſtatute having given the informer an ability to ſue, and not excepted excommunicated perſons from the liberty of informing, he is enabled to ſue by the ſtatute, notwithſtanding the cenſures of the church. 12 Co. 61.

When excommunication is pleaded in the plaintiff, he ſhall not reply, that he has appealed from the ſentence ; for the ſentence is in force until it is repealed, and whilſt it is in force he cannot appear in any of the courts of juſtice ; but he may reply that he is abſolved, for then his diſability is taken away. Bro. Excom. 3. 3 Bulſ. 72. 20 H. 6. 25. Roll. 226.

When prohibition is brought againſt the biſhop, and he pleads excommunication againſt the plaintiff, and in the excommunication there is no cauſe of ſuch excommunication ſhewn, this is not a good plea ; for in ſuch caſe it will be intended, that the excommunication was for endeavouring to hinder the biſhop's proceeding by application to the temporal court ; and if ſuch excommunication were allowed, it would deſtroy all prohibitions, and the plea of excommunication in this caſe is exceptio ejuſdem rei cujus petitur diſſolutio. Theol. 10, 11, 28 E. 3. 27. 8 Co. 68.

The court will not receive the certificate of excommunication of one biſhop from another, becauſe they muſt have the certificate from the biſhop whoſe ſubject he was ; and he might have been aſſoiled, that is, diſcharged from the excommunication by his own ordinary after the firſt certificate to the biſhop. Vide Bro. Excom.

Fitz. Excom. 8 Co. 68. Co. Lit. 134. Nor will they receive a certificate; (becauſe he may ſtand aſſoiled by the preſent ordinary that now is,) after the deceaſe of the biſhop who has certified; in fact the court will not receive any certificate, but from ſuch perſon to whom they can write to aſſoil. Bro. Excom. 21. Fitz. Excom. 26. 1 Roll. Abr. 883.

3. Alienage.—An alien born may be pleaded in abatement: but Jews may proſecute actions and recover, a plea in abatement againſt them being but a diſability ſo long as the king ſhall prohibit them to trade. 1 Lill. A.

An alien enemy, or one whoſe king is in enmity with ours, cannot bring any action either real, perſonal, or mixed. Yet ſee Lord Raym. 282. Wells v. Williams.

Theſe pleas are at preſent ſeldom pleaded, and as little regarded. Wars are not now ſo implacable as formerly.

An alien in league ſhall maintain perſonal actions; otherwiſe he would not be able to merchandiſe and trade amongſt us. But he ſhall not maintain real or mixed actions, becauſe there is no neceſſity that he ſhould ſettle amongſt us. Co. Lit. 129. b. Yelv. 198. 1 Bulſtr. 134. Little attention would now be paid in Weſtminſter Hall to this doctrine; a great law lord has already, with much propriety, declared himſelf diſſatisfied with ſuch opinions. If alienage be pleaded to an alien in league, that muſt be in diſability of the plaintiff; but if it be to an alien enemy, it may be pleaded to the action; becauſe it is forfeited to the king, as a repriſal for the damages committed by the dominion in enmity with him. Bro. Denizen 10. Co. Lit. 129. b.

Where the defendant pleads that the plaintiff is an alien in abatement of the writ, it is triable where the writ is brought, and the replication muſt conclude to the country; but otherwiſe it is ſaid where it is pleaded in bar, that the plaintiff is an alien, the replication muſt conclude with an averment. Salk. 2. Weſt v. Sutton, Weſt. 5. Comb. 394. Texell v. Hooper contra. Where the defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff was an alien, born at Roan in the kingdom of France, within the ligeance of the king of France, the plaintiff replies, that he is an alien friend, born at Hamborough, within the ligeance of the emperor, and traverſeth that he was born at Roan. HOLT inclined it was an ill traverſe, and offered an ill iſſue. Comb. 212. See title Aliens.

4. Præmunire. Perſons attainted of præmunire are incapable of bringing any action; for they are out of the protection of the law. Lit. ſect. 199. Co. Lit. 129. See title Præmunire.

5. Popiſh recuſancy. This diſability of popiſh recuſancy convict, is by ſtat. 3 Ja. 1. c. 5. ſ. 11, 12. which diſables to all intents, as excommunication, except where he ſues for lands, tenements, leaſes, annuities, rents, and hereditaments, or for the iſſues and profits thereof, which are not to be ſeized into the hands of the king, his heirs or ſucceſſors.

Of pleading recuſancy in diſability, vide the caſe of Curwin or Colvin v. Fletcher, Modern Caſes in Law and Equity, 1 Part, 43.

III. Pleas in abatement to the perſon of the defendant. Of theſe pleas, the plea of privilege is one of the moſt material. The officers of each court enjoy the privilege of being ſued only in thoſe courts to which they reſpectively belong; the reaſon whereof is, becauſe of the duty they are under of attending thoſe courts, and leſt their clients cauſes ſhould ſuffer if they were drawn to anſwer to actions in other courts. 2 Mod. 297. Vaugh. 155. 2 H. 7. 2. 2 Roll. Abr. 272. 1 Lutw. 44. 639. But this is to be underſtood, when the plaintiff can have the ſame remedy againſt the officer in his own court, as in that where he ſues him; for if money be attached in an attorney's hands by foreign attachment in the ſheriff's court in London, he ſhall not have his privilege; becauſe in this caſe the plaintiff would be remedileſs. 1 Sand. 67, 68. Turbill's caſe.

So if a writ of entry, or other real action, be brought againſt an attorney of the King's Bench, he cannot plead his privilege; becauſe, if this ſhould be allowed, the plaintiff would have a right without a remedy; for the King's Bench hath not cognizance of real actions. 1 Saund. 67.

So if an attorney of the Common Pleas be ſued in an appeal, he ſhall not have his privilege; for his own court hath not cognizance of this action; for this vide 38 H. 6. 29. b. 9 E. 4. 35. Cro. Car. 58. 1 Leon. 189. 2 Leon. 156.

But the privilege, which the courts indulge their officers with, is reſtrained to the ſuits only, which they bring in their own right; for if they ſue or are ſued as executors, or adminiſtrators, they then repreſent common perſons, and are to have no privilege. Hob. 177.

So if an officer of one court ſues an officer of another court, the defendant ſhall not plead his privilege; for the attendance of the plaintiff is as neceſſary in his court as that of the defendant in his; and therefore the cauſe is legally attached in the court where the plaintiff is an officer. 2 Mod. Rep. 298. Hamelton verſ. Juſt. Scroggs. 2 Lev. 129. 2 Roll. Abr. 275. pl. 4. Moor 556.

So if a privileged perſon brings a joint action, or if an action be brought againſt him and others, he ſhall not have his privilege, but this is to be underſtood where the action is joint, and cannot be ſevered; for if the action can be ſevered, without doing any injury, the officer ſhall have his privilege. Dyer 377. Godb. 10. 2 Roll. Abr. 275. 2 Lev. 129. 1 Vent. 298, 9.

An officer ſhall not have his privilege againſt the king; for as the executive power is lodged in the king, it would be unreaſonable that his court, which gives relief to private perſons, ſhould protect any ſubject from being brought to juſtice, for offending againſt the laws, which concern the whole commonwealth. Bro. Superſed. 1. 2 Roll. Abr. 274. But in any action qui tam, at the ſuit of an informer, he ſhall have his privilege. Lil Reg. 7. 3 Lev. 398. Lutw. 193.

If an action be brought in the King's Bench againſt an attorney of the Common Pleas, it is not enough for him to ſay that he is an attorney, for his being an attorney does not abate the plaintiff's bill, when once the action is attached in the King's Bench; but he muſt ſhew that he was an attorney at the time of the plaintiff's exhibiting the bill; for then it will appear to the court, that the plaintiff might have ſued the defendant there, as a privileged perſon. 1 Salk. 1. Peaſe v. Parſons.

It is ſaid by Holt Ch. J. of B. R. in the caſe of Duncombe v. Church, Comb. 390. that if a perſon who hath the privilege of being ſued in another court, be in actual cuſtody of the Marſhal, he cannot plead his privilege; but otherwiſe where he is bailed, and ſo only ſuppoſed in cuſtodia mareſcalli. 1 Salk. 1. Jones v. Bodinner, the ſame point.

The court of King's Bench will take notice of the privilege of their own officers; as where a FILAZER of the King's Bench was arreſted by a writ, he was diſcharged on common bail. Brown's caſe. Salk. 544.

But where an ATTORNEY of the Common Pleas was ſued by a Bill in the King's Bench; upon a motion for his being diſcharged, the court, abſente Holt, denied it, and put him to plead his privilege. 1 Mod. Ent. 26.

Here ſhould be obſerved the difference;—the former was an actual officer, whoſe attendance was abſolutely neceſſary, and no one to ſupply his place; the latter, an attorney, and the number of attornies is very great.

After a general imparlance, an officer cannot plead his privilege, becauſe by imparling he affirms the juriſdiction of the court; but after a ſpecial imparlance he may plead his privilege. Bro. Priv. 25. 22 H. 6. 6, 22, 71. 1 Roll. Rep. 294. 1 Sid. 29. 2 Roll. Abr. 273, 279. Hard. 365. 1 Lutw. 46 1 Salk. 1. And now the common practice is to uſe a ſpecial imparlance.

Miſnomer may be pleaded in abatement. But though a defendant may, by pleading in abatement, take advantage of a miſnomer when there is a miſtake in the writ or declaration, as to the name of baptiſm or ſurname; yet in ſuch a plea he muſt ſet forth his right name, ſo as to give the plaintiff a better writ. Finch 363. 9 H. 5. 1.

Where a defendant comes in gratis, or pleads by the name alledged by the plaintiff, he is eſtopped to alledge any thing againſt it. Style 440 Where one is miſnamed in a bond, the writ ſhould be in the right name, and the count ſhew that defendant, by ſuch a name, made the bond. To a plea of miſnomer, the plaintiff may reply, the defendant was known by the name in the writ. 1 Salk. 6.

If A. gives a bond by the name of B. and he is ſued by that name, if he pleads a miſnomer, the Plaintiff may reply, that he made the bond by the name of B. and eſtop him by demanding judgment, if againſt his own deed he ſhall be admitted to ſay his name is A. defendant may rejoin and ſay, that he made no ſuch deed, and this he muſt do without oyer; for if he prays oyer, he admits his name to be B. Salk. 7. Linch v. Hooke.

One defendant cannot plead miſnomer of his companion; for the other defendant may admit himſelf to be the perſon in the writ. 1 Lutw. 36. The defendant, though his name be miſtaken, is not obliged to take advantage of it; and therefore if he be impleaded by a wrong name, and afterwards impleaded by his right name, he may plead in bar the former judgment, and aver that he is una et eadem perſona. Gilb. H. C. P. 218.

Where an indictment for a capital crime is abated for miſnomer of the defendant, the court will not diſmiſs him, but cauſe him to be indicted de novo by his true name. 2 Hawk. 367. Pleas in abatement found againſt a defendant in capital caſes, are not peremptory, as they are in other caſes; but he may afterwards plead over to the felony. Ib. 191. Qu. If not uſual to plead over to the felony at the ſame time?

A writ may be abated for want of addition of the place, trade, dignity, &c. of the defendant; as where one pleads there is no ſuch place, or that he is a baronet and not a knight, &c. 1 Vent. 154. If the addition of the defendant's quality and dwelling be omitted in any original writ, in a perſonal action, appeal, or indictment, where exigent may be awarded, the writ ſhall abate; but it ſhall not abate for ſurpluſage in the addition. 1 H. 5. cap. 5.

The name of earl, if omitted, abates the writ. Davis Rep. 60. a. But if a perſon is created an earl pending the action, bill, or ſuit, it ſhall not abate. 1 Ed. 6. cap. 7. ſect. 3. But there muſt be an entry on the roll, with a poſt ultimam continuationem, ſcilt', that ſuch a day and year, the king by his letters patent, &c. ſetting it forth with a profert in cur. &c. quod predict. defendens non dedicit. 1 Mod. Ent. 31, 32.

The defendant's being under the protection of the law, as by being an infant, feme covert, &c. may likewiſe be pleaded in abatement. A feme covert, after an arreſt, giving bail-bond by a wrong name, may plead the miſnomer, and ſhe is not eſtopped by the bail-bond, 1 Salk. 7. Linch v. Hooke. See titles Feme Covert, Infant.

On the whole, it is proper to obſerve, as to miſnomers, the courts at Weſtminſter will not abate a writ for a trifling miſtake, as the omiſſion or inſertion of a letter, that does not make a material variation in the ſound, &c.

With reſpect to infancy, it may either be pleaded in bar, or given in evidence, on the general iſſue, unleſs in the caſe of neceſſaries, when the law binds an infant to his promiſe.

As to coverture, it has often been pleaded in bar; but query, if it would not be bad on demurrer?

IV. With reſpect to pleas in abatement to the writ, the writ being the foundation of the ſubſequent proceedings, great certainty and exactneſs is requiſite, to the end that no perſon be arreſted or attached by his goods, unleſs there appear ſufficient grounds to warrant ſuch proceedings; ſo that if the writ vary materially from that in the Regiſter, or be defective in ſubſtance, the party may take advantage of it. See 5 Co. 12. 9 H. 7. 16. 10 Ed. 3. 1. Hob. 1, 51, 52, 80. Carth. 172. But where the writ ſhall not abate for variance from the Regiſter, ſo that it be equivalent. See Hob. 1, 51, 52. What variance between a bond and the declaration abates the writ, ſee Hob. 116. Walter v. Pigot. Moor 645. 1 Cro. 896. Hob. 18, 19, 20.

In declaring on bonds, 'tis moſt adviſeable to omit the alias dict. for 'tis unneceſſary.

Where a demand is of two things, and it appears the plaintiff hath an action only for one, the writ may not be abated in the whole, but ſhall ſtand for that which is good; but if it appear, that although he cannot have this writ which he hath brought for part, he may have another, the writ ſhall abate in the whole. 11 Rep. 45. 1 Saund. 285. A writ of ejectment ſhall be abated, on its appearing to the court to be ſued out before the cauſe of action. Cro. Car. 572. Now the practice is to ſerve a copy of the declaration in the firſt inſtance.—If judgment goes by default, there is not any one to bring error. If the tenant appears, there are ſeveral inſtances, where the iſſue may be made right, and the variance ſhall not hurt.

In caſe adminiſtration be granted after the action brought, and this appears, the plaintiff's writ abates. Hob. 145.

V. As to pleas in abatement to the count or declaration, it is obſervable, that after the party ſuing has declared, the party impleaded may demand oyer of the writ; and then, if there be any fault or inſufficiency in the count for a cauſe apparent in itſelf, or if there be a variance between the count and the writ, or between the writ and a record, ſpecialty, &c. mentioned in the count, the party impleaded ought to ſhew it, by his pleading, Theol. lib. 10. c. 1. ſect. 5. Fitz. Count, 27.

One may plead in abatement of a declaration, where 'tis by original; but if the action be by bill, you muſt plead in abatement of the bill only. 5 Mod. 144. A little variance between the declaration and the bond pleaded, will not make naught the declaration; but uncertainty will abate it. Plowd. 84. The variance of the declaration from the obligation, or other deed on which it is grounded, will ſometimes abate the action; and if a declaration aſſign waſte in a town not mentioned in the original writ, the writ of waſte ſhall abate. Hob. 18, 38.

Likewiſe where the declaration is otherwiſe defective, in not purſuing the writ, or not ſetting forth the cauſe of action with that certainty which the law requires, or laying the offence in a different county from that in which the writ was brought. 1 New Abr. 6.

It is a good plea in abatement that another action is depending for the ſame thing; for whenever it appears on record, that the plaintiff has ſued out two writs againſt the ſame defendant, for the ſame thing, the ſecond writ ſhall abate; and it is not neceſſary that both ſhould be pending at the time of the defendant's pleading in abatement; for if there was a writ in being at the time of ſuing out the ſecond, it is plain the ſecond was vexatious and ill ab initio. 9 H. 6. 12. 5 Co. 61. Doct. Pl. 10, 67. But it muſt appear plainly to be for the ſame thing; for an aſſize of lands in one county ſhall not abate an aſſize in another county, for theſe cannot be the ſame lands. 4 H. 6. 24. Doct. Pl. 10. Vide poſt.

In general writs, as treſpaſs, aſſize, covenant, where the ſpecial matter is not alledged, and the plaintiff is nonſuited before he counts; and the ſecond writ is ſued pending the other, yet the former ſhall not be pleaded in abatement, becauſe it doth not appear to the court that it was for the ſame thing; for the firſt writ being general, the plaintiff might have declared for a diſtinct thing from what he demanded by the ſecond writ; but when the firſt is a ſpecial writ, and ſets forth the particular demand, as in a precipe quod reddat, &c. there the court can readily ſee that it is for the ſame thing; and therefore though the plaintiff be nonſuited before he counts, yet the firſt ſhall abate the ſecond writ, it being apparently brought for the ſame thing. 5 Co. 61. Doct. Pl. 11, 12. If an action of debt, &c. be depending in an inferior court, a bill for the ſame debt may be brought in any court in Weſtminſter. 5 Co. 62. In an action of debt, &c. another action depending in the courts of Weſtminſter for the ſame matter, is a good plea in abatement; but a plea of an action in an inferior court is not good, unleſs judgment be given. 5 Co. 86.

If a ſecond writ be brought teſted the ſame day the former is abated, it ſhall be deemed to be ſued out after the abatement of the firſt. Allen 34.

If an action, pending in the ſame court, be pleaded to a ſecond action brought for the ſame thing, the plaintiff may pray that the record may be inſpected by the court, or demand oyer of it, which if not given him in convenient time, he may ſign his judgment. Dyer 227. Carth. 453, 517.

VI. With reſpect to abatement by the demiſe of the king, or by the marriage, or death of the parties, it is to be obſerved, that 1. As to the demiſe of the king at common law, all patents of juſtices, and commiſſions civil and military, were thereby determined; alſo all ſuits depending in the king's courts were diſcontinued by the death of the king; ſo that the plaintiffs were obliged to commence new actions, or to have re-ſummons or attachment on the former proceſſes, to bring the defendant in; but to prevent the inconvenience, expence and delay which this occaſioned, the ſtatutes of 1 Ed. 6. c. 7. 7 & 8 Will. 3. c. 27. and 7 Ann. c. 8. were made, which ſee under title Prerogative.

Proceedings on an information, in nature of a quo warranto, are not abated by the demiſe of the crown. 2 Stra. 782. Where the king brings a writ of error in quare impedit, it abates by his death. 2 Stra. 843.

2. With reſpect to the marriage of the parties, coverture is a good plea in abatement, which may be either before the writ ſued, or pending the writ. By the firſt the writ is abated de facto, but the ſecond only proves the writ abateable; both are to be pleaded, with this difference, that coverture, pending the writ, muſt be pleaded, poſt ultimam continuationem; whereas coverture before the writ brought, may be pleaded at any time, becauſe the writ is de facto abated; but if a feme ſole takes out a writ, and after marries, the writ is abateable; but ſuch plea muſt be puis darrein continuance. Doct. pl. 3. 1 Leon. 168. 169. Vide 2 Ld. Ray. 1525. Comb. 449. Lut. 1639.

If a writ be brought by A. and B. as baron and feme, whereas they were not married until the ſuit depended, the defendant may plead this in abatement; for though they cannot have a writ in any other form, yet the writ ſhall abate, becauſe it was falſe when ſued out. Fitz. Brief, 476. If a writ be brought againſt a feme covert as ſole, ſhe may plead her coverture; but if ſhe neglects to do it, and there is a recovery againſt her as a feme ſole, the huſband may avoid it by writ of error, and may come in at any time and plead it. Latch 24. Stile 254, 280. 2 Roll. Rep. 53. If an action be brought in an inferior court againſt a feme ſole, and pending the ſuit ſhe intermarries, and afterwards removes the cauſe by habeas corpus, and the plaintiff declares againſt her as a feme ſole, ſhe may plead coverture at the time of ſuing the habeas corpus; becauſe the proceedings here are de novo; and the court takes no notice of what was precedent to the habeas corpus; but upon motion on the return of the habeas corpus, the court will grant a procedendo. For though this be a writ of right, yet where it is to abate a rightful ſuit, the court may refuſe it; and the plaintiff had bail below to this ſuit, which by the contrivance he might be ouſted of, and poſſibly by the ſame means of the debt. 1 Salk. 8.

In ejectment againſt baron and feme, after verdict for the plaintiff, baron dies between the day of Niſi prius and the day in Bank; adjudged that the writ ſhould ſtand good againſt the feme, becauſe it is in nature of a treſpaſs, and the feme is charged for her own act; and therefore the action ſurvives againſt her. So if the wife had died, the baron ſhould have judgment entered againſt him. Cro. Jac. 356. Cro. Car 509. 1 Roll. Rep. 14. Moor 469.

If a feme ſole plaintiff, after verdict, and before the day in Bank, takes huſband, ſhe ſhall have judgment, and the defendant cannot plead this coverture, for he has no day to plead it at. Cro. Car. 232. 1 Bulſt. 5.

If an original be filed againſt a feme ſole, and before the return ſhe marries, you may declare againſt her without taking notice of her huſband, for her intermarriage is no abatement of the writ in fact, but only makes it abateable. Comb. 449. 1 Roll. Rep. 53.

'Tis now in general held, that if a feme ſole commences an action, and pending the ſame marries, the ſuit is abated, but that it is otherwiſe with reſpect to a feme ſole defendant, as ſhe ſhall not take advantage of her own act.

3. As to pleas in abatement by the death of parties, the general rule is, that whenever the death of any party happens pending the writ, and yet the plea is in the ſame condition as if ſuch party were living, there ſuch death makes no alteration or abatement of the writ. 1 New. Abr. 7.

The death of a plaintiff did in all caſes abate the writ before judgment, till the ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. by which neither the death of plaintiff or defendant after interlocutory judgment ſhall abate it, if the action might be originally proſecuted by and againſt the executors or adminiſtrators of the parties: and if there are two or more plaintiffs or defendants, and one or more die, the writ or action ſhall not abate, if the cauſe of action ſurvives to the ſurviving plaintiff againſt the ſurviving defendant, &c. Stat. ibid.

Before this ſtatute it was held, that if there were two executors, and they brought an action of debt, and one of them died, that the writ ſhould not abate; for in this caſe ſummons and ſeverance lies, after which the one executor does not proceed for a moiety, but for a whole, as repreſentative of the teſtator. Cro. Eliz. 652. Co. Lit. 139. So in a quare impedit, by two jointenants, and one is ſummoned and ſevered, and the ſevered perſon dies, the writ ſhall not abate, becauſe the advowſon is an intire thing, and he proceeded for the whole, after the ſeverance; and ſo he may after the death of the ſevered jointenant. Dyer 279.

If there were ſeveral defendants in the original action, and one died, the writ did not abate; becauſe, there being a joint demand, it ſurvives againſt the reſidue; but in this caſe there muſt be a ſuggeſtion on the roll, becauſe it would be error to give judgment againſt a deceaſed perſon. Hard. 151, 164. Stile 299. 3 Mod. 249. Cro. Car. 426. 1 Jones 367. 1 Rol. Abr. 756. 1 Show. Rep. 186. But in a writ of error, if there be ſeveral plaintiffs, and one dies, the writ ſhall abate, becauſe the writ of error is to ſet perſons in ſtatu quo, before the erroneous judgment given below; and they that are plaintiffs in error were diſtinct ſufferers in the judgment, ſince there might be different executions iſſued thereupon, and different repreſentatives were by ſuch judgment affected; and by conſequence the ſurvivor cannot proſecute the writ of error for the whole, leſt by a colluſive perſuaſion, or by negligence or deſign he ſhould hurt the repreſentative of the deceaſed. Bridg. 78. Yelv. 208. 10 Co. 135. 1 Vent. 34. 1 Sid. 419. cont. But if any of the defendants in error die, yet all things ſhall proceed, becauſe the benefit of ſuch judgment goes to the ſurvivor, and he only is to defend it. Sid. 419. Yelv. 208. 1 L. Raym. 439. In an audita querela, by two, the death of one ſhall not abate the writ; for the ſurvivor is not to be reſtored to any thing he has loſt, but to diſcharge himſelf of the execution; and thereupon, notwithſtanding the death of the other, he may proceed for a diſcharge in toto for himſelf. 1 Vent. 34. 3 Hen. 7. 1. 3 Mod. 249. If there be ſeveral perſons named as plaintiffs in the writ, and one of them was dead at the time of purchaſing the writ, this may be pleaded in abatement; becauſe it falſifies the writ; and becauſe the right was in the ſurvivors, at the time of ſuing the writ and the writ not according to the caſe 20 Hen. 6. 30, 18 E. 4. 1. 2 H. 7. 16. 1 Brownl. 3, 4. Cliſt Ent. 6. Raſt. Ent. 126.

By ſtat. 17 Car. 2. c. 8. (made perpetual by 1 Jac. 2. c. 17.) it is enacted, that the death of either of the parties between verdict and judgment, ſhall not be alledged for error, ſo as judgment be entered within two terms after ſuch verdict.

Secondly, of the time and manner of pleading in abatement.

A plea in abatement muſt be put in within four days after the return of the writ, becauſe the perſon coming in by the proceſs of the court ought not to have time to delay the plaintiff. Lutw. 1181. 2 Stra. 1192.

But if a declaration be delivered againſt one in cuſtody, he has the whole term to plead in abatement. Salk. 515.

If the declaration be delivered in the vacation, or ſo late in term, that defendant is not bound to plead to it that term, he may plead in abatement, within the firſt four days of next term.

As pleas in abatement enter not into the merits of the cauſe, but are dilatory, the law has laid the following reſtrictions on them. Firſt, by the ſtatute of 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16. for amendment of the law, no dilatory plea is to be received unleſs on oath, and probable cauſe ſhewn to the court. Secondly, No plea in abatement ſhall be received after reſpondeas ouſter, for than they would be pleaded in infinitum. 2 Saund. 41. Thirdly, That they are to be pleaded before imparlance. See Yelv. 112. 1 Lutw. 46, 178. 2 Lutw. 1117. Doct. Pla. 224. Except where antient demeſne is pleaded; for this may be done after imparlance, becauſe the lord might reverſe the judgment by writ of diſceit, and it goes in bar of the action itſelf. For this ſee Dyer in marg. 210. Stile 30. Latch 83. 5 Co. 105. 9 Co. 31. Hen. Ent. 103. Fourthly, That when iſſue is joined on them, if it be found againſt him who pleads ſuch dilatory plea, it ſhall be peremptory. 2 Show. Rep. 42. 6 Mod. 236.

With reſpect to pleas to the juriſdiction of the court, it is to be obſerved that the defendant muſt plead in propria perſona; for he cannot plead by attorney without leave of the court firſt had, which leave acknowledges the juriſdiction; for the attorney is an officer of the court; and if he put in a plea by an officer of the court, that plea muſt be ſuppoſed to be put in by leave of the court. 1 New Abr. 2.

The defendant muſt make but half defence, for if he makes the full defence quando & ubi curia conſideraverit, &c. he ſubmits to the juriſdiction of the court. Lutw. 9. 1 Show. Rep. 386.

If a plea is pleaded to the juriſdiction of the court, it ought to conclude with a prayer of judgment in this manner, viz. The ſaid defendant prays judgment, whether the court will take any farther cognizance of the ſaid plea. 1 Mod. Ent. 34.

As to pleas in diſability of the plaintiff, they may not be pleaded after a general imparlance. 1 Lutw. 19. It may be added, that in pleading outlawry in diſability in another court, the ancient way was to have the record of the outlawry itſelf ſub pede ſigilli by certiorari and mittimus; but, this being very expenſive, it is now ſufficient to plead the capias utlagatum under the ſeal of the court from whence it iſſues; for the iſſuing of execution could not be without the judgment; and therefore ſuch execution is a proof to the court that there is ſuch a judgment, which is a proof that the defendant's plea of matter of record is proved by a matter of record; and conſequently appears to the court not to be merely dilatory; and therefore on ſhewing ſuch execution, if the plaintiff will plead nul tiel record, the court will give the defendant a day to bring it in. Co. Lit. 128. Doct. Placit. tit. Outlawry. But where excommunication is pleaded, it is not ſufficient to ſhew the writ de excommunicato capiendo under the ſeal of the court; for the writ is no evidence of the continuance of the excommunication, ſince he may be aſſoiled by the biſhop, and that will not appear in the king's court, becauſe ſuch aſſoilment is not returned into the king's court from whence the ſignificavit is ſent.

If a plea in abatement be pleaded to the perſon of the plaintiff, there it muſt conclude, if he ought to be compelled to anſwer. 1 Mod. Ent. 34. If it be pleaded to the writ, then the plea concludes with the prayer of judgment of the writ, and that the writ may be quaſhed. When it is to the action of the writ, there he ſhould ſhew that the party ought not to have that writ, but by the matter of his plea ſhould intimate to him how he ſhould have a better. Latch 178. Reſpondere non debet is a proper beginning to a plea to the juriſdiction of the court, but a plea of ne unques executor, ought to begin with petit judic' de bill, 5 Mod. 132, 133, 146. 1 Saund. 283. 2 Saund. 97, 189, 190, 339. Lutw. 44. Show. 4. In a replication to a plea in abatement where matter of fact is pleaded, the plaintiff muſt pray his damages. Vide 1 Ld. Raym. 339, 594. 2 Ld. Raym. 1022. If upon iſſue verdict be found for him he ſhall have final judgment; but where matter of law is pleaded, the plaintiff muſt only maintain his writ. If one pleads matter of abatement, and concludes in bar, Et petit judicium ſi actionem habere debet, though he begins in abatement, and the matter be alſo in abatement, yet the concluſion being in bar, makes it a bar; and the reaſon is, becauſe you admit the writ by concluding ſpecially againſt the action. 18 H. 6. 27. 32. H. 6. 17. 36 H. 6. 18. 22 H. 6. 536. 1 Show. 4. 2 Ld. Raym. 1018. If a man pleads matter in bar, and concludes in abatement, it ſhall be taken for a plea in bar, from the nature and reaſon of the thing; for the plaintiff can have no writ if he has not a cauſe of action, and therefore the court will take the plea to be in bar. 37. H. 6. 24. 36. H. 6, 24. 2 Mod. 6.

As to the concluſion of a plea in abatement, vide 1 L. Raym. 337, 593.

A plea was held good in bar, though pleaded in abatement, and the defendant hath his election to plead, either in bar or abatement; the nature of a plea in abatement is to intitle the plaintiff to a better writ; and it hath been expreſsly reſolved, that where the plea is in abatement, and it is of neceſſity that the defendant muſt diſcloſe matter of bar, he ſhall have his election to take it either by way of bar or abatement. 2 Roll. Rep. 64. Salkill v. Shilton. In ſhort, whatever deſtroys the plaintiff's action, and diſables him for ever from recovering, may be pleaded in bar. But the defendant is not always obliged to plead in bar, but may plead in abatement, as in replevin for goods, the defendant may plead property in himſelf, or in a ſtranger, either in bar or in abatement, for if the plaintiff cannot prove property in himſelf, he fails of his action for ever; and it is of no avail to him who has the property if he has it not. 1 Vent. 249. 2 Lev. 92. 1 Salk. 5, 94. Carth. 243.

Where matter of bar may be pleaded in abatement, vide 2 L. Raym. 1207, 1208. Hackett v. Tilly.

Thirdly, Of the judgment in abatement. If iſſue be taken upon a plea to the writ, judgment againſt the defendant is peremptory; but if there be a demurrer, it is then only that the plaintiff anſwers over. Yelv. 12. Allen 66. Upon a judgment in waſte for the damages recovered, the defendant demurs partly in abatement, and partly in bar, the court ſhall give judgment in chief. Show. 255. In debt, if the defendant pleads in abatement to the writ, to which the plaintiff imparls, and, at the day given, the defendant makes default, judgment is final upon the default, though the plea was only in abatement. 10 E. 4. 7. Mod. Caſes 5. The judgment for the defendant, on a plea in abatement, is quod breve, or narratio caſſetur; if iſſued be joined on a plea in abatement, and it be found for the plaintiff, it ſhall be peremptory againſt the defendant, and the judgment ſhall be quod recuperet, becauſe the defendant chuſing to put the whole weight of his cauſe upon this iſſue, when he might have had a plea in chief, is an admittance that he had no other defence. Yelv. 112. 2 Show. 42. Str. 532.

In abatement, if iſſue is joined on a matter of fact, and found for the plaintiff, the jury who try that iſſue ſhall aſſeſs the damages.—If there is a demurrer to the plea, and adjudged for plaintiff, then a reſpondeas ouſter is awarded.

Abatamentum, Is a word of art, and ſignifies an entry by interpoſition. Co. Lit. 277. Vide Plea, Writs, &c.

Abator, Is a perſon that abateth or entereth into a houſe or land, void by the death of him that laſt poſſeſſed the ſame, before the heir takes poſſeſſion, and by that means keeps out the heir. Old. Nat. Br. 115.

Abatude, Is any thing diminiſhed.—Moneta abatuda, is money clipped or diminiſhed in value; ſi tempore ſolutionis hæc moneta fuerit abatuda ſive deteriorata. Charta Simonis Comitis Leiceſtriæ, anno 1290.

Abbacy, (abbatia) Is the ſame as to the government of a religious houſe, and the revenues thereof, ſubject to an abbot, as a biſhoprick is to a biſhop. This word is uſed in ſome of our antient grants, particularly anno 34 & 35 H. 8. in a grant to the counteſs of Pembroke.

Abbat, or abbot, (abbas in Latin, in French abbe, and in Saxon abbud) Is a ſpiritual lord or governor, having the rule of a religious houſe. The word is alſo by ſome derived from the Syriac abba pater. Of theſe abbots here in England ſome were elective, ſome preſentative; and ſome were mitred, and ſome were not; ſuch as were mitred had epiſcopal authority within their limits, being exempted from the juriſdiction of the dioceſan; but the other ſort of abbots were ſubject to the dioceſan in all ſpiritual government. The mitred abbots were lords of parliament, and called abbots ſovereign, and abbots general, to diſtinguiſh them from the other abbots. And as there were abbots, ſo there were alſo lords priors, who had exempt juriſdiction, and were likewiſe lords of parliament, liament. Some reckon twenty-ſix of theſe lords abbots and priors that ſat in parliament. Sir Edw. Coke ſays, there were twenty-ſeven parliamentary abbots and two priors. Co. Lit. 97. In the parliament 20 R. 2. there were but twenty-five; but anno 4 Ed. 3. in the ſummons to the parliament at Winton more are named. And in Monaſticon Anglicanum there is alſo mention of more, the names of which were as follow: abbots of St. Auſtin's Canterbury, Ramſey, Peterborough, Croyland, Eveſham, St. Bennet de Hulmo, Thorneby, Colcheſter, Leiceſter, Winchcomb, Weſtminſter, Cirenceſter, St. Albans, St. Mary's York, Shrewſbury, Selby, St. Peter's Glouceſter, Malmſbury, Waltham, Thorney, St. Edmunds, Beaulieu, Abingdon, Hide, Reading, Glaſtonbury, and Oſney.—And priors of Spalding, St. John's of Jeruſalem, and Lewes.—To which were afterwards added the abbots of St. Auſtin's Briſtol, and of Bardeny, and the priory de Semplingham. Theſe abbeys and priories were founded by our ancient kings and great men, from the year 602 to 1133. An abbot with the monks of the ſame houſe were called the convent, and made a corporation; but the abbot was not chargeable by the act of his predeceſſor, unleſs it were under the common ſeal, or for ſuch things as came to the uſe of the houſe or convent. Terms de Ley 4. By ſtat. 27 Hen. 8. cap. 28. all abbeys, monaſteries, priories, &c. not above the value of 200 l. per ann. were given to the king, who ſold the lands at low rates to the gentry. Anno 29 H. 8. the reſt of the abbeys, &c. made voluntary ſurrenders of their houſes to obtain favour of the king: and anno 31 H. 8. a bill was brought into the houſe to confirm thoſe ſurrenders; which paſſing, compleated the diſſolution, except the hoſpitals and colleges, which were not diſſolved, the firſt till the 33d, and the laſt till the 37th of H. 8. when commiſſioners were appointed to enter and ſeize the ſaid lands, &c.

Abbatis, An avener or ſteward of the ſtables; the word was ſometimes uſed for a common hoſtler, pronounced ſhort in the middle ſyllable.—Abbatis ad cœnam dat equis abbatis avenam. Spelm.

Abbrochment, (abbrocamentum) The buying up of wares before they are expoſed to ſale in a fair or market, and ſelling the ſame by retail; which is a foreſtalling of a market or fair. MS. de placit' coram rege Ed. 3. penes J. Trevor, Mil'.

Abbuttals, (from the French aboutir, to limit or bound) Are the buttings and boundings of lands, eaſt, weſt, north, or ſouth, ſhewing how the ſame lie with reſpect to others; as by what lands, highways, or other places, they are limited and bounded. Camden tells us, that limits were diſtinguiſhed by hillocks raiſed in the lands called Botentines, whence we have the word butting. The ſides on the breadth of lands are properly adjacentes, lying or bordering; and the ends in length abuttantes, abutting or bounding. And in old ſurveys, theſe laſt are called head-lands, from capitare, to head. The boundaries and buttals of corporation and church lands, and of pariſhes, are preſerved by an annual proceſſion. And abuttals, or boundaries are of ſeveral ſorts; ſuch as incloſures of hedges, ditches and ſtones in common fields, brooks, rivers, and highways, &c. of manors and lordſhips.

Abdicate, (abdicare) to renounce or refuſe any thing. Terms de Ley 5.

Abdication, (abdicatio) In general, is where a magiſtrate, or perſon in office, renounces and gives up the ſame, before the term of ſervice is expired. And this word is frequently confounded with reſignation, but differs from it, in that abdication is done purely and ſimply; whereas reſignation is in favour of ſome other perſon. Chamb. Dict. 'Tis ſaid to be a renunciation, quitting and relinquiſhing, ſo as to have nothing further to do with a thing; or the doing of ſuch actions as are inconſiſtent with the holding of it. On king James's leaving the kingdom, and abdicating the government, the lords would have had the word deſertion made uſe of; but the commons thought it was not comprehenſive enough, for that the king might then have liberty of returning. The Scots called it a forfeiture of the crown, from the verb forisfacio.—This word is fully canvaſſed in the Parliamentary Debates, on the abdication of James II.

Abditorium, An abditory or hiding-place, to hide and preſerve goods, plate, or money; and is uſed for a cheſt in which reliques are kept, as mentioned in the inventory of the church of York, Mon. Ang. p. 173.—Item unum coffeum, & una pixis de Ebore ornata cum argento deaurato, item sex abditoria, &c.

Abeched, From the French abecher, to feed is an old word, which ſignifies to be ſatisfied.

Abere-murder, (aberemurdrum) Plain or downright murder; as diſtinguiſhed from the leſs heinous crimes of manſlaughter and chancemedley. It is derived from the Saxon æbere, apparent, notorious, and mord, murder; and was declared a capital offence, without fine or commutation, by the laws of Canute, cap 93. and of Hen. 1. cap. 13. Spelm.

Abet, (abettare) From the Saxon a, and bedan or beteren, to ſtir up or incite; or from the French bouter, impellere or excitare. In our law it ſignifies as much as to encourage or ſet on; the ſubſtantive abetment is uſed for an encouraging or inſtigation. Staundf. Pl. Cr. 105. And abettor (abbetator) is an inſtigator or ſettor on; one that promotes or procures a crime. Old. Nat. Br. 21. Abbettors of murder are ſuch as command, procure, or counſel others to perpetrate the murder; and in ſome caſes theſe abettors ſhall be taken as principals, in others but as acceſſaries; their preſence or abſence, at the time of committing the fact, making the difference. Co. Lit. 475. Vide Acceſſaries, Hawk. P. C. part 2. tit. Acceſſary, under letter B. and tit. Appeal, under letters R. S.

Abeyance, or abbayance, (from the Fr. bayer) To expect. It is what is in expectation, remembrance, and intendment of law. By a principle of law, in every land there is a fee-ſimple in ſome body, or it is in abeyance; that is, though for the preſent it be in no man, yet it is in expectancy belonging to him that is next to enjoy the land. Co. Lit. 342. Lit. c. Diſcontin. If a man be a patron of a church, and preſents one to the ſame, now the fee of the lands and tenements pertaining to the rectory is in the parſon; but if the parſon die, and the church become void, then is the fee in abeyance, until there be a new parſon preſented, admitted, and inducted; for the patron hath not the fee, but only the right to preſent, the fee being in the incumbent that is preſented. Terms de ley 6. The frank-tenement of the glebe of a parſonage, during the time the parſonage is void, is in no man; but in abeyance or expectation, belonging to him who is next to enjoy it.

If a man makes a leaſe for life, the remainder to the right heirs of J. S. the fee-ſimple is an abeyance until J. S. dies. Co. Lit. 342. In this caſe the remainder paſſeth from the grantor preſently; though it veſts not preſently in the grantee, but is ſaid to be in abeyance until J. S. dies, after whoſe death the heir has a good remainder, and it ceaſes to be in abeyance. If lands be leaſed to A. B. for life, the remainder to another perſon for years, the remainder for years is in abeyance until the death of the leſſee for life, and then it ſhall veſt in him in remainder as a purchaſer, and as a chattel ſhall go to his executors. 3 Leon. 23. Where tenant for term of another's life dieth, the freehold of the lands is in abeyance till the entry of the occupant.

Fee-ſimple in abeyance cannot be charged until it comes in eſſe ſo as to be certainly charged or aliened; though by poſſibility it may fall every hour. Co. Lit. 378.

The word abeyance hath been compared to what the civilians call hæreditatem jacentem; for as the civilians ſay lands and goods do jacere, ſo the common lawyers ſay, that things in like eſtate are in abeyance, as the logicians term it in poſſe, or in underſtanding; and as we ſay in nubibus, that is, in conſideration of law. See Plowd. Rep. 547. Walſingham's caſe.

Abgatoria, abgetorium, The alphabet, A, B, C, &c. This ſeems to be an Iriſh word. Mat. Weſtm. reports of St. Patrick—Abgetoria quoque 345 & eo amplius ſcripſit, totidem epiſcopus ordinavit—The Iriſh ſtill call the alphabet abghittin.

Abigeus, For abigens, ſignifies a thief who hath ſtolen many cattle, viz. Si quis ſuum ſurripuerit fur erit, & ſi quis gregem abigevus erit. Bract. Tract. 1. l. 1. 3. cap. 6. 105. a.

Ability, The king's iſſue are of ability to inherit in England whereſoever born; and children of ſubjects born beyond ſea may inherit if their birth were within the allegiance of the king. Stat. 25 Ed. 3. Stat. 2. 42 Ed. 3. c. 10. or born out of allegiance, if children of natural born ſubjects, 7 Ann. c. 5. declared to be natural born, 4 Geo. 2. c. 21.

Natural ſubjects may inherit, and make their title by anceſtors born beyond ſea. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 6. 25 Geo. 2. c. 39. Vide Naturalization.

Abiſhering, Is underſtood to be quit of amercements. It originally ſignified a forfeiture or amercement; and is more properly miſhering or miſkering, according to the learned Spelman. It hath ſince been termed a liberty or freedom, becauſe wherever this word is uſed in a grant or charter, the perſons to whom made, have the forfeitures and amercements of all others, and are themſelves free from the controul of any within their fee. Raſtal's Abr. Terms de Ley

Abjuration, (abjuratio) A forſwearing or renouncing by oath, ſignifies a ſworn baniſhment, or an oath taken to forſake the realm for ever. Staundſ. Pl. C. l. 2. c. 40. It hath alſo now another ſignification, extending to the perſon as well as place; as to abjure the Pretender by oath, whereby a man binds himſelf not to own any regal authority in the perſon called the Pretender, nor ever to pay him any obedience, &c. Formerly in king Edward the Confeſſor's time, and other reigns down to the 22 H. 8. (in imitation of the clemency of the Roman emperors towards ſuch as fled to the church) if a man had committed felony here, and he could fly to a church or church-yard before his apprehenſion, he might not be taken from thence to be tried for his crime; but on confeſſion thereof before the juſtice, or before the coroner, he was admitted to his oath to abjure or forſake the realm; which privilege he was to have forty days, during which time any perſons might give him meat and drink for his ſuſtenance, but not after, on pain of being guilty of felony: the form of the oath you may read in an antient tract, de Officio Coronatorum, and in Horn's Mirror, lib. 1. But at laſt, this puniſhment being but a perpetual confinement of the offender to ſome ſanctuary, wherein (upon abjuration of his liberty and free habitation) he would chuſe to ſpend his life, as appears by the ſtat. anno 22 H. 8. c. 14. It is enacted 21 Jac. 1. cap. 28.

"That thence after; no ſanctuary or privilege of ſanctuary ſhould be allowed:" whereupon this abjuration ceaſed. 2 Inſt. 629. An abjuration or deportation for ever into a foreign country, is a civil death, and called (by the Lord Coke) a divorce between huſband and wife; and the wife of ſuch a perſon may bring actions, or be impleaded during the natural life of the huſband, which ſhe may not do in any other caſe: alſo ſhe ſhall have her dower or jointure. &c. Co. Lit. 133. This is where a perſon ſuffers baniſhment for any crime. By ſtat. 35 Eliz. cap. 2. Popiſh recuſants not making the ſubmiſſion of conformity, &c, are to abjure the realm. And by 1 W. & M. 13 W. 3. 1 Geo. 1. &c. All perſons are to abjure the pretended prince of Wales; and refuſing the oath, are liable to divers penalties and forfeitures, &c. This abjuration oath was invented for the ſecurity of the crown, and the proteſtant religion. See Oaths.

Abolition, A deſtroying or effacing, or putting out of memory: it alſo ſignifies the leave given by the king, or judges, to a criminal accuſer to deſiſt from further proſecution. Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 21.

Abridge, (abbreviare) Is derived from the French word abbreger, to make ſhorter in words ſo as to retain the ſenſe and ſubſtance. And in the common law it ſignifies particularly the making a declaration or count ſhorter, by ſevering ſome of the ſubſtance from it: a man is ſaid to abridge his plaint in aſſiſe; and a woman her demand in action of dower, where any land is put into the plaint or demand which is not in the tenure of the defendant; for if the defendant pleads non-tenure, joint-tenancy, &c. in abatement of the writ, as to part of the lands, the plaintiff may leave out thoſe lands, and pray that the tenant may anſwer to the reſt. The reaſon of this abridgment of the plaint is, becauſe the certainty is not ſet down in ſuch writs, but they run in general; and though the demandant hath abridged his plaint in part, yet the writ will be good for the remainder. Brook. tit. Abridgment, vide 21. H. 8. c. 3.

Abrogate, (abbrogare) To diſannul or take away any thing: as to abrogate a law, is to lay aſide or repeal it. Stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 3.

Abſentees, or des abſentees, was a parliament ſo called, held at Dublin 10 May 8 Hen. 8. And mentioned in letters patent, dat. 29 Hen. 8. 4 Co. Inſt. 354.

Abſolve, (abſolvere) To abſolve one excommunicated, or to pardon, or ſet free from excommunication. Vide Aſſoile.

Abſolutions, from Rome, high treaſon, &c. Stat. 23 Eliz. c. 1. See Bull.

Abſoniare, Was a word uſed by the Engliſh Saxons in the oath of fealty, and ſignified to ſhun or avoid.—As in the form of the oath among the Saxons recorded by Mr. Somner: In illo Deo, pro quo ſanctum hoc ſanctificatum eſt, volo eſſe nunc domino meo N. fidelis & credibilis, & amare quod amat, & abſoniare quod abſoniat, per Dei rectum, & ſeculi competentiam.

Abſque hoc, (without this, that, &c.) Are words of exception made uſe of in a traverſe; as the defendant pleads that ſuch a thing was done at B. &c. abſque hoc, that it was done at, &c. Mod. Ca. 103.

Accapitum, and accapitare, The ſame with relief due to lords of manors.—Capitali domino accapitare, i. e. to pay a relief to the chief lord. Fleta, l. 2. c 50.

Accedas ad Curiam, Is a writ that lies where a man hath received falſe judgment in a hundred court, or court-baron. It is directed to the ſheriff; and iſſued out of the Chancery, but returnable into B. R. or C. B. And is in the nature of the writ de falſo judicio, which lies for him that had received falſe judgment in the county-court. In the Regiſter of Writs, it is ſaid to be a writ that lies as well for juſtice delayed, as for falſe judgment; and that it is a ſpecies of the writ recordare, the ſheriff being to make record of the ſuit in the inferior court, and certify it into the king's court. Reg. Orig. 9. 56. F. N. B. 18. Dyer 169.

Accedas ad Vicecomitem, Where a ſheriff hath a writ called pone delivered to him, but ſuppreſſeth it; this writ is directed to the coroner, commanding him to deliver a writ to the ſheriff. Reg. Orig. 83.

Acceptance, (acceptatio) Is the taking and accepting of any thing in good part, and as it were a tacit agreement to a preceding act, which might have been defeated and avoided, were it not for ſuch acceptance had. To ſtate the law under this head, it will be proper to conſider the title,

I. With regard to the acceptance of rent.

II. To ſhew how far the acceptance of one eſtate ſhall deſtroy another.

III. How far the acceptance of one thing ſhall be a good bar to the demand of another.

IV. Where the acceptance of money ſhall diſcharge a bond; and what other ſatisfaction ſhall be good.

I. With regard to the acceptance of rent, it is neceſſary to ſhew, 1. Where ſuch acceptance ſhall confirm a leaſe.

If a biſhop before the ſtatute 1 Eliz. c. 19. ſ. 5. leaſed part of his biſhoprick for term of years, reſerving rent, and then died; and after another was made biſhop, who accepted and received the rent when due, by this acceptance, the leaſe was made good, which otherwiſe the new biſhop might have avoided. It is the ſame if baron and feme ſeiſed of lands in right of the feme, join and make a leaſe or feoffment, reſerving rent; and the baron dies, after whoſe death the feme receives or accepts the rent; by this the leaſe or feoffment is confirmed, and ſhall bar her from bringing a cui in vita. Co. Lit. 211. Tenant in tail made a leaſe for years, rendering 20 s. rent, and afterwards releaſed 19 s. and died; the iſſue in tail accepted the 12 d. rent: the better opinion was, that by the acceptance of the ſhilling for rent he had affirmed the leaſe, and could not diſtrain for the 19s. rent. Dyer 304. Tenant for life, remainder in tail; a ſtranger levies a fine to him in remainder, who leaſed the lands to the conuſor, rendering rent, the tenant for life died, and the iſſue in tail accepted the rent: adjudged, that by the fine and acceptance of the rent, the leaſe was affirmed. Dyer 299. See Smith againſt Stapleton. Plowd. 426, 434.

Lord and tenant; the rent is behind many years, the tenant made a feoffment in fee, and the lord accepted the rent of the feoffee which became due in his time; adjudged, that by ſuch acceptance he ſhall loſe all the arrearages, and cannot avow for the ſame. 3 Rep. 65. Penant's caſe. Leaſe for years, rendring rent, with a clauſe of re-entry; the leſſee paid the rent, which the leſſor accepted and put into a bag, but afterwards finding braſs money amongſt it, he refuſed to carry it away, and entered for the condition broken; but adjudged unlawful; becauſe after he had accepted the rent he is barred. 5 Rep. 113. Wade's caſe.

Acceptance of the next rent due, at a day afterwards, will bar one to enter for a condition broken before by reaſon of non-payment of the rent; becauſe the leſſor thereby affirmeth the leaſe to have continuance. Co. Lit. 211. And taking a diſtreſs affirmeth the continuance of the rent; but if rent was due, at a day before, and thereby the condition was broken, one may receive that rent, and yet re-enter: and if he accept of part of the rent, he may enter for a condition broken, and retain the lands until he has the whole rent. 3 Rep. 64, Co. Lit. 203.

If an infant accepts of rent at his full age, it makes the leaſe good, and ſhall bind him. Plow. 418.

2. Where the acceptance of rent ſhall not make the leaſe good.

If a parſon, &c. makes a leaſe for years not warranted by the ſtat. 32 H. 8. c. 34. but is void by his death: acceptance of rent by a new parſon or ſucceſſor will not make it good. 1 Saund. 241. And if a tenant for life make a leaſe for years, there no acceptance will make the leaſe good, becauſe the leaſe is void by his death. Dyer 46, 239.

Tenant in tail made a leaſe for years, rendring rent to him and his heirs, and died; his ſon and heir accepted the rent, and was afterwards executed for treaſon, leaving iſſue a ſon; the king accepted the rent, but that did not make the leaſe good, the lands being in his hands by the attainder, and not in the reverter. Dyer 115. Leaſe for years, with condition, that the leſſee ſhall not alien or aſſign, without the aſſent of the leſſor, and if he did, that then the leſſor ſhould re-enter: he aſſigned part of the land without aſſent, &c. and then the leſſor, before notice of the aſſignment, accepts the rent, and afterwards entered for the condition broken, and adjudged lawful; for the condition being collateral, he might aſſign the land ſo ſecretly, that it may be impoſſible for the leſſor to know it. 3 Rep. 65. Penant's caſe. Cro. Eliz. 553. S. C.

Leaſe for twenty-one years, rendring rent, on condition, that if the leſſee did let any part of it above three years, then the leaſe to be void, and that the leſſor might enter; he let it out for three years, and ſo from three years to three years, during the term of twenty-one years, if he ſo long lived; the leſſor accepted the rent of the aſſignee, and afterwards entered; this was a breach of the condition, and the acceptance of it afterwards did not diſpenſe with it, becauſe the original leaſe was void and determined. Cro. Car. 368. If tenant in tail make a leaſe for years, to commence after his death, rendering rent, in ſuch caſe acceptance of rent by the iſſue will not make the leaſe good to bar him, becauſe the leaſe did not take effect in the life of his anceſtor. Plowd. 418.

3. How far the acceptance of rent after aſſignment of the term deſtroys the privity of contract between the leſſor and the firſt leſſee.

If a leſſor accepts of rent from an aſſignee, knowing of the aſſignment, it bars him from action of debt againſt the leſſee; for the privity of contract is extinguiſhed: but after ſuch acceptance, the leſſor or his aſſigns may maintain an action againſt the firſt leſſee upon his covenant for payment of the rent. 1 Saund. 241. 3 Rep. 24. But, acceptance of rent from the aſſignee has been adjudged a ſufficient notice of the aſſignment, ſo that the leſſor could not reſort to the firſt leſſee. 2 Bulſt. 151.

Leſſee for years aſſigned his term, and died inteſtate, the leſſor brought debt againſt his adminiſtrator, who pleaded the aſſignment, and that the plaintiff had notice, and had accepted the rent of the aſſignee: adjudged, that by the death of the leſſee, the privity of contract was determined, and the action would not lie againſt the adminiſtrator. Cro. El. 715. and cited in Walker's caſe, 3 Rep. 24.

If a leſſee, for term of twenty years, accepts of a leaſe of the ſame land for ten years, by the leſſee's acceptance of the new leaſe, the term of twenty years is determined in law. 2 Roll. Abr. 469.

Leaſe for years to R. B. rendering rent; the next year a leaſe was made of the ſame lands to the lady P. for ninety-nine years; the next year the ſame lands were demiſed to the ſaid R. B. for forty-one years, who accepted the leaſe, but that did not extinguiſh his firſt leaſe; becauſe the leſſor by making the intermediate leaſe to the lady P. had only a reverſion, and could not afterwards give any intereſt to R. B. But if it had not been for this intermediate leaſe, then the acceptance of the ſecond leaſe for forty-one years had been a ſurrender of the firſt. Hutt. 104.

If a man hath a leaſe for years, which is good in law, and afterwards accepts a new leaſe of the ſame lands, which is void in law, this is no ſurrender in law of the good leaſe. Hutt. 105. Baker v. Willoughby. Mills v. Whitewood, ibid. S. P.

A man, in conſideration of a marriage to be had with M.R. made an eſtate to her for life of certain lands in full ſatisfaction of her dower; afterwards they married, and the huſband died, and the widow brought a writ of dower againſt the heir, who pleaded in bar the acceptance of the eſtate for life: adjudged no good plea; for ſuch acceptance did not bar her of her dower at the common law, becauſe ſhe had no title of dower when the acceptance was made; and beſides no collateral acceptance can bar any right of inheritance or freehold. See 4 Rep. 1. Vernon's caſe.

A man made a leaſe of a manor for thirty years, excepting the wood, &c. and afterwards made a leaſe of the woods to the ſame leſſee for ſixty years, and a third leaſe to him of the manor for thirty years, without any exception; reſolved, that by the acceptance of this future leaſe, the leaſe for ſixty years was ſurrendered; becauſe by ſuch acceptance the leſſee had affirmed, that the leſſor had authority to make a new leaſe. 5 Rep. 11. Ives's caſe.

In a ſpecial verdict in treſpaſs, the caſe was, a leaſe was made to huſband and wife for their lives, and afterwards they accepted a new leaſe for themſelves and their ſon: habendum to all three of them, a die datus indenturæ, for the term of their lives with a letter of attorney to make livery: adjudged, that the acceptance of a ſecond leaſe, to commence a die datus, was a ſurrender of the firſt, and this by the expreſs agreement in writing of the leſſees themſelves; for otherwiſe the leſſor had no power to make a new leaſe. Moor 636.

III. How far the acceptance of one thing ſhall be a good bar to the demand of another.

Where the condition of a bond is to pay money, acceptance of another thing is good. But if the condition is not for money, but a collateral thing, it is otherwiſe. Dyer 56. 9 Rep. 79. And the acceptance of uncertain things, as cuſtoms, &c. made over, may not be pleaded in ſatisfaction of a certain ſum due on bond. Cro Car. 193. If a woman hath title to an eſtate of inheritance, as dower, &c. ſhe ſhall not be barred by any collateral ſatisfaction or recompence: and no collateral acceptance can bar any right of inheritance or freehold, without ſome releaſe, &c. 4 Rep. 1. When a man is entitled to a thing in groſs, he is not bound to accept it by parcels; and if a Leſſor diſtrains for rent, he is not obliged to accept part of it; nor in action of detinue, part of the goods, &c. 3 Salk. 2.

If a man be bound in 200 quarters of corn, with condition to pay 20 l. the obligor may, by agreement, give the obligee any other thing in ſatisfaction of the money; but if the condition had been to pay 100 quarters of corn, there the acceptance of money, or any other thing, had not been good, becauſe the contract was not made for money, but for a collateral thing. Peyto's caſe, 9 Rep. 79. Yet Qu. If obligee agrees to accept and does accept the ſame in ſatisfaction and diſcharge, why may not the obligor plead the ſame, if the agreement is by deed? Vide poſt verb. Accord.

Debt upon bond, conditioned for the obligor to make an aſſurance of ſuch lands to ſuch uſes as in the condition mentioned; the defendant pleaded, that he had made a feoffment of the ſame lands to other uſes than in the condition expreſſed, which the obligee had accepted; and upon demurrer it was adjudged an ill plea; for the obligor ought not to vary from the uſes ſet forth in the condition. 1 Brownl. 60.

Acceptance of a leſs ſum may be in ſatisfaction of a greater ſum, if it be before the day on which the money becomes due. 3 Bulſt. 301.

Now, by the ſtat. 12 Ann. c. 16. payment after the day, ſpecified in the condition, may be pleaded. — And 'tis much to be doubted, whether the caſe in Godb. fo. 10. in caſe of money paid before the day, is law, for if the money was paid before the day, it muſt have been paid at the day; and therefore paid according to the condition.

IV. Where the acceptance of money ſhall diſcharge a bond; and what other ſatisfaction ſhall be good.

Where a leſſer ſum is paid before it is due, and the payment is accepted, it ſhall be good in ſatisfaction of a greater ſum; but after the money is due, then a leſſer ſum, though accepted, ſhall not be a ſatisfaction for a greater ſum. Thus in debt upon bond, conditioned to pay 8 l. &c. defendant pleaded payment of 5 l. before the day mentioned in the condition, which the obligee accepted in ſatisfaction of the bond; and upon demurrer this was adjudged a good plea. Moor 677. Vide 3 Bul. 301.

But payment after the day of a leſs ſum is not good, as the bond is forfeited, at common law; and there is not any ſtatute to relieve.

Debt upon bond of 16 l. conditioned to pay 8 l. 10 s. on a certain day; the defendant pleaded, that, before that day, he at the requeſt of the plaintiff, paid to him 5 l. which he accepted in ſatisfaction of the debt, and upon demurrer the plaintiff had judgment, becauſe the defendant had pleaded the payment of the 5 l. generally, without alledging, that it was in ſatisfaction of the debt. It is true, he ſets forth, that it was accepted in ſatisfaction of the debt, but it ought likewiſe to be paid in ſatisfaction. 5 Rep. 117. Debt upon bond, conditioned, that in conſideration the plaintiff had paid 12 l. to the defendant, he became bound to pay the plaintiff 12 l. if he lived one month after the date of that bond; and if not paid at that time, then to pay to him 14 l. if he lived ſix months after the date of the bond; the defendant pleaded, that, after the ſix months, he paid the plaintiff 8 l. and then gave him another bond in the penalty of 20 l. conditioned to pay him 10 l. on a certain day, in full ſatisfaction of the other bond, and that the plaintiff did accordingly accept the ſaid bond; upon a demurrer to this plea it was held ill; for admitting that one bond might be given in ſatisfaction of another, yet it cannot be after the other is forfeited, as it was in this caſe; becauſe after the forfeiture the penalty is veſted in the obligee, and a leſs ſum cannot be a ſatisfaction for a greater. 1 Lut. 464.

It hath been adjudged, that the acceptance of one bond cannot be pleaded in ſatisfaction of another bond. Cro. Car. 85. Moore 872. Cro. Eliz. 716, 727. 2 Cro. 579. Thus in debt on a bond of 100 l. conditioned for the payment of 52 l. 10 s. on a certain day; the defendant pleaded, that at the day, &c. he and his ſon gave a new bond of 100 l. conditioned for the payment of 52 l. 10 s. at another day then to come, which the plaintiff accepted in ſatisfaction of the old bond; and upon demurrer it was adjudged for the plaintiff, becauſe the acceptance of a new bond to pay money at another day, could not be a preſent ſatisfaction for the money due on the day when it was to be paid on the old bond. Hob. 68. But it is otherwiſe where the ſecond bond is not given by the obligor, as in debt upon bond againſt the defendant as heir, &c. he pleaded, that his anceſtor, the obligor, died inteſtate, and that W. R. adminiſtered, who gave the plaintiff another bond in ſatisfaction of the former: there was a verdict for the defendant: and it being moved in arreſt of judgment, this diſtinction was made, that if the obligor, who gave the firſt bond, had likewiſe given the ſecond, it would not have diſcharged the firſt; but in this caſe the ſecond bond was not given by him who gave the firſt, but by his adminiſtrator, which had mended the ſecurity, becauſe he may be chargeable de bonis propriis; and for that reaſon the ſecond bond was held to be a diſcharge of the firſt. 1 Mod. 225.

Acceſſary, acceſſorius vel acceſſorium, (particeps criminis) Is where a man is guilty of a felonious offence, not principally, but by participation, as by command, advice, or concealment, &c.

The law relating to this title may be reduced under the following diviſions:

I. Of acceſſaries before the fact.
II. Of acceſſaries after the fact.
III. Of acceſſaries to felonies, by common law and by ſtatute.
IV. Of the proceedings againſt acceſſaries.

I. An acceſſary before the fact is he, that being abſent at the time of the felony committed doth yet procure, counſel, command, or abet another to commit a felony, and it is an offence greater than the acceſſary after; and therefore in many caſes clergy is taken away from acceſſaries before, which yet is not taken away from acceſſaries after, as in petit treaſon, murder, robbery, and wilful burning, by 4 & 5 P. & M. c. 4. 1 Hale's Hiſtory of the Pleas of the Crown 615.—If the commander or counſellor be preſent, he is a principal. H. H. P. C. 616. Words which ſound in bare permiſſion, make not an acceſſary, as if A. ſays he will kill J. S. and B. ſays, you may do your pleaſure for me, this makes not B. acceſſary, 1 H. H. P. C. 616. 21 Hen. 7, 36, 37. Cromp. 41. b. If A. hires B. to mingle or lay poiſon for C. and B. doth it accordingly, and C. is poiſoned; B. though abſent; is principal, and A. is acceſſary; but if A. were preſent at the mingling or laying of the poiſon, though both were abſent at the taking of it, yet both are principal, for they are both equally acting in the poiſoning. But if A. buys the materials of the poiſon, knowing and conſenting to the deſign, and deliver them to B. to mingle and apply it, or lay it in the abſence of A. here it ſeems A. is only acceſſary before. H. H. P. C. 616 See 3 Inſt. p. 50. State Tr. vol. 1. p. 329.

There cannot be an acceſſary before the fact in manſlaughter, becauſe it is committed of a ſudden, and unpremeditated. H. P. C. 317. He who counſels or commands any evil ſhall be adjudged acceſſary to all that follows upon it, but not to any thing elſe. If a perſon commandeth another to beat ſuch a perſon, and he beats him ſo that he dies of his wounds, the perſon commanding will be acceſſary to the murder.

But if the command had been to beat another perſon, or to burn ſuch a houſe, and he burns another, he that commandeth will not be Acceſſary. 3 Inſt. 51. If I command a perſon to do an unlawful act, as to rob A. B. at one place, and he doth it at another; or to rob him on ſuch a day, and he doth it not himſelf, but procures another to do it; or to kill by poiſon, and he does it by violence; in all theſe caſes I ſhall be acceſſary: but where the command is to kill A. B. and he killeth A. D. this difference in ſubſtance will not make the commander acceſſary. Plowd. 475. If a man counſels a woman to murder the child in her womb, and the woman murder her child after it is born, he is acceſſary to the murder. Dyer 185.

II. An acceſſary after the fact.

An acceſſary after the fact is he that receives, aſſiſts or comforts any man that hath committed murder or felony, which hath come to his knowledge; but this doth not extend to a woman who receives or aſſiſts her huſband, though a huſband receiving his wife will be acceſſary: and a ſervant may be acceſſary in relieving his maſter, or aſſiſting him in his eſcape, &c. 3 Inſt. 108.

If the wife alone, the huſband being ignorant of it, do knowingly receive a felon, the wife is acceſſary and not the huſband. 1 H. H. P. C. 621.

But if felons come to the houſe of D. and M. his wife, and M. know them to be felons, though D. doth not, and both D. and M. receive and entertain them, but M. conſents not to the felony: adjudged that this makes not M. acceſſary. 3 Inſt. 108. cap. 47. cites Mi. 37 E. 3, Dey's caſe.

But if the huſband and wife both receive a felon knowingly, it ſhall be judged only the act of the huſband, and the wife ſhall be acquitted. 1 H. H. P. C. 621.

If a felon comes to the houſe of another, and he permits him to eſcape without arreſt, knowing him to have committed felony, this doth not make a man acceſſary; but if he take money of the felon to ſuffer ſuch eſcape, it makes him an acceſſary: and ſo it is if he ſhut the fore door of his houſe, whereby the purſuers are deceived, for here is not a bare omiſſion, but an act done. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 619.

By ſtatute 3 W. & M. c. 9. §. 4. "Receivers of ſtolen goods, knowing them to be ſtolen, are to be deemed acceſſaries after the fact, and ſuffer as ſuch." But becauſe theſe receivers often concealed the principal felons, and thereby eſcaped being puniſhed as acceſſaries; therefore by 1 An. c. 9. §. 2. it is enacted, that "whoſoever ſhall buy or receive ſtolen goods, knowing them to be ſtolen may be proſecuted for a miſdemeanor, and puniſhed by fine and impriſonment, tho' the principal felon be not convicted"; and this ſhall exempt them from being puniſhed as acceſſaries, if the principal ſhall afterwards be convicted. But by 5 An. c. 31. § 5. it is enacted, that "if any perſon ſhall receive or buy knowingly any ſtolen goods, or knowingly harbour or conceal any felon, he ſhall be taken as acceſſary to the felony, and ſhall ſuffer as a felon." This ſtatute does not take away the benefit of clergy; but by ſtat. 4 Geo. 1. c. 11. §. 1. ſuch perſon may he tranſported for fourteen years. And by this laſt mentioned ſtatute it is alſo enacted, that "whoſoever ſhall take a reward under the pretence of helping any one to ſtolen goods, ſhall ſuffer as a felon, as if he himſelf had ſtolen them, unleſs he cauſe ſuch felon to be apprehended and brought to trial, and give evidence againſt him." Upon this clauſe the famous Jonathan Wild was convicted and executed. 10 Geo. 1.

If any perſon, knowing another to have commtted piracy, ſhall on the land or ſea receive, entertain, or conceal him, or receive or take into their cuſtody any ſhip, veſſel, or goods, which have been piratically taken, he ſhall be adjudged acceſſary to the piracy. 11 & 12 W. 3. cap. 7. ſ. 9. 10.

Acceſſaries after the fact can only be in felonies, and in thoſe felonies where, by the law, judgement of death regularly ought to enſue; and therefore there is no acceſſary in petit larceny, homicide per infortunium or homicide ſe defendendo. 1 H. H. P. C. 618.

III. Of acceſſaries to felonies by common law and by ſtatute.

As to felonies at common law it is ſaid, that acceſſaries both before and after are included; and as to felonies by act of parliament; regularly if an act of parliament enact an offence to be felony, though it mention nothing of acceſſaries before or after yet virtually and conſequentially thoſe, who counſel or command the offence, are acceſſaries before and thoſe that knowingly receive the offender, are acceſſaries after; as in the caſe of rape made felony by the ſtatute of Weſtminſter 2. c. 34. 1 H. H. P. C. 613. 2 Inſt. 434. Staundf. P. C. lib. 1. c. 47. But if the act of parliament, that makes the felony, in expreſs terms comprehend acceſſaries before, and makes no mention of acceſſaries after, namely, receivers or comforters, there it ſeems there can be no acceſſaries after; for the expreſſion of procurers, counſellors, abettors (all which import acceſſaries before) makes it evident, that the law-makers did not intend to include acceſſaries after which is an offence of a lower degree than acceſſaries before; as the ſtatute of 8 Hen. 6. c. 12. for ſtealing of records, the ſtatute of 33 Hen. 8. c. 8. for witchcraft, &c. 1 H. H. P. C. 614.

In the higheſt capital offence, namely, high treaſon, there are no acceſſaries, neither before nor after; for all conſenters, aiders, abetters, and knowing receivers and comforters of traitors are principals. 1 H. H. P. C. 613.

In caſes that are criminal but not capital, as in treſpaſs, mayhem, or præmunire, there are no acceſſaries, for all the acceſſaries before are in the ſame degree as principals; and acceſſaries after by receiving the offenders cannot be in law under any penalties as acceſſaries, unleſs the acts of parliament that induce thoſe penalties, do expreſly extend to receivers or comforters, as ſome do. 1 H. H. P. C. 613. And though generally an act of parliament, creating a felony, renders (conſequentially) acceſſaries before and after within the ſame penalty, yet the ſpecial penning of the act of parliament in ſuch caſes ſometimes varies the caſe. Thus the ſtatute of 3 Hen. 7. c. 2. for taking away maidens, &c. makes the offender and the procuring and abetting, yea and wittingly receiving alſo, to be all equally principal felonies, and excluded of clergy. 1 H. H. P. C. 614.

In what caſes acceſſaries are excluded from clergy, ſee the quarto edition of The Statutes at Large, title Acceſſaries, under the head of Felonies without Clergy.

IV. Of the proceedings againſt acceſſaries.

By the ſtatute 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 24. the acceſſary is indictable in that county where he was acceſſary, and ſhall be tried there, as if the felony had been committed in the ſame county; and the juſtices, before whom the acceſſary is, ſhall write to the juſtices, &c. before whom the principal is attainted, for the record of the attainder. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 623. This writing is to be by writ in the king's name, under the teſte of the juſtice ſo ſending it. Dyer 253. b. The acceſſary may be indicted in the ſame indictment with the principal, and that is the beſt and moſt uſual way; tho' he may be indicted in another indictment, but then ſuch indictment muſt contain the certainty and kind of the principal felony. 1 H. H. P. C. 623. Formerly it was held, that the acceſſary might be tried and puniſhed as if the principal had been attainted; and this, although the principal was admitted to his clergy, pardoned, or otherwiſe delivered before attainder. By ſtat. 29 Geo. 2. c. 30, the buyer or receiver of ſtolen lead, iron, copper, braſs, bell-metal, or ſolder, may be convicted, although the principal hath not been convicted, and ſhall be tranſported for fourteen years. If the principal be erroneouſly attainted, yet the acceſſary ſhall be put to anſwer, and ſhall not take advantage of the error in that attainder; but the principal reverſing the attainder, reverſeth the attainder of the acceſſary. 1 H. H. P C. 625.

Where the principal is not attainted, but diſcharged by being burnt in the hand only, the acceſſary after the fact ought to be diſcharged without burning in the hand, on being put to his book. Cro. Car. 566. pl. 3. Hill. 15 Car. B. R. Steven's caſe.

The acceſſary ſhall not be conſtrained to anſwer to his indictment, till the principal be tried; but if he will waive that benefit, and put himſelf upon his trial before the principal be tried, he may; and his acquittal or conviction upon ſuch trial is good. But it ſeems neceſſary in ſuch caſe to reſpite judgment till the principal be convicted and attainted; for if the principal be after acquitted, that conviction of the acceſſary is annulled, and no judgment ought to be given againſt him; but if he be acquitted of the acceſſary, that acquittal is good, and he ſhall be diſcharged. 1 H. H. P. C. 623, 624.

It ſeems to be ſettled at this day, that if the principal and acceſſary appear together, and the principal plead the general iſſue, the acceſſary ſhall be put to plead alſo; and that if he likewiſe plead the general iſſue, both may be tried by one inqueſt; but that the principal muſt be firſt convicted; and that the jury ſhall be charged, that if they find the principal Not guilty, they ſhall find the acceſſary Not guilty. But it ſeems agreed, that if the principal plead a plea in bar, or abatement, or a former acquittal, the acceſſary ſhall not be forced to anſwer, till that plea be determined; for if it be found for the principal, the acceſſary is diſcharged; if againſt the principal, yet he ſhall after plead over to the felony, and may be acquitted. 1 H. H. P. C. 624. 2 Hawk. 323. Where there are two principals, the attainder of one of them gives ſufficient foundation to arraign the acceſſary. Jenk. Cent. 76. Vide Hawk. P. C. tit. Acceſſary See Murder, Principal, &c.

Accola, An huſbandman who came from ſome other parts or country to till the lands, eo quod adveniens terram colat.—And is thus diſtinguiſhed from Incola, viz. Accola non propriam, propriam colit Incola terram. Du Freſne.

Accolade, (from the French accoller, collum amplecti,) A ceremony uſed in knighthood by the king's putting his hand about the knight's neck.

Accompt, (computus) Is a writ or action which lies againſt a bailiff or receiver to a lord or others, who by reaſon of their offices and buſineſſes are to render accompt, bnt refuſe to do it. F. N. B. 116.

This action is now ſeldom uſed, but it lies in the following caſes:

If a perſon receives money due to me upon an obligation, &c. I may either have an action of accompt againſt him as my receiver; or action of debt, or on the caſe, as owing me ſo much money as he hath received. 1 Lill. 33. If I pay money in my own wrong to another, I may bring an action againſt him for ſo much money received to my uſe; but then he may diſcharge himſelf by alledging it was for ſome debt, or to be paid over by my order to ſome other perſon, which he hath done, &c. 1 Lill. 30. But if a man have a ſervant, whom he orders to receive money, the maſter ſhall have accompt againſt him, if he were his receiver. Co. Lit. 172. If money be received by a man's wife to his uſe, action of accompt lies againſt the huſband, and he may be charged in the declaration as his own receipt. Co. Lit. 295. Account does not lie againſt an infant; but it lies againſt a man or woman, that is guardian, bailiff, or receiver, being of age and diſcovert: and though an apprentice is not chargeable in this action, for what he uſually receives in his maſter's trade; yet upon collateral receipts he ſhall be charged as well as another. Co. Lit. 172. Roll. Abr. 117. 3 Leon. 92.

As to other actions of accompt, they will not lie of a thing certain; if a man delivers 10 l. to merchandize with, he ſhall not have account of the 10 l. but of the profits, which are uncertain: and this is one reaſon why this action will not lie for the arrears of rent. 1 Danv. Abr. 215. Action of account may be brought againſt a factor that ſells goods and merchandizes upon credit, without a particular commiſſion ſo to do, though the goods are bona peritura. 2 Mod. 100. If there are two demands in a declaration, to which the defendant pleads an accompt ſtated, the plaintiff can never after reſort to the original contract, which is thereby merged and diſcharged in the accompt: if A. ſells his horſe to B. for 10 l. and there being divers other dealings between them, they come to an accompt upon the whole, and B. is found in arrear 5 l. A. muſt bring his inſimul computaſſet for it, but if there be only one debt betwixt the parties, entering into an accompt for that would not determine the firſt contract. 1 Mod. Rep. 206. 2 Mod. 44. It has been held, that mutual demands on an accompt are not extinguiſhed by ſettling it, and promiſe to pay the balance; wherefore aſſumpſit lies for the original debt. Fitzgib. 44. A man having received of another 100 l. to be employed in merchandize abroad, covenants at his return to accompt to him; this doth not alter the caſe, but notwithſtanding the covenant, action of accompt may be brought. 2 Bulſt. 256. And if I deliver to another perſon goods or money beyond ſea, to be delivered to me again in England at a certain place, and he delivers it not, I may be relieved by this action. F. N. B. 18.

But the moſt liberal, extenſive, and beneficial action is for money had and received by defendant to plaintiff's uſe, and will lie in almoſt (if not in every) caſe where one hath money of another's in his hands, which he ought to pay him. This form of action is equivalent to a bill in equity.

Accompt may be brought againſt the following perſons:

If a man makes one his bailiff of a manor, &c. he ſhall have a writ of accompt againſt him as a bailiff, where a perſon makes one receiver, to receive his rents or debts, &c. he ſhall have accompt againſt him as receiver, and if a man makes one his bailiff and alſo his receiver, then he ſhall have accompt againſt him in both ways. Alſo a perſon may have a writ of accompt againſt a man as bailiff or receiver, where he was not his bailiff or receiver; as if a man receive money for my uſe, I ſhall have an accompt againſt him as receiver; or if a perſon deliver money unto another to deliver over unto me, I ſhall likewiſe have accompt againſt him as my receiver: ſo if a man enter into my lands to my uſe, and receives the profits thereof, I ſhall have accompt againſt him as bailiff. 9 H. 6. 36 H. 6. 10. R. 2. Fitz Accompt, 6.

A judgment in accompt, as receiver, is no bar to action of accompt as bailiff; but 'tis ſaid a bailiff cannot be charged as receiver, nor a receiver as bailiff; becauſe then he might be twice charged. 2 Lev. 127. 1 Danv. Abr. 220, 221. The heir may have writ of accompt before or after his full age, againſt a guardian in ſocage; and if he ſue the guardian for profits of his lands taken before he is fourteen years old, he muſt charge him as guardian; but if it be for taking the profits after that age, there he muſt ſue him as bailiff. Lit. 124. F. N. B. 118. Where an heir ſues a ſtranger that doth intermeddle with his land, he ſhall charge him in accompt as guardian. F. N. B. 18.

A man deviſes land to be ſold by his executors, and the money thence ariſing to be diſtributed amongſt his daughters; action of accompt lies in this caſe, for the daughters againſt the executors. Jenk. Cent. 215. 2 Roll. Abr. 285. An action of accompt lies againſt a bailiff, not only for what profits he hath made and raiſed, but alſo for what he might have made and raiſed by his care and induſtry, his reaſonable charges and expences deducted. Co. Lit. 172. Here the action of accompt may be preferable to that for money had and received. One merchant may have accompt againſt another, where they occupy their trade together; and if one charges me as bailiff of his goods ad mercandizandum, I muſt anſwer for the increaſe, and be puniſhed for my negligence; but if he charges me as receiver ad computandum, I muſt be anſwerable only for the bare money or thing delivered. F. N. B. 117. Co. Lit. 272 2 Leon. Ca. 245.

If a bailiff or receiver make a deputy, action of accompt will not lie againſt the deputy, but againſt him. 1 Leon. 32. But ſeveral ſtatutes have extended the benefit of this writ or action.

The ſtatute of 13 E. 3. c. 23. gives an action of account to the executors of a merchant; the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. c. 5. to executors of executors; the ſtatute 31 Ed. 3. c. 11. to adminiſtrators: and by the ſtatute 3 & 4 Ann. c. 16. actions of account may be brought againſt the executors and adminiſtrators of every guardian, bailiff and receiver, and by one jointenant, tenant in common, his executors and adminiſtrators againſt the other as bailiff, for receiving more than his ſhare, and againſt their executors and adminiſtrators.

It may be proper to ſay ſomething concerning the plea and judgment in account; and though the order may ſeem ſomewhat irregular, it will be neceſſary firſt to explain the nature of the judgement, which being rightly underſtood, the diſtinctions as to the method of pleading will be more eaſily conceived.

The uſual judgment is quod computet, on which the defendant is taken by capias ad computandum: but there are two judgments in this writ, for if the defendant cannot avoid the ſuit by plea, judgment is firſt given, That he do accompt; and having done this before the auditors, there is another judgment entered, that the plaintiff ſhall recover of the defendant ſo much as is found in arrear. 11 Rep. 40. The firſt judgment is but an award of the court, like to a writ to enquire of damages; and theſe two judgments depend one upon another; for if judgment be to accompt, and the party die before he hath accounted, the executor cannot proceed in the action, but it muſt be begun again; and no writ of error will lie upon the firſt till after the ſecond judgment. Ibid. Thus it appears, that after the firſt judgment to account, auditors are aſſigned; and

With reſpect to the plea, the following diſtinctions are to be noticed:

What may be pleaded in bar to the action, ſhall not be allowed to be pleaded before the auditors. Cro. Car. 82, 161. Some pleas are in bar of the accompt, and others in diſcharge before auditors; and ſome pleas will be allowed before auditors, that will not be in bar to the accompt. Dyer 21. 11 Rep. 8. In accompt the plaintiff declared of the receipt of money by the hands of a ſtranger; the defendant pleaded a gift of the money afterwards by the plaintiff; this was a good plea as well in bar of the action, as before auditors. Winch 9.

The pleas in this action are, quod nunquam fuit receptor quod plene computavit, &c. It is no plea by an accomptant that he was robbed; unleſs he alledges it was without his default and negligence, and then it will be a good plea. Co. Lit. 89. That the defendant never was bailiff, is the general bar; and it is a good plea in bar, by claiming a property in the things to be accounted for. 29 E. 3. 47. A defendant, as receiver, cannot wage his law, where he receives the money by another's hands: 'tis otherwiſe where he received it of the plaintiff himſelf. 1 Cro. 919. Suppoſing there was not any evidence of the delivery.

It may be proper to add, that the proceſs in accompt is ſummons, pone and diſtreſs, and, upon a nihil returned, the plaintiff may proceed to outlawry. The ſtatute of Limitations, 21 J. 1. c. 16. doth not bar a man who is a merchant from bringing action of accompt for merchandize at any time; but all other actions of accompts are within the ſtatute.

In Chancery upon an accompt of fifteen or twenty years ſtanding, the defendant may be allowed to prove, on his own oath, what he cannot otherwiſe make proof of; but here the particulars muſt be named, as to whom the money was paid, for what, and when, &c. 1 Chan. Rep. 146. And a defendant ſhall be diſcharged upon his oath of ſums under 40*s.* though it is held a plaintiff ſhall not ſo charge another, or be allowed any thing in equity on his oath. 2 Chan. Caſ. 249. 1 Vern. 283. See Oath. Vide Comyn's Digeſt, tit. Accompt.

Accomptant General, A new officer in the court of Chancery, appointed by act of parliament, to receive all money lodged in court, in the place of the maſters, &c. He is to convey the money to the Bank, and take the ſame out by order; and ſhall only keep the account with the Bank, for the Bank is to be anſwerable for all money received by them, and not the Accomptant General, &c. Stat. 12 Geo. 1. c. 32. No fees ſhall be taken by this officer or his clerks, on pain of being puniſhed for extortion; but they are to be paid ſalaries. The Accomptant General 650*l. per annum*, out of intereſt made of part of the ſuitors money. 12 Geo. 2. cap. 24. Vide 4 Geo. 3. c. 32. 120*l. per ann.* to his third clerk.

Counterfeiting the hand of the Accomptant General is felony without clergy. 12 Geo. 1. c. 32. ſec. 9.

Accord, (French) Is an agreement between two or more perſons, where any one is injured by a treſpaſs, or offence done, or on a contract, to ſatisfy him with ſome recompence; which, if executed and performed, ſhall be a good bar in law, if the other party after the accord performed bring any action for the ſame. Terms de Ley.

For the right underſtanding of this head, it is to be ſhewn,

I. In what caſes accord may be pleaded.
II. In what manner it may be pleaded.

I. When a duty is created by deed in certainty, as by bill, bond, or covenant to pay a ſum of money, this duty accruing by writing, ought to be diſcharged by matter of as high a nature; but when no certain duty ariſes by deed, but the action is for a tort or default, &c. for which damages are to be recovered, there an accord with ſatisfaction is a good plea. 6 Rep. 43. In accord, one promiſe may be pleaded in diſcharge of another, before breach; but after breach, it cannot be diſcharged without a releaſe in writing. 2 Mod. 44. Accord with ſatisfaction, upon a covenant broken, is a good plea in ſatisfaction and diſcharge of the damages. Lutw. 359. And accord made before the covenant broken, hath been adjudged a good bar to an action of covenant, as it may be in ſatisfaction of damage to come. 1 Danv. Abr. 546.

If a contract without deed is to deliver goods, &c. there money may be paid by accord in ſatisfaction; but if one is bound in an obligation to deliver goods, or to do any collateral thing, the obligee cannot by accord give money in ſatisfaction thereof: though, when one is bound to pay money, he may give goods or any other valuable thing in ſatisfaction. 9 Rep. 78. 1 Inſt. 212. Where damages are uncertain, a leſſer thing may be done in ſatisfaction, and in ſuch caſe an accord and ſatisfaction is a good plea; but in action of debt on a bond, there a leſſer ſum cannot be paid in ſatisfaction of a greater. 4 Mod. 88. Accord with ſatisfaction is a good plea in perſonal actions, where damages only are to be recovered; and in all actions which ſuppoſe a wrong vi & armis, where a capias and exigent lie at the common law, in treſpaſs and ejectment, detinue, &c. accord is a good plea: So in an appeal of maihem. But in real actions it is not a good plea. 4 Rep. 1, 9, 70. 9 Rep. 77. Of late it hath been held, that upon mutual promiſes an action lies, and conſequently, there being equal remedy on both ſides, an accord may be pleaded without execution, as well as an arbitrament. Raym. 450. 2 Jones 158. Acceptance of the thing agreed on in theſe accords is the only material thing to make them binding. Hob. 178. 5 Mod. 86.

II. As to the manner in which it may be pleaded.

It is to be obſerved, that accord executed only is pleadable in bar, and executory not. 1 Mod. 69. Alſo in pleading it, it is the ſafeſt by way of ſatisfaction, and not of accord alone. For if it be pleaded by way of accord, a preciſe execution thereof in every part muſt be pleaded: but, by way of ſatisfaction, the defendant need only alledge, that he paid the plaintiff ſuch a ſum, &c. in full ſatisfaction of the accord, which the plaintiff received. 9 Rep. 80. The defendant muſt plead, that the plaintiff accepted the thing agreed upon in full ſatisfaction, &c. And if it be on a bond, it muſt be in ſatisfaction of the money mentioned in the condition, and not of the bond; which cannot be diſcharged but by writing under hand and ſeal. Cro. Jac. 254, 650.

For further information reſpecting the doctrine of accords, ſee title Acceptance, which includes a great deal of the law relative to this head.

Account. See Accompt.

Accroche, (from the Fr. accrocher) To hook or grapple unto. It ſignifies as much as to encroach, and is mentioned in the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. c. 8. to that purpoſe. The French uſe it for delay; as, accrocher un proceſs, to ſtay the proceedings in a ſuit.

Accuſation, (accuſatio) To charge any perſon with a crime. By Magna Charta, no man ſhall be impriſoned or condemned on any accuſation, without trial by his peers, or the law. None ſhall be vexed upon any accuſation, but according to the law of the land: and no man may be moleſted by petition to the king, &c. unleſs it be by indictment, or preſentment of lawful men, or by proceſs at common law. 25 Ed. 3. 28 Ed. 3. c. 3. None ſhall be compelled to anſwer an accuſation to the king, without preſentment, or ſome matter of record. Stat. 42 Ed. 3. Promoters of ſuggeſtions are to find ſurety to purſue them, and not making them good, ſhall ſatisfy damages to the party accuſed, and pay a fine to the king. 38 Ed. 3. c. 9. In treaſon there muſt be two lawful accuſers. Stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 11. §. 12. 1 P. & M. c. 10. §. 11. A perſon is not obliged to anſwer on oath to a matter by which he may accuſe himſelf of any crime, &c. 2 Mod. Rep. 278.

Acephali, The levellers in the reign of king Hen. 1. who acknowledged no head or ſuperior. Leges H. 1. They were reckoned ſo poor that they had not a tenement by which they might acknowledge a ſuperior lord. Du Cange.

Ac etiam billæ, Words, or a clauſe of a writ, where the action requires good bail. The ſtat. 13 Car. 2. c. 2, which enjoins the cauſe of action to be particularly expreſſed in the writ or proceſs which holds a perſon to bail, hath ordained the inſerting of this clauſe in writs; but it ought not to be made out againſt a peer of the realm, or upon a penal ſtatute, or againſt an executor or adminiſtrator, or for any debt under 10 l. in the ſuperior courts. Nor in any action of account, action of covenant, &c. unleſs the damages are 10 l. or more: nor in action of treſpaſs, or for battery, wounding or impriſonment; except there be an order of court for it, or a warrant under the hand of one of the judges of the court out of which the writ iſſues: 1 Lill. Abr. 13. See an hiſtorical account of Ac etiams in North's Life of Lord keeper Guildford, fol. 99, 100.

Achat, (Fr. achet) Signifies a contract or bargain. Purveyors by ſtat. 36 Ed. 3. were called achators, from their frequent making of bargains.

Acherſet, A meaſure of corn, conjectured to be the ſame with our quarter or eight buſhels. The monks of Peterborough had an allowance weekly of twelve acherſetos de frumento, and eight acherſetos de braſio, and ſix de Grad. and eleven acherſetos de fabis, &c.

Acholite, (acholitus) An inferior church ſervant, who, next under the ſubdeacon, followed or waited on the prieſts and deacons, and performed the meaner offices of lighting the candles, carrying the bread and wine, and paying other ſervile attendance.

Acknowledgment Money, Is a ſum paid in ſome parts of England by tenants on the death of their landlords, as an acknowledgement of their new lords; in like manner as money is uſually paid on the attornment of tenants.—Solvet XIId. ad recognitionem cujuſlibet novi domini de Hope, &c.—Ex libro Cart. Prior. Leominſtriæ.—It is in Latin called, Laudativum vel Laudemium, a laudando Domino.

Acquietandis Plegiis, A writ of juſticies, lying for the ſurety againſt a creditor, who refuſes to acquit him after the debt is ſatisfied. Reg. of Writs 158.

Acquietantia de Shiris & Hundredis, To be free from ſuits and ſervices in ſhires and hundreds.

Acquietare, Is a law word, ſignifying quietum reddere. Dr. Wilk. Gloſſ. And it alſo ſometimes ſignifies to pay. Mon. Angl. tom. 1. fol. 199.

Acquittal, (from the French word acquitter, and the Latin compound acquietare) To free or diſcharge. It ſignifies in one ſenſe to be free from entries and moleſtations of a ſuperior lord for ſervices iſſuing out of lands; and in another ſignification (the moſt general) it is taken for a deliverance and ſetting free of a perſon from the ſuſpicion of guilt; as he that on trial is diſcharged of a felony, is ſaid to be acquietatus de felonia; and if he be drawn in queſtion again for the ſame crime, he may plead auter faits acquit; as his life ſhall not be twice put in danger for the ſame offence. 2 Inſt. 385. When two are indicted, the one as principal, and the other as acceſſary, the principal being diſcharged, the acceſſary of conſequence will be acquitted by law.

Acquittal in fact, is when a perſon is found Not guilty of the offence by a jury, on verdict, &c. But in murder, if a man is acquitted, appeal may be brought againſt him. 3 Inſt. 273.

If one be acquitted on an indictment of murder, ſuppoſed to be done at ſuch a time; and after indicted again in the ſame county, for the murder committed at another time; here, notwithſtanding that variance, the party may plead auter faits acquit, by averring it to be the ſame felony: ſo where a perſon is indicted a ſecond time, for robbery upon the ſame perſon, but at another vill, &c. 2 Hawk. 370. Where a man is diſcharged on ſpecial matter found by the grand jury, yet he may be indicted de novo ſeven years afterwards, and cannot plead this acquittal; as he may upon the ſpecial matter found by the petit jury, and judgment given thereon. Ibid. 246.

If a perſon is lawfully acquitted on a malicious proſecution, he may bring his action, &c. for damages, after he hath obtained a copy of the indictment; but it is uſual for the judges of gaol delivery to deny a copy of an acquittal to him who intends to bring an action thereon, when there was probable cauſe for a criminal proſecution. Carth. Rep. 421.

Acquittance, (acquietantia) Signifieth a diſcharge in writing, of a ſum of money, or debt due; as, where a man is bound to pay rent, reſerved upon a leaſe, &c. and the party to whom due, on receipt thereof, gives a writing under his hand witneſſing that he is paid: this will be ſuch a diſcharge in law, that he cannot demand and recover the ſum or duty again, if the acquittance be produced. Termes de Ley 15. Dyer 6, 25, 51. An acquittance is a diſcharge and bar in the law to actions, &c. And if one acknowledges himſelf to be ſatisfied by deed, it may be a good plea in bar, without any thing received; but an acquittance, without ſeal, is only evidence of ſatisfaction, and not pleadable.

'Tis obſerved, that a general receipt or acquittance in full of all demands, will diſcharge all debts, except ſuch as are on ſpecialty, viz. bonds, bills, and other inſtruments ſealed and delivered; on which account thoſe can be deſtroyed only by ſome other ſpecialty of equal force, ſuch as a general releaſe, &c. There being this difference between that and the general acquittance. See Cro. Jac. 650.

But in ſome caſes a court of equity will order accounts to be opened, even after an acquitance in full of all demands.

And now, in the ſuperior courts of law, the producing an acquittance will not bar the action, if the plaintiff can by any means ſhew a miſtake, and that he has not been paid, or paid ſo much as the acquittance is for.

In ſome caſes payment may be refuſed, unleſs an acquittance is given. Thus the obligor is not bound to pay money upon a ſingle bond, except an acquittance be given him by the obligee; nor is he obliged to pay the money before he hath the acquittance. But in caſe of an obligation with a condition, it is otherwiſe; for there one may aver payment. And by 3 & 4 Ann. c. 16. If an action of debt is brought upon a ſingle bill, and the defendant hath paid the money, ſuch payment may be pleaded in bar of the action.

A ſervant may give an acquittance for the uſe of his maſter, where ſuch ſervant uſually receives his maſter's rents, &c. and a maſter ſhall be bound by it. Co. Lit. 112. The manner of tender and payment of money ſhall be generally directed by him who pays it, and not by him who receives it; and the acquittance ought to be given accordingly.

Acre, (from the German word acker, i. e. ager) A quantity of land, containing in length 40 perches, and in breadth four perches; or in proportion to it, be the length or breadth more or leſs. By the cuſtoms of various countries, the perch differs in quantity, and conſequently the acre of land. It is commonly but 16 feet and a half, but in Staffordſhire it is 24 feet. According to the ſtatute 34 Hen. 8. concerning the ſowing of flax, it is declared that 160 perches make an acre, which is 40 multiplied by four; and the ordinance of meaſuring land, 35 Ed. 1. agrees with this account. The word acre formerly meant any open ground or field; as caſtle-acre, weſt-acre, &c. and not a determined quantity of land. Alſo acre, or acre-fight, is an old ſort of duel fought by ſingle combatants, Engliſh and Scotch, between the frontiers of their kingdoms, with ſword and lance; and this duelling was called camp-fight, and the combatants champions, from the open field that was the place of trial.

Actilia, Military utenſils.—Quilibet paratus ſit cum actiliis & harneſiis, &c. & quicunq; habet decem libras in bonis, & non habuerit omnia cremorum actilia, perdat omnia bona. Du Cange.

Action, (actio) Is the form of a ſuit given by law for recovery of that which is one's due: or it is a legal demand of a man's right. Co. Lit. 285. The learned Bracton thus defines it, Actio nihil aliud eſt quam jus proſequendi in judicio quod alicui debetur. And actions are either criminal or civil; criminal, to have judgment of death, as appeals of death, robbery, &c. or only to have judgment for damage to the party, fine to the king and impriſonment, as appeals of maihem, &c. Co. Lit. 284. 2 Inſt. 40. Civil actions are ſuch as tend only to the recovery of that which by reaſon of any contract, &c. is due to us; as action of debt, upon the caſe, &c. 2 Inſt. 61.

Under criminal actions may be claſſed actions penal; which lie for ſome penalty or puniſhment to the party ſued, be it corporal or pecuniary. Bract.

Actions upon ſtatute, brought upon the breach of any ſtatute, whereby an action is given that lay not before; as where one commits perjury to the prejudice of another, the party that is injured may have a writ upon the ſtatute. Such action is now obſolete.

Actions popular, given on the breach of ſome penal ſtatute, which every man hath a right to ſue for himſelf and the king, by information, action, &c. And becauſe this action is not given to one eſpecially, but generally to any that will proſecute, it is called action popular, or qui tam action. See title Qui tam.

Actions civil are divided into real, perſonal, and mixed. Action real is that action whereby a man claims title to lands, tenements, or hereditaments, in fee, or for life: and theſe actions are poſſeſſory, or aunceſtrel; poſſeſſory, of a man's own poſſeſſion and ſeiſin; or aunceſtrel of the poſſeſſion or ſeiſin of his anceſtor.

Action perſonal is ſuch as one man brings againſt another, on any contract for money or goods, or on account of any offence or treſpaſs; and it claims a debt, goods, chattels, &c. or damages for the ſame.

Action mixed is an Action that lieth as well for the thing demanded, as againſt the perſon that hath it; in which the thing is recovered, and likewiſe damages for the wrong ſuſtained: it ſeeks both the thing whereof a man is deprived, and a penalty for the unjuſt detention. But detinue is not an action mixed, notwithſtanding the thing demanded and damages for withholding it be recovered; for it is an action merely perſonal, brought only for goods and chattels.

In a real action, ſetting forth the title in the writ, ſeveral lands held by ſeveral titles may not be demanded in the ſame writ: in perſonal actions, ſeveral wrongs may be comprehended in one writ. 8 Rep. 87. A bar is perpetual in perſonal actions, and the plaintiff is without remedy, unleſs it be by writ of error or attaint: but in real actions, if the defendant be barred, he may commence an action of a higher nature, and try the ſame again. 5 Rep. 33. Suppoſing he did not at firſt ſue by a writ of right, which is the higheſt in the law. Action of waſte ſued againſt tenant for life, is in the realty and perſonalty; in the realty, the place waſted being to be recovered, and in the perſonalty, as treble damages are to be recovered. Co. Lit. 284.

Many perſonal actions die with the perſon. Thus if a leſſee for years commit waſte, and dies, action of waſte may not be had againſt his executor or adminiſtrator, for waſte done by the deceaſed. And where a keeper of a priſon permits one in execution to eſcape, and afterwards dieth, no action will lie againſt his executors. This muſt be underſtood, of that kind of keeper, to whom the priſon actually belongs, as the marſhal, the warden of the fleet &c. not of a gaoler who acts as ſervant to a ſheriff, &c. for in ſuch caſe, the death of the gaoler, is not any bar to an action againſt the ſheriff, to whom in fact, the priſon actually belongs. If a battery be committed on a man, and he that is the aggreſſor, or the party on whom committed, die, the action is gone. Co. Lit. 53. But in real actions it is otherwiſe, for they ſurvive.

Again, actions are either local or tranſitory. Actions real and mixed, ejectment, waſte, treſpaſſes, quare clauſum fregit, &c. are to be laid in the ſame county where the land lieth: perſonal and tranſitory actions, as debt, detinue, aſſault and battery, &c. may be brought in any county, (except it be againſt officers of places, &c. by ſtatute 21 Jac. 1.) Co. Lit. 282. Or againſt officers acting under particular acts of parliament, which frequently direct actions againſt them, to be laid in the reſpective counties, where the facts happen. Actions tranſitory may be laid in any county, although the ſtatute 6 R. 2. enacted, That writs of debt, account, &c. ſhould be commenced in the county where the contracts were made; for that ſtatute was never put in uſe; and yet generally actions have been laid in the county where the cauſe of them was ariſing, except as above. If the cauſe of action ariſe in two counties, an action may be brought in either county: but a nuſance be erected in one county, to the damage of a man in another, the action muſt be brought in conſulo comitatum. Mich. 8 Ann. B. R.

The defendant cannot by his plea oblige the plaintiff to lay his action in a different county from that in which he brought it, unleſs the matter pleaded be local; for in tranſitory actions he muſt move the court on affidavit, that if the plaintiff hath any cauſe of action, ſuch cauſe accrued in the county of, &c. and not where the plaintiff hath laid it, &c. and ſuch motion muſt be made before iſſue joined; for by joining iſſue, he agrees with the plaintiff, as to the manner of bringing the action, and though the court ſeldom refuſes on ſuch an affidavit to change the venue, yet if, before or after the motion made, the plaintiff will enter into a rule, to offer material evidence, in the county where he laid his action, the cauſe will be tried there. 1 Sid. 44. 2 Salk. 669, 670.

But though the court, on application, ſeldom refuſes to change the venue, yet there are caſes in which the judges have refuſed; as where a peer of the realm brings an action of ſcandalum magnatum, the court will not change the venue; becauſe a ſcandal raiſed on a peer reflects on him through the whole kingdom. 2 Mod. 215. 1 Lev. 56. S. P. It was lately denied in the court of king's bench, in the caſe of lord Sandwich, againſt Miller, after argument. A ſerjeant at law, barriſter, attorney, or any other privileged perſon, whoſe attendance is neceſſary at Weſtminſter-hall, may lay his action in Middleſex, though the cauſe of action accrued in another county; and the court, on the uſual affidavit, will not change the venue. 2 Salk. 668, 670. 2 Show. Rep. 176, 177, 242. S. P.

But if a privileged perſon be ſued, and the action brought againſt him in the right county, his privilege will not entitle him to have it tried in Middleſex. Carth. 126. 2 Salk. 668.

If an attorney lays his action in London, the court will change the venue on the uſual affidavit; for, by not laying it in Middleſex, he ſeems regardleſs of his privilege. 2 Vent. 47.

If the action be grounded on a ſpecialty, the court will not change the venue; for not being dated at any particular place, it may be preſumed to be omitted, that it may charge the defendant at any place. 2 Mod. 228.

It is not the courſe of the court to change the venue in an action of eſcape; per Hale Ch. Juſt. 2 Mod. 228. The court will not change the venue in an action of covenant. 1 Lev. 307.

Actions likewiſe are ſaid to be perpetual and temporary: Perpetual, thoſe which cannot be determined by time; and all actions may be called perpetual that are not limited to time for their proſecution: Temporary actions are thoſe that are expreſly limited; as for example; the ſtatute 7 H. 8. c. 3. gives action within four years after the offence committed: the 1 Ed. 6. c. 1. within three years; the 31 Eliz. c. 5. within one year, &c. Since the ſtatute of limitations, all actions ſeem to be temporary; or not ſo perpetual, but that they may in time be preſcribed againſt; a real action may be preſcribed againſt within five years, on a fine levied, or recovery ſuffered. By ſtat. 32. Hen. 8. c. 2. A writ of right for recovery of lands is to be brought within ſixty years: by 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. Writs of formedon for any title to lands in eſſe, are to be ſued within twenty years; actions of debt, on the caſe, of account, detinue, trover and treſpaſs, are to be brought within ſix years; of aſſault and battery within four years; and ſlander within two years: but the right of action in theſe caſes is ſaved to infants, feme coverts, perſons beyond ſea, &c. And on a freſh promiſe the time limited may be enlarged; alſo the taking out and filing of a writ, is a good commencement of an action to avoid the ſtatute of limitations. 1 Lill. 19. But continuances muſt be entered, to the time of declaring.

Actions alſo are joint or ſeveral; joint, where ſeveral perſons are equally concerned, and the one cannot bring the action, or cannot be ſued, without the other; ſeveral, in caſe of treſpaſs, &c. done where perſons are to be ſeverally charged, and every treſpaſs committed by many is ſeveral. 2 Leon. 77.

Having ſaid thus much concerning the general diviſions of actions, it remains to conſider,

I. By whom, and againſt whom, actions may be brought.
II. What particular actions are adapted to particular caſes.

I. In all actions there muſt be a perſon able to ſue; the party ſued muſt be one ſuable for the thing laid; and the plaintiff is to bring his right and proper action which the law gives him for relief. 1 Shep. Abr. 20. There are three ſorts of damages or wrongs, either of which is a ſufficient foundation for an action. 1. Where a man ſuffers damage in his fame and credit. 2. Where one has damage to his perſon, as by battery, impriſonment, &c. which reſpects his liberty. 3. Where a perſon ſuffers any damage in his property. Carth. Rep. 416.

A man attainted of treaſon or felony, convict of recuſancy, an outlaw, excommunicated perſon, convict of præmunire, an alien enemy, &c. cannot bring an action, till pardon, reverſal, abſolution, &c. But executors or adminiſtrators, being outlawed, may ſue in the right of the teſtator or inteſtate, though not in their own right. A feme covert muſt ſue with her huſband; and infants are to ſue by guardian, &c. Co. Lit. 128. Actions may be brought againſt all perſons, whether attainted of treaſon or felony, a convict recuſant, outlawed and excommunicate, &c. and a feme covert muſt be ſued with her huſband. A ſcire facias, or any writ to which the defendant may plead, or by which a plaintiff may recover, is an action. 6 Rep. 3. Salk. 5.

II. What particular actions are adapted to particular caſes.

There are various kinds of actions ſuited to different caſes, as actions of COVENANT, DEBT, DETINUE, TRESPASS, TROVER, &c. which ſee under their reſpective titles.

But where the law has made no proviſion, or rather, where no general action could well be framed before hand, the ways of injuring, and methods of deceiving being ſo various, every perſon is allowed to bring a ſpecial action on his own caſe. 1 New Abr. 44. Co. Lit. 56. a. 6 Mod. 53, 54.

This action is, in practice, become the moſt univerſal of any, as moſt of the other actions may, under particular circumſtances, be reſolved into this, which it will be neceſſary, therefore, to conſider ſomewhat largely.

Action upon the caſe is a general action given for redreſs of wrongs and injuries, done without force, and not particularly provided againſt by law, in order to have ſatisfaction for damage: and in actions upon the caſe, the like proceſs is to be had as in actions of treſpaſs or debt. 19 H. 7. c. 9. Terms de Ley 17. It is called action on the caſe, becauſe the whole cauſe or caſe, ſo much as in the declaration (except time and place) is ſet down in the writ; and there is no other action given in the caſe, ſave only where the plaintiff hath his choice to bring this or another action. We muſt obſerve that, formerly, all actions were ſued in the court of Common Pleas, and there the foundation of the ſuit is, a writ, called an original, whereupon the capias is grounded, and which original (in caſe, int' al') contains the nature of the plaintiff's complaint at large.

'Tis the ſame where ſuits are commenced in B. R. by original out of Chancery.

In all caſes, where a man has a temporal loſs, or damage by the wrong of another, he may have an action upon the caſe to be repaired in damages. But the particular damage muſt be ſpecially alledged.

This action, as hath been intimated, lies in a great variety of inſtances, which are particularly enumerated in NELSON's Abridgment and COMYN's Digeſt. Of theſe the chief are, 1. Action of the caſe for words, which is brought for words ſpoken or written which affect a perſon's life, reputation, office, or trade, or tend to his loſs of preferment, in marriage or ſervice, or to his diſinheritance, or which occaſion him any particular damage. This action therefore will lie for charging another with any capital, or other crime. To ſay of another he is a traitor, action lies. 1 Bulſt. 145. But if one call another a ſeditious traiterous knave, no action lieth; becauſe the words imply an intention only, and not an unlawful act. 4 Rep. 19. Nor to ſay of a man he deſerves to be hang'd: nor to call another a rogue generally, or ſay he will prove him to be a rogue; though it will lie to ſay a man is a rogue of record. 4 Rep. 15. Danv. 92. Words which charge a perſon with being a murderer, highwayman, or thief, in expreſs terms, are held actionable. 1 Roll. Abr. 47. Tho' for ſaying ſuch a one would have taken his purſe on the highway, or have robbed him, an action lies not; for nothing is ſhewn to be done in order thereto. Cro. Eliz. 250. Likewiſe to ſay a man was in gaol for ſtealing any thing is not actionable, for the words do not affirm the theft. Danv. 140. But to ſay, I think A. B. committed ſuch a felony; or, I dreamt he ſtole a horſe, &c. theſe words are actionable. Dal. 144. 1 Danv. 103. If a felony be done, and common fame is, that ſuch a perſon did it, although one may charge or arreſt him on ſuſpicion of that felony; yet a man may not affirm that he did the ſame, for he may be innocent all the while, and therefore affirming it hath been held actionable. Hob. 138, 203, 381.

It was heretofore held, that no action would lie for words importing a charge of murder, without an averment that the perſon ſaid to be killed was dead; but the latter and better opinion is, that the party ſhall be intended to be dead, unleſs the contrary appears in the pleadings. 1 Vent. 117. Cro. Jac. 489. Sid. 53. Cro. Eliz. 560, 823. Tho' quære if the party is proved alive? If one ſay to another, Thou art a buggering rogue, and I could hang thee, action lies. 1 Sid. 373. And if a man ſay, I know myſelf, and I know you, I never bugger'd a mare, &c. it is actionable.

When ſuch words are ſpoken of another maliciouſly, for which, if true, ſuch other might be puniſhed criminally, action lies; as, to ſay of a perſon, he hath perjured himſelf; or that he would prove him perjured; or that he was forſworn in the court of Chancery, Common Pleas, &c. are actionable: but not to call a perſon forſworn man, unleſs it be ſaid in a court of record. 3 Inſt. 163. Danv. 87, 89. To ſay a man hath forged an obligation, &c. and he will prove it; this is actionable. Danv. 130.

Some writers make a difference, where the ſubſequent words are introduced by the word and; as, you are a thief, and have ſtolen, &c. which are additional, and ſhall not correct; and the word for; as you are a thief, for you have, &c. Hob. 386. Style 115. Godb. 89. The words, He is a maintainer of thieves, and keeps none but thieves in his houſe, will not ſupport an action, unleſs it be averred that he knew them to be thieves. Cro. Eliz. 746.

To ſay an alehouſe-keeper keeps a bawdy-houſe, action lies. Cro. Eliz. 582. Though to ſay of an inn-keeper, that he harbours rogues, &c. is not actionable; for his inn is common to all gueſts. 2 Roll. Rep. 136. To ſay of another he hath the French pox, action will lie. Cro. Jac. 430. But 'tis ſaid, if one ſay that he had had the pox, after cured, no action lies; becauſe none will then avoid his company, &c. Noy. 151. To call a man a whore-maſter, or a woman whore, no action lies; for theſe are merely ſpiritual. Danv. Abr. 80. But calling a woman whore in London, is actionable by the cuſtom of the city.

Words likewiſe are actionable which tend to the diſgrace or detriment of a perſon in office, or of a man in the exerciſe of his profeſſion or trade.

Calling an officer in the government, &c. jacobite, hath been held actionable; aliter of a private perſon. 7 Mod. Ca. 107. To ſay a juſtice of peace doth not adminiſter juſtice, is actionable. Cro. Eliz. 358. And ſo for other diſgrace in his office.

But it is to be obſerved, that as to words for which an action lies, relating to a man's office, they muſt have a plain and direct meaning, to charge him with ſome crime that is puniſhable; and be ſpoken of his office, or otherwiſe they are not actionable. 6 Mod. 200. Thus the plaintiff, being a juſtice of peace, the defendant ſaid Mr. Stukely covereth and hideth felonies, and is not worthy to be a juſtice of peace; actionable, for though his office is not named, the words neceſſarily refer to it. 4 Rep. 16.

The plaintiff being a juſtice of peace, and high ſheriff, the defendant ſaid, 'Tis well known I am a true ſubject; but thou (innuendo the plaintiff's ſervant) ſerveſt no true ſubject, and thine own conſcience may accuſe thee thereof; actionable. 1 Leon. 335.

Caſe, &c. for theſe words ſpoken of a juſtice of peace, He is a forſworn juſtice, and not fit to be a juſtice of peace; after a verdict for the plaintiff it was inſiſted, that the words were not actionable, becauſe forſworn doth not intend judicial perjury, and there was no diſcourſe of his office; but adjudged actionable, becauſe the words forſworn juſtice ſhew that the defendant intended perjury relating to his office, for ſermo refert ad conditionem perſonæ. 1 Vent. 50.

Slander, &c. brought by a doctor of the civil law, who was alſo a juſtice of peace and chancellor of the biſhoprick of Norwich, for theſe words, he is not fit to be a chancellor or a juſtice of peace, he is a knave, a raſcal, and a villain, he is not fit to practiſe, he ought to have his gown pulled over his ears; actionable, the plaintiff had a verdict, and 40*l*. damages. 2 Lutw. 1288.

The defendant ſpoke to an officer, (viz.) You have cozened the ſtate of 20000 l. and I will prove it, for you have received 25000 l. of the office, and not compounded for it, and have foiſted in words in the order of your commiſſion; actionable. Style 436.

In offices of profit, for ſuch words as impute the want either of underſtanding, ability, or integrity to execute them, this action lies.

But in offices of honour, words that impute want only of ability, are not actionable; as to ſay of a juſtice of peace, He a juſtice of peace! he is an aſs, and a beetle-headed juſtice: the reaſon is, becauſe a man cannot help his want of ability, as he may his want of honeſty; otherwiſe where words impute diſhoneſty or corruption. 2 Salk. 695. But if ſpecial damage can be proved, it is actionable: and indeed in every caſe, where ſpecial damage can be proved, an action will lie.

As to words tending to the diſgrace or detriment of a man in his profeſſion or trade, it is to be premiſed, that where the words are diſgracing a man's profeſſion, they alſo muſt appear to be ſpoken preciſely of it; for to ſay a perſon hath cozened one in the ſale of certain goods, is not actionable; unleſs you ſhew that the party lived by ſuch ſelling. 1 Roll. Abr. 62.

To ſay of a doctor in divinity, Doctor S. is robbing the church; and at another time Doctor S. hath robbed the church; actionable. Cro. Car. 301, 417.

In caſe, &c. in which the plaintiff declared, that he was inſtituted and inducted into a parſonage in, &c. and that he executed the office of a paſtor in that church for the ſpace of four years, and that the defendant ſaid of him, You are a drunkard, a whore-maſter, a common ſwearer, and a common lier, and you have preached falſe doctrine, and deſerve to be degraded; after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected, that the words are not actionable, becauſe they import no civil or temporal damage to the plaintiff; but adjudged actionable, for, if true, he may be degraded, and ſo loſe his freehold. Allen 63.

Theſe words ſpoken of a preaching perſon, Parrat is an adulterer, and had two children by B. G.'s wife, and I will cauſe him to be deprived for it; not actionable; for 'tis a ſpiritual defamation, and puniſhable in that court. Cro. Eliz. 502.

To ſay of a counſellor, that he is no lawyer; that they are fools who come to him for law, and that he will get nothing by the law, action lies. 1 Danv. 113. And it is the ſame to ſay he hath diſcloſed ſecrets in a cauſe.

To call a doctor of phyſick fool, aſs, empirick, and mountebank, or ſay he is no ſcholar, are actionable. Cro. Car. 270. So to ſay of a ſchool-maſter, put not your ſon to him, for he will come away as very a dunce as he went. Hetl. 71. Where one ſays of a midwife, that many have periſh'd for her want of ſkill, an action will lie. Cro. Car. 211. If one calls a merchant bankrupt, action lies. 1 Leon. 336. And to call a trading perſon bankrupt knave, is actionable. 1 Danv. 90. Alſo if one ſay of a merchant, that he is a beggarly fellow, and not able to pay his debts; or ſay of a perſon that he is a runaway, and dares not ſhew his face, by reaſon whereof he is diſgraced and injured in his calling, theſe are actionable. Raym. 184.

Words tending to the loſs of perferment in marriage, &c. are actionable. Thus to ſay that a woman hath a baſtard, or is with child; or that a certain perſon hath had the uſe of her body, whereby ſhe loſes her marriage, action lies, i. e. by reaſon of the ſpecial damage. If a man is in treaty with a woman to marry, and another tells him, ſhe is under a pre-contract; this doth not imply a ſcandal, but yet, if falſe, an action will lie if ſhe loſes her marriage by means of theſe words. To ſay of a man that he lay with a certain woman, &c. by which he loſes his marriage, is actionable; for in theſe caſes there is a temporal damage. 1 Danv. 84.

As to words tending to a perſon's diſinheritance, if one ſays of another that has land by deſcent, that he is a baſtard; action upon the caſe lies, as it tends to his diſinheritance. Co. Ent. 28. But to ſay of a ſon and heir apparent, that he is a baſtard, action lies not until he is diſinherited, or is prejudiced thereby. 1 Danv. 83. To ſlander the title of another perſon to his lands is actionable; but the words muſt be falſe, and be ſpoken by one that neither hath nor pretendeth title to the land himſelf; and who is not of counſel to him that pretends right. 4 Rep. 17. If a man ſhall pretend title to the land another hath in poſſeſſion, and hath no colour of title to it; and ſhall ſay he hath ſuch a deed or conveyance of it, where in truth he hath none, or if he hath any it is a counterfeit and forged deed, and he knows it to be ſo: in this caſe the words may bear an action; but if there be any colour for what is ſaid, they will not be actionable. Cro. Jac. 163. Yelv. 80, 88. And the party of whom the words are ſpoken muſt have, or be likely to have, ſome ſpecial damage by the ſpeaking of them; as that he is hindered in the ſale of his lands, or in his preferment in marriage, &c. without which it is ſaid action doth not lie. 1 Cro. 99. Cro. Jac. 213, 397. Poph. 187. 2 Bulſt. 90. The affirming that another hath title to the land, where actionable, ſee 4 Rep. 175.

If A. ſays, that B. ſaid that C. did a certain ſcandalous thing, C. ſhall have action againſt A. with averment that B. never ſaid ſo, whereby A. is the author of the ſcandal. Suppoſing B. did not in fact ſay ſo. Cro. Jac. 406. See 1 Roll. Abr. 64.

It is to be obſerved in general, that though ſcandalous words are ſpoken before a man's face, or behind his back, by way of affirmation, or report, when drunk, or ſober; and although they are ſpoken in any other than the Engliſh language, if they are underſtood by the hearers, they are actionable: alſo words may be actionable in one county, which are not ſo in another, by the different conſtruction, &c. 4 Rep. 14. Hob. 165, 236. But if the defendant can make proof of the words, he may plead a ſpecial juſtification. Co. Ent. 26. Yet where the plaintiff has a pardon, after an offence committed, the words are ſtill actionable. Moor 863. The words to maintain this action muſt be direct and certain, that there may be no intendment againſt them: but as ſome words ſeparate, without others joined with them, are not actionable; ſo ſome words that are actionable may be qualified by the precedent or ſubſequent words, and all the words are to be taken together. 4 Rep. 17. 1 Cro. 127. Moor Ca. 174, 331. vide 4 Rep. 20. Hob. 126. Where words ſpoken are ſomewhat uncertain, by the precedent conference or ſome circumſtance; with an averment, they may be many times made certain and actionable. 2 Bulſt. 227. So by the pleadings of the parties, and verdict of a jury for the plaintiff. Cro. Jac. 107. The thing charged by the words muſt be that which is poſſible to have been done; for if it be of a thing altogether and apparently impoſſible, no action lies. 4 Rep. 16. For words ſpoken in purſuit of a proſecution in an ordinary courſe of juſtice; and where a lawyer, in pleading his client's cauſe, ſhall utter words according to his inſtructions; and to ſay of one he is a baſtard, when this is to defend the party's own title, where he himſelf doth claim to be heir of the land that is in queſtion; theſe words will not bear an action. Cro. Jac. 90. 4 Rep. 13.

In this action the nature of the words muſt be ſet forth, with the manner of ſpeaking them, the time and place, when and where ſpoken, and before whom, and the damage thereby to the plaintiff; that his credit was, and how, impaired, with the aggravating circumſtances: but it matters not whether the plaintiff doth in his declaration ſet forth all the circumſtantial words as they are ſpoken; ſo as to ſhew the very words that are actionable, and the ſubſtance of them, &c N. B. The real day is not material, nor is the place, unleſs where it is to govern the conſtruction.

2. Action on the caſe likewiſe lies upon an aſſumpſit or undertaking; and ſuch actions are founded on a contract either expreſs or implied by law, and gives the party damages in proportion to the loſs he has ſuſtained by the violation of the contract. 4 Co. 92. Moor 667. For the law on this head ſee title Aſſumpſit.

3. It has been premiſed, that a ſpecial action on the caſe lies in all inſtances wherein no general action could be framed; it will be neceſſary therefore to point out ſome of thoſe particular caſes to which it is moſt peculiarly applicable.

It was formerly held, that if my fire, by misfortune, burnt the goods of another man, for this wrong he ſhould have action on the caſe againſt me: and if my ſervant put a candle or other fire in any place in my houſe, and this burnt my houſe and the houſe of my neighbour, action of the caſe lay for him againſt me. 1 Danv. 10.

But by ſtat. 6 Ann. c. 31. it is enacted, that an action ſhall not be brought againſt any, in whoſe houſe or chamber any fire ſhall accidentally happen: but by the ſame ſtatute it is enacted, that if any ſervant through negligence ſhall cauſe an houſe or outhouſe to be fired, ſuch ſervant, being thereof convicted upon oath before two juſtices, ſhall forfeit 100*l.* unto the churchwardens of the pariſh of &c. to be diſtributed amongſt the ſufferers, as to the churchwardens ſhall ſeem juſt, and upon nonpayment the ſervant ſhall be committed to ſome workhouſe by a warrant of one juſtice, there to be kept eighteen months at hard labour. See the ſtats. 6 Ann. c. 31. § 6. 10 Ann. c. 14. & 33 Geo. 2. c. 30.

Action on the caſe likewiſe lies againſt carriers and others upon the cuſtom of England.

If a perſon delivereth goods to a common carrier, to carry them to a certain place, and he loſeth them, action upon the caſe lies againſt him; for by the common cuſtom of the realm he ought to carry them ſafely: it is the ſame of a common hoyman or lighterman, who is a water-carrier of goods; but goods in this caſe may be thrown overboard in a tempeſt, to preſerve the paſſengers lives in the lighter, &c. and no action lies. 2 Bulſt. 280. If a common carrier is robbed of goods, he is chargeable for them, becauſe he had his hire, and took upon himſelf the ſafe delivery of the goods. 1 Danv. 13.

If a carrier aſks whether money or plate is contained in a parcel, and is anſwered in the negative, and upon a robbery, and action brought, 'tis proved there was money or plate, we conceive the law does not make the carrier liable, he being deceived.

Caſe, &c. upon the cuſtom of England againſt a maſter of a ſhip, for negligently keeping the plaintiff's goods; adjudged he is rather an officer than a ſervant, for he may pawn the ſhip if he ſee occaſion; he may ſell bona peritura, &c. and tho' he receives his wages from the owners, yet in effect he is paid by the merchant; for 'tis he who pays the owners, and there is no difference between this caſe and that of a hoyman or a common carrier. 1 Vent. 190.

In an action on the caſe upon the cuſtom of the realm againſt the defendant, who was maſter of a ſtage-coach, the plaintiff ſets forth, that he took a place in the coach for ſuch a town, and that in the journey the defendant, by negligence, loſt the plaintiff's trunk; upon Not guilty pleaded, the evidence was, that the plaintiff gave the trunk to the man who drove the coach, who promiſed to take care of it, but loſt it; and the queſtion was, whether the maſter was chargeable, and adjudged that he was not, unleſs the maſter takes a price for the carriage of the goods as well as for the carriage of the perſon, and then he is within the cuſtom as a carrier: that a maſter is not chargeable for the acts of his ſervant, but when they are done in execution of the authority given by the maſter, and then the act of the ſervant is the act of the maſter. 1 Salk. 282.

If a mail is robbed, and bills are loſt; by Holt, Chief Juſtice, action lies againſt the poſt-maſter, as againſt a common carrier, &c. he being paid a ſalary for doing his duty; but 'twas over-ruled by the other juſtices. 1 Salk. 17. And we do not know of any other caſe upon this point ſince determined.

A common inn-keeper is chargeable for goods ſtolen in his houſe, and if the inn-keeper be not of ſound memory, it is ſaid action lies againſt him: but if the innkeeper be an infant, no action will lie againſt ſuch infant. The perſon robbed muſt be a traveller, and gueſt in the inn; if the goods are committed to the hoſt on another account, and are ſtolen, no action will lie. So if a man comes to an inn, and, leaving goods there, goes away for two or three days, if in that time they are ſtolen, no action lies againſt the inn-keeper; for at the time of the ſtealing he was not his gueſt: but where a man comes on horſeback to an inn, and leaves his horſe with the hoſt, if he goes away from the inn for ſeveral day, and in his abſence the horſe is ſtolen, the inn-keeper ſhall be charged for it; becauſe he had benefit by the continuance of the horſe with him, he being paid for it, and ſo the owner was a gueſt. Moor 877. If a man upon a ſpecial agreement boards in an inn for any time and is robbed, the inn-keeper ſhall not anſwer for it. Latch 127. for he is not a gueſt but a boarder. An inn-keeper is liable, though the gueſt doth not acquaint him what goods or money he hath. 8 Rep. 33. If an inn-keeper refuſe to entertain his gueſt, action on the caſe may be brought againſt him. Dyer 158.

This action lies for deceit in contracts, bargains, and ſales: if a vintner ſells wine, knowing it to be corrupt, as good and not corrupt, though without warranty, action lies. Danv. 173. So if a man ſells a horſe, and warrants him to be ſound of his limbs, if he be not, action on the caſe lies. A perſon warrants a horſe wind and limb, that hath ſome ſecret diſeaſe known to the ſeller, but not to the buyer, this action may be brought: though if one ſell a horſe and warrant him ſound, and he hath at the time viſible infirmities, which the buyer may ſee: action on the caſe will not lie. Yelv. 114. Cro. Jac. 675. Where one ſells me any wares or commodities, and is to deliver that which is good, but delivers what is naught; or ſells any thing by falſe or deceitful weights and meaſures, with or without warranty, action on the caſe lies; and ſo where a man doth ſell corrupt victuals, as bread, beer, or other thing for food, and knows it to be unwholeſome. Dyer 75. 4 Rep. 18. Cro. Jac. 270. Yet if the buyer or his ſervant ſhall ſee and taſte the victuals, &c. and like and accept the ſame, no action can be maintained. 7 H. 4. 16. Nor will caſe lie upon a warranty of what is out of a man's power, or of a future thing; as that a horſe ſhall carry a man thirty miles a day, or the like. Finch 188. If a man ſells certain packs of wool, and warrants that they are good and merchantable, if they are damaged, action on the caſe lies againſt him. 1 Danv. 187. The bare affirmation by the ſeller of a particular ſort of diamond, without warranting it to be ſuch, will not maintain an action. Cro. Jac. 4, 196. But where a man hath the poſſeſſion of a perſonal thing, the affirming it to be his own is a warranty that it is ſo; though it is otherwiſe in caſe of lands, where the buyer at his peril is to ſee that he hath title. 1 Salk 210. If a perſon ſells to another cattle or goods, that are not his own, action on the caſe lies; ſo if he warrants cloth to be of ſuch a length, that is deficient of it. If a taylor undertakes to make a ſuit of clothes, and ſpoils them, action lies: and if a carpenter promiſes to repair my houſe before a certain day, and doth not do it, by which my houſe falls: or if he undertakes to build a houſe for me, and doth it ill, action on the caſe lies. 1 Danv. 32. If a ſurgeon neglects his patient, or applies unwholeſome medicines, whereby the patient is injured, this action lieth.

And if a counſel retained to appear on ſuch a day in court, doth not come, by which the cauſe miſcarries, action lies againſt him: ſo if after retainer, he become of counſel to the adverſary againſt the plaintiff. 11 H. 6. 18.

For ſtopping up a water-courſe or way; breaking down a party wall; ſtopping of ancient lights, and for any private nuſance to a man's water, light, or air, whereby a perſon is damnified, this action lieth. Cro. Eliz. 427. Yelv. 159. Where a ſmith promiſes to ſhoe my horſe well, if he pricks him, action on the caſe lies; and ſo when he refuſes to ſhoe him, on which I travel without, and my horſe is damaged. If a horſe that is hired hath been abuſed by the rider, action lies: ſo where goods pawned are not delivered, on offering the money, Trover or Detinue.

Inſt. 193. If I lend another my horſe to ride ſo far; and he rides farther, or forward and backward; or doth not give him meat, this action lieth. Cro. Eliz. 14. And where one lends me a horſe for a time, if he take him from me within that time, or diſturb me before I have done what I hired him for; action on the caſe lies: and though I ride the horſe out of the way in my journey, he may not take him from me. 8 Rep. 146. This action lies for keeping a dog accuſtomed to bite ſheep, if the owner knows the vicious quality of the dog. But not for a man's dog running at my ſheep, though he kills them, if it be without his conſent and he did not know, that the dog was accuſtomed to bite ſheep. vide. 1 Danv. Abr. 19. Hetl. 171.

Action on the caſe will lie againſt a gaoler for putting irons on his priſoner; or putting him in the ſtocks; or not giving ſufficient ſuſtenance to him, being committed for debt. F. N. B. 83. The maſter may in many caſes have this action againſt his ſervant, ſteward, or bailiff, for any ſpecial abuſe done to him, and for negligence, &c. Alſo it lies for taking or enticing away my ſervant, and retaining him; or threatening a ſervant, whereby I loſe his ſervice. Lane 68. Cro. Eliz. 777. 1 Shep. Abr. 52, 59. A ſervant is truſted with goods and merchandize conſigned to him by a merchant, to pay the cuſtoms for them, and diſpoſe of them to profit; if he deceive the merchant, and have allowance for it on his account, and, to defraud the king, lands ſome of the goods without paying the cuſtoms, by which they are forfeited, action on the caſe lieth. Lane 65. Cro. Jac. 266.

If I truſt one to buy a leaſe or other thing for me, and he buyeth it for himſelf, or doth not buy it, this action lies againſt him; but if he doth his endeavour it ſufficeth. Bro. 117. Where a man is diſturbed in the uſe of a ſeat in the church, which he hath had time out of mind; a ſteward is hindered in the keeping of his courts; a keeper of a foreſt diſturbed in taking the profits of his office; a bailiff in diſtraining for an amerciament, &c. Action on the caſe will lie. Bendl. 89. Lib. Intr. 5. Moor 987. An action on the caſe lies for him in reverſion, againſt a ſtranger, for damage to his inheritance, though there be a term in eſſe. 3 Lev. 360. Alſo if a leſſor comes to the houſe he has demiſed, to ſee if it be out of repair, or any waſte be done, and meets with any diſturbance therein; or if one diſturbs a parſon in taking his tithes, this action lies, Cro. Jac. 478. 2 Inſt. 650. And for ſetting up a new mill on a river, to the prejudice of another who hath an ancient mill, an action will lie. Lib. Intr. 9.

Action on the caſe likewiſe lies for and againſt commoners, &c. for injuries done in commons.

Caſe againſt R. B. for ſurcharging the common; it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that caſe would not lie, but an aſſiſe; adjudged, that the plaintiff might have either action. Style 164.

Caſe, &c. by a commoner, for digging pits and ſpreading the gravel, &c by which he loſt his common; the defendant pleaded, that he is lord of the ſoil, and that he did dig for coals, doing as little damage to the paſture as he could, and averred, that he had left common ſufficient; and, upon a demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged, that it amounted to no more than the general iſſue, and that the lord could not dig pits in the common, for the ſtatute, Weſt. 2. c. 46. intends only an improvement by encloſing. Sid. 106. Cro. Jac. 165. 2 Inſt. 474.

Action on the caſe may likewiſe be brought for malicious proſecutions: where a ſuit is without ground, and one is arreſted, action on the caſe lies for unjuſt vexation: And for falſely and maliciouſly arreſting a perſon for more than is due to the plaintiff, whereby the defendant is impriſoned, for want of bail; or if it be on purpoſe to hold him to bail, action on the caſe will lie, after the original action is determined. 1 Lev. 275. 1 Salk. 15. And action likewiſe lies againſt ſheriffs, for default in executing writs; permitting eſcapes, &c.

Actions on the caſe likewiſe lie for conſpiracy, eſcape and reſcous, nuſances, &c. which ſee under titles Conſpiracy, Eſcape, Reſcous and Nuſances, &c. Vide Com. Dig. V. 1. tit. Action, Action upon the caſe, &c. &c.

Action prejudicial, (otherwiſe called preparatory, or principal) Is an action which ariſes from ſome doubt in the principal; as in caſe a man ſues his younger brother for lands deſcended from his father, and it is objected againſt him that he is a baſtard; now this point of baſtardy is to be tried before the cauſe can any further proceed: and therefore it is termed præjudicialis, quia prius judicanda. Bract. lib. 5. c. 4. num. 6. Cowel.

Action of a writ, Is a phraſe of ſpeech uſed, when one pleads ſome matter, by which he ſhews the plaintiff had no cauſe to have the writ he brought; yet it may be that he may have another writ or action for the ſame matter. Such a plea is called a plea to the action of the writ; whereas, if by the plea it ſhould appear that the plaintiff hath no cauſe to have an action for the thing demanded, then it is called a plea to the action. Cowel. Termes de la ley.

Actionare, i. e. In jus vocare, or to proſecute one in a ſuit at law. Thorn's Chron.

Acton Burnel. A ſtatute ſo called, made 13 Ed. 1. ann. 1285, ordaining the ſtatute merchant: it was ſo termed from a place named Acton Burnel, where it was made; being a caſtle ſometimes belonging to the family of Burnel, and afterwards of Lovel, in Shropſhire. Cowel.

Actor, The proctor or advocate in civil courts of cauſes. Actor dominicus, was often uſed for the lord's bailiff or attorney. Actor eccleſiæ was ſometime the forinſick term for the advocate or pleading patron of a church, Actor villæ was the ſteward or head bailiff of a town or village. Cowel.

Acts done, Are diſtinguiſhed into acts of God, the acts of the law, and acts of men. The act of God ſhall prejudice no man: as where the law preſcribeth means to perfect or ſettle any right or eſtate; if by the act of God the means in ſome circumſtances become impoſſible, no party ſhall receive any damage thereby. Co. Lit. 123. 1 Rep. 97. So in an action on the caſe againſt a bargeman who juſtified, for that there were ſeveral paſſengers in his barge, and a ſudden tempeſt ariſing, all the goods in the barge were thrown overboard to ſave the lives of the paſſengers, amongſt which the goods of the plaintiff were thrown over, and that he had not any notice that there was money in the pack; adjudged, that the action would not lie, becauſe what the owner of the barge did in this caſe was occaſioned by the act of God, and in defence of their lives. 1 Roll. Rep. 79. But qu. if on ſpecial demurrer, the plea would not have been adjudged bad, as amounting only to the general iſſue?

The acts of the law are eſteemed beyond the acts of man: and when to the perfection of a thing divers acts are required, the law hath moſt regard to the original act. 8 Rep. 78. The law will conſtrue things to be lawfully done; when it ſtandeth indifferent whether they ſhould be lawful or not: but whatſoever is contrary to law is accounted not done. Co. Lit. 42. 3 Rep. 74. Our law doth favour ſubſtantial more than circumſtantial acts; and regards deeds and acts more than words: and the law doth not require unneceſſary things. Plowd. 10.

As to acts of men; that which a man doth by another, ſhall be ſaid to be done by himſelf; but perſonal things cannot be done by another. Co. Lit. 158. A man cannot do an act to himſelf, unleſs it be where he hath a double capacity; no perſon ſhall be ſuffered to do any thing againſt his own act; and every man's acts ſhall be conſtrued moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelf. Plowd. 140. But if many join in an act, and ſome may not lawfully do it; it ſhall be adjudged the act of him who might lawfully do the ſame. Dyer 192. Acts that men are forced by neceſſity and compulſion to do, are not regarded; and an act done between perſons ſhall not injure a ſtranger not party or privy thereto. Plow. 19. 6 Rep. 16.

Where mutual acts are to be done, who is to do the firſt act, ſee title Condition.

Acts of parliament, Are poſitive laws, conſiſting of two parts, (viz.) the words of the acts, and the ſenſe and meaning of them, which being joined make the law. The words of acts of parliament ſhall be taken in a lawful ſenſe: caſes of the ſame nature are within the remedy, though out of the letter of the act; and ſome acts extend by equity to other things than are mentioned therein, &c. Co. Lit. 24, 381. Vide Statute.

Actuary, (actuarius) A clerk that regiſters the acts and conſtitutions of the convocation.

Adcredulitare, To purge one's ſelf of an offence by oath. Qui in collegio fuerit ubi aliquis occiſus eſt, adcredulitet ſe quod eum non percuſſit. Leges Inæ, c. 36.

Addition, (additio) Signifieth a title given to a man beſides his Chriſtian and ſurname, ſetting forth his eſtate, degree, trade, &c. As for example; additions of eſtate, are yeoman, gentleman, eſquire, &c. Additions of degree, are knight, earl, marquiſs, and duke: additions of trade, are merchant, clothier, carpenter, &c There are likewiſe additions of place of reſidence, as London, York, Briſtol, &c. And theſe additions were ordained that one man might not be grieved or moleſted for another: and that every perſon might be certainly known, and bear his own burden. If one be of the degree of a duke and earl, &c. he ſhall have the addition of the moſt worthy dignity. 2 Inſt. 669. But the titles of duke, marquiſs, and earl, &c. are not properly additions, but names of dignity. Termes de Ley 20. And the title of knight or baronet, is part of the party's name, and ought to be rightly uſed; but the titles of eſquire, gentleman, yeoman, &c. being no part of the name, but additions as people pleaſe to call them, may be uſed or not uſed, or if varied is not material. 1 Lill 34. An earl of Ireland is not an addition of honour here in England, but ſuch a perſon muſt be written by his Chriſtian and ſurname, with the addition of eſquire only: and ſons of Engliſh noblemen, although they have given them titles of nobility in reſpect of their families; if you ſue them, they muſt be named by their Chriſtian and ſurnames, with the addition of eſquire, as ſuch a one eſquire, commonly called Lord A. &c. 2 Inſt. 596, 666.

By the common law, a man that had no name of dignity, was named by his Chriſtain and ſurname in all writs; which was ſufficient. If he had an inferior name of dignity, as knight, &c. he ought to be named by his Chriſtian and ſurname with the name of dignity: but a duke, &c. might be ſued by his Chriſtian name only, and name of dignity, which ſtands for his ſurname. 2 Inſt. 665, 666. By ſtat. 1 Hen. 5. cap. 5. It is enacted, that in ſuits or actions where proceſs of outlawry lies, additions are to be made to the name of the defendant, to ſhew his eſtate, myſtery, and place of dwelling; and that writs not having ſuch additions ſhall abate, if the defendant takes exception thereto, but not by the court ex officio. By pleading to iſſue, the party paſſes by the advantage of exception for want of addition; for by the common law it is good without addition, and the ſtatute gives remedy only by exception. Cro. Jac. 610. 1 Roll. 780. No addition is neceſſary, where proceſs of outlawry doth not lie. 1 Salk. 5. If a city be a county of itſelf, wherein are ſeveral pariſhes, addition thereof, as of London is ſufficient: but addition of a pariſh, not in a city, muſt mention the county, or it will not be good. 1 Danv. 237. An addition after the alias dictus is ill; and according to Holt Chief Juſtice, if a man of Wilts commit felony at Weſtminſter, he ſhall be indicted by his name, as of Weſtm. 3. Salk. 20.

A gentleman by reputation, that is neither ſo by birth, nor by office, nor by creation, but commonly called gentleman, and known by that name, is a ſufficient addition; but if he be named yeoman, he cannot quaſh the indictment. 2 Inſt. 668.

Where there are ſeveral defendants of different names, and the ſame addition, it is ſafeſt to repeat the addition of each of their names, applying it particularly to every one of them. 2 Haw. 87.

And where a father hath the ſame name and the ſame addition with a defendant being his ſon, the action is abateable, unleſs it add the addition of the younger to the other additions; but where the father is the defendant, there is no need of addition of the elder. 2 Hawk. 187.

Adeling, (from the Saxon ædelan) Signifying excellent, was a title of honour amongſt the angels; properly belonging to the king's children; it being uſual for the Saxons to join the word ling to the Chriſtian name, which ſignified a ſon, or the younger. King Edward the Confeſſor having no iſſue, and intending to make Edgar, his nephew, the heir of the kingdom, gave him the ſtile and title of Adeling. Spelm. Gloſſ.

Ademption, or taking away of a legacy; this ariſes from a ſuppoſed alteration of a teſtator's intent, by calling in money due to him on bond, &c. that he had expreſly deviſed by will to another perſon. Talbot's Chan. Ca. See Legacy.

Ad Inquirendum, Is a judicial writ commanding enquiry to be made of any thing relating to a cauſe depending in the king's courts. It is granted upon many occaſions for the better execution of juſtice. Reg. Judic.

Adjournment, (adjournamentum) The ſame with the French word adjournment, and ſignifies a putting off until another day, or to another place. As adjournment in eyre, by ſtat. is an appointment of a day, when the juſtices in eyre will ſit again. A court, the parliament, and writs, &c. may be adjourn'd; and the ſubſtance of the adjournment of courts is to give licence to all parties that have any thing to do in court to forbear their attendance till ſuch a time. Every laſt day of the term, and every eve of a day in term, which is not dies juridicus, or a law day, the court is adjourned. 2 Inſt. 26. The terms may be adjourned to ſome other place, and there the King's Bench and other courts at Weſtminſter be held: and if the king puts out a proclamation for the adjournment of the term, this is a ſufficient warrant to the keeper of the Great Seal to make out writs accordingly; and proclamation is to be made, appointing all perſons to keep their day, at the time and place to which, &c. 1 And. 279. 1 Lev. 176. Though by Magna Charta the court of Common Pleas is to be held at Weſtminſter. But neceſſity will ſometimes ſuperſede the law, as in the caſe of a plague, a civil war, &c. In the firſt year of king Car. 1. a writ of adjournment was delivered to all the juſtices, to adjourn two returns of Trinity term: and in the ſame year Michaelmas-term was adjourned until craſtino animarum to Reading; and the king by proclamation ſignified his pleaſure, that his court ſhould be there held. Cro. Car. 13, 27. Anno 17 Car. 2. The court of B. R. was adjourned to Oxford, becauſe of the plague; and from thence to Windſor; and afterwards to Weſtminſter again. 1 Lev. 176, 178.

On a foreign plea pleaded in aſſiſe, &c. the writ ſhall be adjourned into the Common Pleas to be tried; and after adjournment, the tenant may plead a new plea purſuant to the firſt: but if he pleads in abatement a plea triable by the aſſiſe, on which it is adjourned, he cannot plead in bar afterwards, &c. 1 Danv. Abr. 249. The juſtices of aſſiſe have power to adjourn the parties to Weſtminſter, or to any other place; and by the expreſs words of Magna Charta, cap. 12. They may adjourn, &c. into C. B. before the judges there. Dyer 132.

If the judges of the court of King's Bench, &c. are divided in opinion, two againſt two, upon a demurrer or ſpecial verdict (not on a motion) the cauſe muſt be adjourned into the Exchequer Chamber, to be determined by all the judges of England. 3 Mod. 156 5 Mod, 335.

Adiratus, A price or value ſet upon things ſtolen or loſt, as a recompence to the owner.—Poterit enim rem ſuam petere ut adiratam per teſtimonium proborum hominum Bract. l. 3. tract. 2. cap, 32.

Adjudication, (adjudicatio) A giving or pronouncing by judgment, a ſentance or decree.

Adjura Regis, A writ brought by the king's clerk preſented to a living, againſt thoſe that endeavour to eject him, to the prejudice of the king's title. Reg. of Writs 61.

Ad Largum, At large: and there is title at large, aſſiſe at large, verdict at large; to vouch at large, &c.

Adlegiare, or aleier in French, is for one to purge himſelf of a crime by oath. In the laws of king Alfred, in Brompt. Chron. cap. 4, Si ſe velit adlegiare, &c. And cap. 13. Si accuſetur inde adlegiet ſe per ſexaginta hidas, &c.

Admeaſurement, (admenſuratio) Is a writ brought for remedy againſt ſuch perſons us uſurp more than their ſhare, to bring them to reaſon. It lies in two caſes; one is termed admeaſurement of dower (admenſuratio dotis) where a man's widow after his deceaſe holdeth from the heir more land, &c. as dower, than of right belongs to her: and the other is admeaſurement of paſture (admenſuratio paſturæ) which lies between thoſe that have common of paſture appendant to their freehold eſtates, or common by vicinage, where any one or more of them ſurcharge the common. Reg. Orig. 156, 171. In the firſt caſe, the heir ſhall have this writ againſt the widow, whereby ſhe ſhall be admeaſured and the heir reſtored to the overplus; and in the laſt caſe, it may be brought againſt all the other commoners, and him that ſurcharged; for all the commoners ſhall be admeaſured. Terms de Ley 23. The heir ſhall have a writ of admeaſurement of dower, for dower aſſigned in the time of his anceſtor: and if an heir within age aſſign unto the wife more in dower than ſhe ought to have, &c. the guardian in right may have a writ of admeaſurement. But if the guardian aſſigns dower more than ſhe ought to have, the heir, during his nonage, ſhall not have a writ of admeaſurement of dower. 7 Hen. 2. 4. Vide 13 E. 1. c. 7. & Fitz. N. B. 148. If the wife after aſſignment of dower do improve the land, and make it better than it was at the time of the aſſignment; an admeaſurement doth not lie of that improvement. Nat. Brevium 332.

A perſon who hath common appurtenant certain, or common by certain grant, ſhall be admeaſured, and a tenant ſhall have admeaſurement againſt him: but he who hath a common appurtenant without number, or common in groſs without number, ſhall not be ſtinted, nor ſhall a writ of admeaſurement of paſture lie againſt him. If the lord ſurcharge the common, his tenant muſt not have a writ of admeaſurement; but an aſſiſe of common againſt the lord. And ſo if the lord do make approvement of the common. And it is ſaid, that if the tenant ſurcharge the common, the Lord ſhall not have a writ of admeaſurement againſt him; but he may diſtrain the ſurpluſage cattle. On a ſecond ſurcharge of a common, after admeaſurement made, the plaintiff ſhall recover his damages againſt him that was defendant in the firſt writ; and he ſhall forfeit to the king the cattle which he put in over and above the due number after the admeaſurement made. Stat. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 7. Vide c. 8. & Fitz. N. B. 125. The writs of admeaſurement of dower and paſture are vicontial, and ſhall be directed unto the ſheriff, and ſhall not be returnable; and they run thus:

A writ of admeaſurement of dower.

George the Third, &c. to the ſheriff of, &c. A. the ſon [or couſin] and heir of B. hath complained unto us, that C. who was the wife of the aforeſaid B. hath for dower more of the freehold which was of the aforeſaid B. ſometime her huſband, in N. than ſhe ought to have, and than belongs to her to have; and therefore we command you that juſtly and without delay you cauſe that dower to be admeaſured, ſo that the aforeſaid C. may not have more for dower of the inheritance of the aforeſaid A. than ſhe ought to have, and than belongs to her to have, according to her reaſonable dower; and let the aforeſaid A. have of that dower that which he ought to have and belongs to him to have, that we may hear no more clamour thereof for want of right, &c.

A writ of admeaſurement of paſture.

George the Third, &c. to the ſheriff of, &c. greeting, A. B. hath complained to us, that C. D. and E. F. have unjuſtly ſurcharged their common of paſture in, &c. ſo that they have in it more beaſts and cattle than they ought to have, and to them belongeth to have; and therefore we command you, that juſtly and without delay, you cauſe to be admeaſured that paſture, ſo that the ſaid C. D. and E. F. may not have therein more beaſts and cattle than they ought, and to them it belongs to have, according to their freehold which they have in the ſame town; and that the ſaid A. B. may have in that paſture ſo many beaſts and cattle as he ought to have, and belongs to him to have; that we may hear no more clamour thereof, &c.

Adminicle, (adminiculum) Signifies aid, help, or ſupport; being uſed to this purpoſe, ſtat. 1 Ed. 4. cap. 1.

Adminiſtrator, (Latin) Is one that hath the goods of a man dying inteſtate committed to his charge by the ordinary, for which he is accountable when thereunto required.

For the better underſtanding this head, it is to be conſidered,

I. By whom, and to whom, adminiſtration is to be granted.

II. Of the intereſt, power, and duty of an adminiſtrator.

III. Of ſuits by, and againſt adminiſtrators.

IV. How adminiſtration may be revoked.

I. The biſhop of the dioceſe where the party dies is regularly to grant adminiſtration: but when the perſon dying hath goods in ſeveral dioceſes, which are bona notabilia, adminiſtration muſt be granted by the archbiſhop in the prerogative court, or it will be void. 1 Plowd. 281. See Bona notabilia.

At common law, and before the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 19. the ordinary had the abſolute diſpoſal of inteſtates eſtates. And therefore, if a man died inteſtate, neither his wife, child, nor next of kin, had any right to a ſhare of his eſtate, but the ordinary was to diſtribute it according to his conſcience to pious uſes; and ſometimes the wife and children might be amongſt the number of thoſe whom he appointed to receive it; but however the law truſted him with the ſole diſpoſition.

The firſt ſtatute that abridged the power of the ordinary herein, was the ſtat. Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 19. A. D. 1285. Whereas after the death of a perſon dying inteſtate, which is bounden to ſome other for debt, the goods come to the ordinary to be diſpoſed; the ordinary from henceforth ſhall be bound to anſwer the debts as far forth as the goods of the dead will extend, in ſuch ſort as the executors of the ſame party would have been bounden, if he had made a teſtament.

Before this ſtatute the ordinary had the abſolute diſpoſal of inteſtates eſtates; and as that ſtatute firſt ſubjected them to an action at the ſuit of creditors, ſo from thence they found, as my Lord North obſerves, that what was before very beneficial to them began to be very troubleſome, which obliged them to put the adminiſtration into other hands, taking ſecurity to ſave them harmleſs from ſuits. Raym. 497.

But this method did not intirely free them from the trouble they had before; for ſuch perſons, being looked upon as ſervants or attornies to the ordinaries, could not ſue for, nor gather in the inteſtate's eſtate. 2 Inſt. 397. Co. Lit. 133. 1 Roll. Abr. 906. This however was remedied by the ſtat. 31 Ed. 3. cap. 11. (A. D. 1357.) Where a man dieth inteſtate, the ordinaries ſhall depute the next and moſt lawful friends to adminiſter his goods, which deputies ſhall have action to demand and recover as executors the debts due to the inteſtate, and ſhall anſwer alſo to others to whom the ſaid dead perſon was holden and bound, in the ſame manner as executors, and ſhall be accountable to the ordinaries as executors. And it is enacted by the ſtat. 21 Hen. 8, cap. 5. ſect. 13. In caſe any perſon die inteſtate, or the executors refuſe to prove the teſtament, then the ordinary ſhall grant adminiſtration to the widow, or next akin, or to both, by diſcretion of the ordinary, taking ſurety for true adminiſtration.

Sect. 4. Where divers perſons be in equality of kindred, the ordinary is to be at liberty to accept one or more, taking nothing for the ſame, as in probate of teſtaments, unleſs the goods of the deceaſed amount to above the value of an hundred ſhillings.

• As the law is now ſettled adminiſtration muſt be granted, 1ſt, To the huſband, of the wife's goods and chattels. 2. To the wife, of the huſband's goods and chattels. 3. If there be no huſband or wife, to the children, ſons or daughters. 4. If there be no children alive, to the father or mother. 5. Then to a brother or ſiſter of the whole blood, or of the half blood. 6. And if there are none ſuch, to the next of kin, as uncle, aunt, or couſin. 7. Then to a creditor of the deceaſed. 8. And for want of all theſe, to any other perſon, at the diſcretion of the ordinary: or the ordinary may grant to a ſtranger letters ad colligendum bona defuncti, to gather up the goods of the deceaſed; or may take them into his own hands, to pay the deceaſed's debts, in ſuch order as an executor or adminiſtrator ought to pay them: but 'tis ſaid, he or the ſtranger who hath letters ad colligendum, cannot ſell them, without making themſelves executors of their own wrong, and action lies only againſt the ordinary, &c. Wood's Inſt. 333.

Adminiſtration likewiſe may be granted durante minori ætate of an infant executor or adminiſtrator.

If one makes an infant his executor, or dies inteſtate, and the right of adminiſtration devolves upon an infant, in theſe caſes the ordinary is to grant adminiſtration during the minority of the infant, i. e. in the firſt caſe till he arrives at the age of ſeventeen, and in the latter till he arrives at the age of twenty-one, becauſe an infant cannot, before his full age, give bond to adminiſter faithfully. Godolph. 102. 5 Co. 29. Hob. 250. Yelv. 128.

And as ſuch an adminiſtrator is but in nature of a curator for the infant, and has no intereſt or benefit in the teſtator or inteſtate's eſtate, but in right of the infant; it has been always held diſcretionary in the ordinary to whom to grant it, and therefore it hath been frequently adjudged, that he is not obliged within the ſtatute 21 H. 8. c. 5. to grant it to the next of kin either of the deceaſed, or the infant. Hob. 250. 1 Vent. 219. 1 Keb. 549. 3 Mod. 24. 1 New. Abr. 381.

If an infant, and one of full age, are made executors, he who is of full age may take out adminiſtration durante minori ætate of the infant, and may declare as executor or adminiſtrator durante minori ætate, and there is no abſurdity in this caſe, that there ſhould be an executor and adminiſtrator to the ſame party. 1 New. Abr. 381.

Adminiſtration alſo may be granted de bonis non, where the firſt adminiſtrator dies, or the executor dies inteſtate, or without probate of the will.

If a perſon dies inteſtate, and adminiſtration is granted to J. S. who dies without having adminiſtred all the inteſtate's goods, in this caſe the ordinary muſt grant adminiſtration of the goods unadminiſtred to another; for the firſt adminiſtrator cannot continue the truſt repoſed in him to his executor or adminiſtrator, becauſe he has no intereſt but what he derives from the act of the ordinary. 1 New. Abr. 385.

So if an executor dies inteſtate, adminiſtration de bonis non cum teſtamento annexo of the teſtator muſt be granted by the ordinary, for they are not devolved on the adminiſtrator of the inteſtate, becauſe he had them in auter droit in order to diſcharge the truſt repoſed in him, but if the executor makes his executor, then the truſt is devolved on him, and after payment of the debts and legacies of the firſt teſtator he has an abſolute property in the goods. 1 New. Abr. 386.

If the executor dies before probate, though he adminiſtred in part by diſpoſing of the teſtator's goods, &c. his executor cannot be executor to the firſt teſtator, but in this caſe, inſtead of an adminiſtration de bonis non, an immediate adminiſtration is granted, becauſe the executor died ante onus executionis teſtamenti ſuper ſe ſuſceptum, which is the foundation the ſpiritual courts proceed upon 1. New. Abr. 386.

So if an executor refuſes adminiſtration with the will annexed, it is to be granted to another. 1 New. Abr. 386.

Beſides all theſe adminiſtrations, there is adminiſtration durante abſentia extra regnum, where a perſon is abſent abroad; and adminiſtration pendente lite, which may be granted by the ordinary as well as durante minori ætate.

In theſe caſes adminiſtration is to be granted to the next of kin to the firſt teſtator or inteſtate, but if the teſtator appoints a reſiduary legatee, ſuch legatee is intitled to adminiſtration. 1 New. Abr. 385.

An adminiſtrator, by virtue of his adminiſtration, hath intereſt in all the chattels, real and perſonal, of the inteſtate, and in all the goods and chattels, either in poſſeſſion or action, in like manner as an executor in the goods of the teſtator deceaſed. And all theſe goods and chattels which belonged to the inteſtate at the time of his death and which come to the hands of the adminiſtrator, ſhall be aſſets, or ſufficient goods and chattels, to make him chargeable to the creditors, as executors are to creditors and legatees. Before they come to his hands he is not chargeable. Wood's Inſt. new edition, 339.

An adminiſtrator can't take advantage by his adminiſtration, (unleſs by paying his own debt firſt, if it is equal in degree with others, or by taking the goods and chattels as they are appraiſed) becauſe the ſurpluſage muſt be diſtributed amongſt the next of kin, if there are any kin, according to the ſtatute of the 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. hereaſer mentioned. If a debtor takes adminiſtration of the goods and chattels of his creditor, this ſhall not diſcharge the debtor; but his debt ſhall be aſſets; becauſe the inteſtate did no act to free him from the debt. Whereas, by making a debtor executor, the teſtator doth thereby releaſe the debt. (But the duty remains, and is aſſits. Co. Lit. 264. b.) When an adminiſtrator (as well as an executor) hath paid funeral charges, debts, &c. with his own money, he may retain ſo much of the goods of the inteſtate in kind according to the value, and ſhall have property in them. For by ſuch payment the property is altered from the inteſtate to the adminiſtrator. Wood's Inſt. new edition. 339.

As to the power of an adminiſtrator, no one, not an executor, can legally do any act, relative to the eſtate or concerns of the deceaſed, till an adminiſtration is granted to him; but after the adminiſtration is granted, his power is almoſt equal with that of an executor. Yet if there are many adminiſtrators, one of them cannot ſell goods, releaſe debts, &c. without the other, but they muſt all join, becauſe they have but one authority. See 30 Car. 2. c. 7. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24. And ſee title Executor.

With regard to the office and duty of an adminiſtrator, it is the ſame with that of an executor, as to the burial of the deceaſed and payment of funeral charges, the making of an inventory of his goods and chattels, the payment of debts, and the paſſing of an account. But ſomething more is to be done by an adminiſtrator with repect to diſtributing the effects of inteſtates, which is regulated by the ſtatute, commonly called the Statute of Diſtribution, that is, the 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. by which it is enacted, that all ordinaries and eccleſiaſtical judges (upon granting adminiſtration) muſt take bond of the adminiſtrator with two or more ſureties, with condition that the adminiſtrator ſhall make a true and perfect inventory of all the goods and chattels of the deceaſed, and exhibit it into the regiſtry of the ordinary's court by ſuch a day: and to adminiſter according to law, and to make a true and juſt account thereof, and to make diſtribution of the ſurpluſage as followeth: viz. one third to the wife of the inteſtate, the reſidue among his children, and ſuch as legally repreſent them, if any of them be dead, other than ſuch children (not heirs at law) who ſhall have any eſtate by ſettlement of the inteſtate in his life-time, equal to the other ſhares. Children, other than heirs at law, advanced by ſettlements or portions not equal to other ſhares, ſhall have ſo much of the ſurpluſage as ſhall make the eſtate of all to be equal. But the heir at law ſhall have an equal part in the diſtribution with the other children, without any conſideration of the value of the land which he hath by deſcent or otherwiſe from the inteſtate.

Sect. 5. If there be no children, nor legal repreſentatives of them, one moiety ſhall be allotted to the wife, the reſidue equally to the next of kindred to the inteſtate, in equal degree, and thoſe who repreſent them.

Sect. 6. No repreſentation ſhall be admitted among collaterals after brothers and ſiſters children. And if there be no wife, all ſhall be diſtributed amongſt the children; and if no child, to the next of kin to the inteſtate in equal degree, and their repreſentatives.

Sect. 7. No ſuch diſtribution ſhall be made till one year after the inteſtate's death; and every one, to whom any ſhares ſhall be allotted, ſhall give bond with ſureties in the ſaid courts, that, if debts afterwards appear, he ſhall refund his ratable part thereof, and of the adminiſtrator's.

Sect. 8. In all caſes where the ordinary hath uſed to grant adminiſtration cum teſtamento annexo, he ſhall continue ſo to do. Made perpetual, 1 Jac. 2. cap. 17. But by

Stat. 1 Jac. 2. cap. 17. ſ. 6. No adminiſtrator ſhall be cited into court to render an account of the perſonal eſtate of his inteſtate, otherwiſe than by an inventory thereof, unleſs at the inſtance of ſome perſon in behalf of a minor, or having a demand out of ſuch eſtate as a creditor, or next of kin; nor ſhall be compellable to account before any ordinary or judge empowered by the act of 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 10. otherwiſe than as aforeſaid.

Sect. 7. If after the death of a father, any of his children ſhall die inteſtate, without wife or children, in the life-time of the mother, every brother and ſiſter, and their repreſentatives, ſhall have equal ſhare with her.

Upon this clauſe of the ſtatute this caſe has been determined. After the death of the father the ſon died inteſtate, without iſſue, but leaving a wife, a mother, three brothers, a ſiſter, and two nieces, the children of a deceaſed brother: this is within the ſtatute; the inteſtate's wife ſhall have but one moiety, and as to the other moiety, the inteſtate's brothers and ſiſters, &c. ſhall come in for an equal ſhare thereof with the mother. 2 P. Williams 344.

But if a child dies inteſtate and unmarried, the father ſurviving has the child's whole eſtate at this day, 1 P. Williams 48. And this without taking adminiſtration to him. Pr. Ch. 260.

Sect. 8. The clauſe in the act of 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10 by which it is provided, that that act ſhall not prejudice the cuſtoms of the city of London and province of York, ſhall not extend to ſuch part of any inteſtate's eſtate, which an adminiſtrator, by virtue of his being ſo, by pretence of any cuſtom may claim, to exempt the ſame from diſtribution.

It has been held, that a deſcent of lands in the nature of Borough Engliſh to the youngeſt ſon, will not prevent his having a full diſtributive ſhare of his father's perſonal eſtate: the right to which veſts immediately on the inteſtate's death: but not ſo as to exclude a poſthumous child. Wood's Inſt. new edit. 341.

It has been reſolved likewiſe, that the half blood ſhall have a ſhare upon a diſtribution equally with the whole blood. Id.

It ſeems to have been always holden, that the huſband was intitled to adminiſtration as beſt friend to his wife, within the words of the ſtatute 31 E. 3. ſt. 1. c. 11. but there being ſome doubt, whether ſince the ſtatute of 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. he was not obliged to make diſtribution amongſt the reſt of her kindred, it was thought proper to ſettle this matter by a ſubſequent law, viz.

Stat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. ſect. 25. The act of 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 10. ſhall not extend to the eſtates of feme coverts that die inteſtate, but that their huſbands may have adminiſtration of their perſonal eſtates, and recover and enjoy the ſame as they might have done before the making of the ſaid act. Made perpetual, 1 Jac. 2. c. 17.

Alſo ſince the ſtatute of 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. the ordinary may grant adminiſtration to the wife or next a-kin, at his election, but then ſhe muſt have her diſtributive ſhare; alſo the ordinary may grant adminiſtration quoad part to the wife, and as to the other part, to the next of kin; in which caſe neither can complain, ſince the ordinary need not have granted any part of the adminiſtration to the party complaining. 1 Sid. 179. Raym. 93. 1 Show. 351. 1 Salk. 36.

If there be grandfather, father and ſon, and the father dies inteſtate, the ſon ſhall have the adminiſtration, and not the grandfather, tho' they be both in equal degree as to nearneſs of kindred. 2 Vern. 125. ſaid arguendo.

Since the making this ſtatute 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. a queſtion hath been made, if a father die inteſtate, leaving only one ſon, which ſon alſo dies inteſtate, whether adminiſtration ſhould be granted, to the next of kin, of the father, or of the ſon? The latter determination hath been, that, by this ſtatute of diſtribution of inteſtates eſtates, a right is veſted in one child, where there is one and no more (viz.) a right to ſue for the eſtate; and by conſequence, if he die, before the eſtate is recovered and actually in his poſſeſſion, it muſt go to his adminiſtrator, and not to the adminiſtrator of the father. Palmer v. Allcock. 3 Mod. 58. Vide Shower 26. and 2 Vern. 274.

So where a perſon died inteſtate, leaving two, who were next a-kin, in equal degree to him, one of them died inteſtate within the year, and before diſtribution; adjudged, that an intereſt was veſted in him, and his next of kin ſhall have adminiſtration, like the caſe of a reſiduary legatee dying before probate of the will, (viz.) his next of kin ſhall have the adminiſtration, and the next of the teſtator. Show. 25.

Adminiſtration was granted to the grandmother; and the aunt moved for a mandamus, but it was denied; for ſhe is as near of kin as the aunt, or rather nearer, becauſe ſhe is in the right line aſcending. 1 Salk. 38, 39.

III. Of ſuits by and againſt adminiſtrators.

Againſt an adminiſtrator and for him, action will lie, as for and againſt an executor, and he ſhall be charged to the value of the goods, and no further; unleſs it be by his own falſe plea, or by waſting the goods of the inteſtate. An executor or adminiſtrator ſhall never be charged de bonis propriis, but where he doth ſome wrong; as by ſelling the teſtator's goods, and converting the money to his own uſe, concealing or waſting them, or by pleading what is falſe. Dyer 210. 2 Roll. Rep. 295. But this plea muſt be of a fact, within his own knowledge. If an adminiſtrator plead plene adminiſtravit, and 'tis found againſt him, the judgment ſhall be de bonis propriis, becauſe 'tis a falſe plea, and that upon his own knowledge. 2 Cro. 191. Contra where he pleads ſuch a plea, and that he hath no more than to ſatisfy ſuch a judgment, &c. the recovery ſhall be de bonis teſtatoris, &c. 2 Rol. Rep. 400. This muſt mean, where ſuch plea is true in fact. Upon plene adminiſtravit pleaded by an adminiſtrator, the plaintiff muſt prove his debt, or he ſhall recover but a penny damages, though there be aſſets; becauſe the plea only admits the debt, but not the quantum. 1 Salk. 296.

Special bail is not required of adminiſtrators in any action brought againſt them for the debt of the inteſtate; except where they have waſted the goods of the deceaſed: nor ſhall coſts be had againſt adminiſtrators. Vide New Abr. tit. Coſts. Where an adminiſtrator is plaintiff, he muſt ſhew by whom adminiſtration was granted; for that only intitles him to the action: but if an adminiſtrator is defendant, the plaintiff need not ſet forth by whom adminiſtration was granted, for it may not be within his knowledge. Sid. 228. 1 Lutw. 301. If a ſtranger, that is not adminiſtrator, take the goods and adminiſter in his own wrong, he ſhall be charged and ſued as an executor. Terms de Ley 24. And generally an adminiſtrator ſhall be charged by others, for any debt or duty due from the deceaſed, as he himſelf might have been charged in his life-time; ſo far as he hath any of the inteſtate's eſtate, to diſcharge the ſame. Co. Lit. 219. Dyer 14.

An adminiſtrator's power is given by the adminiſtration, therefore he can do nothing until that be granted; and yet as to goods taken away before the adminiſtration ſhall relate ſo as to give the adminiſtrator an action for them. Fitzherb. 2. 6. If a man have judgment for land in a real or mix'd action, and for damages, and then dies; his executor or adminiſtrator, not the heir, ſhall have execution for the damages; but not for the land. Fitz. Admin. 53. March 9.

IV. How adminiſtration may be revoked.

The ordinary ought not to repeal letters of adminiſtration which he hath duly granted; but if they are granted to ſuch perſons who ought not by law to have them, he may revoke them. 1 Lill. 38. For juſt cauſe they may be revoked, and where a perſon is a lunatick, &c. And if granted where not grantable, they may be repealed by the delegates. 1 Lev. 157, 186. If adminiſtration is granted, and afterwards a will is produced and proved, the adminiſtration ſhall be revoked; and all acts done by the adminiſtrator are void. 2 Rol. Abr. 907. If a citation is granted againſt a ſtranger adminiſtrator, and his adminiſtration is revoked by ſentence, yet all acts done by him bona fide as adminiſtrator are good till the revocation; the adminiſtration being only voidable. 6 Rep. 18. 8 Rep. 135. But if there is any fraud, a creditor may have relief upon the ſtat. 13 Eliz. cap. 5. And when the firſt adminiſtration is merely void, as granted by a wrong perſon, &c. it is otherwiſe: ſo when there is an appeal from the grant of the adminiſtration, to ſuſpend the former decree. 5 Rep. 30. Adminiſtration was granted to J. S. and he releaſed all actions, and after the adminiſtration was revoked, and declared void; this releaſe was held good. 1 Brownl. 51. Qu. if it had been without conſideration? If an adminiſtrator give goods away, and then adminiſtration is revoked or repealed, 'tis ſaid the gift is good; except it be by covin, when it ſhall be void only againſt a creditor by ſtatute: and where the adminiſtrator, after many goods adminiſtered, had his adminiſtration revoked, and it was committed to B. who ſued the firſt adminiſtrator for goods unduly adminiſtered; it was held, that there was no remedy but in Chancery. 6 Rep. 19. Clayt. 44. 4 Shep. Abr. 89. See Hob. 266. But we conceive, in ſuch a caſe as this, the ſecond adminiſtrator might maintain an action at law againſt the firſt, for money had and received, &c. or trover for any goods remaining in his poſſeſſion or by him converted, and not duly adminiſtered?

In 2 Leon 155. 'tis ſaid, where the firſt adminiſtration is void, the adminiſtrator, who, under that adminiſtration, takes the goods, is a treſpaſſer. And this we apprehend to be law, becauſe at the time of taking he had not any authority. Letters of adminiſtration obtained by fraud are void. 3 Rep. 78. 6 Rep. 18, 19. 8 Rep. 143. Vide Com. Dig. 1 V. tit. Adminiſtration and Adminiſtrator, and the Table to Coke's Reports, ſame title.

Adminiſtratrix, (Lat.) She that hath goods and chattles of an inteſtate committed to her charge, as an adminiſtrator.

Admiral, (admiralius, admirallus, admiralis, capitaneus or cuſtos maris) is derived of the French amerel, and ſignifies an high officer or magiſtrate, that hath the government of the king's navy, and the determining of all cauſes belonging to the ſea. This word is alſo ſaid to have its derivation from the Saxon aen mereal, over all the ſea: and in ancient time the office of the admiralty was called cuſtodia maritimæ Angliæ. Co. Lit. 260. It appears that antiently the Admirals of England had juriſdiction of all cauſes of merchants and mariners, happening not only upon the main ſea, but in all foreign parts within the king's dominions, and without them, and were to judge them in a ſummary way, according to the laws of Oleron and other ſea laws. 4 Inſt. 75. In the time of king Ed. 1. and king John, all cauſes of merchants and mariners, and things ariſing upon the main ſea, were tried before the lord Admiral: but the firſt title of Admiral of England, expreſly conferred upon a ſubject, was given by patent of king Rich. 2. to the earl of Arundel and Surry. Of late times this high office has been generally executed by commiſſioners; who by ſtatute are empowered to uſe and execute the like authorities as lord admiral. 2 W. & M. cap. 2. In the reign of Ed. 3. the court of admiralty was eſtabliſhed, and Ric. 2. limited its juriſdiction.

By the ſtatute 13 Rich. 2. ſt. 1. c. 5. it is enacted, that upon complaint of incroachments made by the admirals and their deputies, the admirals and their deputies ſhall meddle with nothing done within the realm, but only with things done upon the ſea. For the conſtruction of this ſtatute, ſee 2 Bulſtr. 323. 3 Bulſt. 205. 13 Co. 52.

By ſtat. 15 Ric. 2. c. 3. it is declared, that all contracts, pleas and quarrels, and other things done within the bodies of counties by land or water, and of wreck, the admiral ſhall have no conuſance, but they ſhall be tried, &c. by the law of the land; but of the death of a man, and of mayem done in great ſhips, being in the main ſtream of great rivers beneath the points near the ſea, and in no other place of the ſame river, the admiral ſhall have conuſance; and alſo to arreſt ſhips in the great flotes, for the great voyages of the king and the realm, ſaving to the king his forfeitures; and ſhall have juriſdiction in ſuch flotes during ſuch voyages, only ſaving to lords, &c. their liberties.

By the ſtatute 2 Hen. 4. c. 11. reciting the 13 R. 2. c. 5. it is enacted, that he that finds himſelf aggrieved againſt the form of the ſtatute, ſhall have his action by writ grounded upon the caſe againſt him that ſo purſues in the admiralty, and recover double damages againſt him, and he ſhall incur the pain of 10 l. if he be attainted.

By the ſtatute 28 Hen. 8. cap. 15. it is enacted, that "all felonies and robberies, &c. upon the ſea, or in any haven, river, creek or place, where the admiral or admirals have, or pretend to have power, authority or juriſdiction, ſhall be inquired, tried, heard, determined and adjudged in ſuch ſhires and places in the realm, as ſhall be limited by the king's commiſſion or commiſſions to be directed for the ſame, in like form and condition as if any ſuch offence or offences had been committed or done in or upon the land; and ſuch commiſſions ſhall be had under the king's great ſeal, directed to the admiral or admirals or to his or their lieutenant, deputy or deputies, and to three or four ſuch other ſubſtantial perſons as ſhall be named or appointed by the lord chancellor of England for the time being, from time to time, and as oft as need ſhall require, to hear and determine ſuch offences after the common courſe of the laws of the land, uſed for felonies and robberies, &c. done and committed upon the land within this realm": And it is further enacted, "that if any perſon or perſons happen to be indicted for any ſuch offence done, or hereafter to be done upon the ſeas, or in any other place above limited, that then ſuch order, proceſs, judgment and execution, ſhall be uſed, had, and done, and made to and againſt every ſuch perſon and perſons ſo being indicted, as againſt felons, &c. for any felony, &c. upon the land, by the laws of the land is accuſtomed; and ſuch as ſhall be convict of any ſuch offence, by virdict, confeſſion or proceſs, by authority of any ſuch commiſſion, ſhall have and ſuffer ſuch pains of death, loſſes of lands, goods and chattels, as if they had been attainted and convicted of ſuch offence done upon the land; and alſo, that they ſhall be excluded from the benefit of the clergy."

It was held (Yelv. 134.) that by force of this ſtatute, acceſſaries to this offence could not be tried; but this is remedied by 11 & 12 W. 3. cap. 7. by which their aiders and comforters, and the receivers of their goods are made acceſſaries, and to be tried as pirates by 28 Hen. 8. cap. 15. alſo the ſaid ſtatute 11 & 12 W. 3. directs how pirates may be tried beyond ſea, according to the Civil law, by commiſſion under the great ſeal of England.

By the ſtatute 5 Eliz. cap. 5. ſeveral offences in the act mentioned, if done on the main ſea, or coaſts of the ſea, being no part of the body of any county, and without the precinct, juriſdiction and liberties of the cinque-ports, and out of any haven and pier, ſhall be tried before the admiral or his deputy, and other juſtices of oyer and terminer, according to the ſtatute of 28 H. 8. c. 15.

By the ſtatute 1 Ann. cap. 9. captains and mariners belonging to ſhips, and deſtroying the ſame at ſea, ſhall be tried in ſuch places as ſhall be limited by the king's commiſſion, and according to 28 H. 8. c. 15.

The ſtatute 10 Ann. cap. 10. directs how the trial of officers and ſoldiers, that either upon land out of Great Britain, or at ſea, hold correſpondence with a rebel enemy.

And by the ſtatute 4 Geo. 1. cap. 11. all perſons who ſhall commit any offence for which they ought to be adjudged pirates, felons, or robbers by 11 & 12 W. 3. may be tried and judged for every ſuch offence according to the form of 28 H. 8. c. 15. and ſhall be excluded from the benefit of clergy.

The juriſdiction of the lord admiral therefore is confined to the main ſea, or coaſts of the ſea, not being within any county. Thus, the admiralty hath cogniſance of the death or maim of a man, committed in any ſhip riding in great rivers, beneath the bridges thereof, next the ſea: but by the common lay, if a man be killed upon any arm of the ſea, where the land is ſeen on both ſides, the coroner is to inquire of it, and not the admiral; for the county may take cogniſance of it; and where a county may inquire, the lord admiral has no juriſdiction. 3 Rep. 107.

All ports and havens are infra corpus comitatus, and the admiral hath no juriſdiction of any thing done in them: between high and low water-mark, the common law and admiral have juriſdiction by turns; one upon the water and the other upon the land. 3 Inſt. 113. Every commander, officer, and ſoldier of ſhips of war, ſhall obſerve the commands of the admiral, &c. on pain of death or other puniſhment. 13 Car. 2. cap. 9.

The lord admiral hath power to grant commiſſions to inferior vice-admirals, &c. to call courts martial, for the trial of offences againſt the articles of war; and theſe courts determine by plurality of voices, &c. Stat. Ibid. Admiralty proceſs is made out in the name of the admiral, who has under him a judge of the admiralty: and though the proceeedings are according to the Civil law, and the maritime laws of Rodes and Oleron, the ſea being without the common law: yet by the ſeveral ſtatutes abovementioned tioned certain offences at ſea may be tried by ſpecial com-miſſion to the lord admiral, &c. according to the laws of England.

The admiralty is ſaid not to be a court of record, by reaſon it proceeds by the Civil law. 4 Inſt. 135. But the admiralty has juriſdiction where the common law can give no remedy; and all maritime cauſes, or cauſes ariſing wholly upon the ſea, it hath cogniſance of. Vide as to the juriſdiction of the admiralty. 1 Com. Dig. 289. and Seq. The admiralty hath juriſdiction in caſes of freight, mariners wages, breach of charter-parties, though made within the realm; if the penalty be not demanded: and likewiſe in caſe of building, mending, ſaving, and victualling ſhips, &c. ſo as the ſuit be againſt the ſhip, and not againſt the parties only. 2 Cro. 216. Mariners wages are contracted on the credit of the ſhip, and they may all join in ſuits in the admiralty; whereas at common law they muſt all ſever: the maſter of a ſhip contracts on the credit of the owners, and not of the ſhip; and therefore he cannot proſecute in the admiralty for his wages. 1 Salk. 33. It is allowed by the common lawyers and civilians, that the lord admiral hath cogniſance of ſeamens wages, and contracts, and debts for making ſhips; alſo of things done in navigable rivers, concerning damage done to perſons, ſhips, goods, annoyances of free paſſage, &c. And of contracts, and other things done beyond ſea, relating to navigation and trade by ſea. Wood's Inſt. 218. But if a contract be made beyond ſea, for doing of an act or payment of money within this kingdom; or the contract is upon the ſea, and not for a marine cauſe, it ſhall be tried by a jury; for where part belongs to the common law, and part to the admiral, the common law ſhall be preferred. And contracts made beyond ſea may be tried in B. R. and a fact be laid to be done in any place in England, and ſo tried here. 2 Bulſtr. 322.

Where a contract is made in England, and there is a converſion beyond ſea, the party may ſue in the admiralty, or at common law. 4 Leon. 257. So where a bond is made and delivered in France: but we apprehend, if 'tis under ſeal, it can't be ſued in the admiralty. An obligation made at ſea, it has been held, cannot be ſued in the admiral's court; becauſe it takes its courſe, and binds according to the common law. Hob. 12. The court of admiralty cannot hold plea of a matter ariſing from a contract made upon the land, tho' the contract was concerning things belonging to the ſhip: but the admiralty may hold plea for the ſeamens wages, &c. becauſe they become due for labour done on the ſea; and the contract made upon land, is only to aſcertain them. 3 Lev. 60. Though where there is a ſpecial agreement in writing, by which ſeamen are to receive their wages, in any other manner than uſual; or if the agreement at land be under ſeal, ſo as to be more than a parol contract, it is otherwiſe. 1 Salk. 31. See Hob. 79.

If the maſter pawns the ſhip on the high ſea out of neceſſity for tackling or proviſion, without the conſent of the owners, it ſhall bind them; but 'tis otherwiſe where the ſhip is pawned for the maſter's debt: the maſter can have no credit abroad, but upon the ſecurity of the veſſel; and the admiralty gives remedy in theſe caſes. 1 Salk. 35. The maſter hath a right to hypothecate the ſhip, for any debt, incurred on her account. Vide Co. Lit. 134, 140. Tho' the agreement is made, and the money lent at land. 1 Lord Ray. 152. Benzen v. Jefferies. Sale of goods (taken by piracy) in open market, is not binding by the admiral law, ſo that the owner may retake them; but at common law the ſale is binding, of which the admiralty muſt take notice. 1 Roll Abr. Vide 1 Vent. 308.

If a ſhip is taken by pirates upon the ſea, and the maſter, to redeem the ſhip, contracts with the pirates to pay them 50 l. and pawns his perſon for it, and the pirates carry him to the iſle of S. and there he pays it with money borrowed, and gives bond for the money, he may ſue in the admiralty for the 50 l. becauſe the original cauſe aroſe upon the ſea, and what followeth was but acceſſory and conſequential. Hard. 183.

If goods delivered on ſhipboard are imbezilled, all the mariners ought to contribute to the ſatisfaction of the party that loſt his goods, by the maritime law, and the cauſe is to be tried in the admiralty. 1 Lill. 368. By the cuſtom of the admiralty, goods may be attached in the hands of a third perſon, in cauſa maritima & civili, and they ſhall be delivered to the plaintiff after defaults, on caution to reſtore them, if the debt, &c. be diſproved in a year and a day; and if the party refuſe to deliver them, he may be impriſoned quouſque, &c. March Rep. 204.

The court of admiralty may cauſe a party to enter into bond in nature of caution or ſtipulation, like bail at common law; and if he render his body, the ſureties are diſcharged; and execution ſhall be of the goods, or of the body, &c. not of the lands. Godb. 260. 1 Shep. Abr. 129. See 1 Salk. 33. T. Ray. 78. 2 Lord Ray. 1286. Fitzg. 197. A perſon in execution, on judgment in the admiral's court, upon a contract made on the land in New England was diſcharged, being out of the admiralty juriſdiction. 3 Cro. 603. 1 Cro. 685. And where ſailors cloaths were bought in St. Katherine's pariſh near the Tower, London, which were delivered in the ſhip; on a ſuit in the admiralty for the money, prohibition was granted; for this was within the county: ſo of a ſhip lying at Blackwall, &c. Owen 122. Hughes's Abr. 113. But the admiralty may proceed againſt a ſhip, and the ſails and tackle, when they are on ſhore, altho' alledged to be detained at land: yet upon alledging offer of a plea, claiming property therein, and refuſal of the plea, on this ſuggeſtion a prohibition ſhall be had. 1 Show. 179.

If there be a war with the Dutch, and an Engliſhman, having letters of mark, takes an Oſtender for a Dutch ſhip, and brings it into a haven, and libels againſt it to have it condemned as a prize; but ſentence be given that it is no prize; the Oſtender may libel in the admiralty againſt the captain, for the damage the ſhip received while it lay in the port; for the original taking being at ſea, the bringing it into the port, in order to have it condemned, is but a conſequence thereof. 1 Lev. 243. 1 Sid. 367.

If an Engliſh ſhip takes a French ſhip richly laden, the French being in enmity with us, and ſuch ſhip is libelled againſt, and after due notice on the exchange, &c. declared a lawful prize, the king's proctor may exhibit a libel in the admiralty court, to compel the taker (who ſent the ſhip to Barbadoes, and converted the lading to his own uſe) to anſwer the value of the prize to the king; although it was objected, that by the firſt ſentence the property was veſted in the king, and that this ſecond libel was in nature of an action of trover, of which the court of admiralty cannot hold plea. Carth. 399.

If the owner of a ſhip victuals it and furniſhes it to ſea, with letters of repriſal, and the maſter and mariners when they are at ſea commit piracy upon a friend of the king, without the notice or aſſent of the owner, yet by this the owner ſhall loſe his ſhip by the admiral law, and our law ought to take notice thereof. 1 Rol. Abr. 530. But ſee 1 Roll. Rep. 285.

By the Civil law and cuſtom of merchants, if the ſhip be caſt away, or periſh through the mariners defaults, they loſe their wages; ſo if taken by pirates, or if they run away; for if it were not for this policy, they would forſake the ſhip in a ſtorm, and yield her up to enemies in any danger. 1 Sid. 179. 1 Mod 93. 1 Vent. 146.

The admiralty court may award execution upon land; tho' not hold plea of any thing ariſing on land. 4 Inſt. 141. And upon letters miſſive or requeſt, the admiralty here may award execution on a judgment given beyond ſea, where an Engliſhman flies or comes over hither, by impriſonment of the party, who ſhall not be delivered by the common law. 1 Roll. Abr. 530. When ſentence is given in a foreign admiralty, the party may libel for execution of that ſentence here; becauſe all courts of admiralty in Europe are governed by the civil law. Sid. 418. Sentences of any admiralty in another kingdom are to be credited, that ours may be credited there, and ſhall not be examined at law here; but the king may be petitioned, who may cauſe the complaint to be examined; and, if he finds juſt cauſe, may ſend to his embaſſador where the ſentence was given, to demand redreſs, and, upon failure thereof, will grant letters of marque and repriſal. Raym. 473.

If one is ſued in the admiralty, contrary to the ſtatutes 13 R. 2. ſt. 1. c. 5. & 15 R. 2. c. 3. he may have a ſuperſedeas, to cauſe the judge to ſtay the proceedings, and alſo have action againſt the party ſuing. 10 Rep. 75. A ſhip being privately arreſted by admiralty proceſs only, and no ſuit, it was adjudged a proſecution within the meaning of the ſtatutes; and double damages, &c. ſhall be recovered. 1 Salk. 31, 32. And if an erroneous judgment is given in the admiralty, appeal may be had to delegates appointed by commiſſion out of Chancery, whoſe ſentence ſhall be final. Stat. 8 Eliz. cap. 5.

Appeals may be brought from the inferior admiralty courts to the lord high admiral: but the lord warden of the cinque ports hath juriſdiction of admiralty exempt from the admiralty of England. A writ of error doth not lie upon a ſentence in the admiralty, but an appeal. 4 Inſt. 135. And vide id. 339. By the ſtat. 22 Geo. 2. c. 3. His majeſty's commiſſion to all the privy counſellors then and for the time being, and to the lord chief baron of the court of Exchequer, the juſtices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, and barons of the ſaid court of Exchequer, then and for the time being, for hearing and determining appeals from ſentences in cauſes of prizes pronounced in the courts of admiralty, in any of his majeſty's dominions, declared valid, although ſuch chief baron, juſtices and barons are not of the privy counſel. But no ſentence ſhall be valid, unleſs the major part of the commiſſioners preſent be of the privy counſel. See ſtat. 29 Geo. 2. cap. 34. and Com. Dig. 1 V. tit. Admiralty.

Admiſſion, (Admiſſio) Is when a patron of a church having preſented to it, the biſhop upon examination admits the clerk, by ſaying admitto te habilem. Co. L. 344. a. It is properly the ordinary's declaration that he approves of the preſentee, to ſerve the cure of the church to which he is preſented. Co. L. 344. a. All perſons are to have epiſcopal ordination before they are admitted to any parſonage or benefice; and if any ſhall preſume to be admitted, not having ſuch ordination, &c he ſhall forfeit 100*l.* Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c 4. No perſon is to be admitted into a benefice with cure of 30*l. per ann.* in the king's books, unleſs he is a batchelor of divinity at leaſt, or a preacher lawfully allowed by ſome biſhop, &c. Action of the caſe will not lie againſt the biſhop, if he refuſe to admit a clerk to be qualified according to the canons (as for any crime or impediment, illiterature, &c.) but the remedy is by writ quare non admiſit, or admittendum clericum brought in that county where the refuſal was. 7 Rep. 3.

The ordinary may refuſe a clerk preſented to him, if he be minus idoneus, as outlawed, excommunicated, within age. 2 Inſt. 632. Or mere laicus. 2 Inſt. 632. 5 Co. 58. a. Or criminoſus, as a heretick or ſchiſmatick, &c. 2 Inſt 632. Dal. 51. Or a manſlayer, felon, &c. 5 Co. 58. Or guilty of any offence for which he ought to be deprived. 5 Co. 58. a Or if he be illiterate. 2 Inſt. 632. Caſes in parliament 91. And to ſay quod fuit minus ſufficiens in literaturâ & eâ ratione inhabilis, is ſufficient; for it is in the negative, and doth not conſiſt of a ſingle inſtance, but general ignorance. Vide 4 Mod. 135. Ca. Parl. 92. 3 Lev. 114. Salk. 539.

If the patron brings a quare impedit againſt the biſhop upon refuſal of his clerk the cauſe of refuſal is traverſable. If it be a ſpiritual matter, and the clerk is living, it ſhall be tried by the metropolitan. 2 Inſt. 632. 5 Co. 58. a. If it be a temporal matter, or a ſpiritual matter when the party is dead, it ſhall be tried by the country. 5 Co. 58. a. 2 Inſt 632.

Admittendo Clerico, A writ where a man has recovered his right of preſentation againſt the biſhop. Reg. Orig. 33. If a man do recover his preſentation in the Common Pleas againſt the biſhop, then he may have a writ to the ſame biſhop to admit his clerk, or unto the metropolitan: a perſon recovers an advowſon, and ſix months paſs; yet, if the church be void, the patron may have a writ to the biſhop; and if the church is void when the writ comes to the biſhop, the biſhop is bound to admit his clerk. Vide Hut. 24. Hob. 152. 4. 2 Inſt. 273. & Com. Dig. 3 V. 400. Where a man recovers againſt another than the biſhop, this writ ſhall go to the biſhop; and the party may have an alias and a pluries, if the biſhop do not execute the writ, and an attachment againſt the biſhop, if need be. New Nat. Br. 84. In a quare impedit betwixt two ſtrangers, if there appears to the court a title for the king, they ſhall award a writ unto the biſhop, for the king. See Clerico Admittando, Admittendo in ſocium, A writ for aſſociating certain perſons to juſtices of aſſize. Reg. Orig. 206. Knights and other gentlemen of the county are uſually aſſociated with judges in holding their aſſizes on the circuits.

Adnichiled, From the Latin nihil, written of old Nichil, and ſignifies annulled, cancelled, or made void. Stat. 28 Hen 8.

Ad quod Damnum, Is a writ which ought to be iſſued before the king grants certain liberties, as a fair, market, &c. which may be prejudicial to others: it is directed to the ſheriff to inquire what damage it may do, for the king to grant a market, fair, &c. Terms de ley 25.

Stat. 27 Ed. 1. ſtat. 2. ſect. 1. ordains, that ſuch as would purchaſe new parks ſhall have writs out of Chancery to inquire concerning the ſame.

Sect. 4. In like manner they ſhall do that will purchaſe any fair, market, warren, or other liberty.

This writ is likewiſe uſed to inquire of lands given in mortmain to any houſe of religion, &c. And it is a damage to the country, that a freeholder who hath ſufficient lands to paſs upon aſſizes and jury, ſhould alien his lands in mortmain, by which alienation his heir ſhould not have ſufficient eſtate after the death of the father to be ſworn in aſſizes and juries. F. N. B. 121.

The writ ad quod damnum is alſo had for the turning and changing of ancient highways; which may not be done without the king's licence obtained by this writ, on inquiſition found that ſuch a change will not be detrimental to the public. Vaugh. Rep. 341. Ways turned without this authority are not eſteemed highways, ſo as to oblige the inhabitants of the hundred to make amends for robberies; nor have the ſubjects an intereſt therein to juſtify going there. 3 Cro 267. If any one change an highway without this authority, he may ſtop the way at his pleaſure. But ſee the ſtatute 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 16 for enlarging of highways by order of juſtices of peace, &c. Where any common highway ſhall be incloſed after a writ of ad quod damnum executed, any perſon aggrieved by ſuch incloſure may complain to the juſtices at the next quarter-ſeſſions; but if no ſuch complaint or appeal be made, then the inquiſition and return, recorded by the clerk of the peace, ſhall be for ever binding,

The river Thames is an highway, and cannot be diverted without an ad quod damnum, and to do ſuch a thing ought to be by patent of the king. Noy 105.

If there be an ancient trench or ditch coming from the ſea, by which boats and veſſels uſed to paſs to the town, if the ſame be ſtopped in any part by outrageouſneſs of the ſea, and a man will ſue to the king to make a new trench, and to ſtop the ancient trench, &c. they ought firſt to ſue a writ of ad quod damnum, to enquire what damage it will be to the king or others. F. N. B. 225. E.

And if the king will grant to any city the aſſiſe of bread and beer, and the keeping of weights and meaſures, an ad quod damnum ſhall be firſt awarded, and when the ſame is certified, &c. then to make the grant. F. N. B. 225. E.

It appears by the writs in the Regiſter, that in antient times, upon every grant, confirmation, &c. or licence made by the king, firſt a writ ad quod damnum was to be awarded, to inquire of the truth thereof, and what damage the king might have by the ſame: but now the practice is contrary; and in the patents of common grants of licence are put in the end theſe words—Et hoc abſque aliquo brevi de ad quod damnum, ſeu aliquibus aliis brevibus ſive inquiſitionibus aut mandatis ſuperinde habend. fiend. aut proſequend. &c. Vide Com. Dig. 1 V. 302, &c.

Adreſtare, addreſſare, i. e. ad rectum ire, recto ſtare, To do right, ſatisfy or make amends. Gerv. Dorobern. anno 1170.

Ad terminum qui preteriit, A writ of entry, that lies for the leſſor and his heirs, where a leaſe has been made of lands or tenements, for term of life, or years; and after the term is expired, the lands are withheld from the leſſor by the tenant, or other perſon that poſſeſſeth the ſame: and it likewiſe lies for the heir of the leſſor. *F. The modern and moſt eaſy way of recovering poſſeſſion of lands &c. held by perſons, not having title, is by ejectment; after judgment in ejectment, the annual value of the premiſſes, during the wrongful holding, may be recovered in an action of treſpaſs, for the meſne profits, in which action may alſo be recovered, the coſts of the ejectment.

Advent, (adventus) A time containing about a month preceding the feaſt of the nativity of our Saviour Chriſt. It begins from the Sunday that falls either upon St. Andrew's day, being the 30th of November, or next to it, and continues to the feaſt of Chriſt's nativity, commonly called Chriſtmas. Our anceſtors ſhewed great reverence and devotion to this time, in regard to the approach of the ſolemn feſtival: for in adventu Domini nulla aſſiſa debet capi. Int. placita de temp. regis Johan. Ebor. 126. But the ſtatute Weſt. 1. cap. 48. ordained that, notwithſtanding the uſual ſolemnity and times of reſt, it ſhould be lawful (in reſpect of juſtice and charity, which ought at all times to be regarded) to take aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, mort d'anceſtor, &c. in the time of Advent, Septuageſima, and Lent. This is alſo one of the ſeaſons, from the beginning of which to the end of the octaves of the Epiphany, the ſolemnizing of marriages is forbidden, without ſpecial licence, as we may find from theſe old verſes,

Adultery, (adulterium, quaſi ad alterius thorum) Anno 1. Hen 7. cap. 7. and in divers old authors termed advowtry, is the ſin of incontinence between two married perſons; and if but one of the perſons be married, it is nevertheleſs adultery: but in this laſt caſe it is called ſingle adultery: to diſtinguiſh it from the other, which is double. This crime is ſeverely puniſhed by the laws of God, and the ancient laws of the land: the Julian law, among the old Romans, made it death; but in moſt countries at this time the puniſhment is by fine, and ſometimes baniſhment: in England it is puniſhed by fine, penance, &c. King Edmund, a Saxon, Leg. ſuar', cap. 4. Advocate, Is the patron of a cauſe aſſiſting his client with advice, and who pleads for him: it is the ſame by the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical laws as a counſellor by the common law. The eccleſiaſtical, or church advocate, was originally of two ſorts; either an advocate of the cauſes and intereſt of the church, retained as a counſellor and pleader of its rights; or an advocate, or patron of the preſentation and advowſon. Both theſe offices at firſt belonged to the founders of churches and convents, and their heirs, who were bound to protect and defend their churches, as well as to nominate or preſent to them.—As Ailwin, founder of Ramſey abbey, proruit in medium, ſe Rameſienſis eccleſiæ advocatum, ſe poſſeſſionum ejus tutorem allegans. Lib. Rameſ. ſect. 49. But when the patrons grew negligent in their duty, or were not of ability or intereſt in the courts of juſtice, then the religious began to retain law advocates, to ſolicit and proſecute their cauſes. Vide Spelman.

Advocati, Were thoſe which we now call patrons of churches, and reſerved to them, and their heirs, a liberty to preſent a perſon on any avoidance. Blount.

Advocatione Decimarum, A writ that lies for tithes, demanding the fourth part, or upwards, that belong to any church. Reg. Orig. 29.

Advow, (advocare) To juſtify or maintain an act formerly done. For example: one takes a diſtreſs for rent, and he that is diſtrained ſues the replevin: now the diſtrainer, juſtifying or maintaining the act, is ſaid to advow or avow: and hence comes advowant and advowry. Old Nat. Br. 43. Now called avowant and avowry, the d being dropped in ſpelling, as well as in pronunciation. The ſignification of this word is alſo to bring forth any thing: antiently when ſtolen goods were bought by one, and ſold to another, it was lawful for the right owner to take them wherever they were found; and he in whoſe poſſeſſion they were found, was bound advocare, i. e. to produce the ſeller to juſtify the ſale; and ſo on till they found the thief. Afterwards the word was taken for any thing which a man acknowledged to be his own, or done by him, and in this ſenſe it is mentioned in Fleta, lib. 1. cap. 5. par. 4. Si vir ipſum in domo ſua ſuſceperit, nutrierit & advocaverit filium ſuum. See Avowry.

Advowee, or avowee, (advocatus) Is uſed for him that hath right to preſent to a benefice: and by 25 Ed. 3. ſtat. 5. we find advowee paramount is taken for the king, the higheſt patron.—Advocatus eſt ad quem pertinet jus advocationis alicujus eccleſiæ, ut ad eccleſiam, nomine proprio non alieno, poſſit præſentare. Fleta, lib. 5. c. 14.

Advowſon, (advocatio) Signifies the right of preſentation to a church or benefice: and he who hath this right to preſent is ſtiled patron: becauſe they that originally obtained the right of preſentation to any church, were maintainers of, or benefactors to, the ſame church. When the Chriſtian religion was firſt eſtabliſhed in England, kings began to build cathedral churches, and to make biſhops; and afterwards, in imitation of them, ſeveral lords of manors founded particular churches on ſome part of their own lands, and endowed them with glebe, reſerving to themſelves and their heirs a right to preſent a fit perſon to the biſhop, when the ſame ſhould become void: and this is called an advowſon, and he that hath this right of preſentation is termed the patron, it being preſumed that he who founded the church will avow and take it into his protection, and be a patron to defend it in its juſt rights. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 184. See further as to the origin of lay patronages, Wilſon Rep. part 2. 183.

Under this head it may be proper,

I. To conſider the ſeveral kinds of advowſon.
II. How advowſons may lapſe.
III. How they may be gained by uſurpation.

I. Advowſons are of two kinds; appendant, and in groſs: Appendant, is a right of preſentation dependant upon a manor, lands, &c. and paſſes in a grant of the manor as incident to the ſame; and when manors were firſt created, and lands ſet apart to build a church on ſome part thereof, the advowſon or right to preſent to that church became appendant to the manor. Advowſon in groſs is a right ſubſiſting by itſelf, belonging to a perſon, and not to a manor, lands, &c. So that when an advowſon appendant is ſevered by deed or grant from the corporeal inheritance to which it was appendant, then it becomes an advowſon in groſs. Co. Lit. 121, 122.

If he that is ſeiſed of a manor, to which an advowſon is appendant, grants one or two acres of the manor, together with the advowſon; the advowſon is appendant to ſuch acre; eſpecially after the grantee hath preſented. Watſon's Compleat Incumbent, c. 7.

But this feoffment of the acre with the advowſon ought to be by deed, to make the advowſon appendant; and the acre of land and the advowſon ought to be granted by the ſame clauſe in the deed; for if one, having a manor with an advowſon appendant, grant an acre parcel of the ſaid manor, and by another clauſe in the ſame deed grants the advowſon; the advowſon in ſuch caſe ſhall not paſs as appendant to the acre: but if the grant had been of the intire manor, the advowſon would have paſſed as appendant. So if a huſband, ſeiſed in right of his wife of a manor to which an advowſon is appendant, doth alien the manor by acres to divers perſons, ſaving one acre; the advowſon ſhall be appendant to that acre. Or if a leſſee for life of a manor to which an advowſon belongs, alien one acre, with the advowſon appendant, the advowſon is thereby appendant to that acre. Watſ. c 7.

The right of advowſon, tho' appendant to a manor, caſtle, or the like, may be ſevered from it in other ways, and being ſevered, becomes an advowſon in groſs; and this may be effected divers ways: as, 1. If a manor or other thing to which it is appendant is granted, and the advowſon excepted. 2. If the advowſon is granted alone, without the thing to which it was appendant. 3. If an advowſon appendant is preſented to by the patron, as an advowſon in groſs. Gibſ. 757.

A diſappendancy may alſo be temporary; that is, the appendancy, tho' turned into groſs, may return; as, 1. If the advowſon is excepted in a leaſe of a manor for life; during the leaſe, it is in groſs, but when the leaſe expires it is appendant again. 2. If the advowſon is granted for life, and another enfeoffed of the manor with the appurtenances; in ſuch caſe at the expiration of the grant it ſhall be appendant, and ſo in other caſes.

But with reſpect to the king, by the ſtatute of prærogativa regis, 17 Ed. 2. c. 15. When the king giveth or granteth land or a manor with appurtenances; without he make expreſs mention in his deed or writing, of advowſon of churches when they fall, belonging to ſuch manor or land, at this day the king reſerveth to himſelf ſuch advowſons, albeit that among other perſons it hath been obſerved otherwiſe.

Yet when he reſtoreth, as in caſe of the reſtitution of a biſhop's temporalties; then advowſons paſs without expreſs mention, or any words equivalent thereto. 10 Co. 64.

The law, in the caſe of a common perſon, is thus ſet down by Rolle, out of the antient books: If a man ſeiſed of a manor to which an advowſon is appendant, aliens that manor, without ſaying with the appurtenances (and much more without naming the advowſon) yet the advowſon ſhall paſs; for 'tis parcel of the manor. 2 Rol. Abr. 60.

An advowſon being an inheritance incorporeal, and not lying in manual occupation, cannot paſs by livery; but may be granted by deed, or by will, either for the inheritance, or for the right of one or more turns, or for as many as ſhall happen within a time limited.

But this general rule, with regard to advowſons in groſs, next avoidances, and the like, is to be underſtood with two limitations.

Firſt, That it extends not to eccleſiaſtical perſons of any kind or degree, who are ſeiſed of advowſons in the right of their churches; nor to maſters and fellows of colleges, nor to guardians of hoſpitals, who are ſeiſed in right of their houſes; all theſe being reſtrained (the biſhops by the 1 Eliz. cap. 19. and the reſt by the 13 Eliz. cap. 10.) from making any grants but of things corporeal, of which a rent or annual profit may be reſerved; and advowſons and next avoidances, which are incorporeal and lie in grant, cannot be of that ſort; and therefore ſuch grants, however confirmed, are void againſt the ſucceſſor; tho' they have been adjudged to be good againſt the grantors (as biſhop, dean, maſter, or guardian) during their own times.

Corporeal hereditaments are ſaid to lie in livery (as actual poſſeſſion may be given of them). Incorporeal are ſaid to lie in grant (for the reverſe of the preceding reaſon). And they paſs merely by the delivery of the deed. Vide Bracton, l. 2. c. 18. Blackſtone's Commentaries, 2 V. 317.

Secondly, Where the right of granting is abſolute and indiſputable; yet a grant cannot be made by a common perſon, whilſt the church is void, ſo as to be intitled thereby to ſuch void turn; for however the avoidance that ſhall happen next after, or the inheritance of the advowſon, may be granted when the church is void; the void turn itſelf (being a mere ſpiritual thing and annexed to the perſon of the patron) is not grantable: it is then (as the law books ſpeak) a thing in power and authority, a thing in action and effect; the execution of the advowſon, and not the advowſon. This is the doctrine and language of all the books; which alſo ſay, that if two have a grant of the next avoidance, and one releaſeth all right and title to the other while the church is void: ſuch releaſe for the ſame reaſon is void. But all this is to be underſtood of common perſons only, and not of the king, whoſe grant of a void turn hath been adjudged to be good. Gibſ. 758. Watſ. c. 10.

And with reſpect to clergymen, it is to be obſerved, that by 12 Ann. ſtat. 2. c. 12. they are prohibited from purchaſing the next avoidances of livings.

But this act being only reſtrictive upon clergymen, all other perſons continue to purchaſe next avoidances as they did before, and preſent thereunto as they think proper.

As to advowſons in groſs, there cannot be any deſcent thereof from the brother to the ſiſter of the intire blood, where there is a brother of the half blood; but the ſame ſhall deſcend to the brother of the half blood, unleſs the firſt had preſented to it in his life-time, and then it ſhall deſcend to the ſiſter, ſhe being the next heir of the intire blood. Watſ. c. 8. We take it for granted, that in this caſe the brother of the half blood muſt take as heir of the anceſtor, who laſt preſented, he being by the exerciſe of that right, &c. the perſon laſt actually ſeiſed.

So if one be ſeiſed of an advowſon in fee, and the church doth become void, the void turn is a chattel; and if the patron dieth before he doth preſent, the avoidance doth not go to his heir, but to his executor. Watſ. c. 9.

But if the incumbent of a church be alſo ſeiſed in fee of the advowſon of the ſame church, and die; his heir, and not his executors, ſhall preſent; for altho' the advowſon doth not deſcend to the heir at the death of the anceſtor, and by his death the church become void, ſo that the avoidance may be ſaid in this caſe to be ſevered from the advowſon before it deſcend to the heir, and veſted in the executor; yet both the avoidance and deſcent to the heir happening at the ſame inſtant, the title of the heir ſhall be preferred as the more antient and worthy. Watſ. c. 9. fo. 72.

By laſt will and teſtament, the right of preſenting to to the next avoidance, or the inheritance of an advowſon, may be deviſed to any perſon; and if ſuch deviſe be made by the incumbent of the church, the inheritance of the advowſon being in him, it is good, tho' he die incumbent; for altho' the teſtament hath no effect but by the death of the teſtator, yet it hath an inception in his lifetime. And ſo it is, tho' he appoint by his will who ſhall be preſented by the executors, or that one executor ſhall preſent the other, or doth deviſe that his executors ſhall grant the advowſon to ſuch a man. Watſ. c. 10.

Advowſons are either preſentative, collative, or donative.

An advowſon preſentative is, where the patron does preſent or offer his clerk to the biſhop of the dioceſe, to be inſtituted in his church.

This may be done either by word or writing. The king may preſent by word, or in writing under any ſeal; who otherwiſe cannot do any legal act, but by matter of record. But where an aggregate corporation doth preſent, it muſt be under ſeal. The preſentation to a vicarage doth of common right belong to the parſon. If a feme covert hath title to preſent, the preſentation muſt be by huſband and wife and in both their names, except in caſe of the queen conſort. Wood's Inſt. 155, &c.

And if feme covert is ſeiſed of an advowſon, and the church becometh void, and the wife dieth, the huſband ſhall preſent to the advowſon. A guardian by ſocage or by nurture cannot preſent to a vacant living in right of the heir, or in his name, becauſe he can make no benefit of it, or account for it, though it is ſometimes practiſed, and made good by time. Therefore the infant ſhall preſent of whatſoever age. Vide Co. Lit. 17. b. If a common patron preſents firſt one clerk, and then another, the biſhop may inſtitute which he pleaſes; unleſs he revokes the preſentation of one of them before he is admitted by the biſhop. If there is a right of nomination in one, and a right of preſentation in another, to the ſame benefice; he that has the right of nomination is the true patron, and the other is obliged to preſent the clerk which is nominated. Id. 156.

An advowſon collative is that advowſon which is lodged in the biſhop; for collation is the giving of a benefice by a biſhop, when he is the original patron thereof, or he gains a right by lapſe.

Inſtitution is given by the biſhop upon a preſentation of a patron; but collation is an immediate inſtitution, becauſe the biſhop is both patron and ordinary. Inſtitution and collation are in effect (for the moſt part) the ſame, and are terms made uſe of to diſtinguiſh the perſons, who have the power to beſtow the benefice. (But where they differ, ſee of Lapſe and Uſurpation poſtea) Id. 157, &c.

An advowſon donative is, when the king or other patron (in whom the advowſon of the church is lodged) does, by a ſingle donation in writing, put the clerk into poſſeſſion, without preſentation, inſtitution, or induction. Donatives are either of churches parochial, chapels, prebends, &c. and may be exempt from all ordinary juriſdictions, ſo that the ordinary cannot viſit them, and conſequently cannot demand procurations. If the true patron of a church or chapel donative doth once preſent to the ordinary, and his clerk is admitted and inſtituted, it becomes a church preſentative, and ſhall never have the privilege of a donative afterwards. Yet if a ſtranger preſents to ſuch a donative, and inſtitution is given, all is void. Id. 158.

The right of donation deſcends to the heir (the anceſtor dying ſeiſed, where the church became void in his lifetime) and not to the executor, which it would had it been a preſentative benefice. Wilſon Rep. part 2. 150, 1.

There's not any caſe in the books to exclude the heir of a donative from his turn in this caſe. And a patron of a donative can never be put out of poſſeſſion by an uſurpation. Id. ibid.

Advowſons were formerly moſt of them appendant to manors, and the patrons parochial barons; the lordſhip of the manor, and patronage of the church were ſeldom in different hands till advowſons were given to religious houſes; but of late times the lordſhip of the manor and the advowſon of the church have been divided; and now not only lords of manors, but mean perſons have, by purchaſe, the dignity of patrons of churches, to the great prejudice thereof. By the common law the right of patronage is a real right fixed in the patrons or founders, and their heirs, wherein they have as abſolute a property as any other man hath in his lands and tenements: for advowſons are a temporal inheritance, and lay fee; they may be granted by deed or will, and are aſſets in the hands of heirs or executors. Co. Lit. 119. A recovery may be ſuffered of an advowſon; a wife may be endowed of it; a huſband tenant by the curteſy; and it may be forfeited by treaſon or felony. 1 Rep. 56. 10 Rep. 55. If an advowſon deſcends to coparceners, and the church, after the death of their anceſtors, becomes void, the eldeſt ſiſter ſhall firſt preſent. 13 E. 1. c. 5. ſ. 5. And when coparceners, jointenants, &c. are ſeiſed of an advowſon, and partition is made to preſent by turns, each ſhall be ſeiſed of their ſeparate eſtate. 7 Ann. c. 18.

Perſons ſeiſed of advowſons, being papiſts, are diſabled to make preſentations, and the chancellors of the univerſities ſhall preſent. 1 W. & M. cap. 26. And preſentations to advowſons, &c. for money or other reward, ſhall be void, &c. Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 6.

Beſides the ſtatutes above taken notice of, there are ſeveral other ſtatutes reſpecting this title which will more properly be treated of under the particular heads of Darrein Preſentment, Lapſe, Preſentation, Quare impedit, Simony, Uſurpation, &c.

II. How advowſons may lapſe.

A lapſe is a title given to the ordinary, to collate to a church, by the neglect of the patron to preſent to it within ſix months after avoidance. Or a lapſe is a devolution of a right of preſenting from the patron to the biſhop; from the biſhop to the archbiſhop; from the archbiſhop to the king. The term in which the title by lapſe commences from one to the other ſucceſſively is ſix months, or half a year according to the calendar, not accounting twenty-eight days to the month, as in other caſes, becauſe this computation is by the Eccleſiaſtical law, and becauſe tempus ſemeſtre, in the ſtat. of Weſt. 2. chap. 5. is intended of half a year, the whole year containing 365 days, which being divided, the half year for the patron to preſent is 182 days. The day in which the church becomes void is not to be reckoned as part of the ſix months. Wood's Inſt. 160. But for the law on this head, ſee title Lapſe.

III. How they may be gained by uſurpation.

An uſurpation muſt commence upon a preſentation, not a collation, and is ſettled by inſtitution ſix months before a quare impedit brought. But as to this head ſee title Uſurpation and Quare impedit. Vide Com. Dig. 1 V. tit. Advowſon.

Advowſon of the Moiety of the Church, (advocatio medietatis eccleſiæ) Is where there are two ſeveral patrons and two ſeveral incumbents in one and the ſame church, the one of the one moiety, the other of the other moiety thereof. Co. Lit. 17. b. Medietas advocationis, a moiety of the advowſon, is where two muſt join in the preſentation, and there is but one incumbent; as where there are two parceners; and though they agree to preſent by turns, yet each of them hath but the moiety of the church. Co. Lit 17. b. But vide 7 Ann. c. 18.

Advowſon of Religious Houſes, Where any perſons founded any houſe of religion, they had thereby the advowſon or patronage thereof, like unto thoſe who built and endowed pariſh churches. And ſometimes theſe patrons had the ſole nomination of the abbot, or prior, &c. either by inveſtiture or delivery of a paſtoral ſtaff: or by direct preſentation to the dioceſan; or if a free election were left to the religious, a conge d'eſlire, or licence for election, was firſt to be obtained of the patron, and the elect confirmed by him. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. 147, 163.

Aerie, (aerie accipitrum) airy of goſhawks, is the proper term for hawks, for that which of other birds we call a neſt. Stat. 9 H. 3. c. 12. And it is generally ſaid to come from the French word aere, a hawk's neſt. The liberty of keeping theſe aeries of hawks was a privilege, granted to great perſons: and the preſerving the aeries in the kings foreſts was one ſort of tenure of lands by ſervice. Anno 20 Ed. 1. Simon de Raghton & al' tenent terras in Raghton, &c. per ſerjantiam cuſtodiendi aerias auſturcorum domini regis.

Affeerers, (afferatores) From the Fr. affier, to affirm. They are thoſe that in courts-leet upon oath, ſettle and moderate the fines and amercements, impoſed on ſuch perſons as have committed faults, arbitrarily puniſhable, viz. that have no expreſs penalty appointed by ſtatute: and they are alſo appointed for moderating amercements, in courts baron. The perſons nominated to this office affirm upon their oaths what penalty they think in conſcience ought to be inflicted on the offenders. This word is uſed Stat. 25 Ed. 3. c. 7. Where mention is made, that the juſtices before their riſing in every ſeſſions ſhall cauſe the amerciaments to be affeered. And this ſeems to be agreeable to Magna Charta, by which it is ordained, that perſons are to be amerced after the manner of the fault; and the amerciaments ſhall be aſſeſſed by the oath of honeſt and lawful men of the vicinage. 9 Hen. 3. cap. 14. Affidavit, Signifies in law an oath in writing; and to make affidavit of a thing, is to teſtify it upon oath. An affidavit, generally ſpeaking, is an oath in writing, ſworn before ſome perſon who hath authority to adminiſter ſuch oath: and the true place of habitation, and true addition of every perſon who ſhall make an affidavit, is to be inſerted in his affidavit. 1 Lill. Abr. 44. 46. Affidavits ought to ſet forth the matter of fact only, which the party intends to prove by his affidavit; and not to declare the merits of the cauſe, of which the court is to judge. 21 Car. 1. B. R. The plaintiff or defendant (having authority to take affidavits) may take affidavit in a cauſe depending; yet it will not be admitted in evidence at the trial, but only upon motions. 1 Lill. 44. When an affidavit hath been read in court, it ought to be filed, that the adverſe party may ſee it, and take a copy. Paſch. 1655. An affidavit taken before a maſter in Chancery will not be of any force in the court of King's Bench, or other courts, nor ought to be read there; for it ought to be made before one of the judges of the court wherein the cauſe is depending, or a commiſſioner in the country, appointed for taking affidavits. Style's Rep. 455. Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 5. The judges, &c. of the courts at Weſtminſter by commiſſion may impower perſons in the ſeveral counties of England to take affidavits concerning matters depending in their ſeveral courts, as maſters in Chancery extraordinary uſed to do. Where affidavits are taken by commiſſioners in the country according to the ſtatute 29 Car. 2. and 'tis expreſs'd to be in a cauſe depending between two certain perſons, and there is no ſuch depending, thoſe affidavits cannot be read, becauſe the commiſſioners have no authority to take them; (and for that reaſon the party cannot be convicted of perjury upon them); but if there is ſuch a cauſe in court and affidavits taken concerning ſome collateral matter, they may be read. Salk. 461.

Affidavits are uſually for certifying the ſervice of proceſs, or other matters touching the proceedings in a cauſe; or in ſupport of, or againſt motions, in caſes, where the court determines matters &c. in a ſummary way.

If a perſon exhibits a bill in equity for the diſcovery of a deed, and prays relief thereupon, he muſt annex an affidavit to his bill, that he has not ſuch deed in his poſſeſſion, or that it is not in his power to come at it; for otherwiſe he takes away the juriſdiction of the common law courts, without ſhewing any probable cauſe why he ſhould ſue in equity. 1 Chan. Ca. 11, 231. 1 Vern. 59, 180, 247.

But if he ſeeks diſcovery of the deed only, or that it may be produced at a trial at law, he need not annex ſuch affidavit to his bill; for it is not to be preſumed that in either of theſe caſes he would do ſo abſurd a thing, as exhibit a bill, if he had the deed in his poſſeſſion. 1 Vern. 180, 247.

In bills of interpleader, the party who prefers it muſt make affidavit that he does not collude with either of the other parties. 1 New Abr. 66.

An affidavit muſt ſet forth the matter poſitively, and all material circumſtances attending it, that the court may judge whether the deponent's concluſion be juſt or not. 1 New. Abr. 66.

And therefore, on motion to put off a trial for want of a material witneſs, it muſt appear that ſufficient endeavours were made uſe of to have him at the time appointed, and that he cannot poſſibly be preſent, though he may on further time given. Farreſt. 121. Comb. 421, 422.

Upon a rule to ſhew cauſe, the party who obtained the rule, offered ſeveral new affidavits, and this diverſity was taken, viz. where they contain new matter, and where they tend only to confirm what was alledged and ſworn when the rule was made; in the latter caſe they may be read, not in the former. 1 Salk. 461.

Afforeſt, (afforeſtare) To turn ground into a foreſt. Chart. de Foreſt. c. 1 When foreſt ground is turned from foreſt to other uſes, it is called diſafforeſted. Vide Foreſt.

Affray, Is derived from the Fr. word effrayer, to affright, and it formerly meant no more; as where perſons appeared with armour or weapons not uſually worn, to the terror of others. Stat. 2 Ed. 3. c. 3. But now it ſignifies a ſkirmiſh or fighting between two or more, and there muſt be a ſtroke given, or offered, or a weapon drawn, otherwiſe it is not an affray. 3 Inſt. 158. An affray is a public offence to the terror of the kings's ſubjects, and

From this laſt definition it ſeemeth clearly to follow, that there may be an aſſault, which will not amount to an affray, as where it happens in a private place, out of the hearing or ſeeing of any, except the parties concerned, in which caſe it cannot be ſaid to be to the terror of the people. 1 Hawk. 134.

Alſo it is ſaid, that no quarrelſome or threatening words whatſoever ſhall amount to an affray; and that no one can juſtify laying his hands on thoſe who ſhall barely quarrel with angry words, without coming to blows; yet it ſeemeth, that the conſtable may, at the requeſt of the party threatened, carry the perſon who threatens to beat him before a juſtice in order to find ſureties. 1 Hawk. 135.

Alſo, it is certain, that it is a very high offence to challenge another, either by word or letter, to fight a duel, or to be the meſſenger of ſuch a challenge; or even barely to endeavour to provoke another to ſend a challenge, or to fight; as by diſperſing letters to that purpoſe, full of reflections, and inſinuating a deſire to fight. 1 Hawk 135.

But admitting that bare words do not, in the judgment of law, carry in them ſo much terror as to amount to an affray, yet it ſeems certain, that in ſome caſes there may be an affray, where there is no actual violence; as where a man arms himſelf with dangerous and unuſual weapons, in ſuch a manner as will naturally cauſe a terror to the people; which is ſaid to have been always an offence at the common law, and is ſtrictly prohibited by ſtatute 2 Ed. 3. c. 3.

A conſtable may require affrayers to depart, and if they reſiſt, he may call others to his aſſiſtance; who, if they refuſe to aſſiſt him, may be fined and impriſoned: and a private perſon, or ſtander-by, may put a ſtop to an affray, and ſeize the offenders, where perſons are aſſembled in a tumultous manner to break the peace. 3 Inſt. 158. H. P. C. 135. In caſe a perſon be dangerouſly wounded, any man may apprehend the offender, and carry him before a juſtice, in the ſame manner as a conſtable. Dalt. 35. In a very dangerous affray, a conſtable can juſtify commitment, till the offenders find ſureties for the peace. Lamb. 139. He may likewiſe put the affrayers in the ſtocks till he can procure proper aſſiſtance to convey them to gaol. Dalt. 38.

If an affray be in an houſe, the conſtable may break open the doors to preſerve the peace; and if affrayers fly to an houſe, and he follow with freſh ſuit, he may break open the door to take them. 1 Hawk. 137.

But in caſes of affrays, the conſtable muſt apprehend the perſons offending before the affray is over, or elſe he may not do it without a warrant from a juſtice, except it be in extraordinary caſe; as where a perſon is wounded dangerouſly. Dalt. 36. In the caſe of a ſudden affray, through paſſion or exceſs of drinking, the conſtable may put the perſons in priſon, if there be one in the vill, until the heat of their paſſion and intemperance is over, though he deliver them afterwards; or till he can bring them before a juſtice of peace, and that to avoid the preſent danger. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 90, 95. If a conſtable is hurt in an affray, he may have his remedy by action of treſpaſs, and have damages; but the affrayers, if they are hurt, ſhall have no remedy. Lamb. 141. And where any other perſons receive harm from the affrayers, they may have remedy by action againſt them. Dalt 35.

A juſtice of peace may commit affrayers, until they find ſureties for the peace. And there is no doubt but that a juſtice of peace may and muſt do all ſuch things to that purpoſe, which a private man or conſtable are either enabled or required by the law to do: but it is ſaid, that he cannot without a warrant authorize the arreſt of any perſon for an affray out of his own view; yet it ſeems clear, that in ſuch caſe he may make his warrant to bring the offender before him, in order to compel him to find ſureties for the peace. 1 Hawk. 137.

It is inquirable in the court leet; and puniſhable by juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions, by fine and impriſonment. And it differs from aſſault, in that it is a wrong to the public; whereas aſſault is of a private nature. Lamb. lib. 2. yet indictment lies, as being a breach of the public peace.

Age, (ætas, Fr. age) In common acceptation ſignifies a man's life from his birth to any certain time, or the day of his death: it alſo hath relation to that part of time wherein men live. But in the law it is particularly uſed for thoſe ſpecial times which enable perſons of both ſexes to do certain acts, which before through want of years and judgment they are prohibited to do. As for example; a man at twelve years of age ought to take the oath of allegiance to the king: at fourteen, which is his age of diſcretion, he may conſent to marriage, and chuſe his guardian: and at twenty-one he may alien his lands, goods and chattles: a woman at nine years of age is dowable: at twelve ſhe may conſent to marriage; at fourteen ſhe is at years of diſcretion, and may chuſe a guardian; and at twenty-one ſhe may alienate her lands, &c. Co. Lit 78.

If at the time of the marriage the huſband be above fourteen, and the wife under twelve, when ſhe attains the age of twelve years, the huſband may diſagree as well as the wife, and ſo vice verſa. Co. Lit. 79.

A diſagreement to the marriage, before the age of conſent, is of no force; for, if the huſband diſagree before fourteen and marry another, the iſſue of the ſecond marriage is a baſtard. 1 Rol. 341. Contra. Dyer 13. a. in marg. If after the age of conſent, the huſband or wife diſagree by parol, yet cohabit as huſband and wife, this amounts to an agreement. 1 Rol. 341. Vide Com. D. V. 1. tit. Baron and Feme.

There are ſeveral other ages mentioned in our ancient books, relating to aid of the lord, wardſhip, &c. now of no uſe. Co. Lit. The age of twenty-one is the full age of man or woman; which enables them to contract and manage for themſelves, in reſpect to their eſtates, until which time they cannot act with ſecurity to thoſe who deal with them; for their acts are in moſt caſes either void or voidable. Perk. But a perſon under twenty one may contract for neceſſaries ſuitable to his quality; and it ſhall bind him; alſo one under age may be executor of a will. Co. Lit. 171. And at fourteen years of age a perſon may diſpoſe of goods and perſonal eſtate by will; though not of lands till the age of twenty one. It hath been adjudged, that if one be born on the firſt of February at eleven o'clock at night, and the laſt of January in the one and twentieth year at one o'clock in the morning, he makes his will of lands, &c. and dies; yet ſuch will is good, for he then was of age. Mod. Caſ. 260. A perſon under the age of twenty-one may make a purchaſe; but at his full age he may agree or diſagree to it. Co. Lit. 2. b. So where perſons marry, the man under the age of fourteen, or the woman within twelve, they may diſagree to the marriage at thoſe ages: and the law is the ſame in the other caſes.

Perſons under the age of fourteen are not generally puniſhable for crimes; but if they do any treſpaſs, they muſt anſwer for the damage. Co. Lit. 247. 2 Roll. Abr. 547.

As to their not being generally puniſhable for crimes before the age of fourteen, the rule is general, yet hath its exceptions founded on the nature of the caſe, and the judgment of the infant. At Bury ſummer aſſizes, 1748, a boy of ten years of age was convicted of murder, and that with great juſtice and propriety, he having done a variety of acts, with that deliberation, which ſhewed his judgment ſufficiently ripe to render him accountable for his actions. Vide the caſe of William York. Forſter's Rep. 70, &c.

Fourteen is the age by law to be a witneſs; and in ſome caſes a perſon of nine years of age hath been allowed to give evidence. 2 Hawk. 434. None may be a member of parliament under the age of twenty-one years; and no man can be ordained prieſt till twenty-four; nor be a biſhop till thirty years of age.

Age-Prier, (ætatem precari, or ætatis precatio) Is when an action being brought againſt a perſon under age for lands which he hath by deſcent, he by petition or motion ſhews the matter to the court, and prays that the action may ſtay till his full age, which the court generally agrees to. Terms de Ley 30. This is called parol demurrer, i. e. a ſtaying or delaying of the plea or ſuit. Parol ſignifies the plea or ſuit.—Demurrer, to ſtay or abide. But as a purchaſer, a minor ſhall not have age prier: nor in a writ of aſſize, becauſe it is of his own wrong, and this writ ſhall not be delayed; or in a writ of dower; or of partition. Stat. 3 Ed. 1. 38 Ed. 3. Hob. 342. In a writ of debt againſt an heir, he ſhall have his age, for at full age he may plead riens per deſcent, or a releaſe to his anceſtor, and be diſcharged. Danv. Abr. 259. See Parol Demurrer.

Agenfrida, The true lord or owner of any thing.—Si porcus non fuerit ibi ſæpius quam ſemel det agenfrida unum ſolidum. Leg. Inæ, c. 50. apud Brompt. c. 45.

Agenhine, A gueſt at an inn after three nights, when accounted one of the family. See Hoghenhine.

Agent and Patient, Is when a perſon is the doer of a thing, and the party to whom done: as where a woman endows herſelf of the beſt part of her huſband's poſſeſſions, this being the ſole act of herſelf to herſelf, makes her agent and patient. Alſo if a man be indebted unto another, and afterwards he makes the creditor his executor, and dies, the executor may retain ſo much of the goods of the deceaſed as will ſatisfy his debt; and by this retainer he is agent and patient, that is, the party to whom the debt is due, and the perſon that pays the ſame. But a man ſhall not be judge in his own cauſe, quia iniquum eſt aliquem ſuæ rei eſſe judicem. 8 Rep. 138.

Agild, Signifies to be free from penalties, not ſubject to the cuſtomary fine or impoſition. Sax. a gild, ſine mulcta. Leges Aluredi, cap 6. Si utlagata efficiat ut occidatur, pro eo quod contra Dei rectum & regis imperium ſtet—jaceat agild. In Leg. Hen. 1. c. 88. Agilde was a perſon ſo vile, that whoever kill'd him was to pay no mulct for his death.

Agiler, From the Sax. a gile, an obſerver or informer.

Agillarius, An hey-ward, herd-ward, or keeper of cattle in a common field. Towns and villages had their hey-wards, to ſuperviſe and guard the greater cattle, or common herd of kine and oxen, and keep them within due bounds; and if theſe were ſervile tenants, they were privileged from all cuſtomary ſervices to the lord, becauſe they were preſumed to be always attending their duty, as a ſhepherd on his flock. And lords of manors had likewiſe their hey-wards, to take care of the tillage, harveſt work, &c. and ſee that there were no incroachments made on their lordſhips: but this is now the buſineſs of bailiffs. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. 534, 576.

Agiſt, (from the Fr. giſte, a bed or reſting-place) Signifies to take in and feed the cattle of ſtrangers in the king's foreſt, and to gather up the money due for the ſame. Chart. de Foreſta, 9 H. 3. c. 9. The officers appointed for this purpoſe are called agiſters, or giſt-takers, and are made by the king's letters patent: there are four of them in every foreſt wherein the king hath any pawnage. Manw. For. Laws 80. They are alſo called agiſtators, to take account of the cattle agiſted.

Agiſtment, (agiſtamentum) Is where other men's cattle are taken into any ground, at a certain rate per week: it is ſo called, becauſe the cattle are ſuffered agiſer, that is, to be levant and couchant there: and many great farms are employed to this purpoſe. 2 Inſt. 643. Our graziers call cattle which they thus take into keep giſements; and to giſe or juice the ground, is when the occupier thereof feeds it not with his own ſtock, but takes in the cattle of others to agiſt or paſture it. Agiſtment is likewiſe the profit of ſuch feeding in a ground or field: and extends to the depaſturing of barren cattle of the owner, for which tithes ſhall be paid to the parſon. There is agiſtment of ſea-banks, where lands are charged with a tribute to keep out the ſea. Terræ agiſtatæ are lands whoſe owners are bound to keep up the ſea-banks. Spelm. in Romney-Marſh.

Agitatio Animalium in Foreſta, The drift of beaſts in the foreſt. Leg. Foreſt.

Agius, (Gr. i. e. holy.)—Ego triumphalem trophæum agiæ crucis impreſſi. Mon. Angl. p. 15, 17.

Agnus Dei, A piece of white wax in a flat oval form, like a ſmall cake, ſtamp'd with the figure of the lamb, and conſecrated by the pope. Agnus Dei, croſſes, &c. are not permitted to be brought into this kingdom, on pain of præmunire. Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 2.

Agraria Lex, A law made by the Romans for diſtribution of lands among the common people.

Agreement, agreamentum (aggregatio mentium) Signifies a joining together of two or more minds in any thing done, or to be done. Plowd. 17.

But I. It is to be obſerved, that the perſons whoſe minds are ſo joined together, ſhould be ſuch as are capable of binding themſelves by their agreements. For

A perſon non compos is not capable of entering into any agreement, as an agreement is an act of the underſtanding which they are incapable of; and therefore they are to be under the care of their curators or guardians, by a commiſſion from the public. 1 New Abr. 67. See title Ideots and Lunaticks.

Alſo an infant, for the ſame reaſon, is generally incapable of contracting, except for neceſſaries, &c. See Infant.

A wife during the intermarriage is incapable of entring into any agreement in pais, being under power of her huſband. See title Baron and Feme.

The anceſtor ſeiſed in fee may by his agreement bind his heir; therefore if A. agrees to ſell lands, and receives part of the purchaſe money, but dies before a conveyance is executed, and a bill is brought againſt the heir, he will be decreed to convey, and the money ſhall go to the executor, eſpecially if there are more debts due than the teſtator's perſonal eſtate is ſufficient to pay. 2 Vern. 215. Abr. Eq. 265. But

If tenant in tail agrees to convey, or bargains and ſells the lands for valuable conſideration, without fine or recovery, and dies before the fine or recovery be levied or ſuffered, the iſſue is not bound either in law or equity; for equity cannot ſet aſide the ſtatute de donis; which ſays, That voluntas donatoris obſervetur; nor can the court ſet up a new manner of conveyancing, and thereby ſuperſede fines and recoveries; for thereby the king would loſe the perquiſites by fines, or the writs of entry and fines for alienation. Hob. 203. 1 Chan. Ca. 171. 1 Lev. 239. 2 Vent. 350. Yet

If there be tenant in tail in equity as of a truſt, or under an equitable agreement, and he for valuable conſideration bargains and ſells the land without fine or recovery, this ſhall bind his iſſue, becauſe the ſtatute de donis doth not extend to it, being an intail in equity and a creature of the court. 1 Chan. Ca. 234. 2 Chan. Ca. 64. 1 Vern. 13, 440. 2 Vern. 133, 583, 702.

II. The agreement ſo entered into may be of different kinds, as,

1ſt, An Agreement executed already at the beginning; as where money is paid for the thing agreed, or other ſatiſfaction made. 2dly, An agreement after an act done by another; as where one doth ſuch a thing, and another perſon agrees to it afterwards, which is executed alſo: and 3dly, An agreement executory, or to be performed in futuro. This laſt ſort of agreement may be divided into two parts; one certain at the beginning, and the other when, the certainty not appearing at firſt, the parties agree that the thing ſhall be performed upon the certainty known. Terms de Ley 31. See titles Condition, Contract, Covenant.

Agreements likewiſe may be either in writing or by parol.

The common law required no other ſolemnity in paſſing lands or tenements, but that of livery and ſeiſin, which being a tranſlation of the feud coram paribus curtis, and teſtified by them, was held an act of ſufficient notoriety to direct the lord of whom to demand his ſervices, and ſtrangers againſt whom to commence their actions; but now by the ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. ſect. 1. it is enacted, that "all leaſes, eſtates, intereſts of freehold, or terms of years, or any uncertain intereſts of, in, or out of any meſſuages, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments, made or created by livery and ſeiſin only, or by parol, and not put in writing, and ſigned by the parties ſo making or creating the ſame, or their agents thereunto lawfully authoriſed by writing, ſhall have the force and effect of leaſes or eſtates at will only, and ſhall not either in law or equity be deemed or taken to have any other or greater force or effect; any conſideration for making any ſuch parol leaſes or eſtates, or any former uſage to the contrary notwithſtanding."

Sect. 2. "Except leaſes not exceeding the term of three years from the making thereof, whereupon the rent reſerved to the landlord, during ſuch term, ſhall amount unto two third parts, at the leaſt, of the full improved value of the thing demiſed."

Sect. 3. Alſo it is enacted, that "no leaſes, eſtates or intereſts, either of freehold or terms of years, or any uncertain intereſt, not being copyhold or cuſtomary intereſt of, in, to or out of any meſſuages, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments ſhall be aſſigned, granted or ſurrendered, unleſs it be by deed or note in writing, ſigned by the party ſo aſſigning, granting or ſurrendring the ſame, or their agents thereunto lawfully authoriſed; by writing or by act or operation of law."

Sect. 4. And it is further enacted, that "no action ſhall be brought whereby to charge any executor or adminiſtrator, upon any ſpecial promiſe to anſwer damages out of his own eſtate, or whereby to charge the defendant upon any ſpecial promiſe to anſwer for the debt, default or miſcarriages of another perſon, or to charge any perſon upon any agreement made upon conſideration of marriage, or upon any contract or ſale of lands, tenements or hereditaments, or any intereſt in or concerning them, or upon any agreement that is not to be performed within the ſpace of one year from the making thereof, unleſs the agreement upon which ſuch action ſhall be brought, or ſome memorandum or note thereof ſhall be in writing, ſigned by the party to be charged therewith, or ſome other perſon by him thereunto lawfully authoriſed."

Sect. 17. It is enacted, that "no contract for the ſale of any goods, wares and merchandiſes for the price of 10l. ſterling, or upwards, ſhall be allowed to be good, except the buyer ſhall accept part of the goods ſo ſold, and actually receive the ſame, or give ſomething in earneſt to bind the bargain, or in part of payment; or that ſome note or memorandum, in writing, of the ſaid bargain be made and ſigned by the parties to be charged, or their agents thereunto lawfully authoriſed."

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute, the following points have been reſolved.

That if there be a parol agreement for the purchaſe of lands, and a bill brought for a ſpecifick execution thereof, and the ſubſtance of the agreement ſet forth in the bill, and confeſſed by the defendant's anſwer, that in ſuch caſe the court will decree a ſpecifick execution; becauſe there is no danger of perjury, which was the principal thing the ſtatute intended to prevent. Abr. Eq. 19. ſed q.

Alſo a parol agreement which is intended to be reduced into writing, but prevented by fraud, may be decreed in equity; as if upon a marriage-treaty, inſtructions are given by the huſband to draw a ſettlement, and by him privately countermanded; and afterwards he draws in the woman, by perſwaſions and aſſurances of ſuch ſettlement to marry him. Abr. Eq. 19.

So where a parol agreement was concerning the lending of money on a mortgage, and the conveyance propoſed was an abſolute deed from the mortgagor; and a deed of defeaſance from the mortgagee, and after the mortgagee had got the deed of conveyance, he refuſed to execute the defeaſance, yet it was decreed againſt him on the point of fraud. Abr. Eq. 20.

Every agreement ought to be perfect, full and compleat, being the mutual conſent of the parties; and ſhould be executed with a recompence, or be ſo certain as to give an action or other remedy thereon. Plowd. 5. Any thing under hand and ſeal, which imports an agreement will amount to a covenant: and a proviſo, by way of agreement, amounts likewiſe to a covenant; and action may be brought upon them. 1 Lev. 155. An agreement being put in writing only for remembrance, doth not change its nature; but if it be put in writing ſealed and delivered, it is of greater force. Hob. 79. Where an agreement for the purchaſe of lands, being in writing, and ſigned by both the parties, but not ſealed; it was held good in chancery, and decreed to be executed. Though where a perſon gives a guinea, &c. earneſt, without agreement in writing it is otherwiſe. Preced. Chanc. 16, 560.

A note of an agreement, ſign'd by one party only, will bind both in equity: ſo it is of agreements in part executed, by delivering poſſeſſion of the lands, though neither party ſign them. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 21. But if any eſtate in poſſeſſion or reverſion be made to me, I muſt agree to it, before it will be ſettled; for I may refuſe, and ſo avoid it: a releaſe, deed, or bond, is made and delivered to another to my uſe, this will veſt in me without any agreement of mine; but, if I diſagree to it, I make the deed void. Dyer 167. And regularly where a man hath once diſagreed to the party himſelf, he can never after agree: and obligation being made to my uſe, and tendered to me, if I refuſe it, and after agree again and will accept it; now this agreement afterwards will not make the obligation good, that was void by the refuſal. Co. Lit. 79. 5 Rep. 119.

An agreement may be as well in the party's abſence, as in his preſence; but a diſagreement muſt be to the perſon himſelf to whom made. 2 Rep. 69. When an eſtate is made to a feme covert, it is good till diſagreement without any agreement of the huſband: though a new eſtate granted to the wife where ſhe hath an eſtate before, as by the taking of a new leaſe, and making a ſurrender in law, will not veſt till the huſband agree to it. Hob. 204. A forced agreement of the party is accounted no agreement, and therefore he that did agree to the thing ſhall not be compelled to perform it. 1 Lill. 48.

If an agreement be in the nature of a penalty, the courts of equity will not relieve againſt it; for the terms ſhall be judged the meaſure of ſatisfaction to the parties. Preced. Chan. 102.

III. As to a remedy, for a breach, &c.

In many caſes the party injured by breach of an agreement, may have a remedy either by action at Common law, or have recourſe to a court of equity; but here a general rule muſt be obſerved, that wherever the matter of the bill is merely in damages, there the remedy is at law, becauſe the damages cannot be aſcertained by the conſcience of the chancellor, and therefore muſt be ſettled by a jury. See Abr. Eq. 16.

But if there be matter of fraud mixt with the damages; as if A. ſues B. on a covenant at law for damages, and B. files a bill for an injunction upon this equitable ſuggeſtion, that the covenant was obtained by fraud, if A. files his croſs bill for relief upon that covenant, the court will retain it, becauſe the validity of the covenant is diſputed in that court, and on a head properly cognizable there; if the validity of the deed be eſtabliſhed, the court will direct an iſſue for the quantum of the damages. Abr. Eq. 17. 1 Chan. Rep. 158.

So where the agreement is to do ſomething in ſpecie, as to convey lands, execute a deed, &c. there it will be proper to apply to a court of equity for a ſpecifick execution to which the party is intitled, if the agreement be good, and ſufficiently proved, when otherwiſe he could only recover damages at law. 1 Chan. Ca. 42.

But here it muſt be obſerved, that agreements, out of which an equity can be raiſed for a decree in ſpecie, ought to be obtained with all imaginable fairneſs, and without any mixture tending to ſurprize or circumvention; and that they be not unreaſonable in themſelves. Abr. Eq. 17.

As where by a marriage agreement the ſon's intended wife was to have more than would have been left for the father (though indebted), his wife and two daughters unpreferred; the court would not decree it, principally, by reaſon of the extremity of it, but left the party to his remedy at law. 2 Chan. Ca. 17.

Alſo in equity voluntary conveyances are good againſt the parties, and cannot be revoked, nor will the court interpoſe in behalf of one volunteer againſt another; but if they affect creditors, purchaſers, or younger children, the court will ſet them aſide. 1 Chan Rep. 173. 1 Vern. 100, 464.

If there be a defective conveyance, without an equitable conſideration, a court of equity will not oblige the party to make it good, tho' there be a covenant for further aſſurances; as if a man makes a feoffment to a ſtranger without livery, the feoffer or heir ſhall not be obliged to make good that feoffment, but it ſhall be conſtrued in equity to be an eſtate at will, as it is in law. 2 Vent. 365. 2 Vern. 40, 475.

Agri, In our law, denotes arable land in the common fields. Forteſcue.

Aid, (auxilium) Is all one with the French aide, and is generally underſtood to be a ſubſidy granted to the crown. By the ancient law of the land, the king and any lord of the realm might lay an aid upon their tenants, for knighting an eldeſt ſon, or marriage of a daughter; but this was taken away by the ſtatute 12 Car. 2. c. 24. This impoſition, which was often levied in former times, ſeems to have deſcended to us from Normandy, or rather from the feudal law. Grand Cuſtom c. 35. It is ſaid to differ from tax in ſignification; for taxes were anciently levied at the will of the lord, upon any occaſion whatſoever, but aids could not be levied but where it it was lawful and cuſtomary ſo to do; as to make the eldeſt ſon a knight, marry the eldeſt daughter, or to redeem the lord from priſon. By ſtat. 34 Ed. 1. c. 1. It is ordained that the king ſhall levy no aid or tax without his parliament.

Aid of the King, (auxilium regis) Is where the King's tenant prays aid of the king, on account of rent demanded of him by others. A city or borough, that hold a fee-farm of the king, if any thing be demanded againſt them which belongs thereto, they may pray in aid of the king: and the king's bailiffs, collectors, or accountants ſhall have aid of the king. In theſe caſes, the proceedings are ſtopp'd till the king's council are heard to ſay what they think fit, for avoiding the king's prejudice: and this aid ſhall not in any caſe be granted after iſſue; becauſe the king ought not to rely upon the defence made by another, Jenk. Cent. 64. Terms de Jey 35. Stat. 4 Ed. 1. and 14 Ed. 3. See the Tables to the Statutes.

Aid-Prayer, (auxilium petere) A word made uſe of in pleading, for a petition in court to call in help from another perſon that hath an intereſt in the thing conteſted: this gives ſtrength to the party praying in aid, and to the other likewiſe, by giving him an opportunity of avoiding a prejudice growing towards his own right. As tenant for life, by the curteſy, for term of years, &c. being impleaded, may pray in aid of him in reverſion; that is, deſire the court that he may be called by writ to alledge what he thinks proper for the maintenance of the right of the perſon calling him, and of his own. F. N. B. 50.

Aid ſhall be granted to the defendant in ejectione firmæ, when the title of the land is in queſtion: leſſee for years ſhall have aid in treſpaſs; and tenants at will: but tenant in tail ſhall not have aid of him in remainder in fee; for he himſelf hath the inheritance. Danv. Abr. 292. In a writ of replevin, the avowry being for a real ſervice, aid is granted before iſſue; and in action of treſpaſs after iſſue joined, if there be cauſe, it ſhall be had for the defendant, tho' never for the plaintiff. Jenk. Cent. 64. Fitz. Abr. 7. There ought to be privity between a perſon that joins in aid and the other to whom he is joined; otherwiſe joinder in aid ſhall not be ſuffered. Danv. 318. There is a prayer in aid of patrons, by parſons, vicars, &c. And between coparcencers, where one coparcencer ſhall have aid of the other to recover pro rata. Co. Lit. 341. b. And alſo ſervants, having done any thing lawfully in right of their maſters ſhall have aid of them. Terms de Ley 34.

Aile, (of the French aieul, i. e. avus) Signifies a writ which lies where a man's grandfather or great grandfather (called Beſaile) being ſeiſed of lands and tenements in fee-ſimple, the day that he died, and a ſtranger abateth or entreth the ſame day, and diſpoſſeſſes the heir of his inheritance. F. N. B. 222. The aunt and the neice ſhall join in a writ of aiel of the ſeiſin of their grandfather. And the writ run thus: Rex vic. &c. Prec. A. B. quod juſte, &c. redd. B. & D. unum meſſuagium, &c. de quo D. avus præd. B. & proavus præd. D. cujus hæred. ipſi ſunt, fuit ſeiſitus, &c.

Aſiamenta, Includes any liberty of paſſage, open way, water-courſe, &c. for the eaſe and accommodation of tenants. Kitch.

Al, (ald) Words which begin with al or ald in the names of places, ſignify antiquity; as Alborough, Aldworth, &c.

Alanerarius, A manager and keeper of dogs, for the ſport of hawking, from alanus, a dog, known to the ancients. Du Freſne. But Mr. Blount renders it a faulconer. —Robertus de Chedworth vice-com. Linc. liberavit lvi s. viii d. Johanni de Bellovento, pro putura ſeptem leporariorum & trium falconum & alanerarii & pro vadiis unius bracenarii. 16 E. 1.

Alba, (the alb) A ſurplice or white ſacerdotal veſt, anciently uſed by officiating prieſts.

Alba firma, This word is uſed by my lord Coke, and ſeems to ſignify a tenure.—Duplex eſt tenura in com. Weſtmorland, ſcilicet, una per albam firmam, & alia per cornagium, &c. 2 Inſt. 10. When quit-rents, payable by freeholders of manors, were reſerved in ſilver, or white money, they were anciently called white rents, or blanch farms, reditus albi; in contradiſtinction to rents reſerved in work, grain, &c. which were called reditus nigri, or black maile. 2 Inſt. 19.

In Scotland this kind of ſmall payment is called blench-holding, or reditus albæ firmæ. Black. Com. 2 V. 42. n.

Albergellum, The ſame with halſberga: omnis homo, &c. habet albergellum & capellum ferreum, lanceam & gladium. It here ſignifies a defence for the neck. Hoveden 611.

Albinatus jus, Is the droit d'aubaine in France, whereby the king, at the death of an alien, is entitled to all he is worth, unleſs he has peculiar exemption. Black. Com. 1 V. 372. Albinatus is derived from alibi natus. Spelm. Gloſs. 24.

Album, Is a word made uſe of for white rent, paid in ſilver. Rot. Parl. 6 H. 3.

Alder, Signifies the firſt; as alder beſt, is the beſt of all; alder lieſeſt, the moſt dear.

Alderman, (Sax. ealderman, Lat. aldermannus) Hath the ſame ſignification in general as ſenator, or ſenior: but at this day, and long ſince, thoſe are called aldermen who are aſſociates to the civil magiſtrate of a city or town corporate. Stat. 24 H. 8. cap. 13. An alderman ought to be an inhabitant of the place, and reſident where he is choſen; and if he removes, he is incapable of doing his duty in the government of the city or place, for which he may be disfranchiz'd. Mod. Rep. 36. Alderman Langham was a freeman of the city of London, and choſen alderman of ſuch a ward, and being ſummoned to the court of aldermen he appeared, and the oath to ſerve the office was tendered to him, but he refuſed to take it, in contempt of the court, &c. whereupon he was committed to Newgate; and it was held good. March Rep. 179.

The aldermen of London, &c. are exempted from ſerving inferior offices; nor ſhall they be put upou aſſiſes, or ſerve on juries, ſo long as they continue to be aldermen. 2 Cro 585.

In Spelman's Gloſſary we find that we had anciently a title of aldermannus totius Angliæ; witneſs this inſcription on a tomb in Ramſey abbey—Hic requieſcit D. Ailwinus inclyti regis Eadgari cognatus, totius Angliæ aldermannus, & hujus ſacri cænobii miraculoſus fundator, And this officer was in nature of Lord Chief Juſtice of England. Spelm. Alderman was one of the degrees of nobility among the Saxons, and ſignified an earl; ſometimes applied to a place, it was taken for a general, with a civil juriſdiction as well as military power; which title afterwards was uſed for a judge, but it literally imports no more than elder.

There was likewiſe aldermannus hundredi: which dignity was firſt introduced in the reign of Hen. 1. Among his laws, cap. 8. we read, præſit autem ſingulis hominum novenis decimus, et toti ſimul hundredo unus de melioribus, et vocatur aldermannus, qui Dei leges et hominum jura vigilanti ſtudeat obſervantia promovere. Du Freſne. Cowel.

Alæ Eccleſiæ, The wings or ſide-iſles of the church, from the French Les ailes de l'Eſgliſe.—Ad baſes pilariorum murus erat tabulis marmoreis compoſitus, qui chorum cingens & preſbyterium, corpus eccleſiæ lateribus, quæ alæ vocantur, dividebat. Gervaſ. Dorobern' in deſcript. eccl. Cantuar.'

Alecenarium, A ſort of hawk called a lanner. See Putura.

Alehouſes, Are to be licenſed by juſtices of peace, who take recognizances of alehouſe-keepers not to ſuffer diſorders in their houſes, and they have power to put down alehouſes, &c. But the act is not to reſtrain ſelling of ale in fairs. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 25. Alehouſe-keepers are liable to a penalty of 20*s.* for keeping alehouſes without licence; not exceeding 40*s.* nor under 10*s.* for ſelling ale in ſhort meaſure; and 10*s.* for permitting tippling, &c. and perſons retailing ale or beer, alehouſe-keepers, &c. ſhall ſell their ale by a full ale quart or pint, according to the ſtandard in the Exchequer, marked from the ſaid ſtandard; and ſub-commiſſioners, or collectors of exciſe, are to provide ſubſtantial ale quarts and pints in every town in their diviſions; and mayors and chief officers to mark meaſures, or forfeit 5*l.* by ſtatute 1 Jac. 1. c. 9. 3 Car. 1. c. 3. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 15. See Inns, Brewers.

By the 17 Geo. 2. c. 17. ſect. 18. A penalty is inflicted on alehouſe-keepers having licence to retail ſpirituous liquors, exerciſing particular trades, during the continuance of ſuch licence. And by the 30 Geo. 2. c. 24. ſect. 14. A penalty likewiſe is inflicted on publicans permitting journeymen, &c. to game in their houſes.

By the 2 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſect. 11. Licences are to be granted at public meetings of the juſtices only.

By the ſtat. 26 Geo. 2. c. 31. Juſtices on granting licences are to take recogniſances in 10*l.* with ſureties in the like ſum for the maintaining good order. Licences to be granted to none, not licenſed the preceding year, unleſs they produce certificates of their good character. Licence only to extend to that place for which it was granted. Licences to be granted on the firſt of September, or within twenty days after, yearly, and to be for one year only; penalty of ſelling ale, &c. without a licence, firſt offence 40*s.* ſecond offence 4*l.* third offence 6*l.*

By the 6 Geo. 1. c. 21. ſect. 56. Ale-licences are to be duly ſtamped, before recognizances taken.

By 26 Geo. 2. c. 13. ſect. 12. Juſtices being brewers, malſters, diſtillers, or victuallers, are reſtrained from granting licences.

The ſtamp duty by ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 23. is one ſhilling, and by ſtat. 29 Geo. 2. ſect 1. every licence is charged with a further duty or ſtamp of 20*s.* And by laſt-mentioned act, ſect. 20. If any perſon ſhall write any licence without ſuch ſtamp, he ſhall forfeit 10*l.* with coſts, to be recovered as ſtamp penalties; and the licence ſhall not be available till the duty ſhall be paid, and alſo a penalty of 5*l.*

By the ſtatutes 16 Geo. 2. c. 8. ſect. 8. and 24 Geo. 2. c. 40. ſect. 9. No perſon ſhall retail any diſtilled ſpirituous liquors, without a licence from the officer of exciſe, taken out ten days before, for which he ſhall pay 40*s.* yearly. And by ſtatutes 16 Geo. 2. c. 8. ſect. 11. and 29 Geo. 2. c. 12 ſect. 22. Such perſons ſhall be firſt licenſed to ſell ale or ſpirituous liquors by two or more juſtices of the peace. And by the ſtatutes 9 Geo. 2. c. 23. ſect. 14. and 24 Geo. 2. c. 40. ſect. 28, 29. The juſtice's clerk ſhall have 2*s.* 6*d.* and no more for ſuch licence.

Aler ſan jour, (Fr.) To go without day, viz. to be finally diſmiſſed the court, becauſe there is no further day aſſigned for appearance. Kitch. 146.

Ale-Silver, A rent of tribute annually paid to the lord-mayor of London, by thoſe that ſell ale within the liberty of the city. Antiq. Purvey. 183.

Aleſtake, A may-pole called aleſtake, becauſe the country people drew much ale there: but it is not the common may-pole, but rather a long ſtake drove into the ground, with a ſign on it, that ale was to be ſold.

Ale-taſter, Is an officer appointed in every court leet, ſworn to look to the aſſize and goodneſs of ale and beer, &c. within the precincts of the lordſhip. Kitch. 46. In London there are ale-conners, who are officers appointed to taſte ale and beer, &c. in the limits of the city.

Alfet, (Sax. alfæth) A cauldron or furnace, wherein boiling water was put for a criminal to dip his arm in up to his elbow, and there hold it for ſome time. Du Cange.

Alias, A ſecond or further writ, iſſued from the courts at Weſtminſter, after a capias, &c. ſued out without effect.

Alias dictus, Is the manner of deſcription of a defendant, when ſued on any ſpecialty, as a bond, &c. where after his name, and common addition, then comes the alias dict. and deſcribes him again by the very name and addition, whereby he is bound in the writing. Dyer 50. Jenk. Cent. 119. 'Tis unneceſſary to ſet forth the alias dict. therefore better to omit it, as a variance may be fatal. See Miſnomer.

Alien, (alienus, alienigena) One born in a ſtrange country, out of the allegiance of the king: but a man born out of the land, ſo as it be within the limits of the king's obedience beyond ſea; or born of Engliſh parents out of the obedience of the king, if the parents at the time of the birth were of ſuch obedience, is no alien.

If an Engliſh merchant goes beyond ſea, and takes an alien wife, the iſſue ſhall inherit him; ſo it is if an Engliſh-woman goes beyond ſea and takes an alien huſband, the children there born ſhall inherit her; for though the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. c. 2. be in the conjunctive, yet it hath been conſtrued in the disjunctive to hinder this diſability; and the word and being taken inſtead of or, as ſometimes it is, it being unreaſonable that the child ſhould not inherit the parent that is of ability, for the defect of the other that is not. Cro. Car. 601, 602. Lit. Rep. 22, 24. S. C. 1 Sid. 198. S. C. cited. See Lit. Rep. 27. and Bro. tit. Denizen 6.

There are two incidents regularly that are neceſſary to make a ſubject born; firſt, that his parents, at the time of his birth, be under the actual obedience of the king; Secondly, that the place of his birth be within the king's dominions. 7 Rep. 18. Calvin's caſe And it is the place of the birth that makes the diſability of an alien to have lands, &c. The blood is not the diſability, but the place where born. Cro. Jac. 539. And if one born out of the king's obedience come and reſide in England, his children, begotten and born here, are not aliens but denizens. 7 Rep. 18. Calvin's caſe.

Children of an ambaſſador in a foreign country, by a wife being an Engliſh woman, by the common law, are natural-born ſubjects, and not aliens. 7 Rep. 11. And if an Engliſh merchant living beyond ſea marries a wife there, and hath a child by her, and dies, this child is born a denizen, and ſhall be heir to him, notwithſtanding the wife be an alien. Cro. Car. 605. March 91. Thoſe who are born in the Engliſh plantations, are ſubjects born. Danv. Abr. 324.

An alien cannot hold land by deſcent or purchaſe, or be tenant by the curteſy, or in dower. 5 Rep. 502. But all perſons, being the king's natural-born ſubjects, may inherit, as heirs to their anceſtors, though their anceſtors were aliens, by ſtatute 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 6. In caſe an alien purchaſe land, the king upon office found ſhall have it. Co. Lit. 2. So if an alien purchaſe any eſtate of freehold in houſes, lands, tenements or hereditaments, the king upon office found ſhall have them. If an alien be made denizen and purchaſe land, and die without iſſue, the lord of the fee ſhall have the eſcheat, and not the king. But as to a leaſe for years, there is a difference between a leaſe for years of a houſe for the habitation of a merchant ſtranger being an alien, whoſe king is in league with ours, and a leaſe for years of lands, meadows, paſtures, woods, and the like. For if he take a leaſe for years of lands, meadows, &c. upon office found the king ſhall have it. But of a houſe for habitation, he may take a leaſe for years as incident to commerce, for without an habitation he cannot merchandize or trade. But if he depart or relinquiſh the realm, the king ſhall have the leaſe. So it is if he die poſſeſſed thereof, neither his executors or adminiſtrators ſhall have it, but the king: for he had it only for habitation, as neceſſary to his trade or traffick, and not for the benefit of his executor or adminiſtrator. But if the alien be no merchant, then the king ſhall have the leaſe for years, tho' it were for his habitation, and ſo it is if he be an alien enemy. Co. Lit. 2 b. This doctrine is rather obſolete.

As an alien cannot inherit himſelf, ſo he cannot be inherited; the grandfather born in England, the ſon an alien, the grandſon born in England, the grandſon ſhall not inherit the grandfather, becauſe he muſt then repreſent the father, who cannot be repreſented; but if the father be an alien, and two brothers born in England, they may inherit each other, becauſe the deſcent is immediate, and they don't take by repreſentation of the father. 1 Sid. 193, 198. 1 Vent. 413 to 429. Hard. 224. Co. Lit. 8. Cont.

If the eldeſt ſon be an alien, the younger brother born in England ſhall inherit the father; otherwiſe it were if the eldeſt ſon were attainted, becauſe the eldeſt ſon and all his deſcendants are before the younger brother, and the younger cannot inherit before that line is extinct; and it is a foreign preſumption, to ſuppoſe that any of that line ſhould come over and have children in England; but the perſon attainted is ſuppoſed to have all his children reſiding in the kingdom under the king's allegiance; therefore there is a line continuing before that of the younger brother. 1 Vent. 417. Co. Lit. 8. a. 1 Sid. 195.

For the ſame reaſon, if an alien hath four ſons, the two eldeſt aliens, and the two younger naturalized, and one of the younger ſons purchaſe lands and dies, the eldeſt brother having iſſue born within the realm, the younger brother, and not the iſſue of the eldeſt, ſhall inherit. Hard. 224.

If an alien hath a ſon an alien, and afterwards is made a denizen, and hath a ſecond ſon, the ſecond ſon ſhall inherit though the eldeſt ſon be alive. Cro. Jac. 539. Vide Co. Lit. 8. a. &c. very full on this ſubject.

If an alien enemy comes here ſub ſalvo conductu, he may maintain an action. So if an alien amy come hither in time of peace per licentiam domini regis, as the French proteſtants did, and lives here ſub protectione, and a war afterwards happens between the two nations, he may maintain an action, for ſuing is but a conſequential right of protection; and therefore an alien enemy, that is here in peace under protection, may ſue a bond; aliter of one commorant in his own country. 1 Salk. 46.

Aliens may obtain goods and perſonal eſtate, by trade, &c. And may maintain actions for the ſame; they may alſo have actions of aſſault and battery, and for ſupport of their credit. 2 Bulſt. 134. But they cannot bring any real action, unleſs it be for an houſe for neceſſary habitation, being for the benefit of trade. 7 Rep. Calvin's Caſe. And an alien enemy cannot maintain any action whatſoever, nor get any thing lawfully within this realm. Terms de Ley 36.

An alien friend may be an adminiſtrator, and ſhall have adminiſtration of leaſes, as well as perſonal things, becauſe he hath them in another's right, and not to his own uſe. Cro. Car. 8. 1. Vent. 417. S. C. cited.

But it has been long doubted, whether an alien enemy ſhould maintain an action as executor; for on the one hand it is ſaid, that by the policy of the law, alien enemies ſhall not be admitted to actions to recover effects which may be carried out of the kingdom, to weaken ourſelves and enrich the enemy; and therefore publick utility muſt be preferred to private convenience; but on the other hand it is ſaid, that theſe effects of the teſtator are not forfeited to the king by way of repriſal, becauſe they belong not to the alien enemy, for he is to recover them for others; and if the law allows ſuch alien enemies to poſſeſs the effects as well as an alien friend, it muſt allow them power to recover, ſince in that there is no difference, and by conſequence he muſt not be diſabled to ſue for them; if it were otherwiſe it would be a prejudice to the king's ſubjects, who could not recover their debts from the alien executor, by his not being able to get in the aſſets of the teſtator. Cro. Eliz. 683. Molloy 870. Carter 49, 191. Skin. 370.

An alien enemy coming into this kingdom, and taken in war, ſhall ſuffer death by the martial law; and not be indicted at the Common law, for the indictment muſt conclude contra ligeantiam ſuam, &c. And ſuch was never in the protection of the king. Molloy de jur. Marit. 417. Aliens, living under the protection of the king, may have the benefit of a general pardon. Hob. 271. No alien ſhall be returned on any jury, nor be ſworn for trial of iſſues between ſubject and ſubject, &c. but where an alien is party in a cauſe depending, the inqueſt of jurors are to be half denizens, and half aliens: but in caſes of high treaſon, this is not allowed. 2 Inſt. 17. An alien ſhall not have any vote in choice of knights of the ſhire, or burgeſſes to parliament. Hob. 270. And perſons that are aliens, or born out of the realm, are incapable to be members of parliament, enjoy offices, &c. Stat. 12 W. 3. cap. 2.

Aliens are to take an oath to be true to the king, and obedient to his laws. Vide 14 H. 8. 21 H. 8. cap. 16. 32 H. 8. c. 16. No alien ſhall be a factor abroad, in the Engliſh plantations, under penalties. Stat. 12 Car. 2. cap. 18. See Artificers. See Stat. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 6. for enabling ſubjects to inherit, notwithſtanding their father and mother were aliens. And Stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 39. for obviating ſome doubts thereupon. The moſt uſeful and beſt pleading in actions brought by an alien, is both excluſive and incluſive, viz. extra ligeantiam domini regis, &c. et infra ligeantiam alterius regis. 7 Rep. 16. b. cites 9 E. 4. 7. et Lib. Intrat. fo. 244. But for the pleadings under this title ſee title Abatement.

Alienation, (from alienare to alien) A tranſferring the property of a thing to another: It chiefly relates to lands and tenements; as to alien land in fee, is to ſell the fee-ſimple thereof, &c. And to alien in mortmain, is to make over lands or tenements to a religious houſe or body politick; for which the king's licence is to be obtained. Stat. 15 R. 2. c. 5. Fines for alienations are taken away by ſtatute; except fines due by particular cuſtoms of manors. 12 Car. 2. c. 24. §. 1. Danv. Abr. 327. All perſons who have a right to lands may generally alien them to others: but ſome alienations are forbidden: as an alienation by a particular tenant, ſuch as tenant for life, &c. which incurs a forfeiture of the eſtate. Co. Lit. 118. For if leſſee for life, by livery aliene in fee, or make a leaſe for the life of another, or gift in tail, it is a forfeiture of his eſtate: ſo if tenant in dower, tenant for another's life, tenant for years, &c. do aliene for a greater eſtate than they lawfully may make. Co. Lit. 233, 251. Conditions in feoffments, &c. that the feoffee ſhall not aliene, are void. Co. Lit. 206. Hob. 261. And it is the ſame where a man poſſeſſed of a leaſe for years, or other thing, gives and ſells his whole property therein, upon ſuch condition: but one may grant an eſtate in fee, on condition that the grantee ſhall not aliene to a particular perſon, &c. And where a reverſion is in the donor of an eſtate, he may reſtrain an alienation by condition. Lit. 361. Wood's Inſt. 141. Eſtates in tail, for life, or years, where the whole intereſt is not parted with, may be made with condition not to aliene to others, for the preſervation of the lands granted in the hands of the firſt grantee.

Alimony, (alimonia) Signifies nouriſhment or maintenance: and in a legal ſenſe, it is taken for that allowance which a married woman ſues for and is entitled to, upon any occaſional ſeparation from her huſband. Terms de Ley 38. Where a woman is divorced a menſa & thoro, ſhe may ſue her huſband in her own name for alimony or maintenance out of the huſband's eſtate, during the ſeparation, either in the Chancery or Spiritual court; and it will be allowed, except it be in caſes of elopement and adultery. Co. Lit. 235. a. But the Spiritual court is the proper court to ſue in for alimony: and the not allowing a wife maintenance is not an offence within the ſtatute 1 Eliz. c. 1. but a neglect of the huſband's duty, and a breach of his vow. 12 Rep. 30. A man may be ſued in the Spiritual court for beating his wiſe, and he may be ordered to pay her ſo much per week alimony: but a prohibition hath been granted by B. R. in ſuch a caſe; and the wife may have ſureties of the peace for unreaſonable beating her. Trin. 11 Jac. 1. Moor 874.

Allaunds, ab alanis, Scythiæ gente, Hare-hounds.

Allay, (Fr. in Lat. allaya) A word uſed for the tempering and mixture of other metals with ſilver or gold. Stat. 9 H. 5. This allay is to augment the weight of the ſilver or gold, ſo as it may defray the charge of coinage, and to make it the more fuſile. A pound weight of ſtandard gold, by the preſent ſtandard in the mint, is twenty-two carats fine, and two carats allay: and a pound weight of right ſtandard ſilver conſiſts of eleven ounces two-penny weight of fine ſilver, and eighteen penny weight of allay. Lound's Eſſay upon Coins, pag. 19. & 9 H. 5. St. 1. c. 11. One penny weight of angel gold is worth four ſhillings and two-pence; of crown gold, three ſhillings and ten-pence: and one ounce of pure ſilver is worth five ſhillings and four-pence; and with allay, five ſhillings. Mod. Juſt. tit. Coin, pag. 120.

Allegiance, allegiantia, (formerly called ligeance, from the Latin alligare & ligare, i. e. ligamen fidei) Is the ſworn allegiance, or faith and obedience, which every ſubject owes to his prince. It is either perpetual, where one is a ſubject born; or where one hath the right of a ſubject by naturalization, &c. or it is temporary, by reaſon of reſidence in the king's dominions. To ſubjects born, it is an incident inſeparable; and as ſoon as born they owe by birth-right obedience to their ſovereign: and it cannot be confined to any kingdom, but follows the ſubject whereſoever he goeth. The ſubjects are hence called liege people, and are bound by this allegiance to go with the king in his wars, as well within as without the kingdom. Co. Lit. 2, 329. 2 Inſt. 741.

All perſons above the age of twelve years are to be required to take the oath of allegiance in courts-leet. And there are ſeveral ſtatutes requiring the oath of allegiance and ſupremacy, &c. to be taken under penalties: juſtices of peace may ſummon perſons above the age of eighteen years to take theſe oaths. 1 Eliz. c. 1. 1 W. & M. c. 1. & c. 8. 1 *Ann. Allegiare, To defend or juſtify by due courſe of law. —Si quis ſe velit allegiare ſecundum regis Weregildum hoc faciat. Leges Alured, cap. 4. Spelm.

Aller Good, The word aller is uſed to make what is added to ſignify ſuperlatively; as aller good is the greateſt good.

Alleviare, Signifies to levy or pay an accuſtomed fine. Some of our ancient hiſtorians mention ſuch fines paid by perſons to their lords for redemption of their daughters, or for a licence to marry them. Brady's Pref. to Eng. Hiſt. 64.

Allocation, (allocatio) In a legal ſenſe is an allowance made upon account in the Exchequer; or more properly a placing or adding to a thing.

Allocatione Facienda, A writ for allowing to an accountant ſuch ſums of money as he hath lawfully expended in his office; directed to the lord treaſurer, and barons of the Exchequer, upon application made. Reg. Orig. 206.

Allocato Comitatu, Is a new writ of exigent allowed, before any other county court holden, on the former not being fully ſerved, or complied with, &c. Fitz. Exig. 14.

Allodial. This is where an inheritance is held without any acknowledgment to any lord or ſuperior; and therefore is of another nature from that which is feodal. Allodial lands are free lands, which a man enjoys without paying any fine, rent, or ſervice to any other. See Alodium. And Black Com. 2 V. 47, 60, 105.

Alluminor, (from the Fr. allumer, to lighten) Is uſed for one who coloureth or painteth upon paper or parchment; and the reaſon is, becauſe he gives light and ornament by his colours to the letters or other figures. The word is uſed ſtat. 1 R. 3. c. 9.

Almanack, Is part of the law of England, of which the courts muſt take notice, in the returns of writs, &c. but the almanack to go by is that annex'd to the Book of Common Prayer. Mod. Caſ. 41, 81. See Year and Stat. 24 G. 2. c. 23. and 25 Geo. 2. c. 30. for correcting the calendar and regulating the commencement of the year.

The diverſity of fixed and moveable feaſts was condemned per tot. cur. for we know neither the one nor the other but by the almanacks, and we are to take notice of the courſe of the moon. 6 Mod. 150, 160. Paſch. 3 *Ann. Almaria, for armaria: The archives of a church, a library.——Omnia etiam eccleſiæ almaria confregit, chartas & privilegia quædam igne cremavit. Gervaſ. Dorob. in R. 2.

Almner, or Almoner, (eleemoſynarius) An officer of the king's houſe, whoſe buſineſs it is to diſtribute the king's alms every day. He ought to admoniſh the king to beſtow his alms, eſpecially upon ſaints days and holidays; and he is likewiſe to viſit the ſick, widows that are poor prisoners and other neceſſitous people, and to relieve them under their wants; for which purpoſe he hath the forfeitures of deodands, and the goods of felo's de ſe, allowed him by the king. Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 22. The lord almoner has the diſpoſition of the king's diſh of meat, after it comes from the table, which he may give to whom he pleaſes; and he diſtributes four-pence in money, a two-penny loaf of bread, and a gallon of beer; or inſtead thereof three-pence daily at the court gate to twenty-four poor perſons of the king's pariſh, to each of them that allowance. This officer is uſually ſome biſhop.

Almsfeoh, or almeſfeoh, Saxon for alms money: It has been taken for what we call Peter Pence, firſt given by Ina king of the Weſt Saxons, and anciently paid in England on the firſt of Auguſt. It was likewiſe called romeſeoh, romeſcot, and heorthpening. Selden's Hiſt. Tithes 217.

Alnage, (Fr. aulnage) Signifies a meaſure, particularly the meaſuring with an ell. Stat. 17 Ed. 4 cap. 5.

Alnager, or aulnager, (Fr. alner, Lat. ulniger) Is properly a meaſurer by the ell; and the word aulne in French ſignifieth an ell. An aulnager with us is a public ſworn officer of the king's, whoſe place it is to examine into the aſſiſe of cloths, made throughout the land, and to fix ſeals upon them; and another branch of his office is to collect a ſubſidy or aulnage duty granted to the king. He hath his power by Stat. 25 Ed. 3. Stat. 4. c. 1. and ſeveral other ancient ſtatutes; which appoint his fees, and inflict a puniſhment for putting his ſeal to deceitful cloth, &c. viz. a forfeiture of his office, and the value. 27 Ed. 3. Stat. 1. c. 4. 3 R. 2. c. 2. But there are now three officers belonging to the regulation of clothing, who bear the diſtinct names of ſearcher, meaſurer, and aulnager; all which were formerly compriſed in one perſon. 4 Inſt. 31. And becauſe the ſubjects of this kingdom ſhould not be abuſed, an office of ſearching is eſtabliſhed by act of parliament. See the Oct. Index to the Stats. tit. Drapery.

Aloberium, A purſe. This word is mentioned in Fleta, lib. 2. c. 82. par. 2.

Altarage, (altaragium) The offerings made upon the altar, and alſo the profit that ariſes to the prieſt by reaſon of the altar, obventio altaris. Mich. 21 Eliz. It was declared that by altarage is meant tithes of wool, lambs, colts, calves, pigs, chickens, butter, cheeſe, fruits, herbs, and other ſmall tithes with the offerings due: the caſe of the vicar of Weſt-Haddon in Northamptonſhire. But the word altarage at firſt is thought to ſignify no more than the caſual profits ariſing to the prieſt, from the peoples voluntary oblations at the altar; out of which a portion was aſſigned by the parſon to the vicar: ſince that, our parſons have generally contented themſelves with the greater profits of glebe, and tenths of corn and hay; and have left the ſmall tithes to the officiating prieſts: and hence it is that vicarages are endowed with them. Terms de ley 39. 2 Cro. 516.

It ſeems to be certain, that the religious, when they allotted the altarage in part or in whole to the vicar or chaplain, did mean only the cuſtomary and voluntary offerings at the altar, for ſome divine office or ſervice of the prieſt, and not any ſhare of the ſtanding tithes, whether predial or mixt. Kenn. Paroch. Antiq. Gloſſ.

In the caſe of Franklyn and the maſter and brethren of St. Croſs, T. 1721, it was decreed, that where altaragium is mentioned in old endowments, and ſupported by uſage, it will extend to ſmall tithes, but not otherwiſe. Bumb. 79.

Alteration, (alteratio) Is the changing of a thing: and when witneſſes are examined upon exhibits, &c. they ought to remain in the office, and not to be taken back into private hands, by whom they may be altered. Hob. 254.

Ambactus, A ſervant or client. Cowel.

Ambaſſador, (legatus) Is a ſervant of the ſtate, repreſenting the king in a foreign country, to take care of the public affairs. And ambaſſadors are either ordinary, or extraordinary; the ordinary ambaſſadors are thoſe who reſide in the place whither ſent; and the time of their return being indefinite, ſo is their buſineſs uncertain, ariſing from emergent occaſions; and commonly the protection and affairs of the merchants is their greateſt care: the extraordinary ambaſſadors are made pro tempore, and employed upon ſome particular great affairs, as condolements, congratulations, or for overtures of marriage, &c. Their equipage is generally very magnificent; and they may return without requeſting of leave, unleſs there be a reſtraining clauſe in their commiſſion. Molloy 144.

An agent repreſents the affairs only of his maſter; but an ambaſſador ought to repreſent the greatneſs of his maſter, and his affairs. Ibid. By the laws of nations, none under the quality of a ſovereign prince can ſend any ambaſſador: a king that is deprived of his kingdom and royalty, hath loſt his right of legation. No ſubject, though ever ſo great, can ſend or receive an ambaſſador; and if a vice-roy does it, he will be guilty of high treaſon: the electors and princes of Germany have the privilege of ſending and reception of ambaſſadors; but it is limited only to matters touching their own territories, and not of the ſtate of the empire. It is ſaid there can be no ambaſſador without letters of credence from his ſovereign, to another that hath ſovereign authority: and if a perſon be ſent from a king or abſolute potentate, though in his letters of credence he is termed an agent, yet he is an ambaſſador, he being for the public. 4 Inſt. 153.

Ambaſſadors may, by a precaution, be warned not to come to the place where ſent; and if they then do it, they ſhall be taken for enemies; but being once admitted, even with enemies in arms, they ſhall have the protection of the laws of nations, and be preſerved as princes. Moll. 146. If a baniſhed man be ſent as an ambaſſador to the place from whence he is baniſhed, he may not be detained or moleſted there. 4 Inſt. 153. The killing of an ambaſſador has been adjudged high treaſon. 3 Inſt. 8. Some ambaſſadors are allowed, by conceſſion, to have juriſdiction over their own families; and their houſes permitted to be ſanctuaries: but where perſons who have greatly offended fly to their houſes, after demand and refuſal to deliver them up, they may be taken from thence. Ambaſſadors cannot be defended when they commit any thing againſt the ſtate, or the perſon of the king with whom they reſide. 4 Inſt. 152. An ambaſſador, guilty of treaſon againſt the king's life, may be condemned and executed; but for other treaſons, he ſhall be ſent home, with demand to puniſh him, or to ſend him back to be puniſhed. 4 Inſt. 152. 1 Roll. Rep. 185.

If a foreign ambaſſador commits any crime here, which is contra jus gentium, as treaſon, felony, &c. or any other crime againſt the law of nations, he loſeth the privilege of an ambaſſador, and is ſubject to puniſhment as a private alien; and he need not be remanded to his ſovereign, but of curteſy. Danv. Abr. 327. But if a thing be only malum prohibitum by an act of parliament, private law, or cuſtom of the realm, and it is not contra jus gentium, an ambaſſador ſhall not be bound by them. 4 Inſt. 153. And it is ſaid ambaſſadors may be excuſed of practices againſt the ſtate where they reſide, (except it be in point of conſpiracy, which is againſt the law of nations) becauſe it doth not appear whether they have it in mandatis; and then they are excuſed by neceſſity of obedience. Bac. Max. 26.

By the civil law, the perſon of an ambaſſador may not be arreſted; and the moveable goods of ambaſſadors, which are accounted an acceſſion to their perſons, cannot be ſeiſed on, as a pledge, nor for payment of debts, tho' by leave of the king or ſtate where they are reſident; but on refuſal of payment, letters of requeſt are to go to his maſter, &c. Molloy 157. Danv. 328.

By our ſtatute law, an ambaſſador, or public miniſter, or his domeſtic ſervants, regiſtred in the ſecretary's office, and thence tranſmitted to the ſheriff's office of London and Middleſex, are not to be arreſted; if they are, the proceſs ſhall be void, and the perſons ſuing out and executing it ſhall ſuffer ſuch penalties and corporal puniſhments as the lord chancellor or either of the chief juſtices ſhall think fit. Stat. 7 Ann. cap. 12. Alſo the goods of an ambaſſador, or of his ſervants, ſhall not be diſtrained. Stat. Ibid.

4 Geo. 2. Widmore v. Alvarez: In the caſe of the French ambaſſador, it was ruled, that the perſon need not lie in the houſe, but he muſt do ſome actual ſervice there.

Upon a motion to ſuperſede a proceſs againſt the defendant, upon the ſtatute 7 Ann. c. 12. as being in the ſervice of a foreign ambaſſador; the court held, that to be a privileged ſervant within the act, it is not required that the party actually live in the ambaſſador's houſe; yet it is not enough that the party be regiſtred in the ſecretary's office as a ſervant; but when he comes for the benefit of the act, he muſt ſhew the nature of his ſervice, that the court may judge, whether he be a domeſtic ſervant within the meaning of the act of parliament. In this caſe, it was objected againſt the defendant, that he was a trader, and ſo expreſly excluded from privilege by the ſtatute: to which Mr. Solicitor General, who was counſel for the defendant, anſwered, that by traders within this act, muſt be underſtood ſuch as may have the benefit of the ſtatutes concerning bankrupts, which infants are not intitled to, as it was determined in one Whitlock's caſe; and that the defendant could prove he had exerciſed no trade ſince his full age. Fitzgib. Rep. 200.

Ambidexter, (Lat.) One that can uſe his left hand as well as his right; or that plays on both ſides. Ambra, (Sax. amber, Lat. amphora) A veſſel among the Saxons: it contained a meaſure of ſalt, butter, meal, beer, &c. Leg. Inæ Weſt Sax.

Ambry, The place where the arms, plate, veſſels, and every thing which belong'd to houſekeeping were kept; and probably the ambry at Weſtminſter is ſo called, becauſe formerly ſet apart for that uſe: or rather the aumonery, from the Latin eleemoſynaria, an houſe adjoining to an abbey, in which the charities were laid up for the poor.

Amenable, (Fr. amener) To bring or lead unto: or amainable (from the Fr. Main, a hand) ſignifies tractable, that may be led or governed: and in our books it is commonly applied to a woman, that is governable by her huſband. Cow. Interp. It alſo, in the modern ſenſe, ſignifies to be reſponſible, or ſubject to anſwer, &c. in a court of juſtice.

Amendment, (emendatio) The correction of an error committed in any proceſs, which may be amended after judgment; and if there be any error in giving the judgment, the party is driven to his writ of error; though where the fault appears to be in the clerk who writ the record, it may be amended. Terms de Ley 39.

At common law there was little room for amendments, which appears by the ſeveral ſtatutes of amendments and jeofails, and likewiſe by the conſtitution of the courts; for, ſays Britton, the judges are to record the parols [or pleas] deduced before them in judgment; alſo, ſays he, Ed. 1. granted to the juſtices to record the pleas pleaded before them, but they are not to eraſe their records, nor amend them nor record againſt their inrolment, nor any way ſuffer their records to be a warrant to juſtify their own miſdoings, nor eraſe their words, nor amend them, nor record againſt their inrolment. This ordinance of Ed. 1. was ſo rigidly obſerved, that when juſtice Ingham, in his reign, moved with compaſſion for the circumſtances of a poor man who was fined 13 s. 4 d. erazed the record, and made it 6 s. 8 d. he was fined 800 marks, with which, 'tis ſaid, a clock-houſe at Weſtminſter was built, and furniſhed with a clock; but as to the clock, it has been denied by authors of credit. Notwithſtanding what is mentioned above, there were ſome caſes that were amendable at Common law.

Original writs are not amendable at Common law, for if the writ be not good, the party may have another: judicial writs may and have been often amended. 8 Rep. 157.

Whatever at Common law might be amended in civil caſes, was at Common law amendable in criminal caſes, and ſo it is at this day; reſolved by Holt Ch. J. Powell and Powis J. 1 Salk. 51. pl. 14.

Tho' miſawarding of proceſs on the roll might be amended at Common law the ſame term, becauſe it was the act of the court; yet if any clerk at Common law iſſued out an erroneous proceſs on a right award of the court, that was never amended in any caſe at the Common law. 1 Salk. 51. pl. 14.

Statutes of amendment extend only to pleadings of record, therefore pleadings, while in paper, are amendable by the Common law. Anciently all pleas were ore tenus at the bar; and then, if any error was ſpied in them it was preſently amended. Since that cuſtom is changed, the motion to amend, becauſe all in paper, ſucceeded in the room of it; and it is a motion that the court cannot refuſe: but they may refuſe it if the party deſiring it refuſe to pay coſts, or the amendment deſired ſhould amount to a new plea. 10 Mod. 88.

But the law reſpecting amendments has been much extended by the following ſtatutes: By

Stat. 14 Ed. 3. c. 6. It is aſſented, that by the miſpriſion of a clerk in any place wheresoever it be, no proceſs ſhall be annulled or diſcontinued, by miſtaking in writing one ſyllable or one letter too much or too little; but as ſoon as the thing is perceived, by challenge of the party, or in other manner, it ſhall be haſtily amended in due form, without giving advantage to the party that challengeth the ſame, becauſe of ſuch miſpriſion.

By this ſtatute the juſtices had liberty, on challenge of the party, to amend the proceſs where the clerk had miſtaken one ſyllable or letter, and the judges afterwards conſtrued the ſtatute ſo favourably, that they extended it to a word; but they were not ſo well agreed, whether they could make theſe amendments, as well after as before judgment; for they thought their authority was determined by the judgment; and therefore to put an end to the diverſity of opinions by the following ſtatute, viz. 9 H. 5. c. 4. It is declared that the judges ſhall have the ſame power, as well after as before judgment, as long as the record in proceſs is before them. Gilb. H. C. B. 110.

This ſtatute is confirmed by ſtatute 4 Hen. 6. c. 3. with an exception, that it ſhall not extend to proceſs on outlawry, or to records or proceſſes in Wales. But according to 2 Sand. 40. this laſt exception, and the like exception in 8 Hen. 6. c. 15. ſeem to be annulled by the ſtatute 27 Hen. 8. c. 26. by which it is enacted, that the laws of England ſhall be uſed, practiſed and executed in Wales.

Though the foregoing ſtatutes gave the judges a greater power than they had before, yet it was found that they were too much cramped, having authority to amend nothing but proceſs, which they did not conſtrue in a large ſignification, ſo as to comprehend the whole proceedings in real and perſonal actions, and criminal and common pleas, but confined it to the meſne proceſs and jury proceſs. 8 Co. 157. a. And therefore, to enlarge the authority of the courts, the ſtatute 8 Hen. 6. c. 12. gives power to amend what they ſhall think in their diſcretion to be the miſpriſion of their clerks in any record, proceſs, and plea, warrant of attorney, writ, panel, or return. Gilb. H. C. P. 110.

There are only two ſtatutes of amendments, viz. the 14 Ed. 3. Stat. 1. c. 6. and 8 H. 6. c. 12. & 15. the reſt are reckoned to be ſtatutes of jeofails, and not of amendments; per Powell J. 1 Salk. 51. pl. 14. Mich. 3 Ann. B. R. in caſe of The Queen v. Tutchin.—And ibid. he held that the 8 H. 6. was only to inlarge the ſubject-matter of 14 Ed. 3. and that 14 E. 3. extends only to proceſs out of the roll, viz. writs that iſſue out of the record, and not to proceedings in the roll itſelf; but that the 14 E. 3. extends not to the king, becauſe of theſe words (challenge of the party) and that the ſtatute 8 H. 6. has always been conſtrued in imitation of the act of Ed. 3. and the exception in the ſtatute of H. 6. was only ex abundanti cautela; and all judges and ſages of the law in all ages have taken it not to extend to the crown; and the caſes on the other ſide are not to be relied upon.

Farther by Stat. 8 Hen. 6. c. 15. "The king's juſtices, before whom any miſpriſion ſhall be found, be it in any records and proceſſes depending before them, as well by way of error as otherwiſe, or in the returns of the ſame, by ſheriffs, coroners, bailiffs of franchiſes, or any other, by miſpriſion of the clerks of any of the ſaid courts, or of the ſheriffs, coroners, their clerks, or other officers clerks, or other miniſters whatſoever, in writing one letter or one ſyllable too much or too little, ſhall have power to amend the ſame.

As theſe ſtatutes only extended to what the juſtices ſhould interpret the miſpriſion of their clerks, and other officers, it was found by experience, that many juſt cauſes were overthrown for want of form, and other failings, not aided by this ſtatute, though they were good in ſubſtance; and therefore the ſtatutes of jeofail were made. Gilb. H. C. B. 111. See Jeofail.

By the foregoing ſtatutes the faults and miſtakes of clerks are in many caſes amendable: the miſpriſion of a clerk in matter of fact is amendable; though not in matter of law. Palm. 258. If there be a miſtake in the legal form of the writ, it is not amendable: there is a diverſity between the negligence and ignorance of the clerk that makes out writs; for his negligence (as if he have the copy of a bond, and do not purſue it) this ſhall be amended; but his ignorance in the legal courſe of original writs is not amendable. 8 Rep. 159. A party's name was miſtaken in an original writ; and it appearing to the court that the curſitor's inſtructions were right, the writ was amended in court; and they amended all the proceedings after. 2 Vent. 152. Cro. Car. 74. If a thing which the plaintiff ought to have entered himſelf, being a matter of ſubſtance, be totally omitted, this ſhall not be amended; but otherwiſe it is if omitted only in part and miſentered. Danv. Abr. 346. By the Common law a writ of error, returned and filed, could not be amended; becauſe it would alter the record: but now by Stat. 5 Geo. 1. cap. 13. Writs of error, wherein there ſhall be any variance from the original record, or other defect, may be amended by the court where returnable.

When the award of a writ of inquiry on the roll is good, the writ ſhall be amended by the roll. Carth. 70. The court cannot amend to make a new writ; or to alter a good writ, and adapt it to another purpoſe, &c. only when the writ is bad and vicious on the face of it. Mod. Caſ. 263, 310.

With reſpect to declarations, a declaration grounded on an original writ may not be amended, if the writ be erroneous: though if it be on a bill of Middleſex or a latitat, it is amendable. 1 Lill. Abr. 67. Declarations upon any penal ſtatutes, qui tam, &c. may not be amended after iſſue joined. 2 Mod. 144. (but vide Poſt.) And indictments of treaſon, and felony, writs of appeal, &c. are excepted out of the ſtatutes of amendments; though ſome things in them are amendable at Common law. Mod. Caſ. 269.

A plaintiff may amend his declaration in matter of form after a general iſſue pleaded, before entry thereof, without payment of coſts: if he amend in ſubſtance, he is to pay coſts, or give imparlance; and if he amend after a ſpecial plea, though he would give imparlance, he muſt pay coſts. 1 Lill. 58. A declaration in ejectment, laid the demiſe before the time; this was not amendable, for it would alter the iſſue, and make a new title in the plaintiff, 1 Salk. 48. The plaintiff declared on the ſtatute of Winton for a robbery done to himſelf, when it ſhould have been of his ſervants; he had leave to amend. 3 Lev. 347. If a defendant pleads a plea to the right, or in abatement, the plaintiff may amend his declaration; but not where he demurs, for this fault may be the cauſe of the demurrer. 1 Salk. 50. A demurrer may be amended, after the parties have joined in demurrer, if it be only in paper. Style 48. Where a plea ſhall be amended, when in paper, or on record, &c. ſee the ſtatute 4 Geo. 2. c. 26.

As to the amendments of records, &c. an iſſue entered upon record, with leave of the court may be amended; but not in a material thing, or in that which will deface the record. 1 Lill. Abr. 61. A record may be amended by the court in a ſmall matter, after iſſue joined, ſo as the plea be not altered. Danv. Abr. 338. If on a writ of error a record is amended in another court in affirmance of the judgment, it muſt be amended in the court where judgment was given. Hardr. 505. Where the record of niſi prius does not agree with the original record, it may be amended after verdict, provided it do not change the iſſue: but a record ſhall not be amended to attaint the jury, or prejudice the authority of the judge. A general or ſpecial verdict may be amended by the notes of the clerk of aſſiſe in civil cauſes; but not in criminal actions. 1 Salk. 47. The iſſue roll ſhall be amended by the imparlance roll, which is precedent: but a roll may not be amended after verdict, when there is nothing to amend it by; tho' ſurpluſage may be rejected, and ſo make it good. Cro. Car. 92. 1 Sid. 135.

In an action on the ſtatute of uſury, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, and taken on one of the counts, in the declaration.—The other counts being found for defendant.—Motion in arreſt of judgment.—The principal cauſe was, the chriſtian name of one of the perſons mentioned in that count (rightly named, in that count, before) was miſtaken, in the iſſue roll, which had been carried in, whereby the count was rendered abſurd, and bad. The court gave leave to file a right bill, (the proceedings being by bill,) and afterwards amended the iſſue roll, by the bill.—The niſi prius roll was right.—*Gardner qui tam v. Brown B. R. At Common law, the judges may amend their judgments of the ſame term; and by ſtatute of another term. 8 Rep. 156. 14 E. 3. If judgments are not well entered, on payment of coſts they will be ordered to be ſo: when judgments are entered, 'tis ſaid the defects therein being the act of the court, and not the miſpriſion of the clerk, are not amendable. Golſb. 104. Miſtakes in returns of writs, fines and recoveries, made by mutual aſſent of parties may be amended. 5 Rep. 45. Judgment ſhall not be ſtaid after verdict, for that an original wants form, or varies from the record in point of form, which are amendable. 5 Rep. 45. Amerciament, amerciamentum, (from the Fr. merci) ſignifies the pecuniary puniſhment of an offender againſt the king or other lord in his court, that is found to be in miſericordia, i. e. to have offended, and to ſtand at the mercy of the king or lord. The author of Terms de Ley ſaith, that amerciament is properly a penalty aſſeſſed by the peers or equals of the party amerced, for the offence done; for which he putteth himſelf at the mercy of the lord. Terms de Ley 40. And by the ſtatute of Magna Charta, a freeman is not to be amerced for a ſmall fault, but proportionable to the offence, and that by his peers. 9 H. 3. c. 4. Amerciaments are a more merciful penalty than a fine; for which, if they are too grievous, a releaſe may be ſued by an ancient writ called moderata miſericordia. The difference between amerciaments and fines, is this; fines are ſaid to be puniſhments certain, and grow expreſly from ſome ſtatute; but amerciaments are ſuch as are arbitrarily impoſed. Kitch. 78. Alſo fines are impoſed and aſſeſſed by the court: amerciaments by the country: and no court can impoſe a fine, but a court of record: other courts can only amerce. 8 Rep. 39, 41.

A court-leet can amerce for public nuſances only. 1 Saund. 135. For a fine and all amerciaments in a court-leet, a diſtreſs is incident of common right: but for amerciament in a court baron, diſtreſs may not be taken but by preſcription. 11 Rep. 45. When an amerciament is agreed on, the lord may have an action of debt, or diſtrain for it, and impound the diſtreſs, or ſell it at his pleaſure: but he cannot impriſon for it. 8 Rep. 41, 45. Vide the caſe of the Duke of Bedford v. Alcock, B. R. Wilſ. Rep. part 1. 248. In courts baron the amerciaments ought to be affeered; but 'tis otherwiſe of fines impoſed by a court of record. 2 Inſt. 27. An amerciament of a freeholder muſt be affeered by freeholders of the manor, or debt will not lie for it. Baldwin v. Tudge, Wilſ. Rep. 2—20. In the court baron, tenants not doing ſuit of court, perſons making any incroachments, not performing what is ordered, or for other miſdemeanors there puniſhable, are to be amerced: theſe amerciaments are made upon preſentment of the jury; and if they are grounded upon a void preſentment, the amerciaments are alſo void. 1 Lill. Abr. 72.

There is alſo amercement in pleas in the courts of record, when a defendant delays to tender the thing demanded by the king's writs, on the firſt day. Co. Lit. 116. And in all perſonal actions without force, as in debt, detinue, &c. if the plaintiff be nonſuited, barred, or his writ abate for matter of form, he ſhall be amerced: but if on judicial proceſs, founded on a judgment and record, the plaintiff be nonſuited, barred, &c. he ſhall not be amerced. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 206. And an Infant, if nonſuited, is not to be amerced: 'tis otherwiſe when at age. Jenk. Cent. 258. The capias pro fine is taken away, by 5 W & M. c. 12.

Sheriffs are to be amerced for the faults of their officers; and clerks of the peace are amerceable in B. R. for groſs faults in indictments removed thither. Hill. 21 Car. The amerciament of the ſheriff, or other officer of the king, is called amerciament royal. Terms de Ley. A town ſhall be amerced for the eſcape of a murderer, in the day-time: and if the town be walled, 'tis ſaid, it ſhall be ſubject to amercement, whether by day or night. 3 Inſt. 53. Amerciaments are likewiſe in ſeveral other caſes. See Blackſt. Com. 3 V. 159.

Amicia, (the ſame with almutium) A cap made with goats or lambs ſkins: that part whereof which covered the head was ſquare, and one part of it hung behind, and covered the neck. Monaſticon, 3 tom. p. 36.

Amictus, Was the uppermoſt of the ſix garments worn by prieſts, tied ronnd the neck, and it covered the breaſt and heart.—Ne inde ad linguam tranſeat mendacium, ne vanitates cogitet.—Amictus, alba, cingulem, ſtola, manipulus & planeta.—Theſe were the ſix garments of prieſts.

Amicus Curiæ, If a judge is doubtful or miſtaken in matter of law, a ſtander-by may inform the court, as amicus curiæ. 2 Co. Inſt. 178. In ſome caſes, a thing is to be made appear by ſuggeſtion on the roll by motion; ſometimes by pleading, and ſometimes as amicus curiæ. 2 Keb. 548. Any one as amicus curiæ may move to quaſh a vicious indictment; for if there were a trial and verdict, judgment muſt be arreſted. Comberb. 13. A counſel urged, that he might, as amicus curiæ, inform the court of an error in proceedings, to prevent giving falſe judgment; but it was denied, unleſs the party was preſent. 2 Show. Rep. 297.

Amittere Legem Terræ, To loſe and be deprived of the liberty of ſwearing in any court: as to become infamous, renders a perſon incapable of being an evidence. Vide Glanvil, lib. 2. And ſee the ſtatute 5 Eliz. cap. 9. againſt perjury. So a man that is outlawed, &c. is ſaid to loſe his law, i. e. is put out of the protection of the law, as leaſt ſo far as relates to the ſuing in any of his majeſty's courts of juſtice, tho' he may be ſued.

Ammobragium, A ſervice.—Terræ in com. Flint. tenentur de domino rege per certa ſervitia, & per ammobragium quod ad quinque ſolidos extenditur cum accederit. Pat. 7 Ed. 2.

Amneſty, (amneſtia, oblivio) An act of pardon or oblivion, ſuch as was granted at the reſtoration by king Charles II.

Amnicum Inſulæ, Iſles upon the weſt coaſt of Britain. Blount.

Amortization, (amortizatio, Fr. amortiſſement) Is an alienation of lands or tenements in mortmain, viz. to any corporation or fraternity, and their ſucceſſors, &c. And the right of amortization is a privilege or licence of taking in mortmain. Jus amortizationis eſt privilegium ſeu licentia capiendi in manum mortuam. In the ſtatute de libertatibus perquirendis anno 27 Ed. 1. Stat. 2. the word amortiſentent is uſed.

Amortize, (Fr. amortir) Is to alien lands in mortmain. See Mortmain, and the Stat. 7 Ed. 1. Stat. 2. of amortizing lands.

Ampliation, (ampliatio) An enlargement, but in ſenſe of law it is a referring of judgment, till the cauſe is further examined.

Amy, (amicus) In law prochein amy is the next friend to be truſted for an infant. And infants are to ſue by prochein amy (i. e. next friend) or guardian, and defend by guardian. Alien amy is a foreigner here ſubject to ſome prince in friendſhip with us.

An, Jour & Waſte, (Fr.) Year, day and waſte; a forfeiture of lands to the king by tenants committing felony, and afterwards the land falls to the lord.

Anceſtor, (anteceſſor) Signifies as much as predeceſſor, or one that has gone before in a family: but the law makes a difference between what we commonly call an anceſtor and a predeceſſor; the one being applied to a natural perſon and his anceſtors, and the other to a body politic and their predeceſſors. Co. Lit. 78. b. A prepoſſeſſor of an eſtate hath been called anceſtor.

Anceſtrel, What relates to or hath been done by one's anceſtors; as homage, anceſtrel, &c.

Anchor, Is a meaſure of brandy, &c. containing ten gallons. Lex Mercat'.

Anchorage, (ancoragium) A duty taken of ſhips for the uſe of the haven where they caſt anchor. MS. Arth. Trevor, Ar. The ground in ports and havens belonging to the king, no perſon can let any anchor fall thereon, without paying therefore to the king's officers.

Ancients, Gentlemen of the inns of court. In Gray's inn the ſociety conſiſts of benchers, ancients, barriſters, and ſtudents under the bar; and here the ancients are of the oldeſt barriſters. In the Middle Temple, ſuch as have gone through, or are paſt their readings, are termed ancients; the inns of Chancery conſiſt of ancients and ſtudents or clerks; and from the antients one is yearly choſen the principal or treaſurer.

Ancient Demeſne, or demain (vetus patrimonium domini). Is a tenure whereby all the manors belonging to the crown in the days of St. Edward, and William, called the Conqueror, were held. The number and names of all manors, after a ſurvey made of them, were written in the book of Domeſday; and thoſe which by that book appear to have at that time belonged to the crown, and are contained under the title terra regis, are called ancient demeſne. Kitch. 98. The lands which were in the poſſeſſion of Edward the confeſſor, and were given away by him, are not at this day ancient demeſne, nor any others, except thoſe writ down in the book of Domeſday; and therefore, whether ſuch lands are ancient demeſne or not, is to be tried only by that book. 1 Salk. 57. 4 Inſt. 269. Hob, 188. 1 Brownl. 43.

But if the the queſtion is, whether lands be parcel of a manor which is ancient demeſne, this ſhall be tried by a jury. Salk. 56, 774. Vide Com. Dig. 1 V. tit. Abatement.

Where ancient demeſne is pleaded as to ſuch a manor, and iſſue is taken whether 'tis ſo or not, this ſhall be tried by the book of Domeſday; but if iſſue be taken, that certain acres are parcel of the manor of H. which is ancient demeſne, that ſhall be tried by a jury; for parcel or not parcel is matter of fact, which cannot be tried by that book. 9 Rep. caſe of the abbot of Strata Marcella.

Fitzherbert tells us, that tenants in ancient demeſne had their tenures from ploughing the king's lands, and other works towards the maintenance of the king's freehold, on which account they had liberties granted them. F. N. B. 14, 228. And there were two ſorts of theſe tenures and tenants; one that held their lands freely by charter; the other by copy of court-roll, according to the cuſtom of the manor. Brit. c. 66. The tenants holding by charter cannot be impleaded out of their manor; for if they are, they may abate the writ by pleading their tenure: they are free from toll, for all things bought and ſold concerning their ſubſtance and huſbandry. And they may not be impanelled upon any inqueſt. F. N. B. 14 If tenants in ancient demeſne are returned on juries, they may have a writ de non ponendis in aſſiſis, &c. and attachment againſt the ſheriff. 1 Rep. 105. And if they are diſturbed by taking duties of toll, &c. they may have writs of monſtraverunt, to be diſcharged. Theſe tenants are free as to their perſons; and their privileges are ſuppoſed to commence by act of parliament; for they cannot be created by grant at this day. 1 Salk. 57.

Lands in ancient demeſne are extendible upon a ſtatute merchant, ſtaple, or elegit. 4 Inſt. 270. No lands ought to be accounted ancient demeſne but ſuch as are held in ſocage; and whether it be ancient demeſne or not, ſhall be tried by the book of Domeſday. A leſſee for years cannot plead in ancient demeſne: nor can a lord in action againſt him plead ancient demeſne, for the land is frank-fee in his hands, Danv. Abr. 660.

In real actions, ejectment, replevin, &c. ancient demeſne is a good plea; but not in actions merely perſonal. Danv. 658. If in ancient demeſne a writ of right cloſe be brought, and proſecuted in nature of a formedon; a fine, levied there by the cuſtom, is a bar: and if this judgment be reverſed in C. B. that court ſhall only adjudge, that the plaintiff be reſtored to his action in the court of ancient demeſne; unleſs there is ſome other cauſe, which takes away its juriſdiction. Jenk. Cent. 87. Dyer 373. A fine in the king's courts will change ancient demeſne to frank-fee at Common law; ſo if the lord enfeoffs another of the tenancy; or if the land comes to the king, &c. 4 Inſt. 270. See Fine.

But if the lord be not a party, he may have a writ of diſceit, and avoid the fine or recovery; for lands in ancient demeſne were not originally within the juriſdiction of the courts of Weſtminſter; but the tenants thereof enjoy this amongſt other privileges, not to be called from the buſineſs of the plough by any foreign litigation. 7 Hen. 4, 44. 1 Rol. Abr. 327.

If the lord be party, then the lands become frank-fee, and are within the juriſdiction of the courts of Weſtminſter, for the privilege of ancient demeſne being eſtabliſhed for the benefit of lord and tenant, they may deſtroy it at pleaſure. 2 Rol. Abr. 324. 1 Salk. 57.

With reſpect to pleading, it is to be obſerved, that in all actions wherein, if the demandant recovers, the lands would be frank-fee, ancient demeſne is a good plea. 1 Rol. Abr. 322.

Therefore in all actions real, or where the realty may come in queſtion, ancient demeſne is a good plea; as aſſiſe, writ of ward of land, writ of account againſt a bailiff of a manor, writ of account againſt a guardian, &c. See 4 Inſt. 270. 1 Rol. Abr. 322, 323.

In replevin ancient demeſne is a good plea, becauſe by intendment the freehold will come in queſtion. Godb. 64. 1 Bulſt. 108.

In an ejectione firmæ ancient demeſne is a good plea; for by common intendment the right and title of the land will come in queſtion; and if in this action it ſhould not be a good plea, the ancient privileges of thoſe tenants would be loſt, inaſmuch as moſt titles at this day are tried by ejectment. Hob. 47. 1 Bulſt. 108. Hetl. 177. Cro. Eliz. 826.

But in all actions merely perſonal, as debt upon a leaſe, treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, &c. ancient demeſne is no plea. Hob. 47. 5 Co. 105. Vide Com. D. 1 V. tit. Abatement.

Ancienty, (Fr. ancienete, Lat. antiquitas) Elderſhip or ſeniority. This word is uſed in the ſtat. of Ireland, 14 Hen. 3.

Andena, A ſwath in mowing: it likewiſe ſignifies as much ground as a man can ſtride over at once.

Anelacius, A ſhort knife or dagger.—Loricâ erat indutus, geſtans anelacium ad lumbare. Mat. Paris 277.

Anfeldtyhde, or anfealtihle, A ſimple accuſation; for the Saxons had two ſorts of accuſation, viz, ſimplex and triplex: that was called ſingle, when the oath of the criminal and two more was ſufficient to diſcharge him; but his own oath, and the oaths of five more were required to free him a triplici accuſatione. Somner. In the laws of Adelſtan we read—Et ſi anfeldtyhde ſit, immergatur manus poſt lapidem, vel examen uſque ad Wriſte. Leg. Adelſtani, cap. 19. apud Brompton.

Angaria, (from the Fr. angarie, i. e. perſonal ſervice) Is a troubleſome vexatious duty or ſervice which tenants were obliged to pay their lords; and they performed it in their own perſons.—Terram liberam ab omnibus angariis & exactionibus, &c. MS. Eliam Aſhmole, arm.—Præſtationes angariarum & perangariarum, plauſtrorum & navium. Impreſſing of ſhips. Blount.

Angelica Veſtis, A monkiſh garment which laymen put on a little before their deaths, that they might have the benefit of the prayers of the monks. It was from them called angelicus, becauſe they were called angeli, who by their prayers animæ ſaluti ſuccurrebant. And the word ſuccurrendum, in our old books, is underſtood of one who had put on the habit, and was near death: ſi quis ad ſuccurrendum metu mortis ſe loco prænominato dederit, illic recipietur, Monaſticon, 1 tom. p. 632.

Angel, Signifies, in the computation of money, ten ſhillings of Engliſh coin.

Angild, (angildum) The bare ſingle valuation or compenſation of a criminal; from the Sax. an one, and gild, payment, mulct, or fine. Una ſolutio, ſi villanus furatus fuerit, &c. Et habeas plegium, admoneas eum de angildo. Twigild was the double mulct or fine; and trigild the treble, according to the rated ability of the perſon. Law of Ina, c. 20. Spelm.

Anhlote, A ſingle tribute or tax. The words anhlote and anſcot are mentioned in the laws of William the Conqueror: and their ſenſe is, that every one ſhould pay according to the cuſtom of the country, his part and ſhare, as ſcot and lot, &c. Leg. W. 1. c. 64.

Aniens, (Fr.) Void, being of no force. F. N. B. 214.

Annales, Yearlings, or young cattle of the firſt year. —Vituli primo anno poſtquam nati ſunt, vituli vocantur; ſecundo compoto annales vocantur; tertio boviculi; quarto bovetti.—Regulæ compoti domus de Farendon, MS.

Annats, (annates) This word has the ſame meaning with firſt-fruits, anno 25 H. 8. c. 20. The reaſon of the name is, becauſe the rate of the firſt-fruits paid for ſpiritual livings, is after the value of one year's profit. Annates more ſua appellant primos fructus unius anni ſacerdotii vacantis, aut dimidiam eorum partem. Pol. Virgil de Invent. rer. lib. 8. c. 2.

Annealing of Tile, (anno 17 Ed. 4.) From the Sax. onælan accendere, ſignifies the burning or hardening of tile.

Annienteđ, (from the Fr. anneantir) Abrogated, fruſtrated, or brought to nothing. Lit. c. 3. ſect. 741.

Anniverſary Days, (dies anniverſarii) Solemn days appointed to be celebrated yearly in commemoration of the death or martyrdom of ſaints; or the days whereon, at the return of every year, men were wont to pray for the ſouls of their deceaſed friends, according to the cuſtom of the Roman Catholics, mentioned in the ſtatute of 1 Ed. 6. cap. 14. and 12 Car. 2. cap. 13. This was in uſe among our ancient Saxons, as you may ſee in Lib. Rameſ. ſect. 134.—Anniverſaria dies ideo repetitur defunctis, quoniam neſcimus qualiter eorum cauſa habeatur in alia vita. Alcuinus's Divine Offices. The anniverſary, or yearly return of the day of the death of any perſon, which the religious regiſtered in their obitual or martyrology, and annually obſerved in gratitude to their founders and benefactors, was by our forefathers called a year-day and a mind-day, i. e. a memorial day: and tho' this proceeded from one of the trading arts of the prieſts, who got many a legacy for thus continuing the memorial of their friends; yet, abating the ſuperſtition of it, we muſt confeſs this practice of theirs has been a great advantage to the hiſtory of men and times, by fixing the obits of great and good men.

Anni Nubiles, (Lat.) When a woman is under 12 years of age, her age to marry, ſhe is ſaid to be infra annos nubiles, and unmarriageable; ſo that it ſignifies the marriageable age of a woman. 2 Co. Inſt. 434.

Anno Domini, The computation of time from the incarnation of our Saviour; which is generally inſerted in the dates of all public writings, with an addition of the year of the king's reign, &c. The Romans began their æra of time from the building of Rome: the Grecians computed by olympiads; and the Chriſtians reckon from the birth of Jeſus Chriſt.

Annoiſance, Annoyance, or noiſance, is a word uſed for any hurt done to a public place, as a highway, bridge, river, &c. or to any private place, by laying any thing therein that may breed infection, by incroachments, or ſuch like means; and it is alſo taken for the writ brought upon ſuch a tranſgreſſion. This word is mentioned anno 22 H. 8. c. 5. Vide Nuſance and highways.

Annua Penſione, An ancient writ for providing the king's chaplain unpreferred with a penſion. It was brought where the king had due to him an annual penſion from an abbot or prior, for any of his chaplains whom he ſhould nominate, (being unprovided of livings) to demand the ſame of ſuch abbot or prior. Reg. Orig. 165, 307.

Annualia, A yearly ſtipend aſſigned to a prieſt for celebrating an anniverſary, or for ſaying continued maſſes one year, for the ſoul of a deceaſed perſon.—Inhibemus quoque diſtrictius ne aliquis rector eccleſiæ faciat hujuſmodi pactum cum ſuo ſacerdote, videlicet quod ipſe ſacerdos præter cætera ſtipendia poterit recipere annualia & triennalia. Conſt. Rob. Groſteſt Epiſcopi Lincoln. in Append. ad Faſcic. p. 411.

Annuity, (annuus redditus) Is a yearly rent, payable for term of years, life, or in fee; and it is uſed for a writ that lies againſt a perſon for recovery of ſuch rent. Reg. Orig. 158. Annuity hath alſo been defined to be a yearly payment of a certain ſum of money, granted to another for life, &c. to be received of the grantor or his heirs, ſo that no freehold be charged therewith; whereof a man ſhall never have aſſiſe or other action, but a writ of annuity. Terms de Ley 44. Com. D. 1 V. tit. Action, &c.,

To make a good grant of an annuity, no particular technical mode of expreſſion is neceſſary. For if a man grants an annuity to another, to be received out of his coffers, or to be received out of a bag of money, or to be received of a ſtranger, yet this is ſufficient to charge his perſon, and the ſubſequent words ſhall be rejected. 1 Roll. Abr. 227.

So, if a man grant a rent out of his manor, when he has not any manor; this is a good annuity. 1 Rol. Abr. 227.

Or, If he grant a rent of 20 l. per annum, to be received of his tenants in D. when he has not any tenant there. 1 Roll. Abr. 227.

If a man grant a rent out of land, in which he has nothing, proviſo that he be not charged for this in a writ of annuity, it ſhall be a good annuity; for the proviſo, being repugnant, is void. Co. Lit. 146. a. 2 Bulſt. 149.

If a man grant a rent-charge out of his land, the grantee has an election to take it as a rent, or as an annuity. Lit. ſect. 219. 2 Bulſt. 148.

The treatiſe called Doctor and Student, dial. 1. cap. 3. ſhews ſeveral differences between a rent and an annuity, viz. that every rent is iſſuing out of land; but an annuity chargeth the perſon only, as the grantor and his heirs, who have aſſets by deſcent: for the recovery of an annuity, no action lies, but only the writ of annuity; (vide poſt) but of a rent the ſame remedy lies as for lands; and an annuity is never taken for aſſets, becauſe it is no freehold in law; nor ſhall it be put in execution upon a ſtatute merchant, ſtaple, or elegit, as a rent iſſuing out of land may. Dyer 345. 2 Rep. 144

It can ſcarce be conceived that a grant of an annuity can be made, by a deed, without that deed containing words, tantamount to a covenant; therefore, where there are ſuch words, covenant, for non-payment, will lie.—I ſhould think the words of the grant itſelf, tantamount to a covenant to pay.

If no lands are bound for the payment of an annuity, a diſtreſs may not be taken for it. Dyer 65. And hence it is, that if a rent be granted out of lands, with a proviſo that the perſon of the grantor ſhall not be charged, that this proviſo is void, becauſe the grantee, having no diſtreſs given by the deed for the recovery of the rent, would be without any manner of remedy, if the proviſo took place. 6 Co. 58. b.

But if an annuity iſſue out of land, (which of late it often doth) the grantee may bring a writ of annuity, and make it perſonal, or an aſſiſe, or diſtrain, &c. ſo as to make it real. Co. Lit. 144. And if the grantee take a diſtreſs; yet he may afterwards have a writ of annuity, and diſcharge the land, if he do not avow the taking, which is in nature of an action. 1 Inſt. 145. But if the grantee of a rent bring an aſſiſe for it, he ſhall never after have writ of annuity; he having elected this to be a rent: ſo if the grantee of an annuity avow the taking of a diſtreſs, in a court of record. Danv. Abr. 486. And if the grantee purchaſe part of the land out of which an annuity is iſſuing, he ſhall never after have a writ of annuity. Co. Lit. 148.

Where a rent-charge, iſſuing out of lands, granted by tenant for life, &c. determines by the act of God; as an intereſt was veſted in the grantee, it is in his election to make it a rent-charge, and ſo charge the lands therewith, or a perſonal thing to charge the perſon of the grantor in annuity. 2 Rep. 36. A. ſeiſed of lands in fee, he and B. grant an annuity or rent-charge to another; this prima facie is the grant of A. and confirmation of B. But the grantee may have a writ of annuity againſt both. If two men grant an annuity of 20*l. per ann.* although the perſons be ſeveral, if the deed of grant be not for them ſeverally, yet the grantee ſhall have but one annuity againſt them. Co. Lit. 144.

When a man recovers in a writ of annuity, he ſhall not have a new writ of annuity for the arrears due after the recovery, but a ſcire facias upon the judgment, the judgment being always executory. 2 Rep. 37. No writ of annuity lieth for arrearages only when an annuity is determined, but for the annuity and arrearages. Co. Lit. 285. Though, if a rent-charge be granted out of a leaſe for years, it hath been adjudged that the grantee may bring annuity when the leaſe is ended. Moor, cap. 450. Where an annuity is granted to one for life, during the term he ſhall have a writ of annuity: and when that is determined, his executors may have action of debt; for the realty is then reſolved into the perſonalty. 4 Rep. 49. New Nat. Br. 278.

Upon a rent created by way of reſervation, no writ of annuity lies. Danv. 483. If a man grants a rent out of his manor, or lands, or to be received of his tenants, and he hath no manor, lands, or tenants, yet it may be a good annuity, though void as to a rent. Danv. Abr. 485. A perſon grants to me 10*l.* every year, that I ſhall be reſident in ſuch a pariſh; an annuity lies for this, it being annual at my will; and it is the ſame if a rent be granted payable at the end of a certain number of years, though it be not annual. Ibid. 452. A grant is made by a perſon of an annuity to another and his heirs, without the grantor's ſaying for him and his heirs, this is determinable by the death of the grantor. Danv. Abr. 482. Writ of annuity may not be had againſt the grantor's heir, unleſs the grant be for him and his heirs; and there muſt be aſſets to bind the heir, by grant of annuity by his anceſtor, when he is named. Co. Lit. 144. 1 Roll. Abr. 226. But it is otherwiſe in caſe of the grant of a rent out of land, or a grant of a rent whereof the grantor is ſeiſed, for this charges the land, but an annuity charges the perſon only. Br. Charge, pl. 54.

An annuity granted by a biſhop, with confirmation of dean and chapter, ſhall bind the ſucceſſor of the biſhop. New Nat. Br. 340. If the king grant an annuity, it muſt be expreſſed by whoſe hands the grantee ſhall receive it, as the king's bailiff, &c. or the grant will be void; for the king may not be ſued, and no perſon is bound to pay it if not expreſſed in the patent. New Nat. Br. 341. If, where an annuity is granted pro decimis, the grantor is diſturbed of his tithes, the annuity ceaſeth; and ſo it is where any annuity is granted to a perſon pro conſilio, and the grantee refuſeth to give counſel: for where the cauſe and conſideration of the grant amounts to a condition, and the one ceaſes, the other ſhall determine. Co. Lit. 204.

There are now very few, if any, grants of annuities, without a covenant for payment, expreſſed or implied; and therefore, where a diſtreſs can't be made, or is not approved of, the grantee may bring an action of covenant, and recover the arrears in damages, with coſts of ſuit. And that action is now uſually brought, real actions and writs of annuity being much out of uſe.

Antejuramentum, and præjuramentum. By our anceſtors called juramentum calumniæ; in which both the accuſer and the accuſed were to make this oath before any trial or purgation, viz. the accuſer was to ſwear that he would proſecute the criminal; and the accuſed was to make oath on the very day that he was to undergo the ordeal, that he was innocent of the crime of which he was charged. Leg. Athelſtan. apud Lambard 23. If the accuſer failed to take this oath, the criminal was diſcharged; and if the accuſed did not take his, he was intended to be guilty, and not admitted to purge himſelf. Leg. Hen. 1. c. 66.

Antiſtitium, A word uſed for monaſtery in our old hiſtories. Blount.

Antithetarius, Signifies where a man endeavours to diſcharge himſelf of the fact of which he is accuſed, by recriminating and charging the accuſer with the ſame fact. This word is mentioned in the title of a chapter in the laws of Canutus, cap. 47.

Apatiſatio, An agreement or compact made with another. Upton, lib. 2. c. 12.——De officio militari, viz. concedimus per præſentes bonum & ſalvum conductum, ac ſalvam guardiam ſive ſecuritatem apataſationis.

Aporiare, To be brought to poverty.—Permiſit ſuos ſpoliare patriam, aporiare vulgus. Walſingham in R. 2. It hath been uſed ſometimes to ſignify, ſhun or avoid.

Apoſtare, To violate: apoſtare leges, and apoſtatare leges, wilfully to break or tranſgreſs the laws.—Qui leges apoſtabit terræ ſuæ, reus ſit apud regem. Leg. Edw. Confeſſoris, c. 35.

Apoſtata Capiendo, A writ that formerly lay againſt one who, having entered and profeſſed ſome order of religion, broke out again, and wandered up and down the country, contrary to the rules of his order: it was directed to the ſheriff for the apprehenſion of the offender, and delivery of him again to his abbot or prior. Reg. Orig. 71, 267.

Apothecaries, Are exempted from ſerving offices, &c. Their medicines are to be ſearched and examined by the phyſicians choſen by the college of phyſicians, and if faulty ſhall be burnt, &c. 32 Hen. 8. c. 40. 1 M. Stat. 2. c. 9. And apothecaries to the army are to make up their cheſts of medicines at Apothecaries Hall, there to be openly viewed, &c. under the penalty of 40 l. Stat. 10 Ann. cap. 14. Vide 6 & 7 W. 3. c. 4. See Phyſicians.

Apparator, or Apparitor, A meſſenger that ſerves the proceſs of the ſpiritual court. His duty is to cite the offenders to appear; to arreſt them; and to execute the ſentence or decree of the judges, &c. Anno 21 Hen. 8. cap. 5. In the year 1316 Walter archbiſhop of Canterbury granted the following commiſſion to an apparitor of his conſiſtory court.—Walterus Dei gratia Cant. archiep. totius Angliæ primas, dilecto filio Willielmo de Graftone in apparitoris officio, in curia noſtra Cantuar', videlicet, in conſiſtorio ac decanatu noſtro eccleſiæ beatæ Mariæ de arcubus London. Miniſtranti ſalutem, gratiam & benedictionem. Perſonam tuam, eo quod de fidelitate in dicto officio per laudabile teſtimonium apud nos multipliciter commendaris, volentes proſequi cum favore, dictum apparatoris officium in curia, conſiſtorio & decanatu prædictis perpetuo poſſidendum tibi conferimus per præſentes: ita tamen quod te fideliter geras in officio prædicto memorato. Volentes & tibi ſpecialiter concedentes, ut cum in miniſterio dicti officii per teipſum perſonaliter vacare non poteris, vel abſens fueris a curia, conſiſtorio & decanatu prædictis, nihilominus per aliam idoneam perſonam, quem ad hoc aſſignandum omnia & ſingula quæ dicto incumbent officio—facere valeas, & jugiter exercere.—Dat. apud Lambeth. 8 Id. Mart. 1316.

If a monition be awarded to an apparitor, to ſummon a man, and he upon the return of the monition avers that he had ſummoned him, when in truth he had not, and the defendant be thereupon excommunicated; an action on the caſe at Common law will lie againſt the apparitor for the falſhood committed by him in his office, beſides the puniſhment inflicted on him by the eccleſiaſtical court for ſuch breach of truſt. Ayl. Parerg. 70. 2 Bulſt. 264.

Apparitor Comitatus, An officer formerly called by this name; for which the ſheriffs of Buckinghamſhire had a conſiderable yearly allowance; and in the reign of queen Elizabeth, there was an order of court for making that allowance: but the cuſtom and reaſon of it are now altered. Hale's Sher. Acco. 104.

Apparlement, (From the Fr. pareillement, i. e. in like manner) Signifies a reſemblance or likelihood; as apparlement of war. 2 R. 2. Stat. 1. c. 6.

Apparura, Furniture and implements; apparatus. Dominus clamat habere omnes carrectas ferro non ligatas, & omnes carrucas cum tota apparura. Placit. in Itin. apud Ceſtriam 14 Hen. 7. Carrucarum apparura is plough-tackle, or all the implements belonging to a plough.

Appeal, appellum, (From the Fr. appel or appeller to accuſe) Is a word uſed in our law for the removal of a cauſe from an inferior court or judge to a ſuperior: but more commonly for the accuſation of a murderer, by a party who had intereſt in the perſon killed; or of a felon by one of his accomplices. Co. Lit. 287. It ſignifies as much as accuſatio with the Civilians; for as, in the Civil law, cognizance of criminal cauſes is taken either upon inquiſition, denunciation or accuſation; ſo, in the Common law, it is upon indictment, or appeal, indictments comprehending both inquiſition and denunciation. And accuſation or appeal is a lawful declaration of another man's crime, (being felony at leaſt) before a competent judge, by one that ſets his name to the declaration, and undertakes to prove it, upon the penalty that may enſue of the contrary. Bract. lib. 3. Brit. c. 22. 25. Staundf. lib. 2. cap. 6.

There were anciently ſeveral kinds of appeals, which ſeem obſolete at this day; as appeals of treaſon, which might be ſued before the parliament and other courts of law, as well as before the conſtable and marſhal, and were determinable by battle. 2 Inſt. 132. Bract. 118. 2 Hawk. P. C. 161.

But appeals before the parliament are taken away by 1 H. 4. cap. 14. and thoſe before other law-courts are become obſolete.

But as to the juriſdiction of the conſtable and marſhal, in relation to treaſons committed out of the realm, it ſeems to continue ſtill in force; for in the 7th year of Charles the firſt, an appeal of treaſon, ſuppoſed to be committed beyond ſea, was actually commenced before the conſtable and marſhal; who, for want of ſufficient proof to clear the truth, awarded that a duel ſhould be fought between the parties, for the final determination of the matter. See Ruſhworth's Collect. part. 2. vol. 1. p. 112.

Appeals de pace, de plagis, and de impriſonamento are out of uſe, and have been turned to actions of treſpaſs for many hundred years paſt; alſo the whole learning of appeals of arſon ſeems obſolete at this day Co. Lit. 288. a.

The kinds of appeals, therefore, that ſeem to require any conſideration at this day, are thoſe of death, larceny, and rape, which are capital appeals, and that of mayhem, which is conſidered as a treſpaſs. 1 New Abr. 122.

An appeal of death, which is now chiefly in uſe, is a vindictive action which the law gives a wife againſt her huſband's murderer, and to the heir at law againſt one who kills his anceſtor, which, being the ſuit of the ſubject, the king cannot pardon. 1 New Abr. 122. And ſee 9 Hen. 3. c. 34 and 3 Hen. 7. c. 1.

An appeal of murder is for retribution, or ſatisfaction, as far as the law can give it; i. e. life for life.

By Magna Charta, c. 34. a woman can't ſue an appeal for the murder of any one, but her huſband.

At the common law, before the ſtatute 9 Hen. 3. a woman as well as a man might have had an appeal of death of any of her anceſtors, and therefore the ſon of a woman ſhall at this day have an appeal, if he be heir at the death of the anceſtor, for the ſon is not diſabled, but the mother only, for the ſtatute ſays, propter appellum fæminæ. 2 Inſt. 68.

The judges are ſo far bound to take notice of this ſtatute, that if a woman brings an appeal of death of her father, or of any other beſides her huſband, they ought ex officio to abate it, tho' the defendant takes no exception to it. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 166. cap. 23. ſ. 42.

A feme ſhall have appeal where ſhe ſhall have no dower, as where ſhe elopes from her baron. Br. Appeal, pl. 17. cites 50 E. 3. 15. per Ingleby.

The wife is to be a wife de facto to be intitled to appeal; and if ſhe marries again, before the appeal is brought, or whilſt the ſame is depending, her appeal will be gone. 2 Inſt. 68, 317. Where a woman has judgment in appeal, of the death of her huſband, ſhe cannot have execution if ſhe do not perſonally pray it: a judge went to a woman great with child, to know if ſhe would have execution? She ſaid, Yes, and the appellee was hanged. Jenk. Cent. 137. But if ſhe marry after the judgment, ſhe cannot pray execution. 2 Hawk. P. C. 164.

For the death of an anceſtor who leaves no wife, the heir only can bring an appeal, and ſuch heir muſt himſelf be innocent of the fact, he muſt be heir general according to the courſe of the Common law, and alſo heir male, and in his count muſt ſet forth how he is heir to the deceaſed. 2 Hawk. P. C. 165.

The huſband ſhall not have an appeal for the death of his wife; but the heir only. Danv. Abr. 488. An heir ſhall not have appeal for the death of a man married, except the wife kill the huſband; in which caſe the heir may proſecute the appeal. 1 Leon. 326. Co. Lit. 33.

If a wife dies within the year, the heir ſhall have no appeal. Keilw. 120. And if after the death of the anceſtor the heir male dies, 'tis ſaid another heir ſhall not have appeal. H. P. C. 182. For a perſon that proſecutes an appeal muſt be immediate heir to the anceſtor killed, or his ſuit ſhall not be received. Staundf. 59. But where an appeal lies againſt an heir, the next heir ſhall bring it. H. P. C. 182. An infant may proſecute an appeal: and it is to be brought where the felony is done, and the party wounded ſhall die. Staundf. 63.

But an ideot, or a perſon born deaf and dumb, or one attainted of treaſon or felony, or outlawed in a perſonal action, ſo long as ſuch attainder or outlawry continues in force, cannot bring any appeal whatſoever. 2 Hawk. 168. H. P. C. 183. 2 Hawk. P. C. 162.

The appellant is to commence his appeal in perſon; but he may proceed by attorney, having a ſpecial warrant of attorney filed. 1 Salk. 60. The appeal muſt be brought in a year and a day after the death of the perſon murdered: and the count muſt ſet forth the fact, and the length and depth of the wound, the year, day, hour, place where done, and with what weapon, &c. And that the party died in a year and a day. 2 Inſt. 665. & 6 Ed. 1. c. 9. Principal and acceſſaries before and after are to be joined in appeal. Danv. Abr. 493. And this is to be obſerved, though the acceſſary is guilty in another county. 3 H. 7. c. 1.

An appeal is proſecuted two ways; either by writ, or bill: appeal by writ is when a writ is purchaſed out of Chancery by one for another, to the intent he may appeal a third perſon of ſome felony committed by him, finding pledges that he ſhall do it: appeal by bill is where a man of himſelf gives up his accuſation in writing, offering to undergo the burden of appealing the perſon therein named. Bracton.

This appeal may be brought by bill before the juſtices in the King's Bench; before juſtices of gaol delivery, and commiſſioners of oyer and terminer, &c. or before the ſheriff and coroner, in the county court: but the ſheriff and coroner have only power to take and enter the appeal and count, for it muſt be removed by Certiorari into B. R.

In appeal by original, principals and acceſſaries are generally charged alike without diſtinction, till the plaintiff counts: but 'tis otherwiſe in appeals by bill. Danv. 494.

There is to be but one appeal againſt the principal and acceſſary: if the principal is acquitted, it ſhall acquit the acceſſary; and both ſhall have damages againſt the appellant on a falſe appeal, or the acceſſary may bring a writ of conſpiracy. 33 Hen. 6. cap. 2. 2 Inſt. 383. Though, where a perſon is acquitted on a juſt appeal, he may be arraigned upon indictment at the king's ſuit: and if a murderer be acquitted upon indictment, or found guilty and pardoned by the king, the wife or heir may bring appeal. Wood 629.

When a perſon is indicted for murder, and acquitted thereupon, he is to be bailed till the year and day is paſt, allowed for bringing the appeal, if an appeal be intended. 3 Hen. 7. cap. 1.

If the defendant in appeal is attaint, or acquit: or the plaintiff nonſuit after appearance, which is peremptory, no other appeal lies. H. P. C. 188. But if the appeal is good and well taken, and afterwards fails, the defendant ſhall be arraigned at the ſuit of the king; 'tis otherwiſe if the appeal was never good or well taken; as if it abates for miſnomer, &c. Staundf. 147, 148. If there be an indictment and appeal depending at the ſame time againſt the ſame perſon, the appeal ſhall be tried firſt, if the appellant be ready. Kel. 107. Otherwiſe the king would deſtroy the ſuit of the party; for this reaſon the king by his pardon cannot bar an appeal. Jenk. 160. pl. 4.

The caſe of other appeals than of murder, as of robbery, rape, &c. are not within the ſtatute. 3 H. 7. c. 1. And therefore auterfoits acquit, upon an indictment within the year, ſtands at Common law a good bar to an appeal of robbery, or any offence other than murder or manſlaughter; and yet the judges at this day never forbear to proceed upon an indictment of robbery, rape, or other offence, though within the year, becauſe appeals of robbery eſpecially are very rare, and of little uſe, ſince the ſtatute of 21 H. 8. cap. 11. gives reſtitution to the proſecutor as effectually as upon an appeal. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 250.

Where the appellant doth not proſecute his appeal; or in caſe he releaſe to the defendant; the appellee may be arraigned at the king's ſuit. If the defendant on an indictment is convicted of manſlaughter, and allowed his clergy, it will bar an appeal: though ſome of our books tell us the heir may lodge an appeal immediately before clergy had: and others ſay clergy ought to be granted, and that it is unreaſonable an appeal ſhould interpoſe preſently to prevent judgment. 3 Inſt. 131. If a perſon, immediately after the verdict of manſlaughter, put in an appeal of murder, and before the appeal is arraigned, the defendant demands his benefit of clergy; this is a good bar to appeal, and praying of clergy, is having of clergy, though the court delay calling the party to judgment, &c. 1 Salk. 60, 62. Kel. 93. But formerly it was held, that the court might delay the calling a convict to judgment, and thereby hinder him from his clergy, and make him liable to an appeal, eſpecially if the appeal were depending: and where the record of a conviction of manſlaughter is erroneous, or inſufficient, &c. the offender cannot plead the conviction and clergy had therein, in bar of an appeal or ſecond indictment, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 378, 379.

A charter of pardon is no bar of an appeal: and if the party be outlawed, &c. in appeal, and the king pardon him, a ſcire facias ſhall iſſue againſt the appellant, who may pray execution, notwithſtanding ſuch pardon; but if returned ſci. fec. and he appears not, then the appellee ſhall upon the pardon be diſcharged. H. P. C. 251. A peer in appeal of murder ſhall not be tried by his peers, but by a common jury; though he ſhall upon an indictment for murder. Vide Stat. 3 H. 7. c. 1. directing appeals before the ſheriff and coroners, or at King's Bench, or gaol delivery. No appeals to be purſued in parliament. 1 H. 4. c. 14.

No eſſoin is allowed the appellant, in appeal of death. Stat. 13 Ed. 1. In appeal the court can grant no imparlance, but it may be adjourned, 1 Sid. 325. And where appeal of death is brought, the defendant cannot juſtify ſe defendendo; but muſt plead Not guilty, and the jury are to find the ſpecial matter. Bro. App. 122. 3 Salk. 37. Appeal is the niceſt ſuit in law, for any ſmall matter will abate it; the proceſs muſt bear date the ſame day with the return of the writ; if it be a day afterwards, it is a diſcontinuance; and it varies from all other proceedings, for there can be no amendment of the writ, nor is the diſcontinuance of it helped by any ſtatute. Nelſ. Abr. 215.

The court ex officio will quaſh the writ for apparent faults appearing on the face of the writ; as where the ſenſe is defective for want of a material word, or where it wants thoſe words of art which the law has appropriated for the deſcription of the offence. 2 Hawk. P. C. 184.

Alſo the court will abate the writ when the declaration varies from the writ in ſome material point, either as to the reign of the king, or as to the county wherein the fact is laid, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 184.

The declaration muſt ſet forth the offence with the utmoſt certainty, and likewiſe deſcribe it by ſuch words of art as the law has appropriated to the purpoſe; therefore if the word felonice in any appeal, murdravit in an appeal of murder, rapuit in an appeal of rape, cepit in an appeal of larceny, mayhemiavit in an appeal of mayhem, be omitted, they cannot be ſupplied by any circumlocution.

A releaſe of all manner of actions, or of all actions criminal, or of all actions concerning pleas of the crown, or of all appeals, or of all demands, is a good bar of any appeal; but a releaſe of all perſonal actions does not bar an appeal of felony, being an action of an higher nature. Cro. Jac. 283. Yelv. 204. 2 Hawk. P. C. 196.

If the appellee pleads a ſpecial plea, which does not amount to a confeſſion of the fact, he muſt at the ſame time plead over to the felony, except in ſpecial caſes; as where ſuch plea would be prejudicial to him, or where his plea declines the juriſdiction of the court. 2 Hawk. P. C. 196. Carth. 56.

In appeal of murder brought by the wife for the death of her huſband; the appellee pleaded, that ſhe was never lawfully married to her huſband, but did not plead over to the felony; adjudged, that this plea being to be tried by the ordinary upon his certificate, whether the marriage was lawful or not, in ſuch caſe the defendant need not plead over to the felony; but where the plea is triable by the Common law, he muſt plead over to the felony. Cro. Eliz. 224.

By ſtatute an appellant, bringing a falſe appeal, ſhall ſuffer a year's impriſonment, yield damages to the party grieved, and pay a fine to the king; and being unable, thoſe that abetted him ſhall be puniſhed in like manner. Stat. 13 Ed. 1. c. 12.

Appeal of Maihem, Is the accuſing one that hath maimed another: but this being generally no felony, it is in a manner but an action of treſpaſs; and nothing is recovered by it but damages. In an action of aſſault and maiming, the court may increaſe damages, on view of the maihem, &c. And though maihem is not felony, in appeals and indictments of maihem, the words felonice maihemiavit are neceſſary. 3 Inſt. 63. Bracton calls appeal of maihem appellum de plagis & maihemio, and writes a whole chapter upon it. Lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 24. In an appeal of maihem, the defendant pleads that the plaintiff had brought an action of treſpaſs againſt him, for the ſame wounding, and had recovered, and damages given, &c. And this was a good plea in bar of the appeal; becauſe in both actions damages only are to be recovered. 4 Rep. 43. And where there is a recovery in aſſault and battery, &c. the jury give damages according to the hurt, which was done, and it ſhall be intended a maihem at that time; and therefore appeal of maihem doth not lie. Hob. 94. 1 Leon. 318. In appeal of maihem, the appellant ought not to plead in abatement of the writ, and likewiſe over to the maihem; if he doth, he will loſe the benefit of his plea to the writ. Moor 457.

Appeal of Rape, Lies where a rape is committed on the body of a woman. 3 Inſt. 30. A feme covert, without her huſband, may bring appeal of rape: and the Stat. 11 Hen. 4. cap. 13. gives power where a woman is raviſhed, and afterwards conſents to it, for a huſband, or a father, or next of kin, there being no huſband, to bring appeal of rape: alſo the criminal, in ſuch caſe, may be attainted at the ſuit of the king. 3 Inſt. 131. 6 R. 2. cap. 6.

If a woman be raviſhed by her next of kin, and conſents to him, and has neither huſband nor father, the next of kin to him ſhall have the appeal; for he has diſabled himſelf by the rape, whereby he becomes a felon. 2 Inſt. 434.—Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 632. S. P. cites 28 H. 6. Corone 459.—2 Hawk. P. C. 173. c. 23. ſ. 64. S. P.

If there be no huſband, nor father, then the appeal is given to the heir, whether male or female. Hale's P. C. 186.

In appeal of rape of his feme, the defendant pleaded, Ne unques accouple in lawful matrimony, becauſe one was affianced to the feme, and after another married her, and after ſhe came to him who affianced her, and he married her, and ſhe is afterwards raviſhed. The firſt who married her ſhall have the appeal of rape, for the firſt eſpouſals are good till they are divorced for the precontract, and the opinion here is that, Ne unques accouple, &c. in this caſe is not a good plea; for the ſtatute gives it to the barons, ſi viros habuerint; ſo that baron in poſſeſſion ſhall have it, where eſpouſals are not void. Br. Appeal, pl 32. cites 11 H. 4. 13.

This ſtatute, as to the huſband, ſhall be conſtrued ſtrictly, and be intended of a huſband in poſſeſſion, tho' there be good cauſe of divorce; for he is her huſband till a divorce be had. See *Br. The ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. c. 13. enacts that appeal of rape ſhall be brought within forty days: but by Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 34. relating to this offence, no time is limited for the proſecution; ſo that it may be brought in any reaſonable time. H. P. C. 186. Appeal of rape is to be commenced in the county where committed: and if a woman be aſſaulted in one county, and raviſhed in another, the appeal of rape lies in that county where ſhe was raviſhed. *H. Appeal of Robbery, A remedy given by the Common law, where a perſon is robbed of his goods, &c. to have reſtitution of the goods ſtolen: as they could not be reſtored on indictment at the king's ſuit, this appeal was judged neceſſary. 3 Inſt. 242. If a man robbed make freſh purſuit after, and apprehend and proſecute the felon, he may bring appeal of robbery at any time afterwards. Staundf. 62.

A woman at this day may have an appeal of robbery, &c. for ſhe is not reſtrained thereof. 2 Inſt 68.

Adjudged, that an appeal of robbery may be brought by the party robbed twenty years after the offence committed, and that he ſhall not be bound to bring it within a year and a day, as he muſt do in appeal of murder. 4 Leon. 16.

But the courts of law would now ſcarce permit a proſecution after ſuch a length of time, unleſs good cauſe could be ſhewn why it had not been ſooner commenced, as that the offender had fled the kingdom, and was but juſt returned, &c.

If one man robs ſeveral perſons, every one of them may have appeal: likewiſe if the robber be attainted at the ſuit of one, he ſhall be tried at the ſuit of the reſt, ſo as their appeals were commenced before the attainder. Danv. Abr. 494. In appeal of robbery, the plaintiff muſt declare of all the things whereof he is robbed, or they ſhall be forfeited to the king; for the appellant can have reſtitution for no more than is mentioned in his appeal. 3 Inſt. 227. By the Year-book 21 Ed. 1. 16. Reſtitution of goods was granted upon an outlawry, in appeal of robbery; but a perſon having preferred an indictment againſt a robber, and afterwards an appeal, on which he was outlawed, the plaintiff moved to have reſtitution of his goods, and it was denied. 2 Leon. 108.

Appeal to Rome. This was ever eſteemed ſo great an interruption to national juſtice, that even at the time the Roman Catholic religion was the religion of this kingdom it was prohibited. By the Stat. 24 Hen. 8. appealing to Rome incurs the penalty of a præmunire: and it is made treaſon by 13 Eliz. cap. 2.

Where an appeal in an eccleſiaſtical cauſe is made before the biſhop, or his commiſſary, it may be removed to the archbiſhop; and if before an archdeacon, to the Court of Arches, and from the Arches to the archbiſhop; and when the cauſe concerns the king, appeal may be brought in fifteen days from any of the ſaid courts to the prelates in convocation. 24 H. 8. c. 12. And the Stat. 25 H. 8. cap. 19. gives appeals from the archbiſhop's courts to the king in Chancery, who thereupon appoints commiſſioners finally to determine the cauſe; and this is called the Court of Delegates: there is alſo a court of commiſſioners of review; which commiſſion the king may grant as ſupreme head, to review the definitive ſentence given on appeal in the Court of Delegates.

On taking away the ſupremacy of the pope in this kingdom, this power was lodged in the crown, as originally belonging to it. 4 Inſt. 340. The dean of Wells was deprived of his deanery, by the commiſſary of the biſhop of Bath and Wells, from which ſentence the dean appealed to the archbiſhop, who affirmed it; and thereupon he exhibited an appeal to the king in Chancery, but found no relief, for the king granted the deanery to one Turner. But anno 1 Mar. the deprived dean obtained another commiſſion to the Delegates, and by their ſentence was reſtored to his deanery; and after the death of queen Mary, 1 Eliz. Turner had a commiſſion of review, and he was reſtored, though it was inſiſted there ought to be no farther appeal. Dyer 273.

In the 39th year of queen Eliz. ſentence being given in an eccleſiaſtical cauſe, the party againſt whom it paſſed, appealed to the archbiſhop, &c. who affirmed the ſentence; then he appealed to the Delegates, and they repealed both the former ſentences: on which the queen granted a commiſſion ad revidendum the ſentence of the Delegates, and it was held lawful. Cro. Eliz. 571. The biſhop of Wincheſter being made viſitor of Magdalen college in Oxford, the preſident of the college was deprived by him: the preſident appealed to the queen in Chancery: reſolved, that the appeal doth not lie, for 'tis out of the ſtatutes 24 & 25 H. 8. Dyer 209. Appearance, In the law ſignifieth the defendant's filing common or ſpecial bail, when he is ſerved with copy of, or arreſted on any proceſs out of the courts at Weſtminſter: and there can be no appearance in the court of B. R. but by ſpecial or common bail. There are four ways for defendants to appear to actions; in perſon, or by attorney; by perſons of full age: and by guardians, or next friend, by infants. Show. 165.

By the Common law, the plaintiff or defendant, demandant or tenant, could not appear by attorney without the king's ſpecial warrant by writ or letters patent, but ought to follow his ſuit in his own proper perſon; by reaſon whereof there were but few ſuits. Co. Lit. 128. 2 Inſt. 249. But it is now the common courſe for the plaintiff or defendant, in all manner of actions where there may be an attorney, to appear by attorney, and put in his warrant without any writ from the king for that purpoſe. And therefore, generally, in all actions real, perſonal, and mixt, the demandant or plaintiff, tenant or defendant, may appear by attorney. F. N. B. 26.

But in every caſe, where the party ſtands in contempt, the court will not admit him to appear by attorney, but oblige him to appear in perſon. As if he comes in by a cepi corpus upon an exigent. F. N. B. Or, if he be outlawed. 2 Cro. 462, 616.

But by Stat. 4 & 5 W & M. c. 18. Perſons outlawed in any caſe, except for treaſon or felony, may appear by attorney to reverſe the ſame without bail; except where ſpecial bail ſhall be ordered by the court.

In all caſes where proceſs iſſues forth to take the party's body, if a common appearance only, and not ſpecial bail is required, there every ſuch party may appear in court in his proper perſon, and file common bail. 1 Lill. Abr. 85. Hill. 22 Car. B. R.

In a capital caſe the party muſt always appear in perſon, and cannot plead by attorney: alſo in criminal offences, where an act of parliament requires that the party ſhould appear in perſon; and likewiſe in appeal, or on attachment. 2 Hawk. P. C. 141, 373.

On an indictment, information or action, for any crime whatſoever under the degree of capital, the defendant may, by the favour of the court, appear by attorney; and this he may do as well before plea pleaded, as in the proceeding after, till conviction. 1 Lev. 146. Keilw. 165. Dyer 346. Cro. Jac. 462.

If huſband and wife are ſued, the huſband is to make attorney for her. 2 Saund. 213.

If an ideot doth ſue or defend, he cannot appear by guardian, prochein amie, or attorney, but muſt appear in proper perſon; but otherwiſe of him who becomes non compos mentis; for he ſhall appear by guardian if within age, or by attorney if of full age. Co. Lit. 135. b. 2 Inſt. 390. 4 Co. 124.

A corporation aggregate of many perſons cannot appear in perſon, but by attorney, and ſuch appearance is good. 10 Rep. 32. in the caſe of Sutton's Hoſpital.

If a man is bound to appear in court on the firſt day of the term, it ſhall be intended the firſt day in common underſtanding, viz. the firſt day in full term. 1 Lill. 83, 2 Leon. 4. In caſe the defendant's attorney doth receive a declaration againſt his client from the plaintiff's attorney; this obliges the attorney to appear to it: and if an attorney has a warrant from the defendant to be his attorney in a ſuit depending in B. R. and he files common bail accordingly; it has been held, that he muſt appear by that warrant in all ſuits againſt the defendant in the ſame term; provided declarations are filed in the office, and copies delivered to the defendant, or his attorney, who filed the bail, before the end of the term in which his bail is filed. For the defendant being, after appearance and bail put in, ſuppoſed to be in cuſtody of the marſhal, the attorney that appears for him is bound to receive any declaration that is brought againſt him during that term. Comp. Attorn. qu. de hoc.

If the plaintiff files common bail for defendant, he only can deliver a declaration by the bye. Harr. 1 V. 80.

But, when defendant has filed common or ſpecial bail for himſelf, any perſon may deliver or file a declaration againſt him by the bye, at any time during the term wherein the proceſs againſt the defendant is ret' ſedente curia; and the practice has been, that the plaintiff, at whoſe ſuit the proceſs is, might declare againſt the defendant, in as many actions as he thinks fit, before the end of the next term, after the ret' of the proceſs. Ibid. 80, 81. But I conceive it does not follow from hence, that the attorney who appears for him, in the firſt ſuit, is bound to receive any other declaration, for he may act on the engagement of a third perſon, or from various other reaſons, and yet may not chooſe to be concerned for the defendant generally.

Attorneys ſubſcribing warrants to appear, are liable to a penalty of 5*l.* and attachment, upon non-appearance. And where an attorney promiſes to appear for his client, the court will compel him to appear and put in common bail, in ſuch time as is uſual by the courſe of the court; and that although the attorney ſay he hath no warrant for appearance: nor ſhall repealing a warrant of attorney, to delay proceedings, excuſe the attorney for his not appearing, who may be compelled by the court. 1 Lill. 83, 84. The defendant's attorney is to file his warrant the ſame term he appears, and the plaintiff the term he declares, under penalties by Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16.

An attorney is not compellable to appear for any one, unleſs he take his fee, or back the warrant; after which the court will compel him to appear. 1 Salk. 87.

If an attorney appears, and judgment is entered againſt his client, the court will not ſet aſide the judgment, tho' the attorney had no warrant, if the attorney be able and reſponſible; for the judgment is regular, and the plaintiff is not to ſuffer when in no default; but if the attorney be not reſponſible or ſuſpicious, the judgment will be ſet aſide; for otherwiſe the defendant has no remedy, and any one may be undone by that means. 1 Salk. 86.

Attachment denied by the court againſt an attorney, who appeared for the plaintiff without a warrant; but ſaid an action on the caſe lies. Comb. 2.

In actions by original, appearances muſt be entered with the Filazer of the county; and if by bill, they ſhall be entered with the Prothonotary: and appearances and common bail are to be entered and filed by the defendant within eight days after the return of the proceſs, on which he was arreſted, &c. on pain of forfeiting 5*l.* to the plaintiff, for which the court ſhall forthwith award judgment and execution. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 21. If the defendant does not appear and find bail, the plaintiff's attorney is to call upon the ſheriff for the return of the writ, whether the defendant be arreſted, or not; and proceed accordingly.

On two nihils returned upon a ſcire & alias ſcire facias, they amount to a ſcire feci, and the plaintiff giving rule, the defendant is to appear, or judgment ſhall be had againſt him by default: and where a defendant doth not plead after appearance, judgment may be had againſt him. Style 208. Upon a party's appearing, errors in writs are in many caſes ſalved, and the party may be obliged to anſwer as if there had been no ſuch error. 2 Hawk. 302. Where the firſt proceſs in an inferior court is a capias which ought not to be, it is ſalved and made good by appearance; for the defendant hath by his appearing admitted the writ to be legal. Lutw. 954. For, in inferior courts, regularly, a plaint ſhould be levied, and ſummons iſſued, and returned before ſuing forth the capias. On appearance, a writ hath had its end, and the plaintiff ſhall declare: alſo an appearance takes away all diſcontinuance, and bad proceſs before it. Jenk. Cent. 57.

By late ſtatutes, where a defendant is ſerved with a copy of proceſs, in actions of debt, &c. under 10*l.* a common appearance ſhall be entered, or common bail filed by the plaintiff, if the defendant doth not appear within eight days after the return of the writ; on affidavit made of the ſervice of the proceſs. Stat. 12 Geo. 1. c. 26. And a notice ſhall be indorſed on the copy of the proceſs, of the intent and meaning of the ſervice, for the defendant to appear, &c. by 5 Geo. 2. c. 17.

Appendant, (appendens) Is a thing of inheritance, belonging to another inheritance that is more worthy. As an advowſon, common, court, &c. may be appendant to a manor: common of fiſhing, appendant to a freehold: land appendant to an office: a ſeat in a church to a houſe, &c. But land is not appendant to land, both being corporeal, and one thing corporeal may not be appendant to another that is corporeal; but an incorporeal thing may be appendant to it. Co. Lit. 121. 4 Rep. 86. Danv. Abr. 500. A foreſt may be appendant to an honour; and waifs and eſtrays to a leet. Co. Lit. 367. And incorporeal things, advowſons, ways, courts, commons, and the like, are properly parcel of and appendant to corporeal things; as houſes, lands, manors, &c. Plowd. 170. 4 Rep. 38. If tenant in tail of a manor whereunto an advowſon is appendant is diſſeiſed, and the diſſeiſor ſuffers an uſurpation; by the diſſeiſſee's entring into the manor, he is reſtored to the advowſon. Co. Lit. 49. But if one diſſeiſe me of common appendant belonging to my manor, and during the diſſeiſin I ſell the manor; by this the common is extinct for ever. 4 E. 3. 21. 11 Rep. 47. Common of eſtovers cannot be appendant to land; but to a houſe to be ſpent there. Co. Lit. 120. By the grant of a meſſuage, the orchard and garden will paſs as appendant.

Appendants are ever by preſcription, and this makes diſtinction between appendants and appurtenances, for appurtenances may be created in ſome caſes at this day; as if a man at this day grant to a man and his heirs, common in ſuch a moor for his beaſts, levant or couching upon his manor; or if he grant to another common of eſtovers or turbary in fee-ſimple, to be burnt or ſpent within his manor; by theſe grants, theſe commons are appurtenant to the manor, and ſhall paſs by the grant thereof; in the Civil law it is called adjunctum. Co. Lit. 121. b.

A way may be quaſi appendant to a houſe, &c. and as ſuch paſs by grant thereof. Cro. Jac. 190. See Highway Div. II.

Appennage, or apennage, (Fr.) Is derived from appendendo; or the German word apanage, ſignifying a portion. It is uſed for a child's part or portion; and is properly the portion of the king's younger children in France, where, by a fundamental law, called the law of apennages, the king's younger ſons have dutchies, counties, or baronies granted to them and their heirs, &c. the reverſion being reſerved to the crown, and all matters of regality as to coinage, and levying taxes in ſuch territories. *Spelm. Apportionment, (apportionamentum) Is a dividing of a rent, &c. into parts, according as the land out of which it iſſues is divided among two or more. If a ſtranger recovers part of the land, a leſſee ſhall pay, having regard to that recovered, and what remains in his hands. Where the leſſor recovers part of the land, or enters for a forfeiture into part thereof, the rent ſhall be apportioned. Co. Lit. 148. If a man leaſes three acres, rendering rent, and afterwards grants away one acre, the rent ſhall be apportioned. Co. Lit. 144. Leſſee for years leaſes for years, rendring rent, and after deviſes this rent to three perſons, this rent may be apportioned. Danv. Abr. 505. If a leſſee for life or years under rent, ſurrenders part of the land, the rent ſhall be apportioned: but where the grantee of a rent-charge purchaſes part of the land, there all is extinct. Moor 231. But qu. if a court of equity would not give relief, if denied by a court of law, in ſuch a caſe, the purchaſer being ignorant of the legal conſequences? A rent-charge, iſſuing out of land, may not be apportioned: nor ſhall things entire, as if one holds lands by ſervice to pay yearly to the lord, at ſuch a feaſt, a horſe, &c. Co. Lit. 149. But if part of the land, out of which a rent-charge iſſues, deſcends to the grantee of the rent, this ſhall be apportioned. Danv. 507.

A grantee of rent releaſes part of the rent to the grantor, this doth not extinguiſh the reſidue, but it ſhall be apportioned: for here the grantee dealeth not with the land, only the rent. Co. Lit. 148. On partition of lands out of which a rent is iſſuing, the rent ſhall be apportioned. Danv. Abr. 507. And where lands held by leaſe rendring rent are extended upon elegit, one moiety of the rent ſhall be apportioned to the leſſor. Ibid. 509. If part of lands leaſed is ſurrounded by freſh water, there ſhall be no apportionment of rent; but if it be ſurrounded with the ſea, there ſhall be an apportionment of the rent. Dyer 56.

A man purchaſes part of the land where he hath common appendant, the common ſhall be apportioned: of common appurtenant it is otherwiſe, and if by the act of the party, the common is extinct. 8 Rep. 79. Common appendant and appurtenant may be apportioned on alienation of part of the land to which it is appendant or appurtenant. Wood's Inſt. 199. If where a perſon has common of paſture ſans number, part of the land deſcends to him, this being intire and uncertain cannot be apportioned: but if it had been common certain, it ſhould have been apportioned. Co. Lit. 149.

Conditions generally are intire, and cannot be apportioned by the act of the party. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 227. A contract may not be divided or apportioned, ſo as to ſubject a man to two actions. 1 Salk. 65.

Apportum, (from the Fr. apport) Signifies properly the revenue or profit which a things brings in to the owner: and it was commonly uſed for a corody or penſion. Apprentice, (apprenticius, Fr. apprenti, from apprendre to learn) Signifies a young perſon bound by indentures to a tradeſman or artificer, who upon certain covenants is to teach him his myſtery or trade: theſe apprentices are a kind of bond-men, differing only in that they are ſervants by covenant, and for a certain term, uſually ſeven years, and they live for the moſt part more reputably. Smith's Rep. Angl. lib. 3. cap. 8.

It will be proper under this head to conſider

I. Who may be bound apprentices, and in what manner; and who are compellable to receive them.

II. How they are to be provided for and governed during their apprenticeſhips, and in what manner they are to be aſſigned, &c.

III. What trades may not be exerciſed without having ſerved an apprenticeſhip.

IV. How apprentices may acquire ſettlements.

V. For what offences they are puniſhable, and how.

I. It ſeems clearly agreed, that by the Common law infants, or perſons under the age of twenty-one years, cannot bind themſelves apprentices, in ſuch a manner as to intitle their maſters to an action of covenant, or other action againſt them for departing from their ſervice, or other breaches of their indentures; which makes it neceſſary, according to the uſual practice, to get ſome of their friends to be bound for the faithful diſcharge of their offices, according to the terms agreed on. 11 Co. 89. b. 2 Inſt. 379, 580. 3 Leon. 63. Fareſt. 15. And notwithſtanding the fifth of Eliz. c. 4. enacts, that although perſons bound apprentices ſhall be within age at the time of making their indentures, they ſhall be bound to ſerve for the years in their indentures contained, as if they were at full age at the time of making of them; it hath been held, that although an infant may voluntarily bind himſelf an apprentice, and, if he continue an apprentice for ſeven years, he may have the benefit to uſe his trade; yet neither at the common law, nor by any words of the abovementioned ſtatute, can a covenant or obligation of an infant, for his apprenticeſhip, bind him; but if he miſbehave himſelf, the maſter may correct him in his ſervice, or complain to a juſtice of peace, to have him puniſhed according to the ſtatute: but no remedy lieth againſt an infant upon ſuch covenant. Cro. Car. 179. Cro. Jac. 194. S. P.

But if any one entices an apprentice from his maſter's ſervice, or harbours him after notice, the maſter may maintain a ſpecial action on the caſe, againſt the perſon ſo doing. Vide 1 Salk. 380.

By the cuſtom of London, an infant unmarried, and above the age of fourteen, may bind himſelf apprentice to a freeman of London, by indenture with proper covenants; which covenants, by the cuſtom of London, ſhall be as binding as if he were of full age. Moor 134. 2 Bulſt. 192. 2 Rol. R. in the caſe of Barber v. Dennis.

A freeman's widow may take a maid apprentice for ſeven years, and inroll her as a youth; if ſhe be above fourteen years old: and if an exchange woman, that hath a huſband free of London, take ſuch apprentice, ſhe ſhall be bound to the huſband; and may be made free, at the end of the apprenticeſhip, if ſhe be then unmarried. Lex Londinen. 48.

By Stat. 5 Eliz. c. 4. ſect. 35. The juſtices may compel certain perſons under age to be bound as apprentices, and on refuſal may commit them, &c. And by ſtatute 42 Eliz. c. 2. Churchwardens and overſeers of the poor may bind out poor apprentices, by aſſent of two juſtices of peace. And perſons receiving money with poor apprentices, where money is given for placing ſuch out, are to give ſecurity for repayment in ſeven years, for the binding out others, &c. 7 Jac. 1. c. 3. And if any perſon refuſe to accept a poor apprentice, he ſhall forfeit 10 l. Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 30. §. 5. Alſo juſtices of peace and churchwardens, &c. may put out poor boys apprentice to the ſea-ſervice, 2 Ann. c. 6.

As to the manner of their being bound—

By the ſtatute 5 El. c. 4 ſect. 25. An apprentice muſt be bound by deed indented.

And as an apprentice can only be bound by deed, ſo it is neceſſary, according to the cuſtom of ſome places, that ſuch deed or indenture be inrolled; as in London, if the indentures be not inrolled before the chamberlain within a year, upon a petition to the mayor and aldermen, &c. a ſcire fac' ſhall iſſue to the maſter, to ſhew cauſe why not inrolled; and if it was through the maſter's default, the apprentice may ſue out his indentures, and be diſcharged: otherwiſe if through the fault of the apprentice; as if he would not come to preſent himſelf before the chamberlain, &c. for it cannot be inrolled, unleſs the apprentice be in court and acknowledge it. 2 Rol. Rep. 305. Palm. 361. 1 Mod. 271.

Indentures are likewiſe to be ſtamped, and are chargeable with ſeveral duties by act of parliament.

A duty of 6 d. in the pound under 50 l. and 12 d. in the pound for ſums exceeding it, given with apprentices (except poor apprentices) is granted by ſtatute; to be paid in a month, within the weekly bills of mortality, and in any other part of Great Britain, within two months after indentures executed, &c. And if the full ſum agreed be not inſerted, or the duty not paid, indentures ſhall be void, and apprentices not capable of following trades; alſo the maſters are liable to penalties. 8 Ann. c. 9. 9 Ann. c. 21.

By the Stat. 9 Ann. c. 21. If the maſter ſhall neglect to pay the duties within the time limited, he ſhall forfeit 50 l. half to the king, and half, with full coſts, to him who ſhall ſue.

And by the Stat. 18 Geo. 2. cap. 22. ſect. 23, 24. If he ſhall neglect to pay the ſame as aforeſaid, he ſhall, beſides all other penalties, forfeit double duty.

But there are ſeveral ſtatutes allowing further time to pay the duties and ſtamp indentures, thro' neglect omitted, &c. Stat. 6 & 7 Geo. 1. c. 2. 3 Geo. 2. &c. And acts of indemnity of this nature are uſually paſſed every two or three years.

By the 20 G. 2. cap. 45. ſect. 5. If any maſter, having forfeited the double duty, ſhall pay the ſame, and tender the indenture to be ſtamped, within two years after the determination of the apprenticeſhip, and before ſuit hath been commenced for the penalties, the indenture ſhall be valid, and the penalties diſcharged.

Sect. 6. 7. And if after the maſter ſhall have forfeited the double duty, the apprentice ſhall in the preſence of, or by writing under his hand ſigned in the preſence of one witneſs, require his maſter to pay the ſame, and the maſter ſhall not do it in three months; and ſuch apprentice ſhall at any time within two years after the determination of his apprenticeſhip pay the double duty, he may, in three months after ſuch payment, demand of his maſter double the ſum contracted for in the indenture; and if not paid in three months after, may recover the ſame by action at law, with full coſts. And the apprentice immediately after payment of the ſaid double duties, (if his apprenticeſhip ſhall not be then expired) and ſignifying by writing under his hand, that he deſires to be diſcharged from his apprenticeſhip, ſhall be diſcharged accordingly, and ſhall have the ſame benefit of the time he hath ſerved as he would have had in caſe he had been aſſigned, or turned over to a new maſter.

Sect. 8. And where any proſecution ſhall be commenced againſt the maſter for the penalties, if the apprentice ſhall pay the double duty at any time in two years after the end of his apprenticeſhip, he may thereupon exerciſe his trade, and the indenture ſhall be valid, and may be given in evidence.

II. With regard to their being provided for, &c—

As by the Stat. 5 Eliz. c. 4. the juſtices of the peace have a power of impoſing an apprentice on a maſter, in conſequence thereof an indictment lies for diſobedience to their orders, either in not receiving, or receiving and after turning off, or not providing for ſuch apprentice; for tho' an act of parliament preſcribes an eaſier way of proceeding by complaint; yet that does not exclude the remedy by indictment. 6 Mod. 163. 1 Salk. 381.

The juſtices of peace may diſcharge an apprentice not only on the default of the maſter, but alſo on his own default; for in ſuch caſe it is but reaſonable that the contracts, which were made by their authority, ſhould be diſſolved by the ſame power. Skin. 108. 5 Mod. 139. 2 Salk. 471.

Juſtices may not only diſcharge apprentices, but may oblige the maſter to refund part of the money.

It hath been held, that an order on the maſter to return money is good, tho' it is not averred that he had any with the apprentice; for the order being to return money, is as neceſſary a proof of the receipt of it, as if it had been expreſsly alledged: and in this caſe the court ſeemed to be of opinion, that the juſtices had juriſdiction as to diſcharging and obliging the maſter to refund, as well in other trades as thoſe mentioned in the ſtatute; and that the juſtices are not obliged in their orders to ſet forth all the ſteps they take in their proceeding, there being nothing in the act which makes it neceſſary, and that there was a known and eſtabliſhed diſtinction between orders and convictions. Trin. 7 Geo. 2. in B. R. The king v. Amies.

Juſtices have likewiſe a power to ſettle differences between maſters and apprentices.

By the Stat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 19. Any two juſtices, upon complaint of any apprentice put out by the pariſh, or with whom no more than 5 l. was paid, of any miſuſage, refuſal of neceſſary proviſions, cruelty, or other ill treatment by his maſter, may ſummon the maſter to appear before them, and upon proof of the complaint on oath to their ſatisfaction, (whether the maſter be preſent or not, if ſervice of the ſummons be proved) to diſcharge ſuch apprentice by warrant or certificate, for which no fee ſhall be paid: and on complaint of the maſter againſt any ſuch apprentice, touching any miſdemeanor, miſcarriage, or ill behaviour, the juſtices may puniſh the offender by commitment to the houſe of correction, there to be corrected and kept to hard labour, not exceeding a calendar month; or otherwiſe by diſcharging ſuch offender. Either party may appeal to the ſeſſions, and the determination there is to be final. By 31 G. 2. c. 11. This act is extended to ſervants in huſbandry, though hired for leſs than a year.

With regard to the aſſigning of apprentices, it hath been held, that an apprentice is not aſſignable. He cannot be bound nor diſcharged without deed. 1 Salk. 68. pl. 7. Mich. 13 W. 3. B. R.

But though an apprentice is not aſſignable, yet ſuch aſſignment amounts to a contract between the two maſters, that the child ſhould ſerve the latter. 1 Salk. 68. pl. 7. Mich. 13 W. 3. B. R. Caſter v. Eccles Pariſh.

Likewiſe, by the cuſtom of the city of London, an apprentice may be turned over from one maſter to another; and if the maſter refuſe to make the apprentice free at the end of the term, the chamberlain may make him free: in other corporations, there muſt be a mandamus to the mayor, &c. to make him free in ſuch caſe. Danv. Abr. 421. Wood's Inſt. 51.

But it hath been held, that tho' juſtices of peace have a juriſdiction of diſcharging apprentices, and may bind them to other maſters, that they cannot turn them over; and therefore an order that an apprentice, whoſe maſter was dead, ſhould ſerve the remainder of his time with his maſter's widow's ſecond huſband, was quaſhed; becauſe the juſtices have nothing to do about turning over an apprentice; and that tho' he applied to them, that could not give them a juriſdiction. Comb. 324.

It ſeems agreed, that if a man be bound to inſtruct an apprentice in a trade for ſeven years, and the maſter dies, that the condition is diſpenſed with, being a thing perſonal; but if he be bound further, that in the mean time he will find him in meat, drink, and cloathing and other neceſſaries, here the death of the maſter doth not diſpenſe with the condition, but his executors ſhall be bound to perform it as far as they have aſſets. 1 Sid. 216. 1 Keb. 761, 820. 1 Lev. 177.

But if a perſon is bound apprentice by a juſtice of peace, and the maſter happens to die before the term expired, the juſtices have no power to oblige his executor, by their order, to receive ſuch apprentice and maintain him; for by this method the executor is deprived of the liberty of pleading plene adminiſtravit, (which he may do, in caſe covenant be brought againſt him) and muſt maintain the apprentice, whether he hath aſſets or not. Carth. 231. 1 Salk. 66. 1 Show. 405. It is ſaid, however, that the executor or adminiſtrator may bind him to another maſter for the remaining part of his time. Burn. 38.

But it is ſaid, that in this caſe of the maſter's dying, by the cuſtom of London, the executor muſt put the apprentice to another maſter of the ſame trade. 1 Salk. 66. per Holt Ch. J.

Whatever an apprentice gains is for the uſe of his maſter; and whether he was legally bound or no, is not material, if he was an apprentice de facto. Salk. 68. For inticing an apprentice to imbezil goods, indictment will lie. 1 Salk. 380. A maſter may be indicted for not providing for, or turning away, an apprentice. If a maſter gives an apprentice licence to leave him, it cannot afterwards be recalled. Mod. Caſ. 70. An apprentice marries, without the maſter's privity, that will not juſtify his turning him away, but he muſt ſue his covenant. 2 Vern. 492. By the cuſtom of the city of London a freeman may turn away his apprentice for gaming. Ibid. 241. Though if a maſter turns an apprentice away on account of negligence, &c. equity may decree him to refund part of the money given with him. 1 Vern. Rep. 460. As no apprentice can be made without writing; ſo none may be diſcharged by his maſter, but by writing under his hand, and with the allowance of a juſtice of peace, by ſtatute. Dalt. 121.

III. As to the exerciſing of trades.

By the Common law no man may be prohibited to work in any lawful trade, or in more trades than one, at his pleaſure. 11 Co. 53.

So that without an act of parliament no man may be reſtrained, either from working in any lawful trade, or uſing divers myſteries or trades; therefore an act of parliament made to reſtrain any perſon herein, muſt be taken ſtrictly, and not favourably as acts made in affirmance of the Common law. Burn. 39.

It is enacted by the 5 Eliz. cap. 4. ſect. 31. "That it ſhall not be lawful to any perſon or perſons, other than ſuch as now do lawfully uſe or exerciſe any art, myſtery, or manual occupation, to ſet up, occupy, uſe or exerciſe any craft, miſtery or occupation, now uſed or occupied within the realm of England or Wales, except he ſhall have been brought up therein ſeven years, at the leaſt, as an apprentice, in manner and form aboveſaid; nor to ſet any perſon on work in ſuch myſtery, art or occupation, being not a workman at this day, except he ſhall have been apprentice, as is aforeſaid; or elſe having ſerved as an apprentice, as is aforeſaid, ſhall or will become a journeyman, or hired by the year; upon pain that every perſon willingly offending, or doing the contrary, ſhall forfeit and loſe for every default forty ſhillings for every month."

It hath been ruled, that there are many trades within the general words and equity of this act, beſides thoſe which are particularly enumerated therein; yet it ſeems agreed, and hath frequently been adjudged, that in every indictment, &c. it muſt be alledged, that it was a trade at the time of making the ſtatute, for the words thereof are, any craft, miſtery or occupation, now uſed, &c. from whence it ſeems to follow, that a new manufacture, which to all other purpoſes may be called a trade, is yet not a trade within this ſtatute. 2 Salk. 611. Palm. 528. 1 Sid. 175.

Alſo it ſeems agreed, that the act only extends to ſuch trades as imply miſtery and craft, and require ſkill and experience; that therefore merchants, huſbandmen, gardeners, &c. are not within the ſtatute; and on this foundation it hath been held, that a hemp-dreſſer is not within the ſtatute, as not requiring much learning or ſkill, and being what every huſbandman doth uſe for his neceſſary occaſions. 8 Co. 130. 2 Bulſt. 190. Cro. Car. 499.

It is clearly agreed, that the following the common trade of a brewer, baker, or cook, is within the ſtatute, as unſkilfulneſs herein may be very prejudicial to the lives and healths of his majeſty's ſubjects; but it is at the ſame time agreed, that the exerciſing of any of theſe trades in a man's own houſe or family, or in a private perſon's houſe, is not within the reſtraint of the ſtatute. 11 Co. 54. a. Cro. Car. 499. Hob. 183, 211. Moor 886. 8 Co. 129 Palm. 542. Lit. Rep. 251. Bridg. 141.

It hath been held, that this ſtatute doth not reſtrain a man from uſing ſeveral trades, ſo as he had been an apprentice to all; wherefore it indemnifies all petty chapmen in little towns and villages, becauſe their maſters kept the ſame mixed trades there before. Carth. 163.

A man may exerciſe as many trades as he hath worked at, or ſerved as an apprentice to, for ſeven years. Wilſ. Rep. part 2. 168.

It hath been reſolved, that there is no occaſion for any actual binding, but that the following a trade for ſeven years, is a ſufficient qualification within the ſtatute. 1 Salk. 67. 2 Salk. 613.

By the ſtatutes 2 P. & M. c. 11. 5 Eliz. c. 4. Aliens and denizens are reſtrained to uſe any handicraft or trade therein mentioned, unleſs they have ſerved ſeven years apprenticeſhip within the realm, under the penalty of 40 s. per month. Hutt. 132. But it hath been adjudged, that if an apprentice ſerve ſeven years beyond ſea, he ſhall be excuſed from the penalties of the ſtatute. 5 Eliz. c. 4. And ſo if he ſerves ſeven years, tho' he was never bound. 1 Salk. 76.

So it hath been held, that ſerving five years to a trade out of England and two in England, is ſufficient to ſatisfy the ſtatute; but that there muſt be a ſervice of a full time; and therefore ſerving five years in any country, where by the law of the country more is not required, will not qualify a man to uſe the trade in England. Ca. in Law and Eq. 70.

By the ſtatute 31 Eliz. cap. 5. ſect. 7. It is enacted, "That all ſuits for uſing a trade without having been brought up in it, ſhall be ſued and proſecuted in the general quarter ſeſſions of the peace, or aſſiſes in the ſame county where the offence ſhall be committed, or otherwiſe inquired of, heard and determined in the aſſiſes, or general quarter ſeſſions of the peace in the ſame county where ſuch offence ſhall be committed, or in the leet within which it ſhall happen, and not in any wiſe out of the ſame county where ſuch offence ſhall happen or be committed."

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute it hath been held, that it reſtrains not a ſuit in the King's Bench or Exchequer, for ſuch offence happening in the ſame county where theſe courts are ſitting; for the negative words of the ſtatute are not, that ſuch ſuits ſhall not be brought in any other court, but that they ſhall not be brought in any other county; and the prerogative of theſe high courts ſhall not be reſtrained without expreſs words. Cro. Jac. 178. Hob. 184. 1 Salk. 373.

But where the offence is in a different county, ſuch ſuits in theſe, or any other courts out of the proper county ſeem to be within the expreſs words of the ſtatute. Hob. 184, 327. Cro. Jac. 85.

Infants voluntarily binding themſelves apprentice, and continuing ſeven years, ſhall have the benefit of their trades; but a bond for their ſervice ſhall not bind them. Cro Car. 179. See the Stat. 6 G. 3. c. 25. for the better regulating of apprentices, and the Stats. 22 Geo. 2. c 44. & 3 Geo. 3. c. 8. enabling ſoldiers and mariners to exerciſe trades. Alſo vide Oct. Index to Stats. tit. Apprentices.

IV. As to apprentices acquiring ſettlements, it will be neceſſary to conſider the following ſtatutes.

By Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. On complaint by the churchwardens or overſeers within 40 days after any perſon ſhall come to ſettle in any pariſh, on any tenement, under 10 l. a year; two juſtices (one of whom to be of the quorum) may remove him to the place where he was laſt legally ſettled, either as a native, houſholder, ſojourner, apprentice or ſervant, for the ſpace of 40 days at the leaſt.

By 1 Jac. 2. c. 17. and 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11. The ſaid 40 days ſhall be reckoned, not from the time of his coming to inhabit, but from the time of his delivering notice in writing, and of the publication of ſuch notice in the church.

And by the ſaid ſtatute of 3 & 4 Will. & M. c. 11. ſect. 8. If any perſon ſhall be bound an apprentice by indenture, and inhabit in any town or pariſh, ſuch binding and inhabitation ſhall be adjudged a good ſettlement, though no ſuch notice in writing be delivered and publiſhed.

By 31 Geo. 2. c. 11. No apprentice bound by any deed, writing or contract, not indented, being firſt legally ſtamped, ſhall be liable to be removed from the town, pariſh or place where he or ſhe ſhall have been ſo bound an apprentice, and reſident forty days, by virtue of any order of removal, granted by two juſtices of the peace of any county, &c. or by virtue of any order of the juſtices at their general or quarter ſeſſions, by reaſon or on account of ſuch deed, writing or contract, not being indented only.

By ſtatute 12 Ann. ſt. 1. c. 18. ſect. 2. If any perſon ſhall be an apprentice bound by indenture, to any perſon reſiding under a certificate, in any pariſh, townſhip, or place, and not afterwards having gained a legal ſettlement in ſuch pariſh, &c. ſuch apprentice, by virtue of ſuch apprenticeſhip, &c. ſhall not gain any ſettlement in ſuch pariſh, &c. but every ſuch apprentice ſhall have his ſettlement in ſuch pariſh, &c. as if he had not been bound apprentice.

And by the 9 & 10 W. c. 11. No perſon, who ſhall come into any pariſh by a certificate, ſhall be adjudged by any act whatſoever to gain a ſettlement in ſuch pariſh, unleſs he ſhall bona fide take a tenement of 10 l. a year, or execute an annual office in ſuch pariſh. (And conſequently not by apprenticeſhip.) Vide (however) Ca. of Settlements 58.

Where one is bound apprentice by indenture, it cannot be diſcharged but by deed or by ſeſſions, and a hiring after he is bound, or any conſequences ariſing upon ſuch hiring, are intirely void whilſt the indenture ſubſiſts, and till it is defeaſanced; for when an apprentice ſerves 40 days, by virtue of the indenture, he cannot gain another ſettlement, tho' his maſter conſents, becauſe he had a ſettlement by the ſervice under the indenture. Admitted per cur. 8 Mod. 236. Paſch. 10 Geo. Buckington pariſh v. Sevington

But binding an apprentice and ſerving will not make a ſettlement, but the ſettlement muſt be by inhabiting, which cannot be but where the party lodges; per Forteſcue and Raymond J. 2 Ld. Raym. Rep 1731, S. C. by name of The Inhabitants of S. John Baptiſt in Devizes v. The inhabitants of Biſhops Cannings. Vide Caſes of Settlements 118. pl. 159 Trin. 1724. B. R.

A poor child being bound apprentice at A. was aſſigned over to another maſter that lived in B. held he ſhould gain a ſettlement at B. where his ſecond maſter lived. 1 Salk. 68. pl. 7. Mich. 13 W. 3. B. R. Caſtor v. Aicles pariſh.

Upon a ſpecial order of ſeſſions the caſe was ſtated, that an apprentice was bound to A. in one pariſh, but by agreement ſerved B. in another pariſh, and the ſeſſions ſettled him with B. and by the court; he gains a ſettlement in the laſt place; for a perſon may ſerve his maſter in another pariſh or place; and altho' he ſerves another man, yet it is by conſent of his maſter, and the benefit accrues to his maſter. Stran. 554. Caſes of S. 153. Trin. 9 Geo. 1 Between the pariſhes of Allhallows on the Wall and St. Olave in Surry.

The ſon was bound an apprentice to his father, and the father gave up his indenture to the ſon, and bound him out to a ſervice into another pariſh for a year, where he ſerved, but did not cancel the indenture, and becoming poor the juſtices ordered him laſt legally ſettled in the pariſh where the father lived, becauſe, the indenture being ſtill in force, his apprenticeſhip continued; per cur. The indenture not being cancelled, the obligation of the apprentice continues. 6 Mod. 190, 191.

V. As to their puniſhment for particular offences, it is to be obſerved, That

At Common law, a ſervant or apprentice, without any regard to age, may be guilty of felony in feloniouſly taking away the goods of their maſter, tho' they were goods under their charge, as a ſhepherd, butler, &c. and may at this day for any ſuch offence be indicted, as for felony at Common law; but at Common law, if a man had delivered goods to his ſervant to keep, or carry for him, and he carried them away animo furandi; this was conſidered only a breach of truſt, but not felony. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 505, 666.

But now by the ſtatute of 21 H. 8. cap. 7. It is enacted, that ſervants guilty of a breach of truſt in imbeziling money, goods, &c. delivered to them to the value of 40 s. or above, are guilty of felony; with a proviſo nevertheleſs, that the act do not extend to apprentices, nor to perſons under the age of eighteen years.

By the act of 27 H. 8. cap. 17. Clergy was taken away in this caſe, if the indictment were laid ſpecially upon the act of 21 H. 8. c. 7. and purſuant to the ſame, and by the act 28 H. 8. cap. 2. this act of 21 H. 8. c. 7. was made perpetual; but by the act of 1 Ed. 6. cap. 12. theſe acts were both repealed; but again, by the act of 5 Eliz. cap. 10. this act of 27 H. 8. c. 17. was re-enacted and revived; but it did not revive the act of 27 H. 8. c. 7. for taking away clergy. But now by 12 Ann. cap. 7. clergy in ſuch caſe is taken from facts committed in any houſe or out-houſe, except as to apprentices under the age of fifteen years robbing their maſters. 1 Hale's P. C. 666, 667.

The ſtatute however extends only to ſuch as were ſervants to the owner of the goods, both at the time they were delivered, and alſo at the time when they were ſtolen. 1 Hawk. P. C. 92.

Therefore a receiver, who having received his maſter's rents runs away with them; or a ſervant, who being intruſted to ſell goods, or to receive money due on a bond, ſells the goods, &c. and departs with the money, is not within the ſtatute. A ſervant who receives his maſter's goods from another ſervant, to keep for the maſter, is as much guilty as if he had received them from the maſter's own hands; becauſe ſuch delivery is looked upon as a delivery by the maſter, Dyer 5. pl. 2, 3. 3 Inſt. 105. 1 Hawk. P. C. 92.

As to apprenticeſhip, vide Black. Com. 1 V. 427, 8.

Appropriation, (appropriatio, from the Fr, approprier) Is the annexing of a benefice. originally juris divini & in patrimonio nullius, to the proper and perpetual uſe of ſome religious houſe, biſhoprick, college, or ſpiritual perſon, to enjoy for ever. And when appropriation is made, the patron is perpetual parſon, and hath perpetual inſtitution and induction; for the appropriation alone is a ſufficient admiſſion, &c. Plowd. 499. To make an appropriation, the king's licence is to be obtained in Chancery, (8 Rep. 11) the conſent of the ordinary, patron and incumbent, where the church is full, and of the dioceſan, and patron, if the benefice is void. Plowd. 496. 15 R. 2. c. 6. Appropriation made during the vacancy of the benefice is executed immediately; and when the church is full, by apt words, the patron is conſtituted parſon, after it becomes void. 11 Rep. 11. An appropriation may be by the king alone, where he himſelf is patron: as when by letters patent he grants the advowſon which he is ſeiſed of in right of his crown to a dean and chapter, &c. Plowd. 499. No appropriation can be made properly, unleſs to a ſpiritual perſon capable of the cure: it may be to a biſhop, &c. and his ſucceſſors. Danv. Abr. 511.

The act of endowment by the biſhop might be made, either in the act of appropriation, or by a ſubſequent act and a ſeparate inſtrument; which is mentioned in this place, that in ſearching for endowments in the regiſtries of biſhops, or the court of augmentations, neither the one nor the other ſhould be neglected; for altho' a ſeparate act or inſtrument of endowment may not be found, yet it is poſſible the endowment may have been made in the act of appropriation. Gibſ. 719.

Upon the making an appropriation, an annual penſion was reſerved to the biſhop and his ſucceſſors, commonly called an indemnity, and payable by the body to whom the appropriation was made. The ground of which reſervation, in an ancient appropriation in the regiſtry of the archbiſhop of Canterbury, is expreſſed to be, for a recompence of the profits which the biſhop would otherwiſe have received during the vacation of ſuch churches. Gibſ. 719.

Where appropriations are made, a vicar is to be endowed to ſerve the cure: and formerly in licences of appropriation, it was expreſſed that the dioceſan ſhould alſo provide a convenient ſum of money to be yearly paid out of the fruits, towards the ſuſtentation of the poor of the pariſh. Stat. 15 R. 2. c. 6. A vicarage endowed may not be appropriated; but it may be united to another church, or to a dean and chapter, or college, with the king's conſent. Hob. 307.

A vicarage by endowment becomes a benefice diſtinct from the parſonage. As the vicar is endowed with ſeparate revenues, and is now enabled by the law to recover his temporal rights, without aid of parſon or patron; ſo hath he the whole cure of ſouls transferred to him, by inſtitution from the biſhop. It is true, in ſome places, both the parſon and the vicar do receive inſtitution from the biſhop to the ſame church, as it is in the caſe of ſinecures: the original of which was thus: the rector (with proper conſent) had a power to intitle a vicar in his church, to officiate under him; and this was often done; and by this means, two perſons were inſtituted to the ſame church, and both to the cure of ſouls, and both did actually officiate. So that however the rectors of ſinecures, by having been long excuſed from reſidence, are in the common opinion diſcharged from the cure of ſouls, (which is the reaſon of the name); and however the cure is ſaid in the law-books to be in them habitualiter only; yet in ſtrictneſs of law, and with regard to their original inſtitution, the cure is in them actualiter, as much as it is in the vicar. Gibſ. 719.

The parſon, by making the endowment, acquires the patronage of the vicarage. For in order to the appropriation of a parſonage, the inheritance of the advowſon was to be transferred to the corporation to which the church was to be appropriated; and then, the vicarage being derived out of the parſonage, the parſon of common right muſt be patron thereof. So that if the parſon makes a leaſe of the parſonage, (without making a ſpecial reſervation to himſelf of the right of preſenting to the vicarage) the patronage of the vicarage paſſeth as incident to it. But it was held in the 21 Ja. that the pariſhioners may preſcribe for the choice of a vicar. And before that, in the 16 Ja. in the caſe of Shirley and Underhill, it was declared by the court, that tho' the advowſon of the vicarage of common right is appendant to the rectory, yet it may be appendant to a manor; as having been reſerved ſpecially upon the appropriation. Gibſ. 719.

An appropriation cannot regularly be granted over, neither can it endure longer than the body ſpiritual to which it was at firſt appropriated, becauſe by the appropriation not only the glebe and tithes do paſs, which might be granted away if that could be granted over, but it alſo giveth the perſon, to whom the appropriation is made, a ſpiritual function; it makes him parſon of the church, and ſupplieth inſtitution and induction, which, being the higheſt parts of a truſt, cannot for that reaſon be aſſigned over, and therefore every inſtrument of appropriation runs thus, (viz.) That they and their ſucceſſors ſhall be parſons, and not they and their aſſigns; for by the uſual words, that they ſhall hold the church to their own uſe, they are made parſons. Hob. 307. Wright verſus Gerard.

But thoſe to whom granted may make leaſes of the profits. Plowd. 499. If after an appropriation a clerk is preſented to the biſhop, and inſtituted and inducted, the benefice returns to its former nature, and the appropriation is diſſolved. 7 Rep. 13. But if leſſee for years of an appropriation preſents thereto, this diſappropriation ſhall not bind him in the reverſion. Danv. 513. If a feme endowed of an advowſon appropriate, preſents to it, the appropriation is diſſolved. Co. Lit. 46. If a man recovers the advowſon in writ of right, this diſappropriates the church: and diſſolution of the ſpiritual corporation diſappropriates an appropriation. Though appropriation cannot properly be made, except to ſpiritual perſons, and their ſucceſſors; yet by the ſtatute 31 H. 8. c. 13. the kings patentees (although laymen) are rendered capable of parſonages appropriate of diſſolved monaſteries; but theſe are generally called impropriations. Appropriations have been judged an abuſe and robbery of the church and pariſh prieſts, &c. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. 433.

Approve, (approbare) To augment a thing to the utmoſt: to approve land is to make the beſt benefit of it, by increaſing the rent, &c. 2 Inſt. 474.

Approvement Is where a man hath common in the lord's waſte, and the lord makes an incloſure of part of the waſte for himſelf, leaving ſufficient common with egreſs and regreſs for the commoners. Reg. Jud. 8, 9. If there be not ſufficient common left for the tenant, he may have a writ of aſſiſe, and ſhall recover treble damages. Stat. 3 & 4 Ed. 6. c. 3. And a commoner may break down an incloſure, if the lord doth incloſe part of the common, and not leave ſufficient room in the reſidue. But if any, upon juſt title of approvement, do make a hedge or ditch for that purpoſe, which afterwards is thrown down in the night by perſons unknown, the towns adjoining may be diſtrained to make ſuch hedge, &c. for which there is a noſtanter writ. Stat. 13 Ed. 1. c. 46. 2 Inſt. 474. Approvement is to be only by incloſure; and the lord may not, by the ſtatutes of approvement, dig pits for gravel, or coal, &c. 1 Roll. Abr. 90.

405. 9 Rep. 112. Approvement may be made between neighbour and neighbour: though one of them dwell in another town, if the commons join together; and if the lord hath common in the tenant's ground, the tenant may approve. 2 Inſt. 475. The common is to be common appendant or appurtenant, to be ſubject to approvement, and not common in groſs to a certain number. The word approvement is alſo uſed for the profits of the lands themſelves. Cromp. Juriſd. 152. And the ſtatute of Merton 20 H. 3. makes mention of land newly approved. F. N. B. 71. Approvement ann. 43 Eliz. c. 11. is the ſame with improvement.—Idem approveamentum.—Cum omnibus approveamentis & aliis pertinentiis ſuis. Mon. Angl. 607. Approver, or Prover, (approbator) Is one that confeſſing felony committed by himſelf, appealeth or accuſeth others to be guilty of the ſame crime. He is called approver in this ſenſe, becauſe he muſt prove what he hath alledged; and that proof was anciently by battle, or the country, at the election of him appealed: and the form of this accuſation you may find in Crompt. Juſt. 250. See alſo Bracton, lib. 3. Staundſ. Pl. Cor. 52. If a perſon indicted of treaſon or felony, not diſabled to accuſe, upon his arraignment, before any plea pleaded, and before competent judges, confeſſeth the indictment, and takes an oath to reveal all treaſons and felonies that he knoweth of; and therefore prays a coroner to enter his appeal, or accuſation againſt thoſe that are partners in the crime contained in the indictment; ſuch a one is an approver. 3 Inſt. 129. H. P. C. 192. Though the approver is ſworn to diſcover all treaſons and felonies, he is not to be an approver but of the offence whereof he is indicted: and this accuſation of himſelf, and oath, makes his accuſation of another of the ſame crime to amount to an indictment; and if his partners are convicted, the king is to pardon him, as to his life: but he ought not to be ſuffered to continue in the kingdom.

Coroners may award proceſs to the ſheriff againſt appellees in the ſame county, on the diſcovery of the approver: and the juſtices of jaol-delivery, &c. have power to award proceſs in any county to apprehend and try them. 2 Hawk. Pl. Cor. 208. A man may be an approver againſt any perſon within the realm, if there be ſuch a perſon, and he be named of the county where he dwells; but if there be no ſuch perſon, the approver ſhall be hanged for his falſe appeal. Ibid. 206. When a perſon hath once pleaded Not guilty, he cannot be an approver. 3 Inſt. 129. And perſons attainted of treaſon or felony ſhall not be approvers; their accuſation will not then be of ſuch credit as to put a man upon his trial. 2 Hawk. 205. Vide 5 H. 4. cap. 2. as to charters of pardon.

Infants under age of diſcretion may not be approvers: and it being in the diſcretion of the court to ſuffer one to be an approver, this method of late hath ſeldom been practiſed. But we have, in caſes of burglary and robbery on the highway, what ſeems to amount to the ſame, by ſtatute; it being ordained, that where perſons charged with ſuch crimes, out of priſon, diſcover two others concerned in the crime, they ſhall have a pardon, &c. Stat. 5 Ann. c. 31.

Approvers, Anno 9 H. 6. Bailiffs of lords in their franchiſes are called their approvers: and approvers in the marches of Wales were ſuch as had licence de vendre & acheter beaſts, &c. But by the ſtatute 2 Ed. 3. c. 12. approvers are ſuch as are ſent into counties to increaſe the farms of hundreds, &c. held by ſheriffs. Such perſons as have the letting of the king's demeſnes, in ſmall manors, are called approvers of the king (approbatores regis) anno 51 H. 3. And in the Stat. 1 Ed. 3. c. 8. Sheriffs are called the king's approvers.

Appruare, To take to his own uſe or profit, viz. domini vaſtorum & boſcorum, &c. Appruare ſe poſſunt de vaſtis, &c. W. 2. c. 20.

Appurtenances, (pertinentia) Derived from the French appartenir, to belong to, ſignify things both corporeal and incorporeal appertaining to another thing as principal: as hamlets to a chief manor; and common of paſture, piſcary, &c. Alſo liberties and ſervices of tenants. Brit. cap. 39. If a man grant common of eſtovers to be burnt in his manor, theſe are appurtenant to the manor; for things appurtenant may be granted at this day. Co. Lit. 121. Common appurtenant may be to a houſe, paſture, &c. Outhouſes, yards, orchards, and gardens are appurtenant to a meſſuage; but lands cannot properly be ſaid to be appurtenant to a meſſuage. 1 Lill. Abr. 91. And one meſſuage cannot be appurtenant to another. Ibid. Lands cannot, in the true ſenſe of the words cum pertinentiis, be appurtenant to the houſe; but the word pertinens may be taken in the ſenſe of uſually letten or occupied with the houſe. Plowd. 170. Lands ſhall paſs in a leaſe or deviſe of a houſe with the appurtenances, as pertaining to the ſame, when it hath been uſed and occupied with it ten years or more; which is judged a ſufficient time to make it appertaining to the houſe. Cro. El. 704.

By the later authorities, lands will not paſs by the word appurtenances, but only ſuch things which do properly belong to the houſe; as where a man was ſeiſed of two houſes and of eighty acres of land belonging to one of them, known by a particular name, and made a feoffment of the houſe and eighty acres to B. who made another feoffment to the ſaid feoffor, by which he took back the ſame houſe and lands, and forty acres more by another name; and about ten years afterwards he deviſed this houſe, and all the lands thereunto appertaining, to his youngeſt ſon; adjudged, that tho' he uſed thoſe forty acres with the houſe for ten years and more, yet it would not paſs by theſe words thereunto appertaining, becauſe they were conveyed to him by a new name. Palm. 375. Loftus verſus Baker. Godb. 352. S. C. reported by the name of Knight's caſe. Cro. Car. 57. Hearn verſus Allen, S. P. Hutt. 85. S. C. Litt. Rep. 8. S. C.

Lands, a common. &c. may be appurtenant to a houſe; though not a way. 3 Salk. 40. Grant of a manor, without the words cum pertinentiis, 'tis ſaid will paſs all things belonging to the manor. Owen's Rep. 31. Where a perſon hath a meſſuage, &c. to which eſtovers are appurtenant, and it is blown down or burnt by the act of God; if the owner re-edify it, in the ſame place and manner as before, he ſhall have the ancient appurtenances. 4 Rep. 86. A turbary may be appurtenant to a houſe; ſo a ſeat in a church, &c. but not to land; for the things muſt agree in nature and quality. 3 Salk. 40. Vide tit. Appendant, and ſee *Plo. Arbitrator, (Lat.) Is a private extraordinary judge between party and party, choſen by mutual conſent, to determine controverſies between them. Weſt. Symb. ſect. 21. And arbitrators are ſo called, becauſe they have an arbitrary power; for if they obſerve the ſubmiſſion, and keep within due bounds, their ſentences are definitive, from which there lies no appeal. 1 Roll. Abr. 251. The award of arbitrators is definitive, and being choſen by the parties, they are not tied to ſuch formalities of law as judges in other caſes are; and yet they have as great power as other judges to determine the matters in variance; but their determination muſt be certain, and it is to be according to the expreſs condition of the bond, or rule, by which the parties ſubmit themſelves to their judgment. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 234. Dyer 356. The Chancery will not give relief againſt the award of the arbitrators, except it be for corruption, &c. And where their award is not ſtrictly binding by the rules of law, a court of equity can decree a performance. Chanc. Rep. 279. 1 Vern. 24. But when arbitrators make their award upon one day, they cannot make another award between the parties on any other day. 26 Hen. 6. 52. 39 Hen. 6. 12. The arbitrators may agree upon a thing one day, and of another thing another time, and at laſt make an award of the whole. 47 Ed. 3. 21. 2 Mod. Entr. Engl. 262.

When the matter is referred to two, and they cannot agree, but leave it to be determined by a third perſon, his determination is called an umpirage. 8 Rep. 98. But the arbritrators are to refuſe, and declare they will make no award, before the umpire ſhall proceed: though an umpire's award ſhall be good where the arbitrators make a void award, which is no award. 1 Lill. Abr. 170. It is ſaid an umpirage cannot be made till the arbitrators time is out; and if any other power be given to the umpire it is not good, for two perſons cannot have a ſeveral juriſdiction at one time. 1 Mod. Rep. 15.

The arbitrators are perſons indifferently choſen, to determine the matters in controverſy according to their own minds, whether they be matters of law or fact; infants, perſons excommunicate, outlawed, &c. may be arbitrators; for every perſon muſt uſe his own diſcretion in the choice of his judges, and being at liberty to chuſe whom he likes beſt, cannot afterwards object the want of honeſty or underſtanding to them, or that they have not done him juſtice. Weſt. Symb. 2 part, ſect. 27.

The arbitrators are perſons truſted with the authority, and it is not within their power to aſſign it.

Neither natural nor legal diſabilities do hinder any one from being an arbitrator; if they are incompetent judges, the fault is thoſe that chuſe them.

Before we diſmiſs this article, it will be neceſſary briefly to conſider,

What things may be ſubmitted to arbitration, and by whom.

It is held clearly, that all chattels perſonal, and perſonal actions, ſuch as treſpaſs, conſpiracy, maintenance, and things of an uncertain nature, may be determined by arbitration, and the right transferred by naked award, though the ſubmiſſion were not by deed; for theſe being transferrable by the party himſelf without any ſolemnity, whatever the parties themſelves could do, may be done by the arbitrators, who are their ſubſtitutes, and ſtand in their place; and if on theſe ſubmiſſions without deed, the arbitrators award one party a ſum certain, he may bring an action of debt for it; but if the award be of doing ſome other thing, which is beneficial to him, he muſt have his action on the caſe. 22 Hen. 6. 39. 9 Co. 78. 1 Roll. Abr. 242.

Bonds are generally executed and exchanged between the parties at variance, to perform the award, for the non-performance of which action of debt may be brought on the bond. The defendant may pray oyer of the bond and condition, and then plead according to the nature of his caſe, and the plaintiff reply thereto, or demur, as occaſion requires; ſo that the whole of the caſe will by theſe means come before the court.

A debt on a ſpecialty or record, tho' certain, may be ſubmitted and transferred by an award, amongſt other things, but not by itſelf. 1 Lev. 192. But freehold, or inheritance of lands, cannot be determined by arbitrament; and therefore there cannot be a partition by an award; for freehold doth not paſs without livery. 1 Roll. Abr. 242. So the intereſt of an eſtate for years cannot be transferred by an award; for it is a chattel real. 1 Roll. Abr. 242. Contr. Dyer 183. a. in marg. 2 Leon. 104. Cro. Eliz. 223.

But qu. if parties, by bond, or rule of court, ſubmit ſuch queſtions to arbitration, are they not bound to perform whatever is legally directed by the arbitrators, and conſequently obliged if ſo directed to make due conveyances, or otherwiſe be liable to an action on the bond, or an attachment, upon the rule of reference, made a rule of court? See the next clauſe.

If a man be bound to ſtand to an award, and the arbitrators make an award, that land ſhall be conveyed; if the party refuſes the conveyance, he forfeits the obligation. 1 Roll. Abr. 244. So, if an award be, that one ſhall pay ſo much in ſatisfaction of a ſpecialty; though the ſpecialty is not thereby diſcharged, yet if he commences an action upon the ſpecialty afterwards, he forfeits his obligation. 1 Roll. Abr. 242. 2 Cro. 447.

An annuity is not determinable by award, for it is reckoned in nature of a freehold, and therefore cannot paſs without the deed of the party. 9 Hen. 6. 60. 14 Hen. 4. 19. 3 Hen. 4. 6. 1 Roll. Abr. 266. but vide ante, and poſt.

It has been doubted, whether leaſes for years, being chattels real, could be transferred by award; therefore it ſeems ſafeſt when the controverſy relates to theſe, that the parties be bound in mutual obligations to perform the award, and then if the arbitrators award that one ſhall aſſign, transfer, &c. the leaſe to the other, if he refuſes, he forfeits his obligation. 1 Roll. Abr. 242. 9 Co. 78. 6 Co. 41.

Cauſes criminal are not arbitrable, becauſe they ought to be puniſhed for the common good. Weſt. Symb. part 2. ſect. 33.

Alſo cauſes matrimonial ſeem not arbitrable, becauſe marriage ought to be free, and religion diſallows the ſevering thoſe whom the church hath joined. Weſt. Symb. part 2. ſect. 33. 1 Roll. Abr. 252. But the damages a perſon ſuſtained by a promiſe of marriage, or any thing relating to a marriage portion, may be ſubmitted. 16 Ed. 4. 2.

Debts due by ſpecialty cannot be diſcharged by naked award; but if the ſubmiſſion were by bond, the award would be a good bar, for one ſpecialty may be diſſolved by another. 1 Hen. 7. 16. b. Dyer 51. 6 Co. 44.

A certain and fixed debt is not diſcharged by an award, but the end and deſign of an arbitration is to reduce uncertain debts and duties to a certainty; and to award a man a certain debt is to give him no more, nor do any greater thing for him than was done before, for now he can have but an action, and that he might have had before, and to give him leſs than he had before is to do him a manifeſt injuſtice, which the arbitrator cannot do. Cro. Jac. 99, 447, 647. 3 Hen. 4. 4. 4 Hen. 7. 6. 10 Hen. 7. 4. 1 Roll. Abr. 264.

Submiſſions are likewiſe general; as of all controverſies, debts, dues, &c. and here the arbitrators are not obliged to determine all matters diſcloſed, but their arbitration of ſome things will be good, tho' they leave other things undone; but where the ſubmiſſion is ſpecial or conditional, ita quod an award be made of all controverſies depending, they ought to determine all matters whereof they have notice, becauſe here, by the expreſs words of the authority, I do not own his determination, unleſs all matters in controverſy are ſettled; and therefore to determine one without the others, is to act contrary to the authority; but if, upon ſuch a ſubmiſſion, the arbitrators make an award but of one thing, it ſhall be intended there were no others to make an award of, unleſs the other ſide ſhew there was, and that the arbitrators had notice thereof. Cro. Eliz. 839. Cro. Jac. 200, 355. 8 Co. 98. Dyer 216. 1 Roll. Abr. 257. 1 Saund. 32. 1 Brownl. 63.

As to the perſons who may ſubmit to arbitration, it is to be obſerved, that Perſons that cannot contract, cannot ſubmit to arbitration, therefore femes covert, and perſons compelled by threats and impriſonment cannot ſubmit. 9 Ed. 3. 23. 10 Hen. 6. 14, 19. Latch 27.

The huſband may ſubmit the chattels he hath in right of his wife to an award, for he may diſpoſe of them. Style 351. March 77, 78.

If the huſband ſubmits to arbitration the chattels the wife hath as executrix or adminiſtratrix, this ſhall bind the wife, becauſe the wife cannot perſonate any one without the huſband during coverture. 21 Hen. 7. 29. 1 Roll. Rep. 269. Cro. Jac. 447.

If an infant ſubmit to arbitration, he may execute or avoid it at his election, as he may all other his contracts. 13 Hen. 4. 12. 10 H. 6. 14. March 111, 141. 1 Jones 164. 1 Lev. 17. 1 Roll. Abr. 730.

Perſons attainted or outlawed cannot ſubmit to arbitration, for they have no property, and cannot by the law controvert any thing. 3 Hen. 6. 26. 5 Hen. 7. 16.

A dean without the chapter, a mayor without his commonalty, the maſter of a college or hoſpital without his fellows, cannot ſubmit to an award, for the ſubmiſſion has the force of a contract, and they cannot contract without them. 21 Ed. 4. 13.

If one party and the deputy or attorney of the other party ſubmit to an award, this is well enough, for the act of my deputy is my own act. Dyer 21. 1 Roll. Abr. 244. 2 Mod. 228.

If ſeveral perſons do a treſpaſs, and one of the wrongdoers and the party to whom it is done ſubmit to arbitration, and an award is made, the other perſons ſhall take advantage of it by way of extinguiſhment of the treſpaſs; the ſame law where the party releaſes to one of them; for in both caſes a ſatisfaction really is, or is preſumed to be made, and a man cannot receive a double compenſation for the ſame wrong. 1 Salk. 70. Carth. 412. 20 Hen. 6. 12. a. 41. a. *Rol. Arbitrament, (arbitrium) Is the ſentence or determination pronounced by arbitrators, and publiſhed when they have heard all parties. And arbitrament is either general, of all actions, demands, quarrels, &c. or ſpecial, of ſome certain matters in controverſy: it may be alſo abſolute, or conditional. 8 Rep. 98. Archbiſhop, (archiepiſcopus) Is the chief of the clergy in his province, and is that ſpiritual ſecular perſon, who hath ſupreme power under the king in all eccleſiaſtical cauſes: and the manner of his creation and conſecration, by an archbiſhop and two other biſhops, &c. you may find in the Stat. 25 Hen. 8. c. 20. An archbiſhop is ſaid to be inthroned, when a biſhop is ſaid to be inſtalled; and there are four things to compleat a biſhop or archbiſhop, as well as a parſon: firſt, election, which reſembles preſentation; the next is confirmation, and this reſembles admiſſion; next, conſecration, which reſembles inſtitution; and the laſt is inſtallation, reſembled to induction. 3 Salk. 72. In ancient times the archbiſhop was biſhop over all England, as Auſtin was, who is ſaid to be the firſt archbiſhop here; but before the Saxon conqueſt the Britains had only one biſhop, and not any archbiſhop. 1 Roll. Rep. 328. 2 Roll. 440.

But at this day, the eccleſiaſtical ſtate of England and Wales is divided only into two provinces or archbiſhopricks, to wit, Canterbury and York. Each archbiſhop hath within his province biſhops of ſeveral dioceſes. The archbiſhop of Canterbury hath under him within his province, of ancient foundations, Rocheſter, London, Wincheſter, Norwich, Lincoln, Ely, Chicheſter, Saliſbury, Exeter, Bath and Wells, Worceſter, Coventry and Litchfield, Hereford, Landaff, St. David's, Bangor, and St. Aſaph; and four founded by king Henry 8. erected out of the ruins of diſſolved monaſteries, viz. Glouceſter, Briſtol, Peterborough, and Oxford. The archbiſhop of York hath under him four, viz. the biſhop of the county palatine of Cheſter, newly erected by king Henry 8. and annexed by him to the archbiſhoprick of York; the county palatine of Durham; Carliſle; and the iſle of Man, annexed to the province of York by king Hen. 8. but a greater number this archbiſhop anciently had, which time hath taken from him. Co. Lit. 94.

The archbiſhop of Canterbury is now ſtiled metropolitanus & primus totius Angliæ; and the archbiſhop of York ſtiled primus & metropolitanus Angliæ. They are called archbiſhops in reſpect of the biſhops under them; and metropolitans, becauſe they were conſecrated at firſt in the metropolis of the province. 4 Inſt. 94. Both the archbiſhops have diſtinct provinces, wherein they have ſuffragan biſhops of ſeveral dioceſes, with juriſdiction under them. And each hath two concurrent juriſdictions, one as ordinary, or the biſhop himſelf within his dioceſe; the other as ſuperintendant throughout his whole province of all eccleſiaſtical matters, to correct and ſupply the defects of other biſhops. The archbiſhop of Canterbury hath the privilege to crown all the kings of England; and to have prelates to be his officers; as for inſtance; the biſhop of London is his provincial dean; the biſhop of Wincheſter, his chancellor; the biſhop of Lincoln, his vice-chancellor; the biſhop of Saliſbury, his precentor; the biſhop of Worceſter, his chaplain, &c. It is the right of the archbiſhop to call the biſhops and clergy of his province to convocation, upon the king's writ: he hath a juriſdiction in caſes of appeal, where there is a ſuppoſed default of juſtice in the ordinary; and hath a ſtanding juriſdiction over his ſuffragans: he confirms the election of biſhops, and afterwards conſecrates them, &c. And he may appoint coadjutors to a biſhop that is grown infirm. He may confer degrees of all kinds; and cenſure and excommunicate, ſuſpend or depoſe, for any juſt cauſe, &c. 2 Roll. Abr. 223. And he hath power to grant diſpenſations in any caſe, formerly granted by the ſee of Rome, not contrary to the law of God: but if the caſe is new and extraordinary, the king and his counſel are to be conſulted. Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 21, 28. H. 8. c. 16. §. 6. He may retain eight chaplains: and, during the vacancy of any ſee, he is guardian of the ſpiritualties. Stat. ibid. and 21 H. 8. c. 13.

The archbiſhop of Canterbury hath the precedency of all the clergy; next to him the archbiſhop of York; next to him the biſhop of London; next to him the biſhop of Durham; next to him the biſhop of Wincheſter; and then all the other biſhops of both provinces after the ſeniority of their conſecration; but if any of them be a privy counſellor, he ſhall take place next after the biſhop of Durham. Co. Lit. 94. 1 Ought. Ord. Jud. 486.

The firſt archbiſhop of York, that we read of, was Paulinus, who, by pope Gregory's appointment, was made archbiſhop there, about the year of our Lord 622. Godol. 14.

The archbiſhop of York hath the privilege to crown the queen conſort, and to be her perpetual chaplain. Chamberlain's Preſent State 65.

The archbiſhop of Canterbury is the firſt peer of the realm, and hath precedence, not only before all the other clergy, but alſo (next and immediately after the blood royal) before all the nobility of the realm: and as he hath the precedence of all the nobility, ſo alſo of all the great officers of ſtate. God. 13.

The archbiſhop of York hath the precedence over all dukes, not being of the blood royal; as alſo before all the great officers of ſtate, except the lord chancellor. God. 14.

Archdeacon, (archidiaconus) Is one that hath eccleſiaſtical dignity, and juriſdiction over the clergy and laity next after the biſhop throughout the dioceſs, or in ſome part of it only. Archdeacons had anciently a ſuperintendant power over all the parochial clergy in every deanery in their precincts; they being the chiefs of the deacons; though they have no original juriſdiction, but what they have got is from the biſhop, either by preſcription or compoſition; and Sir Simon Degg tells us, that it appears an archdeacon is a meer ſubſtitute to the biſhop; and what authority he hath is derived from him, his chief office being to viſit and inquire, and epiſcopo nunciare, &c. In ancient times archdeacons were employed in ſervile duties of collecting and diſtributing alms and offerings; but at length, by a perſonal attendance on the biſhops, and a delegation to examine and report ſome cauſes, and commiſſions to viſit the remoter parts of the dioceſes, they became, as it were, overſeers of the church; and by degrees advanced into conſiderable dignity and power. Lanfranc, archbiſhop of Canterbury, was the firſt prelate in England who inſtituted an archdeacon in his dioceſe, which was about the year 1075. And an archdeacon is now allowed to be an ordinary, as he hath a part of the epiſcopal power lodged with him. He viſits his juriſdiction once every year: and he hath a court, where he may inflict penance, ſuſpend, or excommunicate perſons, prove wills, grant adminiſtrations, and hear cauſes eccleſiaſtical, &c. ſubject to appeal to the biſhop of the dioceſe. It is one part of the office of an archdeacon to examine candidates for holy orders, and to induct clerks within his juriſdiction, upon receipt of the biſhop's mandate. 2 Cro. 556. 1 Lev. 193. Wood's Inſt. 30.

Archdeaconries are commonly given by biſhops, who do therefore prefer to the ſame by collation: but if an archdeaconry be in the gift of a layman, the patron doth preſent to the biſhop, who inſtitutes in like manner as to another benefice; and then the dean and chapter do induct him, that is, after ſome ceremonies, place him in a ſtall in the cathedral church to which he belongeth, whereby he is ſaid to have a place in the choir. Watſ. c. 15.

Archdeacons, by the 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 4. are to read the Common Prayer and declare their aſſent thereunto, as other perſons admitted to eccleſiaſtical benefices; and alſo muſt ſubſcribe the ſame before the ordinary; but they are not obliged by the 13 Eliz. c. 12. to ſubſcribe and read the thirty-nine articles; for altho' an archdeaconry be a benefice with cure, yet it is not ſuch a benefice with cure as ſeems to be intended by that ſtatute, but only ſuch benefices with cure as have particular churches belonging to them. Watſ. c. 15. And they are to take the oaths at the ſeſſions, as other perſons qualifying for offices.

The judge of the archdeacon's court (where he doth preſide himſelf) is called the official. Wood's Inſt. 30.

By the ſtatute of the 24 Hen. 8. c. 12. An appeal lieth from the archdeacon's to the biſhop's court.

And it hath been alſo held, that where the archdeacon hath a peculiar juriſdiction, he is totally exempt from the power of the biſhop, and the biſhop cannot enter there, and hold court; and in ſuch caſe, if the party who lives within the peculiar be ſued in the biſhop's court, a prohibition ſhall be granted; for the ſtatute intends that no ſuit ſhall be per ſaltum: but if the archdeacon hath not a peculiar, then the biſhop and he have a concurrent juriſdiction, and the party may commence his ſuit either in the archdeacon's court or the biſhop's, and he hath election to chooſe which he pleaſeth: and if he commence in the biſhop's court, no prohibition ſhall be granted; for if it ſhould, it would confine the biſhop's court to determine nothing but appeals, and render it incapable of having any cauſes originally commenced there. L. Raym. 123.

An archdeacon is a miniſterial officer, and cannot refuſe a churchwarden elected by the pariſh. Rex v. Martin Rice, 1 L. Raym. 138.

Arches Court, (curia de arcubus) The chief and moſt ancient conſiſtory court belonging to the archbiſhop of Canterbury for the debating of ſpiritual cauſes. It is ſo called from the church in London, commonly called St. Mary Le Bow, (where it was formerly held) which church is named Bow Church from the ſteeple which is raiſed by pillars, built archwiſe, like ſo many bent bows. Cowel.

The judge of this court is ſtiled the Dean of the Arches, or Official of the Arches court: he hath extraordinary juriſdiction in all eccleſiaſtical cauſes, except what belong to the prerogative court; alſo all manner of appeals from biſhops or their chancellors or commiſſaries, deans and chapters, archdeacons, &c. firſt or laſt are directed hither: he hath ordinary juriſdiction throughout the whole province of Canterbury, in caſe of appeals; ſo that upon any appeal made, he, without any farther examination of the cauſe, ſends out his citation to the appellee, and his inhibition to the judge from whom the appeal was made. Of this ſee more 4 Inſt. 337. But he cannot cite any perſon out of the dioceſe of another, unleſs it be on appeal, &c. 23 H. 8. c. 9.

In another ſenſe the dean of the arches has a peculiar juriſdiction of thirteen pariſhes in London, called a deanery, (being exempt from the authority of the biſhop of London) of which the pariſh of Bow is the principal. The perſons concerned in this court, are the judge, advocates, regiſters, proctors, &c. And the foundation of a ſuit in theſe courts, is a citation for the defendant to appear; then the libel is exhibited, which contains the action, to which the defendant muſt anſwer; whereupon the ſuit is conteſted, [illegible] are produced, and the cauſe determined by the judge, upon hearing the advocates on the law and fact; when follows the ſentence or decree thereupon.

This court (as alſo the court of peculiars, the admiralty court, the prerogative court, and the court of delegates for the moſt part) is now held in the hall belonging to the college of Civilians, commonly called Doctors Commons. Floy. 21.

From this court the appeal is to the king in Chancery; by the 25 Hen. 8. c. 19.

Archives, (archiva, from arca, a cheſt) The Rolls, or any place where ancient records, charters, and evidences, belonging to the crown and kingdom, are kept; alſo the Chancery, Exchequer office, &c. And it hath been ſometimes uſed for repoſitories in libraries.

Arerieſment, Surpriſe, affrightment.—To the great arerieſment and eſtenyſement of the Common law. Rot. Parl. 21 Ed. 3.

Arierban, The edict of the king, commanding all his tenants to come into the army: if they refuſe, then to be deprived of their eſtates.

Arentare, To rent out, or let at a certain rent.—Richardus de Armeſtone ballivus manerii de Kingsford malitioſe & per violentiam dictos religioſos de eadam piſcaria ejecit, & ipſum domino ſuo arentari fecit in 12 ſol. quos idem dominus per 6 annos recepit. Conſuetud. Domus de Farendon, MS. fol. 53.

Argentum Album, Silver coin, or pieces of bullion that anciently paſſed for money. By Domeſday tenure, ſome rents to the king were paid in argento albo, common ſilver pieces of money; other rents in libris urſis & penſatis, in metal of full weight and purity: in the next age, that rent which was paid in money, was called blanch fearm; and afterwards white-rent; and what was paid in proviſion, was termed black mail. Spelm. Gloſſ. See Alba Firma.

Argentum Dei, God's money; i. e. money given in earneſt upon the making of any bargain; hence comes arles, earneſt.——Adam de Holt vendidit quintam partem manerii de Berterton Henrico Scot, & cepit de prædicto Henrico tres denarios de argento Dei præ manibus. Placit. apud Caſt. 2 Ed. 3.

Argil, or Argoil, Clay, lime, and ſometimes gravel; alſo the lees of wine, gathered to a certain hardneſs. Law Fr. Dict.

Argumentoſus. A word which ſignifies ingenious, mentioned by our hiſtorian Neubrigenſis. In picturis quoque opera argumentoſo vocamus. Lib. 1. c. 14.

Arietum Levatio, An old ſportive exerciſe, ſuppoſed to be the ſame with running at the quintal.

Arma dare, To dub or make a knight. Anno Dom. 1144. 10 Steph. Ego Brientius filius comitis, quem bonus rex Henricus nutrivit & cui arma dedit & honorem, A. D. 1278. 31 Ed. 3. And in Walſingham, p. 507. Die Dominica in Vigilia Purificationis Edwardus juvenis ſuſcepit arma militaria. The word arma, in theſe places, ſignifies only a ſword; but ſometimes a knight was made by giving him the whole armour.—Lanfrancus Dorobernenſis epiſcopus cum lorica induit, & galeam capiti impoſuit, eique & regis filio militiæ cingulum in nomine Dei cinxit. Ordericus Vitalis, lib. 8. de Henrico, &c.

Arma Libera, A ſword and a lance which were uſually given to a ſervant when he was made free. Leg. Will. cap. 65.

Arma moluta, Sharp weapons that cut, oppoſed to ſuch as are blunt, which only break or bruiſe. Bract. lib. 3. Arma moluta plagam faciunt, ſicut gladius & hujuſmodi: Ligna vero & lapides, bruſuras, orbes & ictus, qui judicari non poſſunt ad plagam, ad hoc ut inde venire poſſit ad duellum. They are called arma emolita by Fleta, lib. 1. c. 33 par. 6.

Arma Reverſata, This was when a man was convicted of treaſon or felony: thus our hiſtorian Knighton, ſpeaking of Hugh Spenſer, tells us, Primo veſtierunt eum uno veſtimento cum armis ſuis reverſatis. Lib. 3. p. 2546.

Armiſcare, Is a ſort of puniſhment decreed or impoſed on an offender by the judge. Malmſb. lib 3. p. 97. Walſingham, p. 430. At firſt it was to carry a ſaddle at his back in token of ſubjection, *viz. Nudis veſtigiis equeſtrem ſellam ad ſatisfaciendum humeris ferret. Armigeri, A title of dignity, belonging to ſuch gentlemen that bear arms: and theſe are either by curteſy, as ſons of noblemen, eldeſt ſons of knights, &c. Or by creation, ſuch as the king's ſervants, &c. The word armigeri has been alſo applied to the higher ſervants in convents. Paroch. Antiq. 576. See Eſquire.

Armour and Arms, In the underſtanding of law, are extended to any thing that a man wears for his defence, or takes into his hands, or uſeth in anger to ſtrike or caſt at another. Crompt. Juſt. 65. Arms are alſo what we call in Latin inſignia, enſigns of honour; as to the original of which, it was to diſtinguiſh commanders in war; for the ancient defenſive armour being a coat of mail, &c. which covered the perſons, they could not be diſtinguiſhed, and therefore a certain badge was painted on their ſhields, which was called arms; but not made hereditary in families till the time of king Rich. 1. on his expedition to regain Jeruſalem from the Turks: and beſides ſhields with arms, they had a ſilk coat drawn over their armour, and afterwards a ſtiff coat, on which their arms were painted all over, now the herald's coat of arms. Sid. Rep. 353. By the Common law, it is an offence for perſons to go or ride armed with dangerous and unuſual weapons: but gentlemen may wear common armour according to their quality, &c. 3 Inſt. 160, &c. St. de defenſ. part. arm. The king may prohibit force of arms, and puniſh offenders according to law; and herein every ſubject is bound to be aiding. Stat. 7 Ed. 1. viz. the above Stat. None ſhall come with force and arms before the king's juſtices, nor ride armed in an affray of the peace, on pain to forfeit their armour, and ſuffer impriſonment, &c. 2 Ed. 3. c. 3.

Imbezilling the king's armour felony. Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 4. Armour may be exported. 12 Car. 2. c. 4. ſect. 10. Unleſs prohibited by proclamation. 12 Car. 2. c. 4. ſect. 12. Importing arms or ammunition prohibited. 1 Jac. 2. c. 8.

As to riding or going armed, vide Black. Com. 4 V. 148, &c.

Arnaldia, arnoldia; A ſort of diſeaſe that makes the hair fall off, like the alopecia, or like unto a diſtemper in foxes.——Deinde uterque rex incidit in ægritudinem quam arnaldiam vocant, in qua ipſi ad mortem uſque laborantes capillos ſuos depoſuerunt. Rog. Hoveden, p. 693.

Aromatarius, (Lat.) A word often uſed for a grocer, but held not good in law proceedings. 1 Vent. 142.

Arpen, or arpent, Signifies an acre or furlong of ground: and according to the old French account in Domeſday-book, 100 perches make an arpent. The moſt ordinary acre, called l'arpent de France, is one hundred perches ſquare: but ſome account it but half an acre.—Septem acras terræ & unum arpentum quæ me contingebant per eſchaietam. Ex Reg. Priorat. de Wormſley, fol. 7. where arpen ſeems to be ſome quantity leſs than an acre.

Arpentator, A meaſurer or ſurveyor of land.

Arquebuſs, (Fr. arquebuſe) A ſhort hand-gun, a caliver or piſtol; mentioned in ſome of our antient ſtatutes. Law Fr. Dict.

Arrack. The ſame duty and exciſe payable for brandy and foreign ſpirits, and no more, ſhall be paid for arrack imported from the Eaſt Indies; and the like allowance to be made on exportation, &c. St. 7 Geo. 2. c. 14.

Arraiatio Peditum, Is uſed in Pat. 1. Ed. 2. for the arraying of foot-ſoldiers.

Arraiers, (arraiatores) Such officers as had the care of the ſoldiers armour, and whoſe buſineſs it was to ſee them duly accoutred. Stat. 12 R. 2. c. 6. In ſeveral reigns commiſſioners have been appointed for this purpoſe.

Arraign, (from the Fr. arranger, to ſet a thing in order) Hath the ſame ſignification in law: but the true derivation is from the French arraiſonner, i. e. ad rationem ponere, to call a man to anſwer in form of law. A priſoner is arraigned, when he is indicted and brought to trial: and to arraign a writ of aſſiſe, is to cauſe the demandant to be called to make the plaint, in ſuch manner as the tenant may be obliged to anſwer. Co. Lit. 262. But no man is properly arraigned but at the ſuit of the king, upon an indictment found againſt him, or other record wherewith he is to be charged: and this arraignment is to take care that the priſoner do appear to be tried, and hold up his hand at the bar, for the certainty of the perſon, and plead a ſufficient plea to the indictment. Co. Lit. 262, 263.

The priſoner is to hold up his hand only in treaſon and felony; but this is only a ceremony: if he owns that he is the perſon, it is ſufficient without it; and then upon his arraignment his fetters are to be taken off; and he is to be treated with all the humanity imaginable. 2 Inſt. 315. 3 Inſt. 35.

Priſoners are now generally tried in their irons, becauſe taking them off is uſually attended with great pain and trouble.

If in action of ſlander for calling one thief, the defendant juſtifies that he ſtole goods, and iſſue is thereon taken; if it be found for the defendant in B. R. and for felony in the ſame county where the court ſits, or before juſtices of aſſiſe, &c. he ſhall be forthwith arraigned upon this verdict of twelve men, as on an indictment. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 151.

The pleas upon arraignment are either the general iſſue, Not guilty; plea in abatement, or in bar; and the priſoner may demur to the indictment; he may alſo confeſs the fact, but then the court has nothing more to do than to proceed to judgment againſt him. If he ſtands mute, and doth not put himſelf upon trial, he ſhall ſuffer the penance pain fort & dure, in caſes of felony, &c. 3 Inſt. 217. Standing mute, or not anſwering directly, in certain caſes, excludes offenders from clergy. See 25 H. 8. c. 3.—1 Ed. 6. c. 12.—4 & 5 P. & M. c. 4.—3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9.—1 Ann. c. 9.

By the Common law, if a principal is acquitted, or is pardoned, or dies, the acceſſary ſhall not be arraigned. But vide Stat. 1 Ann. cap. 9. and word acceſſary. For the ſolemnity of the arraignment and trial of a priſoner, ſee Dalt. Chap. 185. p. 515.

Array, (arraya ſive arraiamentum) An old French word, ſignifying the ranking or ſetting forth of a jury of men impanelled upon a cauſe. 18 H. 6. c. 14. And when we ſay to array a panel, that is, to ſet forth the men impanelled one by another. F. N. B. 157. To challenge the array of the panel, is at once to except againſt all the perſons arrayed or impanelled, in reſpect of partiality, &c. Co. Lit. 156. If the ſheriff be of affinity to either of the parties; or if any one or more of the jurors are returned at the nomination of either party; or for any other partiality; the array ſhall be quaſhed. The word array alſo relates, in a particular manner, to military order, as to conduct perſons armed, &c. Stat. 14 Car. 2. cap. 3.

Arrearages, (arreragia, from the French arriere, retro, behind) Is taken for money unpaid at the due time, as rent behind; the remainder due on an account, or a ſum of money remaining in the hands of an accountant. When arrears of rent are preſumed in law to be ſatisfied, vide Acceptance.

Arrectatus, One ſuſpected of any crime.——Si autem aliquis arrectatus fuerit de morte alicujus periclitantis capiatur & impriſonetur.——Offic. Coronat. Spelm. Gloſſ.

Arrenatus, arraigned, accuſed.——Stephanus Rabaz, vic. Leiceſt. arrenatus & ad rationem poſitus de hoc quod, &c. Rot. Parl. 21 Ed. 1.

Arrentation, (from the Spaniſh arrendar) Is as much as ad certum redditum dimittere; and it ſignifies the licenſing the owner of lands in the foreſt, to incloſe them with a low hedge and ſmall ditch, according to the aſſiſe of the foreſt, under a yearly rent: ſaving the arrentations is a ſaving power to give ſuch licences. Ordin. Foreſtæ, 34 Ed. 1.

Arreſt, (arreſtum) Cometh of the Fr. word arreſter, to ſtop, or ſtay. It is a reſtraint of a man's perſon, obliging him to be obedient to the law: and it is defined to be the execution of the command of ſome court of record or officer of juſtice. An arreſt is the beginning of impriſonment, where a man is firſt taken, and reſtrained of his liberty, by power or colour of a lawful warrant: alſo it ſignifies the decree of a court, by which a perſon is arreſted. 2 Shep. Abr. 299.

Arreſts are either in civil or criminal caſes.

An arreſt in a civil cauſe is defined to be the apprehending or reſtraining one's perſon by proceſs in execution of the command of ſome court, or officer of juſtice. Wood's Inſt. 575.

There are ſeveral ſtatutes, ſecuring the liberty of the ſubject, againſt unlawful arreſts. See Magna Charta, c. 29. 3 Ed. 1. c. 35.

There are ſtatutes likewiſe protecting the clergy from arreſts while attending divine ſervice. See 50 Ed. 3. c. 5. 1 R. 2 c. 15. 1 Mar. ſeſs. 2. c. 3.

Several perſons are likewiſe by the Common and Statute law of the land privileged from arreſts. Peers of the realm, members of parliament, &c. may not be arreſted, unleſs it be in criminal caſes; but the proceſs againſt them is to be ſummons, diſtreſs infinite, &c. 12 W. 3. c. 3. But ſee 2 Ann. c. 18. & 10 Geo. 3. c. 50. Alſo corporations and companies muſt be made to appear by diſtringas, and cannot be arreſted. Finch. 353. 3 Salk. 46. Perſons attending upon any courts of record, on buſineſs there, are to be free from arreſts. 3 Inſt. 141. A clerk of the court ought not to be arreſted for any thing which is not criminal, becauſe he is ſuppoſed to be always preſent in court to anſwer the plaintiff. 1 Lill. 94. Arreſts are not to be made within the liberty of the king's palace: nor may the king's ſervants be arreſted in any place, without notice firſt given to the lord chamberlain, that he remove them, or make them pay their debts. Ambaſſadors ſervants, &c. freed from arreſts. Vide Ambaſſador.

Seamen in the king's ſervice privileged from arreſts for debts under 20 l. 1 Geo. 2. c. 14. ſect. 15. 14 Geo. 2. c. 38. ſect. 3.

Soldiers or marines not liable to arreſts for a debt of leſs than 10 l. 30 Geo. 2. c. 6. ſect. 64. 30 Geo. 2. c. 11. ſect. 37.

There is this difference between arreſts in civil and criminal caſes, that none ſhall be arreſted for debt, treſpaſs, &c. or other cauſe of action, but by virtue of a precept or commandment out of ſome court: but for treaſon, felony, or breach of the peace, any man may arreſt without warrant or precept. Terms de Ley 54.

There are ſeveral ſtatutes likewiſe regulating the iſſuing and execution of warrants for arreſts, and aſcertaining the fees to be taken on ſuch occaſions.

The bailiff's fee for an arreſt, by an ancient ſtatute, is but four-pence, and the ſheriff's twenty-pence: and bailiffs cannot legally take any thing but what is allowed by this ſtatute and other ſubſequent acts. For taking fees not warranted by law, they ſhall render treble damages to the party grieved, and incur a forfeiture of 40 l. Stat. 23 Hen. 6. cap. 10. Sheriffs are not to grant warrants for arreſts before the receipt of the writs; if they do, they ſhall forfeit 10 l. and damages, and pay a fine to the king. Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 5. And every warrant to iſſue upon any writ to arreſt any perſon, ſhall have the ſame day and year ſet down thereon as on the writ, under the like penalty of 10 l. Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 21.

No bailiff, or other officer, ſhall carry any perſon under arreſt to any tavern, alehouſe, &c. without his conſent, ſo as to charge him with any beer, ale, wine, &c. but what he ſhall freely call for: nor ſhall demand or receive more from him for the arreſt or waiting than by law ought to be, until an appearance procured, bail found, &c. Nor take or exact any more for keeping ſuch perſon out of priſon, than what he ſhall of his own voluntary accord truly give: nor take more for lodging than what is reaſonable, or ſhall be adjudged ſo by the next juſtice of peace. Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 2. And by a late act bailiffs, &c. are not to carry any perſon arreſted to a tavern, alehouſe, &c. or the private houſe of ſuch officers, without the free and voluntary conſent of the party; nor carry ſuch perſon to priſon within twenty-four hours from the time of the arreſt; nor take any reward for keeping him out of gaol, &c. Stat. 2. Geo. 2. cap. 22. And ſee 32 Geo. 2. c. 28. a new act on this ſubject. But if a perſon arreſted refuſe to be carried to ſome convenient houſe of his own nomination, &c. to be kept in ſafe cuſtody during the twenty-four hours before carried to priſon; then the ſheriff's officers, &c. may immediately convey him to gaol, to prevent an eſcape. 3 Geo. 2. c. 27.

By Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 7. No writ, proceſs, warrant, &c. (except in caſes of treaſon, felony, or for breach of the peace) ſhall be ſerved on a Sunday; on pain that the perſon ſerving them ſhall be liable to the ſuit of the party grieved, and anſwer damages, as if the ſame had been done without writ: an action of falſe impriſonment lies for arreſt on a Sunday, and the arreſt is void. 1 Salk. 78. A defendant was arreſted on a Sunday by a writ out of the Marſhalſea; and the court of B. R. being moved to diſcharge him, it was denied; and he was directed to bring action of falſe impriſonment. 5 Mod. Rep. 95. The defendant being taken upon a Sunday, without any warrant, and locked up all that day; on Monday morning a writ was got againſt him, by which he was arreſted; it was ruled, that he might have an action of falſe impriſonment, and that an attachment ſhould go againſt thoſe who took him on the Sunday. Mod. Caſ. 96. Attachments have been often granted againſt bailiffs for making arreſts on Sunday: but affidavit is uſually made, that the party might be taken upon another day. 1 Mod. 56. A perſon may be retaken on a Sunday, where arreſted the day before, &c. Mod. Caſ. 231. And a man may be taken on a Sunday on an eſcape warrant: when he goes at large out of the rules of the King's Bench or Fleet priſon, &c. Stat. 5 Ann. c. 9. Alſo bail may take the principal on a Sunday, and confine him till Monday, and then render him. 1 Nelſ. 258.

No ſpecial writ ſhall be ſued out of the ſuperior courts, unleſs the cauſe of action be 10 l. or above, on pain of 10 l. and the proceedings thereon to be void, by Stat. 5. Geo. 2. c. 27. This ſtatute, and the Stat. 12 Geo. 1. c. 29. are made perpetual by the Stat. 21 Geo. 2. c. 3.

When a perſon is apprehended for debt, &c. he is ſaid to be arreſted: and writs expreſs arreſt by two ſeveral words capias and attachias, to take and catch hold of a man; for an officer muſt actually lay hold of a perſon, beſides ſaying he arreſt him, or it will be no lawful arreſt. 1 Lill. Abr. 96. If a bailiff be kept off from making an arreſt, he ſhall have an action of aſſault: and where the perſon arreſted makes reſiſtance, or aſſaults the bailiff, he may juſtify beating of him. If a bailiff touches a man, which is an arreſt, and he makes his eſcape, it is a reſcous, and attachment may be had againſt him. 1 Salk. 79. If a bailiff lays hold of one by the hand, (whom he had a warrant to arreſt) as he holds it out at the window, this is ſuch a taking of him, that the bailiff may juſtify the breaking open of the houſe to carry him away. 1 Vent. 306.

When a perſon has committed treaſon or felony, &c. doors may be broke open to arreſt the offender; but not in civil caſes, except it be in purſuit of one arreſted; or where a houſe is recovered by real action, or in ejectment, to deliver poſſeſſion to the perſon recovering. Plowd. 5 Rep. 91. Action of treſpaſs, &c. lies for breaking open a houſe to make arreſt in a civil action. Mod. Caſ. 105. But if it appears a bailiff found an outer door, &c. open, 'tis ſaid he may open the inner door to make an arreſt. Comber. 327.

In the caſe of Lee v. General Ganſel, the court of King's Bench determined, that the chamber door of a lodger, is not to be conſidered as his outer door, but that the ſtreet door being open, the officers had a right to force open the chamber door, the defendant being in the room, and refuſing to open it.

An arreſt in the night, as well as the day, is lawful. 9 Rep. 66. And every one is bound by the Common law to aſſiſt not only the ſheriff in the execution of writs, and making arreſts, &c. but alſo his bailiff that hath his warrant to do it. 2 Inſt. 193. A bailiff upon an arreſt ought to ſhew at whoſe ſuit, out of what court the writ iſſues, and for what cauſe, &c. but this is when the party arreſted ſubmits himſelf to the arreſt: a bailiff, ſworn and known, need not ſhew his warrant, though the party demands it; nor is any other ſpecial bailiff bound to ſhew his warrant, unleſs it be demanded. 9 Rep. 68, 69. An arreſt without ſhewing the warrant, and without telling at whoſe ſuit, until the other demanded it, was held legal; and that this need not be done until the party obeyed and demanded the ſame. Cro. Jac. 485. If an action is entered in one of the compters of London, a city ſerjeant may arreſt the party without the ſheriff's warrant. 1 Lill. Abr. 94. And by the cuſtom of London, a debtor may be arreſted before the money is due, to make him find ſureties: but not by the Common law. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 258.

If a wrong perſon is arreſted; or one for felony, where no felony is done, &c. it will be falſe impriſonment. Attornies, &c. for vexation, maliciouſly cauſing any perſon to be arreſted, where there is no cauſe of ſuit, &c. ſhall ſuffer ſix months impriſonment, and before diſcharged pay treble damages, and forfeit 10*l*. Stat. 8 Eliz. c. 2.

Sheriffs in Wales, and the counties palatine, ſhall not hold to bail on proceſs from Weſtminſter, unleſs the debt be ſworn to be 20*l*. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 9. ſect. 2.

By Glynn Ch. J. Mich. 1658. If one be arreſted by the ſheriff of the county, within a liberty, without a non omittas, yet the arreſt is good; for the ſheriff is ſheriff of the whole county, but the bailiff of the liberty may have his action againſt the ſheriff, for entering of his liberty. But upon a quo minus, a ſheriff may enter any liberty, and execute it impune. Pract. Reg. 72.

With regard to arreſts in criminal caſes, it hath already been obſerved, that for treaſon, felony, or breach of the peace, any perſon may arreſt without warrant or precept. But the king cannot command any one by word of mouth to be arreſted; for he muſt do it by writ, or order of his courts, according to law: nor may the king arreſt any man for ſuſpicion of treaſon, or felony, as his ſubjects may; becauſe, if he doth wrong, the party cannot have an action againſt him. 2 Inſt. 186.

Arreſts by private perſons are in ſome caſes commanded. Perſons preſent at the committing of a felony muſt uſe their endeavours to apprehend the offender, under penalty of fine and impriſonment. 3 Inſt. 117. 4 Inſt. 177.

And for this cauſe, by the Common law, if any homicide be committed, or dangerous wound given, whether with, or without malice, or even by miſadventure or ſelf-defence, in any town, or in the lanes or fields thereof, in the day time, and the offender eſcape, the town ſhall be amerced, and if out of a town, the hundred ſhall be amerced. 3 Inſt. 53.

And ſince the ſtatute of Wincheſter c. 5. which ordains that walled towns ſhall be kept ſhut from ſun-ſetting to ſun-riſing; if the fact happen in any ſuch town by night, or by day, and the offender eſcape, the town ſhall be amerced. 3 Inſt. 53.

And, as private perſons are bound to apprehend all thoſe who ſhall be guilty of any of the crimes above mentioned in their view, ſo alſo are they, with the utmoſt diligence, to purſue and endeavour to take all thoſe who ſhall be guilty thereof, out of their view, upon a hue and cry levied againſt them. 3 Inſt. 117.

By the vagrant act 17 Geo. 2. c. 5. Every private perſon may apprehend beggars and vagrants.

And every private perſon is bound to aſſiſt an officer, requiring him to apprehend a felon.

Arreſts alſo by private perſons are, in ſome caſes, permitted only; and arreſts of this kind are either on ſuſpicion of crimes already done, or ſuppoſed to have been done, or to prevent their being committed.

Many ſufficient cauſes of ſuſpicion to juſtify the arreſt of an innocent perſon for felony are enumerated in 2 Hawk. 76. Yet it is holden by ſome, that none of the cauſes there ſpecified will juſtify the arreſting of a man for the ſuſpicion of crimes, unleſs a crime was actually committed; but out of this rule, the apprehending a perſon upon hue and cry muſt be excepted. 2 Hawk. 76.

As to the arreſting of offenders by private perſons of their own authority, permitted by law for the prevention of treaſon or felony only intended to be done; it ſeems any one may lay hold of a perſon, whom he ſees upon the point of committing treaſon, or felony, or doing an act which would manifeſtly endanger the life of another, and detain him, till it may be reaſonably preſumed he has changed his purpoſe. 2 Hawk. 77. Indeed the law of reaſon ſays thus, and we want not the authority of books to juſtify the poſition.

As to arreſts for inferior offences, no private perſon can arreſt another for a bare breach of the peace after it is over; but it is held, that a private man may arreſt a night-walker, or a common cheat going about with falſe dice, and actually caught playing with them, in order to have him before a juſtice of peace; and the arreſt of any other offenders, by private perſons, for offences in like manner ſcandalous, and prejudicial to the public, ſeems juſtifiable. 2 Hawk. 77.

In ſome caſes likewiſe arreſts by private perſons are rewarded by law.

By 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 8. Perſons apprehending highwaymen, and proſecuting them to conviction, are intitled to a reward of 40*l*. and if they are killed in the attempt, their executors, &c. are intitled to the like reward.

By the 6 & 7 W. 3. c. 17. Perſons apprehending counterfeiters and clippers of the coin, and proſecuting them to conviction, are intitled to 40*l*.

By the 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. Perſons apprehending ſhoplifters, and proſecuting them to conviction, ſhall have a certificate thereof gratis from the judge, which certificate (before any benefit has been made of it) may be once aſſigned over, and no more, and the original proprietor, or aſſignee, ſhall by virtue thereof be diſcharged from all pariſh and ward offices, within the pariſh or ward wherein the felony was committed.

By 5 Ann. c. 31. Perſons who ſhall take any one guilty of burglary, or the felonious breaking and entering any houſe in the day-time, and proſecute them to conviction, ſhall receive, above the reward given by the above mentioned ſtatute of 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. the ſum of 40*l*. within one month after ſuch conviction.

With regard to arreſts by public officers, they may be made either with or without proceſs.

Arreſts without proceſs may be made by watchmen, conſtables, bailiffs of towns, or juſtices of peace. For the power of watchmen, ſee Stat. Wincheſter, c. 4. It has been holden, that this ſtatute was made in affirmance of the Common law, and that every private perſon may by the Common law arreſt any ſuſpicious night-walker, and detain him till he give a good account of himſelf. 2 Hawk. 80.

As to arreſts by conſtables, they are either made by their own authority, which differs but little from the power of a private perſon, or they are made by a warrant from a juſtice of peace.

As to the juſtifying arreſts by conſtables, by virtue of a warrant from a juſtice of peace, it ſeems clear, that an arreſt, unlawfully made by a conſtable without a warrant, cannot be made good by a warrant taken out afterwards; alſo it hath been holden, that if a conſtable, after he hath arreſted the party by force of any ſuch warrant, ſuffer him to go at large upon his promiſe to come again at ſuch a time, and find ſureties, he cannot afterwards arreſt him by force of the ſame warrant; however, if the party return and put himſelf again under the cuſtody of the conſtable, the conſtable may lawfully detain him, and bring him before the juſtice, in purſuance of the warrant. 2 Hawk. 80. Dyer 244. b.

A conſtable cannot juſtify any arreſt by force of a warrant from a juſtice of peace, which expreſly appears, on the face of it, to be for an offence whereof a juſtice of peace hath no juriſdiction, or to bring the party before him at a place out of the county for which he is a juſtice. 2 Hawk. 82.

As to the doctrine of general warrants, it is now ſufficiently exploded. See the caſe of The King and Wilkes Eſq; Wilſ. Rep. part 2. 151, &c.

'Tis the better opinion at this day, that any conſtable, or even a private perſon, to whom a warrant ſhall be directed from a juſtice of peace, to arreſt a particular perſon for felony, or any other miſdemeanor within his juriſdiction, may lawfully execute it, whether the perſon mentioned in it be, in truth, guilty or innocent, and whether he were before indicted of the ſame offence or not, and whether any felony were, in truth, committed or not: for, however the juſtice himſelf may be puniſhable for granting ſuch a warrant, without ſufficient grounds, it is reaſonable that he alone be anſwerable for it, and not the officer, who is not to examine or diſpute the reaſonableneſs of his proceeding. Ib.

With regard to arreſts by bailiffs of towns, their power is founded on the above mentioned ſtatute of Wincheſter, c. 4. And as to arreſts by juſtices of peace, arreſts by their command are either by word of mouth or by warrant.

A juſtice of peace may, by word of mouth, authoriſe any one to arreſt another, who ſhall be guilty of an actual breach of the peace in his preſence, or ſhall be engaged in a riot in his abſence. 2 Hawk. 83. Dalt. c. 117.

And a juſtice of peace may lawfully grant a warrant for apprehending, or arreſting perſons charged with treaſon, felony, premunire, or any other offence againſt the peace; and generally, wherever a ſtatute gives one or more juſtices of peace a juriſdiction over any offence, any one juſtice of peace may, by his warrant, cauſe ſuch offenders to be arreſted and brought before him. 2 Hawk 84.

But it is ſaid, that anciently no one juſtice of peace could legally make out a warrant for an offence againſt a penal ſtatute, or other miſdemeanor; cognizable only by a ſeſſions of two or more juſtices; for that one ſingle juſtice of peace hath no juriſdiction of ſuch offence, and regularly thoſe only who have juriſdiction over a cauſe can award proceſs concerning it. Yet the long, conſtant, univerſal, and uncontrolled practice of juſtices of peace ſeems to have altered the law in this particular, and to have given them an authority, in relation to ſuch arreſts, not now to be diſputed. Ibid.

A juſtice of peace may juſtify the granting a warrant for the arreſt of any perſon upon ſtrong grounds of ſuſpicion of felony, or miſdemeanor, but he ſeems to be puniſhable, as well at the ſuit of the king, as of the party grieved, if he grant any ſuch warrant groundleſly, or maliciouſly, without ſuch a probable cauſe as might induce a candid and impartial man to ſuſpect the party to be guilty. 2 Hawk. 84.

Every warrant ought to be under the hand and ſeal of the juſtice of peace, and ſpecify the day it was made out: if it be for the peace or good behaviour, it is adviſable to ſet forth the ſpecial cauſe upon which it is granted, but if it be for treaſon or felony, or other offences of an enormous nature, it is ſaid that it is not neceſſary to ſet it forth, and it ſeems to be rather diſcretionary than neceſſary to ſet it forth in any caſe. 2 Hawk. 85.

We apprehend the meaning of this doctrine is, that the warrant need not expreſs the ſpecies, but we conceive it abſolutely neceſſary to expreſs the genus, as for treaſon or felony, or ſuſpicion of treaſon or felony.

The warrant may be directed to the ſheriff, bailiff, conſtable, or to any indifferent perſon by name, who is no officer; for, tho' the juſtice may authoriſe any one to be his officer, whom he pleaſes to make ſuch, yet it is moſt adviſable to direct to the conſtable of the precinct wherein it is to be executed; for that no other conſtable, and a fortiori no private perſon, is compellable to ſerve it. 2 Hawk. 85.

A bailiff or conſtable, if they be ſworn, and commonly known to be officers, and act within their own precincts, need not ſhew their warrant to the party, notwithſtanding he demand the ſight of it; but that theſe and all other perſons whatſoever making an arreſt, ought to acquaint the party with the ſubſtance of their warrant; and all private perſons to whom ſuch warrants ſhall be directed, and even officers, if they be not ſworn and commonly known; and even theſe, if they act out of their own precincts, muſt ſhew their warrants if demanded. 2 Hawk. 86.

The ſheriff, having ſuch warrant directed to him, may authoriſe others to execute it; but every other perſon, to whom it is directed, muſt perſonally execute it, yet, it ſeems, that any one may lawfully aſſiſt him. 2 Hawk. 86.

If a warrant be generally directed to all conſtables, no one can execute it out of his own precinct; but if it be directed to a particular conſtable by name, he may execute it any where within the juriſdiction of the juſtice. 2 Hawk. 86.

Where one is authoriſed to arreſt a perſon who ſhelters himſelf in a houſe; if entrance be denied, the officer may juſtify the breaking open the doors, particular inſtances of which are enumerated by Serjeant Hawkins. V. Pleas of the Crown, p. 86. & 87.

Alſo it is enacted by the 3 & 4 Jac. 1. par. 35. That upon any lawful writ, warrant or proceſs awarded to any ſheriff or other officer, for the taking of any popiſh recuſant, ſtanding excommunicated for ſuch recuſancy, it ſhall be lawful, if need be, to break any houſe. 2 Hawk. 87.

But it hath been reſolved, that where juſtices of peace are, by virtue of a ſtatute, authoriſed to require perſons to come before them to take certain oaths preſcribed by ſuch ſtatute, the officer cannot lawfully break open the doors. 2 Hawk. 87.

After preſentment or indictment found in felony, &c. the firſt proceſs is a capias, to arreſt and impriſon the offender: and if the offender cannot be taken, an exigent is awarded in order to outlawry. H. P. C. 209.

Arreſt of Judgment. To move in arreſt of judgment, is to ſhew cauſe why judgment ſhould be ſtaid, notwithſtanding verdict given; for in many caſes, though there be a verdict, no judgment can be had. And the cauſes of arreſt of judgment are, want of notice of trial; where the plaintiff before trial treats the jury; the record differing from the deed pleaded; for material defect in pleading; where perſons are miſnamed; or the declaration doth not lay the thing with certainty, &c. And here all matters of fact are to be made out by proper affidavits. Comp. Attorn. 329, &c. Judgment may be arreſted for good cauſe in criminal caſes, as well as civil; if the indictment be inſufficient, &c. 3 Inſt. 210. Four days are allowed to move in arreſt of judgment; and the defendant hath all the term wherein the verdict was given to ſpeak any thing to arreſt it, if the plaintiff hath not given his four days rule, and ſigned his judgment: after which defendant is put to his writ of error. 2 Lill. 93. On motion in arreſt of judgment, if the court be divided, two judges againſt two, the plaintiff muſt have his judgment; unleſs a rule be made at firſt to ſtay all proceedings, until the court otherwiſe order, &c. 2 Lill. Abr. 118. But ſuch rule is now always made. See Jeofails and Judgment.

Arreſt of enqueſt is to plead in arreſt of taking the enqueſt, upon the former iſſue, and to ſhew cauſe why an enqueſt ſhould not be taken. Bro. tit. Replead. Vide on this ſubject Black. Com. 3 V. 393. What cauſes are not ſufficient. Id. 394, &c.

Arretted. arrectatus, quaſi, ad rectum vocatus, Is where a man is convened before a judge, and charged with a crime. Staundf. Pl. Co. 45. And it is ſometimes uſed for imputed or laid unto; as no folly may be arretted to one under age. Littleton, cap. Remitter. Chaucer uſeth the verb arretteth, that is, lays blame, as it is interpreted. Bracton ſays, ad rectum habere malefactorem, i. e. to have the malefactor forth coming, ſo as he may be charged, and put to his trial. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 10. Arrows. By an ancient ſtatute, all heads for arrows ſhall be well brazed, and hardened at the point with ſteel, on pain of forfeiture and impriſonment: and to be marked with the mark of the maker. Stat. 7 H. 4. c. 7.

Arſon, (from ardeo, to burn) Is houſe burning, which is felony at Common law. 3 Inſt. 66. It muſt be maliciouſly, voluntarily, and an actual burning: not putting fire only into a houſe, or any part of it, without burning; but if part of the houſe is burnt; or if the fire doth burn, and then goeth out of itſelf, it is felony. 2 Inſt. 188. H. P. C. 85. The burning of a frame of a houſe is not accounted houſe-burning, becauſe the frame of a houſe cannot come under the word domus, neceſſary in every indictment for arſon: this was when the law proceedings were in Latin; now, of courſe, the word houſe is requiſite; and it muſt be the houſe of another, for if a man burns his own houſe only, though with intention to burn others, it was not at Common law felony, but a great miſdemeanor, puniſhable with fine, pillory, &c.

If a houſe is fired by negligence or miſchance, it cannot amount to arſon. 3 Inſt. 67. H. P. C. 85. Where one burns the houſe of another, if it be not wilful and malicious, it is not felony, but only treſpaſs: therefore if A. ſhoot unlawfully in a gun at the cattle or poultry of B. and by means thereof ſets another's houſe on fire, this is not arſon; for though the act he was doing was unlawful, yet he had no intent to burn the houſe. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 569. By Stat. 23 H. 8. c. 11. Burning of houſes, or barns wherein any corn is, is felony without benefit of clergy. And the Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 7. makes it felony to ſet barns, ſtables, ſtacks of corn, hay, &c. on fire in the night-time, or any out-houſes, or buildings: but the offender may be tranſported for ſeven years.

By 6 Annæ, c. 31. Servants, through negligence or careleſneſs, ſetting on fire any dwelling houſe, or out-houſe, ſhall forfeit 100 l. to be levied by warrant of two juſtices, and paid to the churchwardens of the pariſh, to be diſtributed to the ſufferers by the fire; or on default ſhall be ſent to the houſe of correction, and there kept to hard labour eighteen months, &c. By 9 Geo. 1. c. 22. (made perpetual by 31 Geo. 2. c. 42.) Setting fire to any houſe, barn, or out-houſe, or to any hovel, cockmow, or ſtack of corn, ſtraw, or wood, is made felony without benefit of clergy.

N. B. This muſt be of courſe a wilful act to render it felony.

Articuli Cleri, (articles of the clergy) Are ſtatutes containing certain articles relating to the church and clergy, and cauſes eccleſiaſtical. 9 E. 2. Stat. 1. c. 14. 9 E. 3. Stat. 1.

Articulus, An article, or complaint, exhibited by way of libel, in a court chriſtian. Sometimes the religious bound themſelves to obey the ordinary, without ſuch formal proceſs: as An. Dom. 1300. The prior and convent of Burceſter, ſubmitted themſelves to the official of Lincoln, &c.—Quod poſſint eos et eorum ſucceſſores per omnem cenſuram eccleſiaſticam ad omnium & ſingulorum præmiſſorum obſervationem abſque articuli, ſeu libelli, petitione, & quocunque ſtrepitu judiciali compellare. Paroch. Antiq. p. 344.

Artificers, Are taken for ſuch as are maſters of their arts, or whoſe calling and employment doth conſiſt chiefly of bodily labour. We might, with Mr. Harris, more elegantly and ſcientifically define an artiſt to be "A man "poſſeſſing an habitual power of becoming the cauſe of "ſome effect, according to a ſyſtem of various and well-"approved precepts." But to the law—

If artificers or workmen conſpire not to do any work but at certain prices, &c. they are liable to penalties by the Statute 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 15. A ſtranger, artificer in London, &c. ſhall not keep above two ſtrangers ſervants; but he may have as many Engliſh ſervants and apprentices as he can get. Stat. 21 H. 8. c. 16. Artificers in wool, iron, ſteel, braſs, or other metal, &c. perſons contracting with them to go out of this kingdom into a foreign country, ſhall be fined not exceeding 100 l. and be impriſoned three months: and Engliſh artificers going abroad, not returning in ſix months after warning given by our ambaſſadors, &c. ſhall be diſabled to hold lands by deſcent or deviſe, be incapable to take any legacy, &c. and deemed aliens. Stat. 5 Geo. 1. c. 27.

By the Stat. 23 Geo. 2. c. 13. Perſons convicted of ſeducing artificers in the manufactures of Great Britain or Ireland, out of the dominions of the crown of Great Britain, to forfeit 500 l. and to be impriſoned for twelve months; for the ſecond offence to forfeit 1000 l. and be impriſoned two years. Proſecution to be commenced within twelve months after the offence committed. Vide as to ſeducing and tranſporting of artiſts, Black. Com. 4 V. 160.

Arundinetum, A ground or place where reeds grow. 1 Inſt. 4. And it is mentioned in the book of Domeſday.

Arvil-Supper, A feaſt or entertainment made at funerals, in the north part of England: arvil bread is the bread delivered to the poor at funeral ſolemnities. Cowel. And arvil, arval, arſal, are uſed for the burial or funeral rites; as,

Come, bring my jerkin, Tibb, I'll to the arvill,
Yon man's dea Seuy Seoun, it makes me marvil.

Aſceſterium, (archiſterium, arciſterium, aciſterium, alcyſterium, architrium) Is a Greek word, and ſignifies a monaſtery. It often occurs in old hiſtories. Du Cange.

Aſſach, or aſſath, Was a cuſtom of purgation uſed of old in Wales, by which the party accuſed did clear himſelf ſelf by the oaths of 300 men. It is mentioned in ancient MSS. and prevailed till the time of Hen. 5. when it was abrogated. 1 H. 5. c. 6.

Aſſart, (aſſartum) Fr. aſſartir, To make plain. Aſſartum eſt quod redactum eſt ad culturam. Fleta, lib. 4. cap. 21. And the word aſſartum is by Spelman derived from exertum, to pull up by the roots: for ſometimes it is wrote eſſart. Others derive it from exaratum or exartum, which ſignifies to plough or cut up. Manwood, in his Foreſt Laws, ſays it is an offence committed in the foreſt, by pulling up the woods by the roots, that are thickets and coverts for the deer, and making the ground plain as arable land; this is eſteemed the greateſt treſpaſs that can be done in the foreſt to vert or veniſon, as it contains in it waſte and more; for whereas waſte of the foreſt is but the felling down the coverts which may grow up again, aſſart is a plucking them up by the roots, and utterly deſtroying them, ſo that they can never afterwards ſpring up again. And this is confirmed out of the red book in the Exchequer, in theſe words—Aſſarta vero dicuntur quæ apud Iſidorum occiſiones nuncupantur, quando foreſtæ nemora vel dumeta, paſcuis & latibulis ferarum opportuna, ſucciduntur: quibus ſucciſis & radicitus avulſis, terra ſubvertitur & excolitur.—But this is no offence if done with licence; and a man may, by writ of ad quod damnum, ſue out a licence to aſſart ground in the foreſt, and make it ſeveral for tillage. Reg. Orig. 257. Hence lands are called aſſarted: and formerly aſſart rents were paid to the crown for foreſt lands aſſarted. Stat. 22 Car. 2. c. 6. Aſſartments ſeem to be uſed in the ſame ſenſe in Rot. Parl. Of aſſarts you may read more in Cromp. Juriſ. p. 203. And Charta de Foreſta, anno 9 H. 3. c. 4. Manwood, part 1. p. 171.

Aſſault, (aſſultus) from the Fr. verb aſſayler, Signifies a violent injury offered to a man's perſon of a more extenſive nature than battery; for it may be committed by offering a blow, or by terrifying ſpeech. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 1. cap. 3. But it is ſaid that at this day no words whatſoever, be they ever ſo provoking, can amount to an aſſault, notwithſtanding the many ancient opinions to the contrary. 1 Hawk. P. C. 134.

The feudiſts define aſſault thus: aſſultus eſt impetus in perſonam aut locum, ſive hoc pedibus fiat, vel equo, aut machinis aut quacunque alia re aſſiliatur. Zaſius de Feud. p. 10. num. 38. And aſſilire eſt vim adferre. Lib. Feud. 1. tit. 5. ſect. 1. Alſo the Lat. aſſultus is uſed in this ſenſe in the laws of Edw. Confeſ. cap. 12. To ſtrike a man, though he be not hurt with the blow, is an aſſault: and to ſtrike at a perſon, notwithſtanding he be neither hurt nor hit, hath been ſo adjudged. 22 Lib. Aſſ. pl. 60. For aſſault doth not always neceſſarily imply a hitting, or blow; becauſe, in treſpaſs for aſſault and battery, a man may be found guilty of the aſſault, and excuſed of the battery. 25 Ed. 3. c. 24. If a perſon in anger lift up or ſtretch forth his arm, and offer to ſtrike another; or menace any one with any ſtaff or weapon, it is treſpaſs and aſſault in law: and if a man threaten to beat another perſon, or lie in wait to do it, if the other is hindered in his buſineſs, and receives loſs thereby, action lies for the injury. Lamb. lib. 1. 22 Aſſ. pl. 60. Where a man aſſaults any perſon, beats, or doth him any manner of violence, either with hand, foot, or weapon; or throws any thing at him, drink in his face, &c. whereby he is hurt; it is ſuch an aſſault for which action may be brought, and damages recovered. So ſpitting in a man's face, or treading on his toes.

In many caſes a man may juſtify an aſſault; thus, to lay hands gently upon another, not in anger, is no foundation of an action of treſpaſs and aſſault: the defendant may juſtify molliter manus impoſuit in defence of his perſon, or goods; or of his wife, father, mother, or maſter; or for the maintenance of juſtice, Bract. 9 E. 4. 35 H. 6. c. 51.

If an officer, having a warrant againſt one who will not ſuffer himſelf to be arreſted, beat or wound him in the attempt to take him, he may juſtify it; ſo if a parent in a reaſonable manner chaſtiſe his child, or maſter his ſervant, being actually in his ſervice at that time, or a ſchoolmaſter his ſcholar, or a gaoler his priſoner, or even a huſband his wife (for reaſonable and proper cauſe); or if one confine a friend who is mad, and bind and beat him, &c. in ſuch manner as is proper in his circumſtances; or if a man force a ſword from one who offers to kill another; or if a man gently lays his hand on another, and thereby ſtay him from inciting a dog againſt a third perſon; if I beat one (without wounding him, or throwing at him a dangerous weapon) who wrongfully endeavours with violence to diſpoſſeſs me of my lands or goods, or the goods of another delivered to me to be kept for him, and who will not deſiſt upon my laying my hands gently on him and diſturbing him; or if a man beat, wound or maim one who makes an aſſault upon his perſon, or that of his wife, parent, child, or maſter; or if a man fight with, or beat one who attempts to kill any ſtranger; if the beating was actually neceſſary, to obtain the good end propoſed, or rendered neceſſary in defence of the perſon, ſo laying his hands on, by an aſſault from the other; in theſe caſes it ſeems the party may juſtify the aſſault and battery. See 1 Hawk. P. C. 130. and the ſeveral authorities there cited.

And on an indictment the party may plead Not guilty, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence; but in an action he muſt plead it ſpecially. 6 Mod. 172. Suppoſing it matter of juſtification.—If of excuſe, it is ſaid it may be given in evidence, on the general iſſue. Vide Ni. Pri. 16.

Alſo in caſes of aſſault, for the aſſault of the wife, child, or ſervant, the huſband, father, and maſter, may have action of treſpaſs, per quod ſervitium amiſit. In caſe of a wife, huſband and wife ſhould join in the action for the perſonal abuſe of the wife, (the huſband not having ſuſtained any damage.) If the huſband has been damnified, as by tearing her cloaths, &c. or loſs of her aſſiſtance, &c. in his domeſtic concerns, for that peculiar injury to himſelf he alone muſt ſue.

As to parent and child, maſter and ſervant, unleſs injury accrues to the parent or maſter, the child or ſervant muſt ſue.

For an aſſault, the wrong-doer is ſubject both to an action at the ſuit of the party, wherein he ſhall render damages; and alſo to an indictment at the ſuit of the king, wherein he ſhall be fined according to the heinouſneſs of the offence. 1 Hawk. 134.

But if both are depending at one time, unleſs in very particular caſes, the attorney general, will, on application, grant a nolle proſequi, if the party will not diſcontinue his action.

Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. enacts, That where there are ſeveral defendants to any action of aſſault, &c. and one or more acquitted, the perſon ſo acquitted ſhall recover coſts of ſuit, unleſs the judge certify that there was a reaſonable cauſe for making ſuch perſon a defendant or defendants to ſuch action.

If any perſon aſſault a privy counſellor, in the execution of his office, it is felony. Stat. 9 Ann. c. 16.

Stat. 6. Geo. 1. c. 23. ſect. 11. If any perſon ſhall wilfully and maliciouſly aſſault any perſon in the public ſtreets or highways, with an intent to tear, ſpoil, cut, burn or deface, and ſhall tear, ſpoil, cut, burn, or deface the garments, &c. of ſuch perſon, it is felony; and the offender may be tranſported for ſeven years.

Aſſaulting perſons in a forcible manner, with intent to commit robbery, is made felony and tranſportation, by Stat. 7 Geo. 2. c. 21. And aſſaulting or threatening a counſellor at law, or attorney employed in a cauſe againſt a man; or a juror giving verdict againſt him; his adverſary for ſuing him, &c. is puniſhable on an indictment, by fine and impriſonment, for the contempt. 1 Hawk. 58.

Aſſecurare, (adſecurare) To make ſecure by pledges, or any ſolemn interpoſition of faith. In the charter of peace between Hen. 2. and his ſons, this word is mentioned. Hoveden, anno 1174.

Aſſembly unlawful, (from the Fr. aſſembler, i. e. aggregare) To flock together. it is the meeting of three or more perſons to do an unlawful act, altho' they do it not: as to aſſault or beat any perſon; enter into houſes, or lands, &c. Weſt. Symb. part 2. ſect. 65. Their meeting and abiding together makes the crime, where they do not execute their intentions: if the intention be to redreſs public grievances, and be executed, it is adjudged treaſon. 3 Inſt. 9. The late riot act ordains, that where twelve perſons, or more, unlawfully aſſembled, continue together an hour after proclamation to depart, they ſhall be guilty of felony. Stat. 1. Geo. 1. c. 6. Aſſent, or conſent. To a legacy of goods, the aſſent of the executor is neceſſary, before the legatee may take the ſame; but to a deviſe of lands that are freehold, it is not required. Co. Lit. 111. The aſſent of an executor to a deviſe of a legacy, or of any perſonal thing, is ſo neceſſary, that if the legatee or deviſee take the thing without the delivery and aſſent of the executor, he may have an action of treſpaſs. Keilw. 128. 1 Nelſ. Ab. 260. The Common law takes notice of the aſſent of the executor to the legacy, and doth give him time to conſider of the value of the goods, and ſtate of the debts of the teſtator, that he may pay a legacy with ſafety; the executor being to pay debts before legacies. Perk. 570. No property can be transferred to the legatee without the aſſent of the executor: but if the executor doth once aſſent to the legacy, the legatee hath ſuch a property veſted in him that he may take it, though the executor revokes his aſſent afterwards. And there may be an aſſent implied, as well as expreſs; as if the executor offers the legatee money for what is bequeathed him; or directs others to the legatee to buy it, &c. Plowd. 543. 4 Rep. 28.

When there are many executors, the aſſent of one to a legacy is ſufficient: and one executor may take a legacy without the aſſent of his co-executors. Perk. 572. Aſſent may be before or after probate of the will. An infant executor, at the age of ſeventeen years, may aſſent to a legacy: but it has been doubted, whether an adminiſtrator durante minori ætate can aſſent. Cro. Eliz. 719. A huſband is to give aſſent where his wife is executrix. A court of equity, or the ſpiritual court, may compel an executor to aſſent to a legacy. March 97. But an aſſent to a void deviſe will be alſo void. Plowd. 525.

Aſſeſſors, Thoſe that aſſeſs public taxes; as two inhabitants in every pariſh were aſſeſſors for the royal aid, to rate every perſon according to the value of his eſtate. Anno 16 & 17 Car. 2. There are aſſeſſments of pariſh duties, for raiſing money for the poor, repairing of highways, &c. made and levied by rate on the inhabitants; as well as aſſeſſments of public taxes, &c. See Aſſiſors.

Aſſets, (Fr. aſſez, i. e. ſatis) Signifies goods enough to diſcharge that burden which is caſt upon the executor or heir, in ſatisfying the debts and legacies of the teſtator or anceſtor. Bro. tit. aſſets.

Aſſets are real, or perſonal; where a man hath lands in fee ſimple, and dies ſeiſed thereof, the lands which come to his heir are aſſets real: and where he dies poſſeſſed of any perſonal eſtate, the goods which come to the executors are aſſets perſonal.

Aſſets are alſo divided into aſſets per deſcent, and aſſets inter maines. Aſſets by deſcent is where a perſon is bound in an obligation, and dies ſeiſed of lands which deſcend to the heir, the land ſhall be aſſets, and the heir ſhall be charged as far as the land to him deſcended will extend.

Aſſets inter maines is when a man indebted makes executors, and leaves them ſufficient to pay his debts and legacies; or where ſome commodity or profit ariſeth to them in right of the teſtator, which are called aſſets in their hands. Terms de Ley 56, 77.

As to aſſets by deſcent it is to be obſerved, that by the Common law, if an heir had ſold or aliened the lands which were aſſets, before the obligation of his anceſtor was put in ſuit, he was to be diſcharged, and the debt was loſt: but by ſtatute, the heir is made liable to the value of the land by him ſold, in action of debt brought againſt him by the obligee, who ſhall recover to the value of the ſaid land, as if the debt was the proper debt of the heir; but the land which is ſold or aliened bona fide before the action brought, ſhall not be liable to execution upon a judgment recovered againſt the heir in any ſuch action. Stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 14. Where a man binds himſelf and his heirs in a bond; and dies, leaving iſſue two ſons, if the eldeſt ſon enters on the lands by deſcent as heir to the father, and die without iſſue; and then the youngeſt ſon enters, he ſhall be charged with aſſets as heir to the father. Dyer 368. Lands which come to the heir by purchaſe ſhall not be aſſets; for it is only lands by deſcent that are aſſets. 1 Danv. Abr. 577.

A reverſion in fee, depending upon an eſtate-tail, is not aſſets; becauſe it lies in the will of the tenant in tail to dock and bar it by fine, &c. 6 Rep. 56. But after the tail is ſpent, it is aſſets. 3 Mod. 257. And a reverſion on an eſtate for life or years ſhall be aſſets. A reverſion expectant upon the determination of an eſtate for life is aſſets, and ought to be pleaded ſpecially by the heir; and the plaintiff in ſuch caſe may take judgment of it cum acciderit. Dyer 371. Carthew's Rep. 129. An advowſon is aſſets; but not a preſentation to a church actually void, which may not be ſold. Co. Lit. 374. Lands of ceſtuy que truſt ſhall be aſſets by deſcent. Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. ſ. 12. Alſo

"Eſtate pur auter vie ſhall be aſſets in the hands of the heir, if it come to him by reaſon of a ſpecial occupancy, and where there is no ſpecial occupant, it ſhall go to the executors or adminiſtrators of the party that had the eſtate thereof by virtue of the grant, and ſhall be aſſets in their hands."

And lands by deſcent in ancient demeſne will be aſſets in debt. But a copyhold eſtate deſcending to an heir is not aſſets: nor is any right to an eſtate aſſets, without poſſeſſion, &c. till recovered and reduced into poſſeſſion. Danv. 577.

An annuity is no aſſets, for it is only a choſe en action. Br. Aſſets per Deſcent, pl. 26.

Equity of redemption of an eſtate mortgaged, and a term for years to attend the inheritance are aſſets. 3 Leon. 32. An heir may plead riens per deſcent, but the plaintiff may reply that he had lands from his anceſtor; and ſpecial matter may be given in evidence, &c. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 14. 5 Rep. 60. A ſpecial judgment againſt aſſets only ſhall have relation to, and bind the lands from the time of the filing the original writ or bill. Carth. Rep. 245. As to the heir being bound, vide Co. L. 209, 376, 383, 384, 386.

As to aſſets inter maines, money decreed in a court of equity by reaſon of executorſhip, or ariſing by ſale of lands by executors; and damages recovered by executors; alſo intereſt of the teſtator's money lent by executors, ſhall be aſſets. 2 Chan. Rep. 152. Thoſe goods and chattels, which belonged to the teſtator at his death, and which do come to the hands of the executor, are aſſets, to make the executor chargeable to creditors, &c. 6 Rep. 47. But ſuch things as are not valuable ſhall not be aſſets: and debts, &c. when recovered by the executor after the death of the teſtator, ſhall be accounted aſſets; and not before recovered, for the executor ſhall not be charged for a debt, if he cannot recover it. Wood's Inſt. 323. A releaſe of a certain debt due to the teſtator makes it aſſets in the executor's hands; becauſe it ſhall be intended he would not have made the releaſe, unleſs the money had been paid to him. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 262.

If an executor of his own wrong, to whom 20*l.* is owing, doth ſeize goods to the value of 20*l.* intending to pay himſelf a debt of that value, this ſhall be aſſets in his hands to make him chargeable to any creditor or legatee. 5 Rep. 30.

But if he take out letters of adminiſtration, he may plead quoad thoſe effects, plene adminiſtravit, againſt any action for recovering a debt, not of a ſuperior degree to his own.

Tho' a plantation be an inheritance, yet, being in a foreign country, it is a chattel to pay debts, and a thing that is a teſtamentary. Vent. 358.

Leaſes are aſſets to pay debts, notwithſtanding the aſſent of the executor to the deviſe of them. 1 Lill. Abr. 99. Where an executor of leſſee for years receives the profits of the land, they are appropriated to the uſe of the leſſor; but what is over and above the rent ſhall be aſſets. 1 Salk. 79. If an executor ſurrenders a term of years which he had as executor, to him in reverſion; or if he purchaſes the reverſion, it is not extinct as to him, but ſhall ſtill remain aſſets in the executor to ſatisfy debts and legacies. 1 Rep. 87.

Aſſets in the hands of one executor is aſſets in the hands of others; and if an executor hath goods of the teſtator in any part of the world, he ſhall be charged in reſpect of them. 6 Rep. 47. In actions againſt executors, the jury muſt find aſſets of what value; for the plaintiff ſhall recover only according to the value of the aſſets found. 1 Rol. Rep. 58.

Aſſidere, or aſſedare, To tax equally. Proviſum eſt generaliter quod præd. quadrageſima hoc modo aſſideatur & colligatur. Mat. Pariſ. anno 1232. Sometimes it hath been uſed to aſſign an annual rent, to be paid out of a particular farm, &c. As, manerium rex Stephanus dedit & aſſedit eis pro centum marcis.

Aſſign, (aſſignare) Hath two ſignifications; one general, as to ſet over a right to another, or appoint a deputy, &c. And the other ſpecial, to ſet forth or point at, as we ſay to aſſign error, aſſign falſe judgment, waſte, &c. And in aſſigning of error, it muſt be ſhewn where the error is committed; in falſe judgment, wherein the judgment is unjuſt; in waſte, wherein eſpecially the waſte is done. F. N. B. 19, 112. Reg. Orig. 72. Alſo juſtices are ſaid to be aſſigned to take aſſiſes. Stat. 11 H. 6. c. 2. And ſee Aſſignee and Aſſignment.

Aſſignee, (aſſignatus) Is he that is deputed or appointed by another to do any act, perform any buſineſs, or enjoy any commodity. And aſſignees may be by deed, or in law: aſſignee by deed is when a leſſee of a term, &c. ſells and aſſigns the ſame to another, that other is his aſſignee by deed: aſſignee in law is he whom the law ſo makes, without any appointment of the perſon; as an executor is aſſignee in law to the teſtator. Dyer 6. But if there be aſſignee in deed, aſſignee in law is not allowed: if one covenant to do a thing to J. S. or his aſſigns by a day, and before that day he dies; if before the day he name any aſſignee, the thing muſt be done to his aſſignee named; otherwiſe to his executor or adminiſtrator, who is aſſignee in law. 27 H. 8. 2.

He is called aſſignee, who hath the whole eſtate of the aſſignor: and an aſſignee, though not named in a condition, may pay the money to ſave the land; but he ſhall not receive any money, unleſs he be named. Co. Lit. 215. Aſſignees may take advantage of forfeitures on conditions, when they are incident to the reverſion, as for rent, &c. 1 And. 82. And regularly every aſſignee of the land may take advantage of inherent covenants; alſo aſſignees are bound by ſuch covenants, as a covenant to repair, &c. But if it concerns a thing not in being at the time of the demiſe, as to make a new edifice, &c. the aſſignee is not bound, except he be named in expreſs words; nor is he when named, if the thing to be done does not concern the thing demiſed, but is collateral to it; or in contracts merely perſonal. 1 Cro. 552. 1 Rol. Abr. 915. Plowd. 284.

Under the word aſſigns, the aſſignee of an aſſignee in perpetuum, the heir of an aſſignee, or the aſſignee of an heir, ſhall take. *Co. But though a bond, being a choſe in action, cannot be aſſigned over ſo as to enable the aſſignee to ſue in his own name, yet he has by the aſſignment ſuch a title to the paper and wax, that he may keep or cancel it. Co. Lit. 232. And bonds, &c. are aſſigned by power of attorney to receive and ſue in the aſſignor's name: but bills of exchange are aſſignable by indorſement, and the aſſignees may recover in their own names by Stat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9.

Alſo in equity a bond is aſſignable for a valuable conſideration paid, and the aſſignee alone becomes intitled to the money; ſo that if the obligor, after notice of the aſſignment, pays the money to the obligee, he will be compelled to pay it over again. 2 Vern. 595.

An aſſignee muſt take it ſubject to the ſame equity that it was in the hands of the obligee; as if on a marriage treaty the intended huſband enters into a marriage-brokage bond, which is afterwards aſſigned to creditors, yet it ſtill remains liable to the ſame equity, and is not to be carried into execution againſt the obligor. 2 Vern. 428.

Aſſecurare, (adſecurare) To make ſecure by pledges, or any ſolemn interpoſition of faith. In the charter of peace between Hen. 2. and his ſons, this word is mentioned. Hoveden, anno 1174.

Aſſembly unlawful, (from the Fr. aſſembler, i. e. aggregare) To flock together. it is the meeting of three or more perſons to do an unlawful act, altho' they do it not: as to aſſault or beat any perſon; enter into houſes, or lands, &c. Weſt. Symb. part 2. ſect. 65. Their meeting and abiding together makes the crime, where they do not execute their intentions: if the intention be to redreſs public grievances, and be executed, it is adjudged treaſon. 3 Inſt. 9. Aſſent, or conſent. To a legacy of goods, the aſſent of the executor is neceſſary, before the legatee may take the ſame; but to a deviſe of lands that are freehold, it is not required. Co. Lit. 111. The aſſent of an executor to a deviſe of a legacy, or of any perſonal thing, is ſo neceſſary, that if the legatee or deviſee take the thing without the delivery and aſſent of the executor, he may have an action of treſpaſs. Keilw. 128. 1 Nelſ. Ab. 260. The Common law takes notice of the aſſent of the executor to the legacy, and doth give him time to conſider of the value of the goods, and ſtate of the debts of the teſtator, that he may pay a legacy with ſafety; the executor being to pay debts before legacies. Perk. 570. No property can be transferred to the legatee without the aſſent of the executor: but if the executor doth once aſſent to the legacy, the legatee hath ſuch a property veſted in him that he may take it, though the executor revokes his aſſent afterwards. And there may be an aſſent implied, as well as expreſs; as if the executor offers the legatee money for what is bequeathed him; or directs others to the legatee to buy it, &c. Plowd. 543. 4 Rep. 28.

When there are many executors, the aſſent of one to a legacy is ſufficient: and one executor may take a legacy without the aſſent of his co-executors. Perk. 572. Aſſent may be before or after probate of the will. An infant executor, at the age of ſeventeen years, may aſſent to a legacy: but it has been doubted, whether an adminiſtrator durante minori ætate can aſſent. Cro. Eliz. 719. A huſband is to give aſſent where his wife is executrix. A court of equity, or the ſpiritual court, may compel an executor to aſſent to a legacy. March 97. But an aſſent to a void deviſe will be alſo void. Plowd. 525.

Aſſeſſors, Thoſe that aſſeſs public taxes; as two inhabitants in every pariſh were aſſeſſors for the royal aid, to rate every perſon according to the value of his eſtate. Anno 16 & 17 Car. 2. There are aſſeſſments of pariſh duties, for raiſing money for the poor, repairing of highways, &c. made and levied by rate on the inhabitants; as well as aſſeſſments of public taxes, &c. See Aſſiſors.

Aſſets, (Fr. aſſez, i. e. ſatis) Signifies goods enough to diſcharge that burden which is caſt upon the executor or heir, in ſatisfying the debts and legacies of the teſtator or anceſtor. Bro. tit. aſſets.

Aſſets are real, or perſonal; where a man hath lands in fee ſimple, and dies ſeiſed thereof, the lands which come to his heir are aſſets real: and where he dies poſſeſſed of any perſonal eſtate, the goods which come to the executors are aſſets perſonal.

Aſſets are alſo divided into aſſets per deſcent, and aſſets inter maines. Aſſets by deſcent is where a perſon is bound in an obligation, and dies ſeiſed of lands which deſcend to the heir, the land ſhall be aſſets, and the heir ſhall be charged as far as the land to him deſcended will extend.

Aſſets inter maines is when a man indebted makes executors, and leaves them ſufficient to pay his debts and legacies; or where ſome commodity or profit ariſeth to them in right of the teſtator, which are called aſſets in their hands. Terms de Ley 56, 77.

As to aſſets by deſcent it is to be obſerved, that by the Common law, if an heir had ſold or aliened the lands which were aſſets, before the obligation of his anceſtor was put in ſuit, he was to be diſcharged, and the debt was loſt: but by ſtatute, the heir is made liable to the value of the land by him ſold, in action of debt brought againſt him by the obligee, who ſhall recover to the value of the ſaid land, as if the debt was the proper debt of the heir; but the land which is ſold or aliened bona fide before the action brought, ſhall not be liable to execution upon a judgment recovered againſt the heir in any ſuch action. Stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 14. Where a man binds himſelf and his heirs in a bond; and dies, leaving iſſue two ſons, if the eldeſt ſon enters on the lands by deſcent as heir to the father, and die without iſſue; and then the youngeſt ſon enters, he ſhall be charged with aſſets as heir to the father. Dyer 368. Lands which come to the heir by purchaſe ſhall not be aſſets; for it is only lands by deſcent that are aſſets. 1 Danv. Abr. 577.

A reverſion in fee, depending upon an eſtate-tail, is not aſſets; becauſe it lies in the will of the tenant in tail to dock and bar it by fine, &c. 6 Rep. 56. But after the tail is ſpent, it is aſſets. 3 Mod. 257. And a reverſion on an eſtate for life or years ſhall be aſſets. A reverſion expectant upon the determination of an eſtate for life is aſſets, and ought to be pleaded ſpecially by the heir; and the plaintiff in ſuch caſe may take judgment of it cum acciderit. Dyer 371. Carthew's Rep. 129. An advowſon is aſſets; but not a preſentation to a church actually void, which may not be ſold. Co. Lit. 374. Lands of ceſtuy que truſt ſhall be aſſets by deſcent. Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. ſ. 12. Alſo

"Eſtate pur auter vie ſhall be aſſets in the hands of the heir, if it come to him by reaſon of a ſpecial occupancy, and where there is no ſpecial occupant, it ſhall go to the executors or adminiſtrators of the party that had the eſtate thereof by virtue of the grant, and ſhall be aſſets in their hands."

And lands by deſcent in ancient demeſne will be aſſets in debt. But a copyhold eſtate deſcending to an heir is not aſſets: nor is any right to an eſtate aſſets, without poſſeſſion, &c. till recovered and reduced into poſſeſſion. Danv. 577.

An annuity is no aſſets, for it is only a choſe en action. Br. Aſſets per Deſcent, pl. 26.

Equity of redemption of an eſtate mortgaged, and a term for years to attend the inheritance are aſſets. 3 Leon. 32. An heir may plead riens per deſcent, but the plaintiff may reply that he had lands from his anceſtor; and ſpecial matter may be given in evidence, &c. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 14. 5 Rep. 60. A ſpecial judgment againſt aſſets only ſhall have relation to, and bind the lands from the time of the filing the original writ or bill. Carth. Rep. 245. As to the heir being bound, vide Co. L. 209, 376, 583, 384, 386.

As to aſſets inter maines, money decreed in a court of equity by reaſon of executorſhip, or ariſing by ſale of lands by executors; and damages recovered by executors; alſo intereſt of the teſtator's money lent by executors, ſhall be aſſets. 2 Chan. Rep. 152. Thoſe goods and chattels, which belonged to the teſtator at his death, and which do come to the hands of the executor, are aſſets, to make the executor chargeable to creditors, &c. 6 Rep. 47. But ſuch things as are not valuable ſhall not be aſſets: and debts, &c. when recovered by the executor after the death of the teſtator, ſhall be accounted aſſets; and not before recovered, for the executor ſhall not be charged for a debt, if he cannot recover it. Wood's Inſt. 323. A releaſe of a certain debt due to the teſtator makes it aſſets in the executor's hands; becauſe it ſhall be intended he would not have made the releaſe, unleſs the money had been paid to him. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 262.

If an executor of his own wrong, to whom 20*l.* is owing, doth ſeize goods to the value of 20*l.* intending to pay himſelf a debt of that value, this ſhall be aſſets in his hands to make him chargeable to any creditor or legatee. 5 Rep. 30.

But if he take out letters of adminiſtration, he may plead quoad thoſe effects, plene adminiſtravit, againſt any action for recovering a debt, not of a ſuperior degree to his own.

Tho' a plantation be an inheritance, yet, being in a foreign country, it is a chattel to pay debts, and a thing that is a teſtamentary. Vent. 358.

Leaſes are aſſets to pay debts, notwithſtanding the aſſent of the executor to the deviſe of them. 1 Lill. Abr. 99. Where an executor of leſſee for years receives the profits of the land, they are appropriated to the uſe of the leſſor; but what is over and above the rent ſhall be aſſets. 1 Salk. 79. If an executor ſurrenders a term of years which he had as executor, to him in reverſion; or if he purchaſes the reverſion, it is not extinct as to him, but ſhall ſtill remain aſſets in the executor to ſatisfy debts and legacies. 1 Rep. 87.

Aſſets in the hands of one executor is aſſets in the hands of others; and if an executor hath goods of the teſtator in any part of the world, he ſhall be charged in reſpect of them. 6 Rep. 47. In actions againſt executors, the jury muſt find aſſets of what value; for the plaintiff ſhall recover only according to the value of the aſſets found. 1 Rol. Rep. 58.

Aſſignee, (aſſignatus) Is he that is deputed or appointed by another to do any act, perform any buſineſs, or enjoy any commodity. And aſſignees may be by deed, or in law: aſſignee by deed is when a leſſee of a term, &c. ſells and aſſigns the ſame to another, that other is his aſſignee by deed: aſſignee in law is he whom the law ſo makes, without any appointment of the perſon; as an executor is aſſignee in law to the teſtator. Dyer 6. But if there be aſſignee in deed, aſſignee in law is not allowed: if one covenant to do a thing to J. S. or his aſſigns by a day, and before that day he dies; if before the day he name any aſſignee, the thing muſt be done to his aſſignee named; otherwiſe to his executor or adminiſtrator, who is aſſignee in law. 27 H. 8. 2.

He is called aſſignee, who hath the whole eſtate of the aſſignor: and an aſſignee, though not named in a condition, may pay the money to ſave the land; but he ſhall not receive any money, unleſs he be named. *Co. And regularly every aſſignee of the land may take advantage of inherent covenants; alſo aſſignees are bound by ſuch covenants, as a covenant to repair, &c. But if it concerns a thing not in being at the time of the demiſe, as to make a new edifice, &c. the aſſignee is not bound, except he be named in expreſs words; nor is he when named, if the thing to be done does not concern the thing demiſed, but is collateral to it; or in contracts merely perſonal. 1 Cro. 552. 1 *Rol. Aſſignment, (aſſignatio) Is the ſetting over or tranſferring the intereſt a man hath in any thing to another.

For the better explaining this head, it will be proper to conſider,

I. What things are aſſignable.

II. Where an aſſignee ſhall take advantage of the covenant of an aſſignor.

III. Where an aſſignee ſhall be bound by the covenant of an aſſignor.

I. Aſſignments may be made of lands in fee, for life, or years; of an annuity, rent-charge, judgment, ſtatute, &c. but as to lands they are uſually of leaſes and eſtates for years, &c. And no eſtate of freehold, or term for years, ſhall be aſſigned but by deed in writing ſigned by the parties; except by operation of law. Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. A poſſibility, right of entry, title for condition broken, a truſt, or thing in action, cannot be granted or aſſigned over. Co. Lit. 214.

But though a bond, being a choſe in action, cannot be aſſigned over ſo as to enable the aſſignee to ſue in his own name, yet he has by the aſſignment ſuch a title to the paper and wax, that he may keep or cancel it. Co. Lit. 232. And bonds, &c. are aſſigned by power of attorney to receive and ſue in the aſſignor's name: but bills of exchange are aſſignable by indorſement, and the aſſignees may recover in their own names by Stat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9.

Where there is a bond for the performance of covenants in a leaſe, if the leſſee aſſigns the leaſe, he may likewiſe aſſign the bond; but this muſt be before any of the cove- nants are broken; but if any of the covenants are broken, and the leſſee afterwards aſſigns the leaſe and bond, and the aſſignee puts the bond in ſuit, for thoſe breaches it is maintenance. Godb. 81.

'Tis enacted by the ſtatute 7 Jac. 1. c. 15. That a debtor to the king ſhall not aſſign any debts to him, but ſuch as did originally grow due to the debtor; afterwards there was a debtor to the huſband in 2000*l.* by a ſtatute; the huſband made his wife executrix, and died; ſhe married again one G. D. who was indebted to the king, and then the huſband and wife aſſigned this ſtatute to the king in ſatisfaction of the debt due to him; adjudged, that the aſſignment was good, for tho' the ſecond huſband had the ſtatute in right of his wiſe, and by conſequence the debt was not originally due to him; yet becauſe he might releaſe the ſtatute it is the ſame thing as if he had been originally taken in his name. 2 Cro. 324.

An office of truſt is not grantable or aſſignable to another; and therefore it was adjudged, that the office of a filazer, which was an office of truſt, could not be aſſigned, and if it could not be aſſigned, it cannot be extended upon a ſtatute. Dyer 7.

A poſſibility, right of entry, or thing in action, or cauſe of ſuit, or title for a condition broken, cannot be granted or aſſigned over by law; for if this were permitted, it would promote maintenance, and prove prejudicial to ſuch as, being able to contend with thoſe with whom the original contract was, might find themſelves depreſſed by a powerful adverſary. Co. Lit. 214. 1 Rol. Abr. 376. Skin. 6, 26.

A bare power is not aſſignable, but where it is coupled with an intereſt it may be aſſigned: agreed per cur. as where a leaſe was made with power for leſſor, his heirs and aſſigns, to cut down, grub up, and fell trees; and leſſor granted ſome of the trees to defendant who with his ſervants entered and cut them down; and it was objected, that this was a power annexed to the reverſion only, and not aſſignable; and that he might have juſtified under the leſſor, but not in his own right. But judgment quod querens nil capiat. The liberty is annexed to the trees, and, as incident to them, aſſignable with them. 2 Jon. 206. The leſſor might ſever the trees from the reverſion. 2 Mod. 317.

Arrears of rent, &c. is a choſe in action, and not aſſignable. See Skin. 6.

It hath been doubted if a leaſe for years before entry and poſſeſſion be aſſignable. See Show. 291.

A leſſee out of poſſeſſion cannot make any aſſignment of his term off the land; but muſt firſt enter, and recontinue his poſſeſſion; or ſeal and deliver the deed upon the land, which puts the aſſignee into actual poſſeſſion. Daliſ. 81. But it has been adjudged, that where leſſee for years of the crown is put out of his eſtate by a ſtranger, yet he may aſſign the term, though he is not in poſſeſſion; becauſe, the reverſion being in the crown, he cannot lawfully be put out of poſſeſſion, but at his own will. Cro. Eliz. 275.

If leſſee for years aſſigns all his term in his leaſe to another, he cannot reſerve a right in the aſſignment; for he hath no intereſt in the thing by reaſon of which the rent reſerved ſhould be paid; and where there is no reverſion there can be no diſtreſs: but debt may lie upon it, as on a contract. 1 Lill. Abr. 99. Where the executor of a leſſee aſſigns the term, debt will not lie againſt him for rent incurred after the aſſignment; becauſe there is neither privity of contract, nor eſtate between the leſſor and executor: but if the leſſee himſelf aſſigns his leaſe, the privity of contract remains between him and the leſſor, although the privity of eſtate is gone by the aſſignment, and he ſhall be chargeable during his life; but after his death, the privity of contract is likewiſe determined. 3 Rep. 14. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 271. Although a leſſee make an aſſignment over of his term, yet debt lies againſt him by the leſſor or his heir, (not having accepted rent from the aſſignee:) but where a leſſee aſſigns his term, and the leſſor his reverſion, the privity is determined, and debt doth not lie for the reverſioner againſt the firſt leſſee. Moor 472. Vide Barker v. Dormer. 1 Sho. 191.

A man made a leaſe, provided that the leſſee or his aſſigns ſhould not alien the premiſes without licence of the leſſor, &c. who after gave licence to the leſſee to alien; by this the leſſee or his aſſigns may alien in infinitum, 4 Rep. 119.

Adjudged, that ſome things in reſpect of their nature are not aſſignable, or to be granted over; as for inſtance, if the donee in tail holdeth of the donor by fealty, he cannot aſſign it over to another, becauſe fealty is incident to and inſeparable from the reverſion; ſo if the founder of a college grant his foundation, though it be to the king, the grant is void, becauſe it is inſeparable from his blood. 11 Rep. 66. b. in Magdalen College's caſe.

Several things are aſſignable by acts of parliament, which ſeem not aſſignable in their own nature; as promiſſary notes, by the 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. bail-bonds by the ſheriff, by 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. a judge's certificate for taking and proſecuting a felon to conviction, by 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. a bankrupt's effects by the ſeveral ſtatutes of bankruptcy.

II. As to what caſes give the aſſignee advantage of the aſſignor's covenant, it is to be obſerved, in general, that

If the remainder of a term of years be aſſigned to another, the aſſignee ſhall have the benefit of a leſſor; and of re-entry upon a leaſe made by the grantor for fewer years, &c. by the Stat. 32 H. 8. cap. 34. And the aſſignee of a reverſion of a term ſhall take advantage of a covenant againſt the leſſee of a ſhorter term; as where leſſee for twenty years makes a leaſe for four years. Moor 694, 695. The word heir is ſufficient to make an aſſignee; and the grantee of a common perſon is aſſignee to have benefit of a covenant, grant, &c. Plowd. 173. A leaſe was made for years of lands, excepting the woods; the leſſor grants the trees to the leſſee, and he aſſigns the land over to another: the trees do not paſs by this aſſignment to the aſſignee. Goldſb. 188.

The leſſor demiſed land, and covenanted with the leſſee, his executors and aſſigns, that if he were diſturbed or forced to pay any charge, &c. he ſhould retain ſo much of the rent; afterwards the leſſee made an aſſignment of his term: and it was held, that his aſſignee might have remedy upon the covenant by way of retainer againſt the aſſignee of the reverſion. Plowd. 72.

Leſſee for years made an aſſignment of part of his term, and the aſſignee covenanted to repair; afterwards the leſſee deviſed the reverſion of the whole term to another, and died, and the deviſee brought an action of covenant againſt the aſſignee; adjudged, that this deviſee of the reverſion was an aſſignee to take the benefit of this covenant or condition within the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 34. of conditions. Godb. 161.

An aſſignee of an aſſignee, an executor or adminiſtrator of an aſſignee, or an aſſignee of an executor, are comprehended under the word aſſigns, and theſe ſhall have an action of covenant for a breach of any covenant which runs with the land. 5 Rep. 16. Spencer's caſe.

Leſſee for years covenanted for himſelf and his aſſigns, that he would not lop the trees, &c. afterwards the leſſee died in teſtate, and adminiſtration was granted to W. R. who lopped the trees, &c. adjudged, that it was a breach of the covenant, for an adminiſtrator is an aſſignee as well as an executor. Moor 44.

Leſſee for life made a leaſe for ſeventeen years, who in the next year aſſigned the term to B. who made a leaſe to W. R. for fourteen years, rendring rent on certain days, and if behind for three days after, being lawfully demanded, and not paid, the leaſe to be void; he in the reverſion for ſeventeen years, granted all his eſtate and intereſt by parol to one Rouland, who demanded the rent, and entered for non-payment; one queſtion was, whether at Common law, without the help of the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 34. of conditions, the aſſignee of him in reverſion could take the ſame advantage of this leaſe, being void, as the aſſignee of the term himſelf might have done, who granted the leaſe for fourteen years? and adjudged, that he might by the grant of all his eſtate, if it had been in writing, and that by the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 34. the grantee of the reverſion of a term, ſhall have the benefit of a condition annexed to a leſſer term derived out of a larger. Moor 525.

III. With reſpect to the caſes in which the aſſignee is bound by the covenant of the aſſignor.

As the rent iſſues out of the land, the aſſignee generally who has the land, and is privy in eſtate, is debtor in reſpect thereof. 3 Rep. 32.

The aſſignee of a term is bound to perform all the covenants annexed to the eſtate; as if A. leaſes lands to B. and B. covenants to pay the rent, repair houſes, &c. during the ſaid term, and B. aſſigns to J. S. the aſſignee is bound to perform the covenants during the life of the firſt leſſee, though the aſſignee be not named, becauſe the covenant runs with the land being made for the maintenance of a thing in eſſe at the time of the leaſe made. 1 Rol. Abr. 521. Cro. Eliz. 457. Moor 399. 5 Co. 24.

But if A. leaſes for years to B. and B. for himſelf, his executors and adminiſtrators, covenants with A. to build a wall upon a part of land demiſed, and after B. aſſigns, the aſſignee is not bound by this covenant; for the law will not annex the covenant to a thing not in eſſe. 5 Co. 15. Yet vide poſt.

But if B. had covenanted for him and his aſſigns to build the wall, &c. this would have bound the aſſignee, becauſe it is to be done upon the land, and the aſſignee is to have the benefit thereof. 5 Co. 15.

The leſſee covenanted for himſelf, his executors and adminiſtrators, to leave fifteen acres every year for paſture, without ploughing it, and afterwards he aſſigned his leaſe to the defendant, againſt whom an action of covenant was brought for not leaving fifteen acres in paſture, &c. and upon a demurrer to the declaration it was inſiſted for the defendant, that he was not bound by this covenant, becauſe he was aſſignee of the leſſee, who had covenanted only for his executors and adminiſtrators, and not for his aſſigns, for they were not named in the covenant; but adjudged this covenant binds him, though not named, becauſe it is for the benefit of the eſtate; but it had been otherwiſe if it had been to do a collateral act as to build de novo, or the like, for in ſuch caſe the aſſigns of the covenantor are not bound, unleſs named. 2 Cro. 125.

Where the executor of a leſſee aſſigns the term, debt will not lie againſt him for rent incurred after the aſſignment, becauſe there is neither privity of contract between the leſſor and the executor, before the aſſignment, nor privity of eſtate, after the aſſignment, and this was Verton and Sydalis's caſe; but where the leſſee himſelf aſſigns his leaſe, in ſuch caſe the privity of contract ſtill remains between him and the leſſor, though the privity of eſtate is gone by the aſſignment, and therefore, notwithſtanding that aſſignment, he ſhall be chargeable during his life, but after his death the privity of contract is likewiſe determined. 3 Rep. 24.

If an aſſignment is made by an aſſignee, the firſt aſſignee is not ſuable for the rent; for if he be accepted by the leſſor, the admiſſion of one aſſignee is the admiſſion of twenty. Comp. Attorn. 491. Aſſignment by an aſſignee diſchargeth him, becauſe he was only chargeable as having the land; and there is no occaſion for giving notice to the leſſor of his aſſignment over. Comberb. 192.

Leſſee for years rendring rent, covenants to build a houſe on the land in ten years; within which time he aſſigns his term, action lies on the covenant againſt the aſſignee. Godb. 60. But where a leſſee covenanted for himſelf and his aſſigns to rebuild a houſe before ſuch a time, which he did not do, but after the time expired he aſſigned the term; adjudged that this covenant will not bind the aſſignee, becauſe it was broken before the aſſignment. 1 Salk. 199.

Alſo though the covenant be for him and his aſſigns, yet if the thing to be done be merely collateral, and no way concern the thing demiſed, the covenant ſhall not bind the aſſignee; as if it be to build an houſe upon other land of the leſſor, or to pay a collateral ſum. 5 Co. 15.

The ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 34. enables grantees of reverſions to enter for conditions broken, and to bring actions of covenant, &c. and alſo enables the tenants of particular eſtates as for life, &c. to have actions of covenant againſt their grantees; the queſtion was, if a leſſee for life covenant for himſelf, his executors and adminiſtrators, to build a wall on the lands, and afterwards he aſſigns the eſtate to W. R. whether he or the grantee of the reverſion may have an action of covenant againſt W. R. the aſſignee, if the wall is not built; and adjudged, that he may, though the word aſſigns was not in this covenant, but only executors and adminiſtrators; for by the acceptance of the poſſeſſion he had made himſelf ſubject to all the covenants which run with the land, and are inherent to it. Such as paying rent, repairing, building walls, &c. and to ſuch he is bound without the ſpecial word aſſigns; but not to any collateral covenants. Moor 159.

Where tenant for years aſſigns his eſtate, no conſideration is neceſſary; for the tenant being ſubject to payment of rent, &c. is ſufficient to veſt an eſtate in the aſſignees: in other caſes ſome conſideration muſt be paid. 1 Mod. 263. The words required in aſſignments are, grant, aſſign, and ſet over; which may amount to a grant, feoffment, leaſe, releaſe, confirmation, &c. 1 Inſt. 301. In theſe deeds the aſſignor is to covenant to ſave harmleſs from former grants, &c. That he is owner of the land, and hath power to aſſign; that the aſſignee ſhall quietly enjoy, and to make further aſſurance; and the aſſignee may covenant to pay the rent, and perform the covenants, &c. See farther, Aſſignee, Condition, Covenant.

Aſſimulare, To put highways together: it is mentioned in Leg. Hen. 1. c. 8.

Aſſiſa Cadere. This word ſignifies to be nonſuited; as when there is ſuch a plain and legal inſufficiency in a ſuit, that the complainant can proceed no further on it. Fleta, lib. 4. cap. 15. Bracton, lib. 2. cap. 7.

Aſſiſa Cadit in Juratam, Is where a thing in controverſy is ſo doubtful, that it muſt neceſſarily be tried by a jury. Fleta, lib. 4. c. 15.

Aſſiſa continuanda, A writ directed to the juſtices of aſſiſe for the continuation of a cauſe, when certain records alledged cannot be produced in time by the party that has occaſion to uſe them. Reg. Orig. 217.

Aſſiſa Proroganda, Is a writ directed to the juſtices aſſigned to take aſſiſes, for the ſtay of proceedings, by reaſon of the party's being employed in the king's buſineſs. Reg. Orig. 208.

Aſſiſe, (Fr. aſſis) According to our ancient books is defined to be an aſſembly of knights, and other ſubſtantial men, with the juſtice, in a certain place, and at a certain time appointed. Cuſtum. Normand. cap. 24. This word is properly derived from the Latin verb aſſideo, to ſit together; and is alſo taken for the court, place or time, when and where the writs and proceſſes of aſſiſe are handled or taken. And in this ſignification aſſiſe is general; as when the juſtices go their ſeveral circuits with commiſſion to take all aſſiſes; or ſpecial, where a ſpecial commiſſion is granted to certain perſons (formerly oftentimes done) for taking an aſſiſe upon one or two diſſeiſins only. Bract. lib. 3.

Concerning the general aſſiſe, all the counties of England are divided into ſix circuits, and two judges are aſſigned by the king's commiſſion to every circuit, who hold their aſſiſes twice a year in every county, (except Middleſex, where the king's courts of record do ſit, and where his courts for his counties palatine are held) and have five ſeveral commiſſions.

1. Of oyer and terminer, directed to them and many other gentlemen of the county, by which they are empowered to try treaſons, felonies, &c. and this is the largeſt commiſſion they have.

2. Of gaol delivery, directed to the judges and the clerk of aſſiſe aſſociate, which gives them power to try every priſoner in the gaol committed for any offence whatſoever, but none but priſoners in the gaol; ſo that one way or other they rid the gaol of all the priſoners in it.

3. Of aſſiſe, directed to themſelves only and the clerk of aſſiſe, to take aſſiſes, and do right upon writs of aſſiſe brought before them by ſuch as are wrongfully thruſt out of their lands and poſſeſſions: which writs were heretofore frequent, but now men's poſſeſſions are ſooner recovered by ejectments, &c.

4. Of niſi prius, directed to the judges and clerk of aſſiſe, by which civil cauſes grown to iſſue in the courts above, are tried in the vacation by a jury of twelve men of the county where the cauſe of action ariſes; and on return of the verdict of the jury to the court above, the judges there give judgment.

5. A commiſſion of the peace, in every county of the circuits; and all juſtices of the peace of the county are bound to be preſent at the aſſiſes; and ſheriffs are alſo to give their attendance on the judges, or they ſhall be fined. Bacon's Elem. 15, 16, &c.

There is a commiſſion of the peace, oyer and terminer and gaol-delivery of Newgate, held eight times in a year, for the city of London and county of Middleſex, at Juſtice Hall in the Old Bailey, where the lord mayor is the chief judge.

In Wales there are but two circuits, North and South Wales; for each of which the king appoints two perſons learned in the laws to be judges. Stat. 18 Eliz. c. 8. If juſtices ſit by force of a commiſſion, and do not adjourn the commiſſion, it is determined. 4 Inſt. 265.

The conſtitution of the juſtices of aſſiſe was begun by Hen. 2. though ſomewhat different from what they now are: and by Magna Charta juſtices ſhall be ſent through every county once a year, who, with the knights of the reſpective ſhires, ſhall take aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, &c. in their proper ſhires, and what cannot be determined there ſhall be ended by them in ſome other place in their circuit; and if it be too difficult for them, it ſhall be referred to the juſtices of the bench, there to be ended. 9 Hen. 3. c. 12.

By the Stat. 21 Geo. 2. c. 12. The ſummer aſſiſes in Buckinghamſhire ſhall be held at the town of Buckingham. Aſſiſe is likewiſe uſed for a jury, where aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin are tried: the panels of aſſiſes ſhall be arrayed, and a copy indented delivered by the ſheriff, &c. to the plaintiffs and defendants ſix days before the ſeſſions, &c. if demanded, on pain of 40 l. by Stat. 6 Hen. 6. cap. 2. And aſſiſe is taken for a writ for recovery of poſſeſſion of things immoveable, whereof any one and his anceſtors have been diſſeiſed. Likewiſe, in another ſenſe, it ſignifies an ordinance or ſtatute. Reg. Orig. 279. The writs of aſſiſe are the four ſorts following:

Aſſiſe of Novel Diſſeiſin, (aſſiſa novæ diſſeiſinæ).

An aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin is a remedy maxime feſtinam, for the recovery of lands or tenements, of which the party was diſſeiſed. 2 Inſt. 410. And it is called novel diſſeiſin, becauſe the juſtices in eyre went their circuits from ſeven years to ſeven years; and no aſſiſe was allowed before them, which commenced before the laſt circuit, which was called an ancient aſſiſe; and that which was upon a diſſeiſin ſince the laſt circuit, an aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin. Co. Lit. 153. b.

An aſſiſe is called feſtinum remedium 1. Becauſe the tenant ſhall not be aſſoined. 2. Shall not caſt a protection. 3. Shall not pray in aid of the king. 4. Shall not vouch any ſtranger, except he be preſent, and will enter preſently into warranty; ſo of receipt. 5. The parol ſhall not demur for the nonage of the plaintiff or defendant. 8 Co. 50. Booth 262.

It lies where tenant in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, or for term of life, is put out and diſſeiſed of his lands, or tenements, rents, common of paſture, common way, or of an office, toll, &c. Glanv. lib. 10. Reg. Orig. 197. Aſſiſe muſt be of an actual freehold in lands, &c. and not a freehold in law: it lieth of common of paſture, where the commoner hath a freehold in it, and the lord or other perſons feed it ſo hard, that all the graſs is eat up; but then the plaintiff muſt count and ſet forth how long the land was fed, and alledge per quod proficuum ſuum ibidem amiſit, &c. 9 Rep. 113. One may have an aſſiſe of land and rent, or of ſeveral rents, and offices and profits in his ſoil, all in one writ: and if it be of a rent-charge, or rent-ſeck, it ſhall be general de libero tenemento in ſuch a place, and all the lands and tenants of the tenements charged ought to be named in the writ; but in aſſiſe for rent ſervice it is otherwiſe. Dyer 31. An aſſiſe may be brought for an office held for life; but then it muſt be an office of profit, not of charge only: of the toll of a mill, or market, aſſiſe lieth; though it may not be brought of ſuit to a mill. 8 Rep. 46, 47.

Seiſin of an office may be alledged by taking money for the buſineſs done, and the place where the officer ſat be put in view. Dyer 114.

An aſſiſe was brought of the office of a filazer of the court of Common Pleas, and the demandant counted de libero tenemento, and alledged ſeiſin, by taking money for a capias, and the poſt was put in view where the officer ſate. Dyer 114.

An aſſiſe lieth of the office of regiſter of the admiralty, and the demandant laid a preſcription to it, viz. quod quilibet hujuſmodi perſona, who ſhould be named by the admiral, ſhould be regiſter of the admiralty for life. Dyer 153.

It lieth of offices of woodward, park-keeper, and keeper of chaſes, warrener, &c. but theſe are not at Common law; but by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. becauſe they are of profits to be taken in alieno ſolo: it likewiſe lieth of all other offices and bailiwicks in fee. 8 Rep. 47.

In an aſſiſe of a new office, it ought to be ſhewed what profits belong to it; but it is otherwiſe of an ancient office, becauſe it is preſumed, that the profit thereof is ſufficiently known. 8 Rep. 45.

Tenants in common ſhall each have a ſeveral aſſiſe for his moiety, or part, becauſe they are ſeiſed by ſeveral titles; but twenty jointenants ſhall have but one aſſiſe in all their names, becauſe they have but one joint title; ſo if there are three jointenants, and one of them releaſeth all his right to one of his companions, and then the other two are diſſeiſed of the whole, they ſhall have but one aſſiſe in both their names, for the two parts, becauſe they had a joint title to it at the time of the diſſeiſin, and he to whom the releaſe was given ſhall have an aſſiſe in his own name, becauſe of that part he is tenant in common. Co. Lit. 196.

If leſſee for years, or tenant at will, be ouſted, the leſſor, or he in remainder, may have aſſiſe, becauſe the freehold hold was in him at the time of the diſſeiſin. Kel. 109. Aſſiſe lies for titles, by Stat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 7. Cro. Eliz. 559. But not for an annuity, penſion, &c. In ſome caſes an aſſiſe will lie, where ejectment will not. Ejectment will not lie de piſcaria, by reaſon the ſheriff cannot deliver poſſeſſion of it; but an aſſiſe will lie for it, as it may be viewed by the recognitors. Cro. Car. 534. Aſſiſe will ſometimes lie where treſpaſs vi & armis doth not. Vide 8 Rep. 47. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 276.

By Magna Charta, 9 Hen. 3. cap. 12. aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, &c. ſhall be taken in the proper counties, by the king's juſtices: and for eſtovers of wood, profit taken in woods, corn to be received yearly in a certain place; and for toll, tonnage, &c. and of offices in fee, an aſſiſe ſhall be; alſo for common of turbary, and of fiſhing, appendant to freehold, &c.

In an aſſiſe, the plaintiff muſt prove his title, then his ſeiſin and diſſeiſin: but ſeiſin of part of a rent is ſufficient to have aſſiſe of the whole; and if a man who hath title to enter ſet his foot upon the land and is ouſted, that is a ſufficient ſeiſin. Comp. Attorn. 267.

As the writ of aſſiſe reſtores the party to the actual ſeiſin of his freehold, for ſo are the words of the writ, viz facias tenementum illud ſeiſiri, &c. conſequently the party that brings the writ muſt found it upon an actual ſeiſin, which he has been deveſted of, for otherwiſe this remedy is not commenſurate to his caſe. See 2 Rol. Abr. 463.

Therefore if there be lord and tenant by rent-ſervice, and the lord grants the ſervices to another, and the tenant attorns by a penny, this being given by way of attornment, is not ſufficient ſeiſin to ground an aſſiſe on; ſecus if the penny had been given by way of ſeiſin of the rent. Lit. ſect. 565. Co. Lit. 315. 4 Co. 9. 10 Co. 127.

The firſt proceſs in this action is an original writ iſſued out of Chancery, directed to the ſheriff, commanding him to return a jury, who are called the recognitors of the aſſiſe. An aſſiſe is to be arraigned on the day the writ is returnable, on which day the defendant is to count, and the tenant is to appear and plead inſtantly, unleſs the court thinks proper to allow him an imparlance, which it is ſaid cannot be without ſhewing good cauſe. Style Reg. 88.

If in an aſſiſe no tenant of the freehold be mentioned, the defendant may plead it; and where one defendant pleads, no tenant of the freehold named in the writ, if this is found, the writ ſhall abate quoad all. Dyer 207.

On ſuch a plea of the defendant, the plaintiff ſays that he hath made a feoffment to perſons unknown, and he himſelf hath continually taken the profits; if then they are at iſſue upon the taking the profits, and it be found againſt the defendant, it ſhall not be inquired of the points of the aſſiſe, for the diſſeiſin is acknowledged. 1 Danv. Abr. 584. And if the deed of the anceſtor of the plaintiff be pleaded in bar, and this is denied, and found for the plaintiff; the aſſiſe ſhall not inquire of the points of the writ, but only of the damages. Ibid. 585.

In an aſſiſe for an office newly erected and conſtituted, the demandant in his plaint muſt ſhew what fee or profit is granted for the exerciſe thereof; for this office cannot have a fee or profit appurtenant to it as an ancient office may; and for an office without fee or profit no aſſiſe lies. 8 Co. 49.

But in an aſſiſe for an ancient office, the demandant in his plaint need not ſhew what fee or profit is belonging to it, for it ſhall be intended there is ſome fee or profit. 8 Co. 49.

In this ſuit, if the defendant fail to make good the exception which he pleads, he ſhall be adjudged a diſſeiſor, without taking the aſſiſe; and ſhall pay the plaintiff double damages, and be impriſoned a year. Stat. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 25. In aſſiſe the tenant pleads in bar, and the plaintiff makes title, but the tenant doth neither anſwer nor traverſe the title; in this caſe the aſſiſe ſhall be awarded at large. Cro. Eliz. 559. And if any other title is found for the plaintiff, he ſhall recover. Bro. Aſſi. 281. If a tenant pleads in abatement in an aſſiſe, he muſt at the ſame time plead over in bar; and no imparlance ſhall be allowed, without good cauſe: and where there are ſeveral defendants, and any of them do not appear the firſt day, the aſſiſe ſhall be taken againſt them by default. Paſch. 5 W. 3.

If aſſiſe be brought againſt a leſſee, he may not plead aſſiſa non; for that is the form of the plea in bar for tenant of the freehold: he ought to plead the ſpecial matter, viz. his leaſe, the reverſion in the plaintiff, and that he is poſſeſſed, and ſo in without wrong. Jenk. Cent. 142. An aſſiſe is to be firſt arraigned, and the plaintiff's counſel prays the court that the defendant may be called; whereupon he is called; and if the defendant appears, then his counſel demand oyer of the writ of aſſiſe, and the return of it; which is granted; and then he prays leave to imparl to a ſhort time after, and the jury is adjourned to that day: at the day given by the court, the defendant is again called, and upon his appearance, he pleads to the aſſiſe; and upon this an iſſue is joined between the parties, and the jurors are ſworn to try the iſſue, the counſel proceeding to give them their evidence: after the trial the court gives judgment, and the plaintiff recovering is to have writ of ſeiſin, &c. 1 Lill. Abr. 105, 106.

The jurors that are to try the aſſiſe are to view the thing in demand: by writ of aſſiſe the ſheriff is commanded, Quod faciat duodecim liberos & legales homines de vicineto, &c. Videre tenementum illud, & nomina eorum imbreviari, & quod ſummoneat eos per bonas ſummonitiones, quod ſint coram juſtitiariis, &c. parati inde facere recognitionem, &c.

By Weſtm. 2. cap. 25. A certificate of aſſiſe is given, which is a writ for the party grieved, by a verdict or judgment given againſt him in an aſſiſe, when he had ſomething to plead, as a record or releaſe, which could not have been pleaded by his bailiff; or when the aſſiſe was taken againſt himſelf by default, to have the deed tried, and the record brought in before the juſtices; and the former jury ſummoned to appear before them at a certain day and place, for a further examination and trial of the matter. See Booth 215, 287. 4 Co. 4 b. 2 Inſt. 26.

The plaint need not be ſo certain in aſſiſe as in other writs; the judgment being to recover per viſum recognitorum; and if the plaint be but ſo certain as that the recognitors may put the demandant into poſſeſſion, it is ſufficient. Dyer 84. The demandant in an aſſiſe may abridge his plaint at any time after the jury are charged, before verdict. 1 Danv. 580. For proceedings in writ of aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, ſee Plowd. 411, 412.

The court of Common Pleas or King's Bench may hold plea of aſſiſes of land in the county of Middleſex, by writ out of Chancery. 1 Lill. Abr. 105. And in cities and corporations an aſſiſe of freſh force lies for recovery of poſſeſſion of lands, within forty days after the diſſeiſin, as the ordinary aſſiſe in the county. F. N. B. 7.

GEORGE the Third, &c. To the ſheriff of W. greeting. A. B. hath complained to us, that C. D. unjuſtly and without judgment hath diſſeiſed him of his free tenement or freehold in, &c. within thirty years now laſt paſt; and therefore we command you, that if the ſaid A. makes you ſecure in proſecuting his claim, then that you cauſe the ſaid tenement to be reſeiſed of the chattels which in it were taken, and the ſame tenement with its chattels to be in peace, until the next aſſiſes, when our juſtices into thoſe parts ſhall come; and in the mean time do you cauſe twelve free and lawful men of that venue or neighbourhood to view the ſaid tenement, and their names to be impanelled, and ſummon them by good ſummoners, that they be before our ſaid juſtices at the ſaid aſſiſes, ready to make recogniſance thereof; and put by ſureties and ſafe pledges the ſaid C. or his bailiff, if he ſhall not be found, that he then be there to hear that recogniſance; and have you there the ſummoners, the names of the pledges, and this writ. Witneſs, &c.

A count, or declaration, with a plea, iſſue, and judgment in an aſſiſe.

Wilts, ſſ. THE aſſiſe come to recogniſe, whether C. D. unjuſtly and without judgment did diſſeiſe

A. B. of his freehold in, &c. within thirty years now laſt paſt, &c. And whereupon the ſaid A. by T. By virtue of which fine ſo levied, the ſaid* A. into the ſaid tenements with the appurtenances entered, and was thereof ſeiſed in his demeſne as of fee, until the aforeſaid C. Therefore it is conſidered, that the ſaid A. do recover againſt the ſaid C. his ſeiſin of the ſaid tenements aforeſaid, with the appurtenances, and alſo, &c. And the ſaid C. is in mercy, &c. And hereupon the ſaid A. prays the writ of the lord the king, to be directed to the ſheriff of the county aforeſaid, to cauſe to be delivered to him full ſeiſin of the tenements aforeſaid with the appurtenances; and it is granted to him, returnable here, &c.

Aſſiſe of Mort d'Anceſtor. (aſſiſa mortis anteſſoris) is a writ that lieth where a man's father, mother, brother, ſiſter, uncle, aunt, &c. died ſeiſed of lands, tenements, rents, &c. that were held in fee, and after their deaths a ſtranger abateth. Reg. Orig. 223. It is good as well againſt the abator, as any other in poſſeſſion of the land: but it lies not againſt brothers or ſiſters, &c. where there is privity of blood between the perſon proſecuting and them. Co. Lit. 242. And it muſt be brought within the time limited by the ſtatute of limitations, or the right may be loſt by negligence. If the anceſtor were ſeiſed the day that he died, of any lands, or other eſtate in fee-ſimple, although a ſtranger entereth and diſſeiſeth him of that land the day that he died, ſo that he dieth not ſeiſed of the ſaid land; yet the perſon who is his heir ſhall have the aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor, becauſe the writ doth not ſuppoſe that the anceſtor died ſeiſed; but ſaith parati ſacramento recogn. Si W. B. Pater, &c. fuit ſeiſitus die quo obiit, &c. And the ſame is ſufficient, Although he died not ſeiſed. Fitz. Nat. Br. 433. If a man go beyond ſea in pilgrimage, and dieth there; or if he enter into religion, &c. his heir ſhall have a writ of aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor, and it ſufficeth that the anceſtor was ſeiſed the day he went out of the land, although it was not the day of his death. Ibid 434, 435.

By the ſtatute of Glouceſter, if tenant by the curteſy alien his wife's inheritance, and dieth, the heir of the wife ſhall have an aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor, if he have not aſſets by deſcent from the tenant by the curteſy; and the ſame ſhall be as well where the wife was not ſeiſed of land the day of her death, as where ſhe was ſeiſed thereof. 6 Ed. 1. New. Nat. Br. 489. A warden of a college, &c. ſhall have aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor of rent where his predeceſſor was ſeiſed. And a man may have aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor of rents, againſt ſeveral perſons in ſeveral counties; having in the end of the writ ſeveral ſummons againſt the tenants: and the proceſs in this writ, is ſummons againſt the party; and if he makes default at the day of the aſſiſe returned, then the plaintiff ought to ſue out a reſummons; and if he makes default again, the aſſiſe ſhall be taken, &c. Bro. Aſſiſ. 88. In a mort d'anceſtor, if the tenant ſays, the plaintiff is not next heir, and this is found againſt him, the points of the writ ſhall be inquired of: and in this caſe, the aſſiſe may find, that though the plaintiff be the next heir, yet he is not next heir as to this land; for this is in regard of their inquiry at large. Br. Mort d'An'. 47. 1 Danv. Abr. 584. Damages ſhall be recovered in the aſſiſe of mort d'anceſtor; but it lieth not of an eſtate tail, only where the anceſtor was ſeiſed in demeſne as of fee. Bro. Aſſiſ. If a man be barred in aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, upon ſhewing a diſcent, or other ſpecial matter, he may have mort d'anceſtor, or writ of entry ſur diſſeiſin, &c. 4 Rep. 43.

GEORGE the Third, &c. To the ſheriff of W. Greeting. If A. B. ſhall make you ſecure, that he will proſecute his claim, then ſummon, &c. Twelve free and lawful men of the neighbourhood of, &c. that they be before our juſtices at the firſt aſſiſes, when into thoſe parts they ſhall come; or before our juſtices at Weſtminſter on the day, &c. or before our truſty and beloved, &c. and thoſe whom to them we ſhall aſſociate, at a certain day and place, which the ſaid juſtices ſhall cauſe you to know (or to be known to you) ready upon oath to recogniſe, if W. B. father of the ſaid A. &c. was ſeiſed in his demeſne as of fee, of one meſſuage, and one yardland with the appurtenances in D. the day which he died; and whether he died, &c. And if the ſaid A. be his next heir; and in the mean time, let them ſee the ſaid meſſuage and land, and do you cauſe their names to be impanelled; and ſummons by good ſummoners C. D. who now holdeth the ſaid meſſuage and lands, that he be there to hear the recognition: and have you there the ſummoners, and this writ. Witneſs, &c.

Aſſiſe of Darrein Preſentment, (aſſiſa ultimæ preſentationes) a writ lying where a man and his anceſtors have preſented a clerk to a church, and after, the church being void, a ſtranger preſents his clerk to the ſame church, whereby the perſon having right is diſturbed. Reg. Orig. 30. And a man ſhall have aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, although neither he nor his anceſtors did preſent to the laſt avoidance: as if tenant for life or years, or in dower, or by the curteſy, ſuffer an uſurpation in a church, &c. and die; he in reverſion who is heir unto the anceſtor who laſt preſented, ſhall have aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, if he be diſturbed: but if a man preſent; and then grant the advowſon unto another for life, and he ſuffer one uſurpation, or two, or three uſurpations; now at the next avoidance, he in the reverſion ſhall not have an aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, if he be diſturbed to preſent. 10 Ed. 3. In this caſe he is put to his writ of right. If a diſturber preſent to an advowſon, and the patron bring an aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, and pending the writ, the incumbent dieth, if the diſturber preſenteth again and dies, yet the patron ſhall have an aſſiſe of darrein preſentment upon the firſt diſturbance againſt the heir of the diſturber by journeys accounts. New Nat. Br. 71.

Aſſiſe of darrein preſentment doth not lie for one coparcener againſt the other: the church is never litigious between parceners; for, if they cannot agree, the ordinary ought to admit the preſentee of the eldeſt: contra of jointenants. Mich. 15 Ed. 3. If a man preſent to a church, and afterwards the parſon doth reſign, &c. and the patron preſents again and is diſturbed, he ſhall have this writ, although the former preſentee be living; and the writ ſhall ſuppoſe, that the defendant doth deforce him of the advowſon; and yet the plaintiff by his declaration counteth that he or his anceſtors laſt preſented, by which he ſuppoſeth that he is in poſſeſſion, &c. New Nat. Br. 74. A perſon preſents to an advowſon, and after the incumbent dies, and the ordinary doth preſent another by lapſe, on that laſt incumbent's death the right patron ſhall preſent; and if he be diſturbed, he ſhall have an aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, notwithſtanding the mean preſentment: but one cannot make title to a preſentment in time of war. Ibid. A tenant in tail of an advowſon may have this writ, as well as tenant in fee thereof, and is not put to a quare impedit:

and it is ſaid a leſſee for years may bring it, if he hath preſented before, although he hath no freehold; for this aſſiſe is not like an aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin, F. N. B. 31. Though he who will generally bring the aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, ought to have the ſame eſtate or part thereof, which he had at the time of the firſt preſentment; therefore if ſuch leſſee for years of an advowſon preſents, and after his eſtate is enlarged for life, or in fee; and then the church becomes void, he ſhall not have this writ, becauſe he hath a new eſtate by enlargement, and no part of his former eſtate. Keilw. 118. Mallor. Qu. Imped. 162.

By Magna Charta 9 H. 3. c. 13. Theſe aſſiſes of darrein preſentment are to be always taken before the juſtices of the bench, and there ſhall be determined. In aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, the proceſs is ſummons and reſummons, habeas corpus, &c. And if the writ be brought in Middleſex, at the return the aſſiſe ſhall be there arraigned at the bar, and the tenant demanded; if the tenant doth not appear, a reſummons ſhall be awarded; and if upon that he appeareth not, the aſſiſe is to be taken againſt him by default, &c. In this aſſiſe ſix of the jury ought to have the view of the church, to the intent that they may put the plaintiff in poſſeſſion, if he recovers: and the judgment is to recover the preſentation and damages, and the value of the church for half a year; and if ſix months be paſt, two years value of the church ſhall be recovered, by Stat. Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 5.

GEORGE the Third, &c. To the ſheriff of W. greeting. If A. B. ſhall ſecure you, &c. then do you ſummon by good ſummoners, twelve free and lawful men of the venue or neighbourhood of D. that they be before our juſtices, &c. ready to recogniſe upon their oaths what patron in the time of peace preſented the laſt parſon, or incumbent, who is dead, to the church of, &c. which is vacant, as it is ſaid, and the advowſon whereof the ſaid A. ſaith belongs to him; and in the mean time the church let them view, and do you cauſe their names to be returned, and ſummon C. D. who deforced him of that advowſon, that he be there to hear, &c. And have you then there the ſummoners and this writ. Witneſs, &c

Aſſiſe de utrum, (aſſiſa utrum) Lieth for a parſon againſt a layman, or a layman againſt a parſon, for lands or tenements doubtful, whether they be lay-fee, or free alms belonging to the church. Bract. lib. 4. It is a writ of the higheſt nature that a parſon can have: and if a parſon, prebendary, &c. loſe by default in a real action, he may have this writ; for it is his writ of right. 6 Rep. 8. Theſe are the four kinds of writs of aſſiſe, uſed in actions poſſeſſory; and are called petit aſſiſes, in reſpect of the grand aſſiſe: for the law of fees is grounded upon two rights, one of poſſeſſion, the other of property; and as the grand aſſiſe ſerves for the right of property, ſo the petit aſſiſe ſerveth to ſettle the right of poſſeſſion. Horn's Mirr. At Common law there are but two forms of writs of aſſiſe, viz aſſiſe de libero tenemento, and aſſiſe de communia paſturæ. 8 Rep. 45. The aſſiſes of novel diſſeiſin, &c. and de communia paſturæ, were inſtituted by Hen. 2. in the place of duels: and therefore Glanville tells us, that Magna aſſiſa eſt regale beneficium clementia principis de conſilio procerum populis indultum, a quo vitæ hominum & ſtatus integritati tam ſalubriter conſulitur, ut in jure, quod quis in libero ſoli tenemento poſſidet, retinendo, duelli caſum homines declinare poſſunt ambiguum, &c. Glanv. lib. 2. cap. 7.

Aſſiſe of the Foreſt, (aſſiſa de foreſta) Is a ſtatute touching orders to be obſerved in the King's foreſt. Manwood 35. The ſtatute of view of frank-pledge, anno 18 Ed. 1. is alſo called the aſſiſe of the King: and the ſtatute of bread and ale, 51 H. 3. is termed the aſſiſe of bread and ale. And theſe are ſo called, becauſe they ſet down and appoint a certain meaſure, or order, in the things they contain. There is further an aſſiſe of nuſance, aſſiſa nocumenti, where a man maketh a nuſance to the freehold of another, to redreſs the ſame. And beſides Littleton's diviſion of aſſiſes, there are others mentioned by other writers, viz. aſſiſe at large, brought by an infant to enquire of a diſſeiſin, and whether his anceſtor were of full age, good memory, &c. when he made the deed pleaded, whereby he claims his right.

Aſſiſe in point of aſſiſe (aſſiſa in modum aſſiſæ) which is when the tenant as it were ſetting foot to foot with the demandant, without any thing furher, pleads directly to the writ, no wrong, no diſſeiſin.

Aſſiſe out of the point of aſſiſe, is when the tenant pleadeth ſomething by exception; as a foreign releaſe, or foreign matter triable in a foreign county; which muſt be tried by a jury, before the principal cauſe can proceed.

Aſſiſe of right of damages, is where the tenant confeſſeth an ouſter, and referring it to a demurrer in law, whether it were rightly done or not, is adjudged to have done wrong; whereupon the demandant ſhall have a writ of aſſiſe to recover damages. Bract. lib. 4. F. N. B. 105. Aſſiſes are likewiſe awarded by default of tenants, &c.

Aſſiſors, (aſſiſores) Sunt qui aſſiſas condunt aut taxationes imponunt.—In Scotland, (according to Skene) they are the ſame with our jurors; and their oath is this:

We ſhall leil ſuith ſay,
And na ſuith conceal, for nathing we may,
So far as we are charged upon this aſſiſe,
Be God himſelf, and be our part of paradiſe,
And as we will anſwer to God, upon
The dreadful day of dome.

Aſſiſus, Rented or farmed out for ſuch an aſſiſe, or certain aſſeſſed rent in money or proviſions. Terra aſſiſa was commonly oppoſed to terra dominica; this laſt being held in demain, and occupied by the lord, the other let out to inferior tenants. So among the lands of the Knight's Templars, belonging to their preceptor of Sandford. Com. Oxon. Apud covele de dono Matildis reginæ habentur quatuor hidæ, quarum duæ ſunt in dominico, & duæ aſſiſæ ab hominibus apud, &c.—Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. 141. And hence comes the word to aſſeſs or allot the proportion and rates in taxes and payments by aſſeſſors.

Aſſithment, A wiregeld, or compenſation, by a pecuniary mulct: from the prepoſition ad, and the Sax. ſithe, vice: quod vice ſupplicii ad expiandum delictum ſolvitur.

Aſſociation, (aſſociatio) Is a writ or patent ſent by the King, either at his own motion, or at the ſuit of a party plaintiff, to the juſtices appointed to take aſſiſes, or of oyer and terminer, &c. to have others aſſociated unto them. And this is uſual where a juſtice of aſſiſe dies; and a writ is iſſued to the juſtices alive to admit the perſon aſſociated: alſo where a juſtice is diſabled, this is practiſed. F. N. B. 185. Reg. Orig. 201, 206, 223. The clerk of the aſſiſe is uſually aſſociate of courſe; in other caſes, ſome learned ſerjeants at law are appointed. It has been holden, that an aſſociation after another aſſociation allowed and admitted, doth not lie; nor are the juſtices then to admit other aſſociation in that writ afterwards, ſo long as that writ and commiſſion ſtand in force. Br. Aſſiſ. 386. Mich. 32 H. 6. The king may make an aſſociation unto the ſheriff upon a writ of rediſſeiſin, as well as upon aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin. New Nat. Br. 416, 417.

Aſſociation of Parliament, In the reign of king William III. the parliament entered into a ſolemn aſſociation to defend his majeſty's perſon and government againſt all plots and conſpiracies: and all perſons bearing offices civil or military, were injoined to ſubſcribe the aſſociation, to ſtand by king William, on pain of forfeitures and penalties, &c. By Stat. 7 & 8 W. 3 cap. 27.

Aſſoile, (abſolvere) To deliver from excommunication. Staundf. Pl. Cr. 72. In Stat. 1 Hen. 4. c. 10. Mention being made of K. Edw. 3. it is added, whom God aſſoil.

Aſſumpſit, (from the Lat. aſſumo) Is taken for a voluntary promiſe, by which a man aſſumes or takes upon him to perform or pay any thing to another: it comprehends any verbal promiſe, made upon conſideration, and the Civilians expreſs it diverſly, according to the nature of the promiſe, calling it ſometimes pactum, ſometimes promiſſionem, or conſtitutum, &c. Terms de Ley.

Here it is to be conſidered,

I. In what caſes an aſſumpſit is the proper action.

II. What words will create an aſſumpſit.
III. What conſideration is ſufficient.
IV. Of the proceedings.

I. In every action upon aſſumpſit, there ought to be a conſideration, promiſe, and breach of promiſe. 1 Leon. 405. For

An aſſumpſit is an action the law gives a party injured, for the breach or non-performance of a contract legally entered into; it is founded on a contract either expreſs or implied by law, and gives the party damages in proportion to the loſs he has ſuſtained by the violation of the contract. 4 Co. 92. Moor 667.

But here it muſt be obſerved, that the law diſtinguiſhes between a general indebitatus aſſumpſit and a ſpecial aſſumpſit: for though they come under the denomination of actions on the caſe, and the party is to be recompenſed in damages alike in both, yet the firſt ſeems to be of a ſuperior nature, and will lie in no caſe but where debt will lie; but for a particular undertaking, or collateral promiſe to diſcharge the debt or duty of another, a ſpecial aſſumpſit muſt be brought. 1 New Abr. 163. Such a promiſe ſhould be in writing, or it may come within the ſtat. of frauds.

Action on the caſe on aſſumpſit lies for not making a good eſtate of land ſold, according to promiſe; not paying money upon a bargain and ſale, according to agreement; not delivering goods upon promiſe, on demand; this is by expreſs aſſumpſit; an implied aſſumpſit is where goods are ſold, or work is done, &c. without any price agreed upon; on action on the caſe by quantum meruit, the law implies a promiſe and ſatisfaction to the value.

When one becomes legally indebted to another for goods ſold, the law implies a promiſe that he will pay this debt; and if it be not paid, indebitatus aſſumpſit lies. 1 Danv. Abr. 26. And indebitatus aſſumpſit lies for goods ſold and delivered to a ſtranger ad requiſitionem of the defendant. Ibid. 27. But on indebitatus aſſumpſit for goods ſold, you muſt prove a price agreed on, otherwiſe the action will not lie; though this is helped by laying a quantum meruit with the indebit. aſſumpſit, wherein if you fail in proof of the price agreed on, you may recover the value. Wood's Inſt. 536.

If A. and B. having dealings with each other, make up their accounts, and B. is found in arrear, and promiſes to pay the balance, an aſſumpſit lies againſt him, and A. need not bring a writ of account. Cro. Jac. 69. Yelv. 70. S. P. 1 Rol. Abr. 7. S. P. 1 Rol. Rep. 396. Bulſt. 208. Moor 854.

So if A. gives money, or delivers goods to B. to merchandize therewith, and B. promiſes to render an account, aſſumpſit lies on this expreſs promiſe, as well as account. 1 Salk. 9.

So if a tenant, being in arrear for rents, ſettles an account of arrears with his landlord, and promiſes to pay him the ſum in which he is found in arrear, an aſſumpſit lies on this promiſe. 1 Rol. Abr. 9. Bro. Account. 81. Raym. 211. 2 Keb. 813. Vide Style 131, 283. Cro. Jac. 602.

But if the obligor in a bond, without any new conſideration, as forbearance, &c. promiſes to pay the money, an aſſumpſit will not lie, but the obligee muſt ſtill purſue his remedy by action of debt. 1 Rol. Abr. 8. Hutt. 34. Cro. Eliz. 240. ſeems contra.

Where a man comes to buy goods, and they agree upon a price and a day for the payment, and the buyer takes them away, an aſſumpſit for the money is the proper action, for trover will not lie for the goods, becauſe the property was changed by a lawful bargain, and by that bargain the buyer was to convert the goods before the money was due; but if a man comes to buy goods, and they agree upon a price for preſent money, and the buyer takes the goods away without payment, trover lies, becauſe the property is not altered, and therefore the taking away the goods, without payment of the money, is an injurious taking, for which the action lies; but if a man ſells goods on payment of money on a day to come, and the money be paid, and the goods not delivered, trover lies, becauſe the property is in the buyer. 1 New Abr. 167.

If a man and a woman, being unmarried, mutually promiſe to marry each other, and afterwards the man marries another woman, by which he renders himſelf incapable of performing his contract, an aſſumpſit lies, in which the woman ſhall recover damages; for though matrimonial cauſes are regularly cognizable in the ſpiritual courts, yet the contract in the preſent caſe being executory, and revoked by the huſband by the ſubſequent marriage, could not be inforced by eccleſiaſtical cenſures, as a contract in præſenti may; hence therefore, there being no adequate remedy in the ſpiritual courts, and marriage being an advantage, and the loſs of it a temporal loſs, it is fit there ſhould be a remedy in the temporal courts, otherwiſe there would be a failure in juſtice. Carter 233. Dickenſon and Holecroft.

An indebitatus aſſumpſit lies for money by cuſtom due for ſcavage; adjudged upon a ſpecial verdict, by which it was found, that the ſum demanded was due by cuſtom, but that there was no expreſs promiſe to pay it. 2 Lev. 174.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit will not lie upon a bill of exchange accepted; but action upon the cuſtom only. 1 Vent. 152.

If one receives my rent, under pretence of title, I may have an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt him. 2 Mod. 263.

So where A. took out adminiſtration to a perſon ſuppoſed to have died inteſtate, and appointed J. S. his attorney, who received money, &c. and paid it to the adminiſtrator; afterwards a will appearing, the letters of adminiſtration were called in, and the executor brought an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt the attorney; who objected, 1. That he acting only as attorney for him, who in fact was adminiſtrator, the receipt of the money was not his but the adminiſtrator's: and 2dly, That the action ought to have been a ſpecial aſſumpſit, the money being received by ſpecial authority, and that expreſly to the uſe of another; but the court held, that the authority being void, it was a receipt of ſo much money for the uſe of the plaintiff on an implied contract, for which an indebitatus aſſumpſit well lies. 1 Salk. 27.

If a feme ſole marries a man, who in truth is married to another woman, and he makes a leaſe of her lands and receives the rents, ſhe may bring an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt him for ſo much money received to her uſe; adjudged after verdict, though objected, that he having no right to receive, the tenant remained ſtill liable, and he had his remedy over againſt the huſband; but the court held, that he being viſibly a huſband, the tenant was diſcharged, at leaſt that the recovery in this action would diſcharge the tenant, as it would be a ſatisfaction to the true leſſor. 1 Salk. 28.

Where action is brought upon a contract, if the plaintiff miſtakes the ſum agreed upon, he fails in his action; but if he brings it upon the promiſe in law, ariſing from the debt, there, though he miſtakes the ſum, he ſhall recover. Alleyn 29. Every contract made between parties, implies a mutual promiſe for performance: and yet an action may be brought on a reciprocal promiſe by one againſt the other, although he who brings it hath not performed on his ſide. Dyer 30, 75. When an aſſumpſit or promiſe is the ground of the action, it muſt be preciſely ſet forth. 3 Lev. 319. If a promiſe be made without limitation of time for its performance, reaſonable time ſhall be allowed, if there be an immediate conſideration for it; and not time during life. 1 Lill. Abr. 112. On promiſe to deliver a thing ſuch a day, the party is bound to do it without requeſt. 1 Lev. 284. But if a promiſe be to do any thing upon requeſt, the requeſt is neceſſary to intitle the plaintiff to the action, on which it ſhall ariſe. 1 Lev. 48. Tho' in every indebitatus aſſumpſit, 'tis alledged the defendant promiſed to pay on requeſt and that he was requeſted, and refuſed payment, yet no requeſt is ever proved. The time for the performance of the promiſe being elapſed, and the promiſe not performed, the law preſumes requeſt, unleſs in a particular caſe where a thing is not to be done, until requeſt. For the difference between an aſſumpſit in deed and in law, vide Gilb. Evid. 172, 193. and vide ib. 204, 5. Every executory contract, and debt that is not upon record, or on a ſpecialty, which may be turned into damage, imports in it an aſ- ſumpſit in law, and one may have debt or action on the caſe upon it at his election; for when a man doth agree to pay money, or to deliver any thing, he thereby promiſeth to pay or deliver it. Plowd. 128. 3 Cro. 94.

Every contract executory implies an aſſumpſit to pay money at the day agreed, or immediately, if no time be limited. Mo. 667.

The aſſumpſit in an agreement that will be binding and give action, muſt be compleat and perfect, and duly purſued and obſerved: and if the party that makes the aſſumpſit, and he to whom it is made, agree together, and a bond is given and taken for what is promiſed; by this the aſſumpſit is diſcharged. Alſo where an aſſumpſit is to ſtand to an award, if the award made be void; it will make the aſſumpſit void. Yelv. 87. 2 Leon. ca. 223. 1 Leon. 170. Indeb. aſſump. lies by a prothonotary againſt an attorney, for fees for work done for defendant as attorney. Holt's Rep. 20.

Vide Burr. Rep. tit. Action on the Caſe.

A. promiſes B. that when A. receives 100*l.* which C. owes A. that he will pay B. 20*l.* indebitatus aſſumpſit lies not. Otherwiſe if the money had been originally the money of B. Skin. 196. For there was not any conſideration. Indebitatus aſſumpſit lies for a cuſtomary fine, ſuper mortem domini. Show. 35. Indebitatus aſſumpſit lies upon a perſonal contract for a ſum in groſs, as pro rebus venditis; per Holt Ch. J. Show. 36.

Indebitatus lies for fees for being knighted. Show. 78.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit lies for money paid by miſtake, on an account or deceit; but not for money paid knowingly on illegal conſideration, as an uſurious bond. Salk. 22.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit will lie in no caſe but where debt lies, therefore it lies not on a wager, nor upon a mutual aſſumpſit, nor againſt the acceptor of a bill of exchange; for his acceptance is but a collateral engagement: but lies againſt the drawer himſelf; for he was really a debtor by the receipt of the money. 1 Salk. 23.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit lies not on collateral engagements. See the preceding caſe; and 1 Salk. 23. Butcher and Andrews, which was an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt the father, for money lent the ſon at the father's requeſt, and ſo judgment was arreſted; for this was a collateral promiſe, But per Holt, Ch. J. if it had been for ſo much money paid by the plaintiff at the requeſt of the defendant the father to the ſon, it might have been good; for then it would be the father's debt, and not the ſon's. Carth. 446.

Though, as hath been ſaid, aſſumpſit lies not for rent uſually reſerved on leaſes; yet if a man promiſe to pay, without a leaſe, ſo much a week as long as A. B. &c. permits him to enjoy a warehouſe, &c. which is a ſpecial cauſe of promiſe, this action will lie. 2 Cro. 592. And if one receive any rent on pretence of title, aſſumpſit lies; as it does alſo for the receipt of profits of an office, &c. 2 Mod. 260.

Now by 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. §. 14. where the demiſe is not by deed, the landlord may recover his rent in an action on the caſe, for uſe and occupation. Where a perſon pays money upon a miſtake; or if he receives more from another in a reckoning than he ought, or more fees than ſhould be taken, an aſſumpſit lies. 1 Salk. 22. Comb. 447. If a man receives money for the uſe of another perſon, aſſumpſit may be had againſt him, which ſupplies the place of action of account: and where money was depoſited on a wager, an indebitatus lay for money received to a man's uſe. Show. 117.

If where a promiſe is made, one part of it is againſt law, and another part of it lawful, this is ground ſufficient for aſſumpſit. 4 Rep. 94.

The perſon to whom a promiſe is made, ſhall have the action; and not thoſe who are ſtrangers, or for whoſe benefit it is intended. Danv. 64. Nor ſhall action be brought againſt one for what another receives, nor at his requeſt, &c. 1 Salk. 23. But if a man delivers money to A. B. to my uſe, I may have an action on the caſe againſt him for this money. If a man accouhts, and upon the account is found in arrear to a certain ſum, and preſently in conſideration thereof aſſumes to pay the debt at a day; action on the caſe lies for this after the day. Yelv. 70. And on a promiſe to pay a ſum of money at ſo much a month, an action on the caſe may be brought before the whole is payable; for it is grounded upon the promiſe, which is broken by every Non-payment, and damages, may be recovered; it is not like the caſe of a bill of debt, which is founded on the ſpecialty, and cannot be demanded until the entire ſum is due. 2 Cro. 504.

Contra of a bond, with a condition, for payment by inſtallments. The non-payment of any one of the ſums, at the day, is, at law, a forfeiture of the bond.

II. As to the words by which an aſſumpſit may be created.

The intent of the parties by and to whom the promiſe or aſſumpſit is made, is more to be regarded than the form of words, and this intent and meaning is to be followed, not in the letter, but the ſubſtance of it: if a promiſe be to provide wedding cloaths for a woman, this ſhall be taken for ſuch cloaths to be worn on the wedding or feaſt-day according to the dignity of the perſon. Poph. 182. Yelv. 87. 3 Cro. 53.

All promiſes and contracts are to receive a favourable interpretation; and ſuch conſtruction is to be made, where any obſcurity appears, as will beſt anſwer the intent of the parties; otherwiſe a perſon, by obſcure wording of his contract, might find means to evade and elude the force of it. Hence it is a general rule, that all promiſes ſhall be taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the promiſor, and are not to be rejected, if they can by any means be reduced to a certainty: Therefore;

If A. in conſideration that B. will marry his daughter, aſſumes and promiſes to give with her a child's part, and that at the time of his death he will give to her as much as to any of his children, except his eldeſt ſon; this is a good promiſe; for though a child's part in itſelf is altogether uncertain, yet being to give as much as to any of his children, the promiſe is certain enough, it being averred what the younger ſon had. 1 New Abr. 168. Poph 148. 2 Rol. Rep. 104.

But if there be a diſcourſe between the father of A. and B. in relation to a marriage between the ſaid A. and the daughter of B. and B. tunc & ibidem affirms and publiſhes to the father of A. quod daret ei qui maritaret his ſaid daughter with his conſent 100*l.* and after A. marries the daughter of B. with his conſent; yet this affirmance and publication of B. ſhall raiſe no promiſe upon which an action upon an aſſumpſit may be brought, becauſe theſe words do not include any promiſe. 1 Rol. Abr. 6.

If a man promiſes another, in conſideration that he will aſſign to him a certain term, to pay him 10*l.* this is a good aſſumpſit, though the time of aſſignment and payment be not appointed; for the 10*l.* ſhall be paid in a convenient time after the aſſignment, which alſo muſt be done in a convenient time, and he ſhall not have time during his life. 1 Roll. Abr. 14, 15.

If the plaintiff declares, that whereas there was a communication between the plaintiff and defendant, concerning the bark of certain wood, and that thereupon it was agreed that the defendant ſhould give to the plaintiff two ſhillings per ſeam for all the bark of ſuch wood as the plaintiff ſhould cut, and that thereupon the defendant aſſumed and promiſed to have ready upon a certain day, articles purporting the agreement, and an obligation for the performance thereof, &c. the declaration is not good, becauſe not ſaid in what ſum the obligation was to be; and a certain ſum cannot be intended, becauſe the number of ſeams are altogether uncertain; but being after verdict upon the general iſſue, it was adjudged for the plaintiff; but per cur. upon demurrer, or ſpecial iſſue, it had been nought. 1 Sid. 270. 1 Keb. 776.

But if there be an agreement to enter into an obligation for performance of a thing of a certain value, without mentioning in what ſum, it ſhall he according to the value. 1 Sid. 240.

III. What conſideration is ſufficient.

The conſideration is the ground of the common action on the caſe: and no action on the caſe lieth againſt a man for a promiſe where there is no conſideration why he ſhould make the promiſe. 1 Danv. 53.

A conſideration altogether executed and paſt, is not good to maintain an aſſumpſit, for it is not reaſonable that one man ſhould do another a kindneſs, and then charge him with a recompence; for this would be obliging him whether he would or no, and a bringing him under an obligation without his own concurrence; but if it were moved by a precedent requeſt, it is good, and doth amount to a promiſe. 2 Rol. Abr. 11, 12.

Therefore if the ſervant of A. be arreſted in London, for a treſpaſs, and J. S. who knows A. bails him, and after A. for his friendſhip, promiſes to ſave him harmleſs, and J. S. comes to be charged, yet this is no conſideration to ground an aſſumpſit on, becauſe the bailing, which was the conſideration, was paſt, and executed before. Dyer 272. 1 Rol. Abr. 11. 2 Leon. 225. Owen 144.

But it had been otherwiſe if the maſter had before requeſted him to become bail for his ſervant, and the bailing had been after. Dyer 172.

In conſideration that he had paid money for the defendant, and obtained a releaſe of his debt, was held a continuing conſideration, becauſe the benefit of it was continuing to the party. 2 Keb. 99.

Aſſumpſit, in conſideration that N. the plaintiff, had paid for B. the defendant, and at his requeſt, 10 l. at ſuch a day, (which was a year before) he promiſed to repay it, cum inde requiſitus eſſet. It was objected, that this conſideration was for a thing paſt, and therefore not good. Sed non allocatur; for the payment being laid to be at his requeſt, the conſideration continues, and ſo is the common courſe. Cro. Eliz. 282.

If A. undertakes to do a thing without hire, as to take brandies out of one cellar, and to lay them down in another cellar, no action lies for the non-feaſance; but if he enters on the doing it, action lies for a miſ-feaſance, if it be through his own neglect, or miſmanagement, becauſe it is a deceit; but not if by mere accident; per Holt. 1 Salk. 26. Vide 3 Salk. 11.

Where the doing a thing will be a good conſideration a promiſe to do that thing will be ſo too; per Holt, Ch. J. 12 Mod. 459.

Parting with my note to the defendant is a good conſideration. 7 Mod. 12, 13.

A conſideration upon which a promiſe begins, cannot be diſcharged without ſome other conſideration: and conſideration that if a perſon will forbear to ſue another upon a bond, &c. may be a good conſideration to pay the debt, on promiſe to do it. Cro Jac. 620, 683. But we conceive there ſhould be a note in writing to avoid the ſtatute of frauds, 29 Car. 2. c. 3. Vide the caſe of Buckmyr v. Darnall. 2 L. Ray. 1085. And the caſe of Read executor v. Naſh. Wilſ. Rep. par. 1. 305. There it is laid down, that with reſpect to this ſtatute, an original promiſe is not within the ſtatute. A collateral promiſe, is, when it is to pay the debt of another already contracted. Two perſons go to an inn-keeper, one hires an horſe, and the other promiſes that if the inn-keeper will deliver the horſe, he will ſee it forthcoming, this promiſe for another, is not good without note in writing: but the perſon is chargeable upon the ſpecial bailment, and ſo good without a note. 1 Lill. 118. Vide 2 L. Ray. 1085. An infant having bought goods and wares died, and made his wife executrix; ſhe being aſked for the money ſays, forbear me till ſuch a time, and I will pay it you; this was held no good aſſumpſit, for it wanted a conſideration. 1 Leon. Ca. 156. But where an executrix, in conſideration the plaintiff would not moleſt her, but give her a day, promiſed to pay money due from the teſtator; action lay without ſhewing that ſhe had aſſets; for that ſhall be intended, and her promiſe, and the plaintiff's forbearance of the ſuit, was good cauſe of action. Cro. Jac. 273. An adminiſtratrix promiſed to pay the plaintiff money, if he would forbear ſuit till ſhe had taken out letters of adminiſtration; this was not a good aſſumpſit, for the defendant was not liable to the ſuit as adminiſtratrix till adminiſtration had, ſo there was no conſideration. Style 248, 395.

If one, in conſideration I will be bound for him, or for his friend, promiſe to ſave me harmleſs; this is a good conſideration and promiſe: but if one promiſe to another to ſave harmleſs, and ſay not for what, or againſt whom, theſe aſſumpſits are uncertain and inſenſible, and therefore void; though if any certainty can be made of them, they may be good. 10 Rep. 102. Dyer 356. In caſe a promiſe be, that he who hath the fee-ſimple of land, ſhall not alien it; or that a man ſhall not take the profit of his lands, or alien the thing he hath bought; or if it be to ſave a man harmleſs whatſoever he ſhall do, &c. the promiſes ſo made will not bind or bear an action. 10 Rep. 101. Co. Litt. 206. Dyer 304. Plowd. 64.

An aſſumpſit may be upon a general conſideration; but it doth not lie where the plaintiff has an obligation to pay the money, which is a ſtronger Lien than aſſumpſit; nor when the party has a recogniſance for the duty, &c. Jenk. Cent. 293.

Love or friendſhip are not conſiderations to ground actions upon. 2 Leon. 30. Alſo—

Idle and inſignificant conſiderations are looked upon as none at all; for where-ever a perſon promiſes without a benefit ariſing to the promiſor, or loſs to the promiſee, it is looked upon as a void promiſe. 2 Bulſt. 269.

Laſtly, It is to be obſerved, that conſiderations may be void as being againſt law, for if they are wicked and ill in themſelves, or unlawful, by being prohibited by ſome act of parliament, they are void; therefore if an officer, who, by the duty of his office, is obliged to execute writs, promiſes, in conſideration of money paid him, to ſerve a certain proceſs, an aſſumpſit will not lie on this promiſe; for the receipt of the money was extortion, and the conſideration is unlawful. 1 Rol. Abr. 16.

So if an executor ſues execution by elegit, and B. a ſtranger, as a friend to the executor, in conſideration that the ſheriff would forthwith execute the ſaid elegit, and of ſix-pence to him by the ſheriff paid, promiſes to pay him 60 l. upon which the ſheriff executes the writ, yet no action lies, becauſe the conſideration is againſt law; for the ſheriff ought to do his duty without reward, and this 60 l. is no diſcharge of the fees due to the ſheriff, being given by a ſtranger, and not expreſſed for them. 1 Rol. Abr. 16.

But if a man brings a capias that he has againſt A. to the ſheriff, and prays him that he will make J. S. his ſpecial bailiff, and promiſes him, if he will make J. S. his ſpecial bailiff, that, if A. eſcapes from the bailiff, he will bring no action for the eſcape againſt him, this is an aſſumpſit upon which an action lies, if he brings any action againſt the ſheriff for the eſcape. 1 Rol. Abr. 16. 1 Leon. 132. 3 Leon. 227. Cro. Eliz. 178.

So where the ſheriff takes goods in execution upon a fieri facias, and a ſtranger promiſes the officer to pay him the debt, in caſe he will reſtore them, this is a lawful conſideration; for, by the fieri facias, he may ſell the goods, and this in effect is doing no more. 1 Salk. 28. Vide the law of conſiderations very judiciouſly treated. Black. Com. 2 V. 444, &c.

IV. As to the proceedings in aſſumpſit.

The plaintiff muſt ſet forth every thing eſſential to the gift of the action, with ſuch certainty, that it may appear to the court that there were ſufficient grounds for the action; for if any thing material be omitted, it cannot appear to the court whether the damages given by the jury were in proportion to the demand, or whether the party was at all intitled to a verdict. And therefore, in an action upon the caſe, the plaintiff cannot declare quod cum the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in ſuch a ſum, and that the defendant, in conſideration thereof, ſuper ſe aſſumpſit to pay, &c. without ſhewing the cauſe of the debt. 10 Co. 77.

If in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares, quod cum there were ſeveral reckonings and accounts between the plaintiff and defendant; and at ſuch a day, &c. inſimul computaverunt for all debts, reckonings and demands; and the defendant upon the ſaid account was found to be in arrear the ſum of 20 l. in conſideration whereof the defendant promiſed to pay, &c. this is a good declaration, without ſhewing it was pro mercimoniis, or otherwiſe, wherefore he ſhould have an account; for an account may be for divers cauſes, and ſeveral matters and things may be included and compriſed therein, which in pede computi are reduced to a ſum certain, and thereupon being indebted to the plaintiff, it is ſufficient to ground an action. Cro. Car. 116.

If in an aſſumpſit the plaintiff declares, that the defendant did aſſume and promiſe to pay to the plaintiff ſo much money, and alſo to carry away certain wood before ſuch a day; the defendant as to the money cannot plead that he paid it, and as to the carriage of the wood non aſſumpſit, for the promiſe being intire cannot be apportioned. March 100.

On an aſſumpſit in law, payment, or any other matter that excuſes payment, may be given in evidence, on the general iſſue. In an aſſumpſit in deed, it muſt be pleaded. Gilb. Evid. 204, 5.

If the plaintiff declares upon an indebitatus aſſumpſit, and upon a quantum meruit, and the defendant pleads, that after the ſaid ſeveral promiſes made, and before the action brought, the plaintiff and defendant came to an account concerning divers ſums of money, and that the defendant was found in arrear to the plaintiff 30 l. and thereupon, in conſideration that the defendant promiſed to pay the ſaid 30 l. the plaintiff likewiſe promiſed to releaſe and acquit the defendant of all demands, this is a good plea; for by the account the firſt contract is merged. 2 Mod. 43, 44.

The defendant cannot plead that he revoked his promiſe; as if A. is in execution at the ſuit of B. and J. S. deſires B. to let him go at large, and that he will ſatisfy him; to which B. agrees; though J. S. before any thing is done in purſuance of this promiſe and agreement, comes to B. and tells him, that he revokes his promiſe, and that he will not ſtand to it; yet ſuch revocation cannot be pleaded in bar to the action. 1 Rol. Abr. 32.

In aſſumpſit the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration that he had done the defendant multum & gratiſſimum ſervitium, he promiſed to pay the plaintiff 10 l. and alſo in conſideration that he had done him multa beneficia, he promiſed, &c. it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that neither of theſe conſiderations were ſufficient, eſpecially the laſt, becauſe there ought to have been ſome ſervice particularly expreſſed; and the court for that reaſon held it merely void, and judgment quod querens nihil capiat, &c. Vent. 27.

In an action upon an aſſumpſit. if the conſideration be executory; as if one promiſes to do ſomething for me, in conſideration of ſomething to be done before by me, to or for him, if I will ſue him for that he is to do for me, I muſt aver, that I have done that which was firſt to be done by me, for till that be done I may not maintain an action upon the promiſe. Cro. Jac. 583. Pain v. Baſtwick. And vide Id. 620.

And where it is executory, and averred that it is executed, when indeed it is not, the defendant may ſhew it ſpecially, and may take iſſue as well for not performing the conſideration executory, as upon the promiſe; but if he pleads generally non aſſumpſit, he cannot call the performance of the conſideration executory, and ſo it is upon a promiſe to do any thing upon condition. 1 Mod. Ent. 320.

Attach, (attachiare, from the Fr. attacher) Signifies to take or apprehend by commandment of a writ or precept. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 1. cap. 16. It differs from arreſt, in that he who arreſteth a man carrieth him to a perſon of higher power to be forthwith diſpoſed of; but he that attacheth keepeth the party attached, and preſents him in court at the day aſſigned; as appears by theſe words of the writ, Præcipimus tibi quod attachias talem & habeas eum coram nobis, &c. Another difference there is, that arreſt is only upon the body of a man; whereas an attachment is oftentimes upon his goods. Kitch. 279. A capias taketh hold of immoveable things, as lands or tenements, and properly belongs to real actions: but attachment hath place rather in perſonal actions. Bract. lib. 4. Attachiamentum eſt diſtrictio perſonalis, & Cape magnum diſtrictio realis. Fleta, lib. 5. cap. 24.

Attachment, (from attach) Is a proceſs that iſſues at the diſcretion of the judges of a court of record, againſt a perſon for ſome contempt, for which he is to be committed, and may be awarded by them upon a bare ſuggeſtion, or on their own knowledge, without any appeal, indictment or information; for though, by the ſtatute of Magna Charta, none are to be impriſoned ſine judicio parium vel per legem terræ; yet this ſummary method of proceeding being abſolutely neceſſary to the furtherance and execution of juſtice, ſeems to have been long practiſed, and is certainly now eſtabliſhed as part of the law of the land. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 1. c. 16. 1 New Abr. 180. See Weſt. 2. c. 3. But we apprehend it muſt be for a contempt in the face of the court; or in the caſes after mentioned: and if for a contempt in the face of the court, the commitment is by rule of court, not on proceſs, unleſs the party eſcape out of court, before he is ſecured.

All courts of record have a diſcretionary power over their own officers, and are to ſee that no abuſes be committed by them, which may bring diſgrace on the courts themſelves; therefore if a ſheriff or other officer ſhall be guilty of a corrupt practice in not ſerving a writ; as if he refuſe to do it, unleſs paid an unreaſonable gratuity from the plaintiff, or receive a bribe from the defendant, or give him notice to remove his perſon or effects, in order to prevent the ſervice of any writ; the court which awarded it may puniſh ſuch offences in ſuch a manner as ſhall ſeem proper by attachment. Dyer 218. 2 Hawk. P. C. 142.

But if there be no palpable corruption, nor extraordinary circumſtance of wilful negligence or obſtinacy, the judgment whereof is to be left to the diſcretion of the court; it ſeems not uſual to proceed in this manner, but to leave the party to his ordinary remedy againſt the ſheriff, either by action, or by rule to return the writ, or by an alias and pluries, which if he have no excuſe for not executing, an attachment goes of courſe. Hob. 62. 264. Noy 101. F. N. B. 38. Finch 237. 5 Mod. 314, 315.

Generally an attachment doth lie for any contempt done againſt the courts at Weſtminſter: but the court of B. R. will not grant attachment againſt one for diſobeying an order made by juſtices of aſſiſe, or a judge at his chamber, except it be entered and made a rule of court; for it is no contempt to the court, but to the judge that made the order. 1 Lill. Abr. 121. Attachment lies againſt attornies for injuſtice, and baſe dealing by their clients, in delaying ſuits, &c. as well as for contempts to the court, 2 Hawk. 144. If affidavits to ground an attachment are full as to the charge; yet if the party deny ſuch charge by as plain and poſitive affidavits, he ſhall be diſcharged; but if he take a falſe oath, he may be indicted of perjury. Mod. Caſ. in L. & E. 81.

Againſt ſheriffs making falſe returns of writs, and againſt bailiffs for frauds in arreſts, and exceeding their power, &c. attachment may be had. For contempts againſt the king's writs; uſing them in a vexatious manner; altering the teſte, or filling them up after ſealed, &c. attachment lies. And for contempts of an enormous kind, in not obeying writs, &c. attachment may be iſſued againſt peers. 2 Hawk. 152, 153. For perſuading jurors not to appear on a trial, attachment lies againſt the party, for obſtructing the proceeding of the court. 1 Lill. 121. The court of B. R. may award attachments againſt any inferior courts uſurping a juriſdiction, or acting contrary to juſtice. Salk. 207. Though it is uſual firſt to ſend out a prohibition.

Attachment lies for proceeding in an inferior court, after a habeas corpus iſſued, and a ſuperſedeas to ſtay proceedings. 21 Car. B. R. And attachment may be granted againſt juſtices of peace, for proceeding on an indictment after a certiorari delivered to them to remove the indictment. 1 Lill. 121. But it doth not lie againſt a corporation. Attachment lies againſt a lord that refuſes to hold his court, after a writ iſſued to him for that purpoſe, ſo that his tenant cannot have right done him. New Nat. Br. 6, 27.

An attachment is the proper remedy for diſobedience of the rules of court; as of thoſe made in ejectment, arbitrament, &c. So where a defendant in account, being adjudged to account before the auditors, refuſes to do it, unleſs they will allow matter diſallowed by the court before, or where one refuſes to pay coſts taxed by the maſter, whoſe taxation the law looks upon as a taxation by the court. 1 Mod. 21. 1 Salk. 71.

But an attachment is not granted for diſobedience of a rule of Niſi prius, unleſs it be firſt made a rule of court; nor for diſobedience of a rule made by a judge at his chamber, unleſs it be entred; nor for diſobedience of any rule without perſonal ſervice. 1 Salk. 84.

Alſo an attachment is proper for abuſes of the proceſs of the court; as for ſuing out execution where there is no judgment, bringing an appeal for the death of one known to be alive, making uſe of the proceſs of a ſuperior court, as a ſtale to bring a defendant within the juriſdiction of an inferior court, and then dropping it, uſing ſuch proceſs in a vexatious, oppreſſive, or unjuſt manner, without colour of ſerving any other end by it. 2 Hawk. P. C. 154.

Attachments are uſually granted on a rule to ſhew cauſe, unleſs the offence complained of be of a flagrant nature, and poſitively ſworn to; in which laſt caſe the party is ordered to attend, which he muſt do in perſon, as muſt every one againſt whom an attachment is granted; and if he ſhall appear to be apparently guilty, the court in diſcretion, on conſideration of the nature of the crime, and other circumſtances, will either commit him immediately, in order to anſwer interrogatories to be exhibited againſt him concerning the contempt complained of, or will ſuffer him to enter into recogniſance to anſwer ſuch interrogatories; which if they be not exhibited within four days, the party may move to have the recognizance diſcharged; otherwiſe he muſt anſwer them, though exhibited after the four days; but in all caſes, if he fully anſwer them, he ſhall be diſcharged as to the attachment, and the proſecutor ſhall be left to proceed againſt him for the perjury, if he thinks fit; but if he deny part of the contempts only, and confeſs other part, he ſhall not be diſcharged as to thoſe denied, but the truth of them ſhall be examined, and ſuch puniſhment inflicted as from the whole ſhall appear reaſonable; and if his anſwer be evaſive as to any material part, he ſhall be puniſhed in the ſame manner as if he had confeſſed it. 2 Hawk. P. C. 141. 1 Salk. 84. 6 Mod. 73. 2 Jones 178.

Attachment out of chancery may be had of courſe upon affidavit made that the defendant was ſerved with a ſubpœna, and appeared not; or upon non-performance of any order or decree; alſo after the return of this attachment, that the defendant non eſt inventus, &c. Attachment with proclamation iſſues againſt him, &c. Weſt. Symb. And for contempts, when a party appears, he muſt upon his oath anſwer interrogatories exhibited againſt him; and if he be found guilty, he ſhall be fined.

But this mode of proceeding by examining a perſon accuſed, on oath, is ſuch an inducement to perjury, and ſo repugnant to nature, (by calling on a man to accuſe himſelf) that though long practiſed, the propriety, if not the legality of ſuch a procedure may juſtly be called in queſtion.

Attachment of privilege is where a man by virtue of his privilege calls another to that court whereto he himſelf belongs, and in reſpect thereof is privileged, there to anſwer ſome action: or it is a power to apprehend a man in a place privileged. Book Entr. 431. Corporation courts have ſometimes power by charter to iſſue attachments, and ſome courts-baron grant attachments of debt. Kitch. 79.

Attachment, foreign, is an attachment of the goods of foreigners, found in ſome liberty, to ſatisfy their creditors within ſuch liberty. Carth. Rep. 66. And by the cuſtom of ſome places, as London, &c. a man may attach money, or goods, in the hands of a ſtranger. But a foreign attachment cannot be had when a ſuit is depending in any of the courts at Weſtminſter. Cro. Eliz. 691. And nothing is attachable but for a certain and due debt: though by the cuſtom of London money may be attached before due, as a debt; but not levied before due. Sid. 327. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 282, 283.

Foreign attachments in London, upon plaint of debt, are made after this manner; A. oweth B. 100*l.* and C. is indebted to A. 100*l.* B. enters an action againſt A. of 200*l.* and by virtue of that action a ſerjeant attacheth 100*l.* in the hands of C. as the money of A. to the uſe of B. which is returned upon that action. The attachment being made, and returned by the ſerjeant, the plaintiff is immediately to fee an attorney before the next court holden for the compter; or the defendant may then put in bail to the attachment, and nonſuit the plaintiff: four court days muſt paſs before the plaintiff can cauſe C. the garniſhee, in whoſe hands the money was attached, to ſhew cauſe why B. ſhould not condemn the 100*l.* attached in the hands of C. as the money of A. the defendant in the action (though not in the attachment) to the uſe of B. the plaintiff: and the garniſhee C. may appear in court by his attorney, wage his law, and plead that he hath no money in his hands of the defendant's, or other ſpecial matter; but the plaintiff may hinder his waging of law, by producing two ſufficient citizens to ſwear that the garniſhee had either money or goods in his hands of A. at the time of the attachment, of which affidavit is to be made before the lord mayor, and being filed, may be pleaded by way of eſtoppel: then the plaintiff muſt put in bail, that if the defendant come within a year and a day into court, and he can diſcharge himſelf of the money condemned in court, and that he owed nothing to the plaintiff at the time in the plaint mentioned, the ſaid money ſhall be forth-coming, &c. if the garniſhee fail to appear by his attorney, being warned by the officer to come into court to ſhew cauſe as aforeſaid, he is taken by default for want of appearing, and judgment given againſt him for the goods and money attached in his hands, and he is without remedy either at Common law or in equity; for if taken in execution, he muſt pay the money condemned, though he hath not one penny, or go to priſon; but the garniſhee appearing to ſhew cauſe why the money or goods attached in his hands ought not to be condemned to the uſe of the plaintiff, having feed an attorney, may plead as aforeſaid, that he hath no money or goods in his hands of the party's againſt whom the attachment is made, and it will then be tried by a jury, and judgment awarded, &c. but after trial, bail may be put in, whereby the attachment ſhall be diſſolved, but the garniſhee, &c. and his ſecurity will then be liable to what debt the plaintiff ſhall make out to be due, upon the action: and an attachment is never thoroughly perfected, till there is a bail, and ſatisfaction upon record. Privileg. Lond.

Where a foreign attachment is pleaded to an action, the cuſtom is to ſet forth, that he who levied the plaint ſhall have execution of the debt owing by himſelf, and by which he was attached, if the plaintiff in the original action ſhall not diſprove it within a year and a day; now if the plaintiff in the action below doth not ſet forth ſuch conditional judgment given by the court, it is wrong, becauſe he doth not bring his caſe within the cuſtom. Vide 2 Lutw. 985.

In aſſumpſit, &c. there was evidence given, that the debt was attached by the cuſtom of London before the action brought, and that it was condemned there before the plea pleaded; and this evidence was given upon the general iſſue non aſſumpſit, and it being inſiſted for the defendant, that this ſhould relate ſo as to defeat the plaintiff's action; it was adjudged, that where there is an attachment and condemnation before the action brought, it may be given in evidence upon the general iſſue, becauſe there is an alteration of the property; but if the attachment be only before the action brought, and the condemnation afterwards, the attachment may be pleaded in abatement, and the condemnation may be pleaded in bar, but ſhall not be given in evidence on the general iſſue, becauſe by the condemnation the property is altered, but not before. 1 Salk. 280, 291.

Action of debt, &c. the defendant pleaded in bar, that there was a cuſtom in London to attach the debt before the day of payment came; et per curiam, ſuch a cuſtom may be good, but to have judgment to recover the debt before the day of payment is come, cannot be a good cuſtom, becauſe the debtee himſelf could not recover in ſuch caſe, and therefore he who made the attachment ſhall not. This cuſtom was pleaded, that the debtee in perſon, or by his attorney, may ſwear that the debt is due; but this cannot be good as to the attorney: it was agreed, that goods might be attached by a foreign attachment, and that the value thereof ought to be found before judgment; but that this plea was ill, becauſe the defendant did not aver it, viz. et hoc paratus eſt verificare. W. Jones 406.

Money due to an executor or adminiſtrator, as ſuch, cannot be attached. It would give a ſimple contract creditor priority over judgments, &c Fiſher v. Lane and others 3 Wilſ. 297. C. P. And a caſe of the ſame kind, lately determined in B. R.

In an action on the caſe the plaintiff had judgment againſt the defendant, and he owing 60*l.* to one G. D. he entered a plaint againſt him in London, and attached the 60*l.* in the hands of the ſaid defendant, againſt whom the plaintiff had recovered as aforeſaid, and had execution according to the cuſtom; afterwards the plaintiff brought a ſci fa. againſt the defendant, to ſhew cauſe why he ſhould not have execution upon the judgment which he had recovered, to which the defendant pleaded the execution upon the attachment; and upon demurrer to that plea it was adjudged againſt the defendant, becauſe a duty which accrueth by matter of record, cannot be attached by the cuſtom of London; for judgments obtained in the king's courts ſhall not be defeated or avoided by ſuch particular cuſtoms, they being of ſo high a nature, that they cannot be reached by attachment. 1 Leon. 29.

Debtor and creditor being both citizens of London, the debtor delivered ſeveral goods to the Exeter carrier then in London, to carry and deliver them at Exeter, and the creditor attached them in the hands of the carrier for the debt due to him from his debtor; adjudged, that the action ſhould be diſcharged, becauſe the carrier is priviledged in his perſon and goods, and not only in the goods which are his own, but in thoſe of other men, of which he is in poſſeſſion, for he is anſwerable for them. 1 Leon. 189.

An executor ſubmitted to an award, and the arbitrators awarded, that the defendant ſhould pay the executor 350*l.* This money is not attachable in his hands by any creditor of his teſtator, though it is aſſets in his hands when recovered, becauſe it was not due to the teſtator tempore mortis, and the cuſtom of foreign attachments extends only to ſuch debts. 1 Vent. 111.

A ſum of money was to be paid at Michaelmas, and it was attached before that day; adjudged, that a foreign attachment cannot reach a debt before it is due; therefore, though the judgment on the attachment was after Michaelmas, yet the money being attached before it was due, it is for that reaſon void. Cro. Eliz. 184.

Attachment of the Foreſt, Is one of the three courts held there. Manwood 90, 99. The lower court is called the attachments; the middle one, the ſwainmote; the higheſt, the juſtice in Eyre's ſeat. The court of attachment ſeemeth to be ſo called, becauſe the verderors of the foreſt have therein no other authority, but to receive the attachments of offenders againſt vert and veniſon, taken by the reſt of the officers, and to enroll them, that they may be preſented and puniſhed at the next juſtice ſeat. Manwood 93. And this attaching is by three means; 1. By goods and chattels. 2. By the body, pledges, and mainpriſe. 3. By the body only. This court is kept every forty days. See Crompton, in his Court of the Foreſt.

Attainder, (attincta and attinctura) Is when a man hath committed treaſon, &c. and after conviction ſentence is paſſed on him: or where a perſon is attainted of treaſon, and condemned by parliament.

A man is attainted by appearance, or by proceſs: attainder on appearance is by confeſſion, or verdict, &c. Confeſſion, when the priſoner upon his indictment being aſked whether Guilty or Not guilty, anſwers Guilty, without putting himſelf upon his country; (and formerly confeſſion was allowed before the coroner in ſanctuary; whereupon the offender was to abjure the realm, and this was called attainder by abjuration.) Attainder by verdict is when the priſoner at the bar pleadeth Not guilty, and is found Guilty by the verdict of the jury of life and death. And attainder by proceſs, (otherwiſe termed attainder by default or outlawry) is when the party flieth, and is not found, until he have been five times publickly called or proclaimed in the county, on the laſt whereof he is outlawed upon his default. Staundſ. Pl. Co. 44, 122, 182. Alſo perſons may be attainted by act of parliament.

Acts of attainder of criminals have been paſſed in ſeveral reigns, on the diſcovery of plots and rebellions, from the reign of king Charles II. when an act was made for the attainder of ſeveral perſons guilty of the murder of king Charles I. to this time; among which, that for attainting Sir John Fenwick, for conſpiring againſt king William, is the moſt remarkable; it being made to attaint and convict him of high treaſon on the oath of one witneſs, juſt after a law had been enacted, That no perſon ſhould be tried or attainted of high treaſon where corruption of blood is incurred, but by the oath of two lawful witneſſes, unleſs the party confeſs, ſtand mute, &c. Stat. 7 & 8 W. 3. cap. 3. But in the caſe of Sir John Fenwick, there was ſomething extraordinary; for he was indicted of treaſon, on the oaths of two witneſſes; though but one only could be produced againſt him on his trial. It was pretended Sir John had tampered with and prevailed on one of the witneſſes to withdraw.

Attainder of a criminal is larger than conviction; a man is convicted when he is found guilty by verdict, or confeſſes the crime, before judgment had; but not attainted till judgment is alſo paſſed upon him. Co. Lit. 390. A perſon attainted of high treaſon forfeits all his lands, tenements and hereditaments; his blood is corrupted, and he and his poſterity are rendered baſe; and this corruption of blood cannot be taken off but by act of parliament. Co. Lit. 391. But if one commits treaſon, and dies before attainder, he forfeits nothing: and one ſlain in open rebellion, ſhall forfeit nothing, if he be not attainted by parliament. 3 Inſt. 12. And collateral blood may inherit on an attainder; though the lineal blood is barred. If an attainted perſon marries an heireſs, and has iſſue by her; it is ſaid that iſſue ſhall inherit, for he claims only from the mother. Jenk. Cent. 3.

But qu. if it muſt not be to the inheritance of the mother, only, as the father has not any inheritable blood in him?

In the caſe of felony, where land is given in tail to A. and the heirs male of his body, under the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. and he commits murder, or any felony, his heir ſhall have the land, and the blood is not corrupted: though in caſe of treaſon, where the father hath lands, and is attainted, it is otherwiſe by the 26. H. 8. c. 13. Ibid. 82. Vide 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 10.

Grandſather, father and ſon; the grandſather was tenant in tail, the father was attainted of treaſon; here, though the blood is corrupted, yet the ſon would formerly inherit per formam doni; but ſince the ſtatute 26 H. 8. c. 13. which gives the forfeiture of the lands of tenants in tail for treaſon, the law is otherwiſe; and by the attainder of the tenant in tail the iſſue in tail is barred. 8 Rep. in Digby's caſe.

In treaſon for counterfeiting the coin, although by a late ſtatute corruption of blood is ſaved; yet the lands of the offender are forfeited immediately to the king on attainder, it being a diſtinct penalty from corruption of blood: for the corruption may be ſaved, and the forfeiture remain, &c. And accordingly ſo it is provided by ſome ſtatutes. 1 Salk. 85.

Adjudged, that an attainder of felony makes a forfeiture of the eſtate to the lord only by way of eſcheat pro defectu tenentis, and the not deſcending is the conſequence of the corruption of blood. 1 Salk. 85.

T. S. having an eſtate for three lives, was attainted on the ſtatute 8 & 9 Will. 3. c. 26. of treaſon for counterfeiting the coin, by which ſtatute corruption of blood is ſaved; and for that reaſon it was a queſtion, whether the lands were forfeited to the king, which were given to Baron Lovell as forfeited, who brought a bill in the Exchequer to redeem, and had a decree, from which there was an appeal to the houſe of lords, where the judges held, that in treaſon the lands came to the king as an immediate forfeiture, which was a diſtinct penalty from corruption of blood, for the corruption may be ſaved, and the forfeiture ſtill remain. 1 Salk. 85.

Huſband and wife were tenants in ſpecial tail; they had iſſue a ſon, the huſband was attainted of treaſon, and died, the wife continued in poſſeſſion as tenant in ſpecial tail, and the ſon was reſtored by act of parliament, and made inheritable to his father, ſaving to the king all advantages which he might have by the attainder; the wife died; adjudged, that the father had not any eſtate forfeitable, for the wife being likewiſe tenant in ſpecial tail, the eſtate ſurvived to her, and was not impeached by the attainder, and ſhe dying, the ſon is then inheritable to the eſtate tail, which might certainly have been barred by a common recovery ſuffered by the wife, and in ſuch caſe the king would have been bound. 1 Leon. 157.

Covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to Thomas Palmer, the eldeſt ſon of his brother John Palmer for life, remainder to the eldeſt ſon of Sir Thomas Palmer in tail male, remainder to his own right heirs; afterwards the covenantor was attainted of treaſon, and executed before the birth of any ſon of Thomas; adjudged that this attainder was a bar to the after-born ſon, and that the fee-ſimple was veſted in the crown, diſcharged of all remainders. Moor 815.

Attainders may be reverſed or falſified, by writ of error, or by plea; if by writ of error, it muſt be by the king's leave, &c. And when by plea, it may be by denying the treaſon, pleading a pardon by act of parliament, &c. 3 Inſt. 232.

By a king's taking the crown upon him, all attainders of his perſon are ipſo facto purged, without any reverſal. Co. Lit. 43. Wood 17. This is a very peculiar doctrine, though the declaration of parliament, viz. made in favour of Henry the 7th. If the intelligent reader will conſider it a moment, a comment muſt appear unneceſſary.

Lands coming to the king by attainder of treaſon, afterwards granted to another, ſhall be holden as if there were no attainder. 7 Ed. 4. c. 5. The 8 W. 3. c. 5. requires Sir George Barclay, major general Holmes, and other perſons to ſurrender themſelves to the lord chief juſtice, or ſecretaries of ſtate; or to be attainted. By the 13 W. 3. c. 3. the pretended Prince of Wales is under attainder of treaſon, &c. And by 1 Geo. 1. c. 16. the late duke of Ormond and others are attainted. And beſides theſe acts of attainder, we have lately had bills for inflicting pains and penalties, as thoſe againſt the late biſhop of Rocheſter, &c. Stat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 17. See Evidence.

Attachiamenta bonorum, A diſtreſs taken upon goods or chattels, where a man is ſued for perſonal eſtate or debt, by the legal attachiators or bailiffs, as ſecurity to anſwer an action. There is likewiſe attachiamenta de ſpinis & boſco, a privilege granted to the officers of a foreſt, to take to their own uſe, thorns, bruſh, and wind-fall within their precincts.—John Fitz Nygel, foreſter of Bernwood, A. D. 1230. ſibi habere ſolebat in eadem foreſta videlicet attachiamentum de Spinis, de Boſco ſicut & de [illegible] qui ventis proſternuntur. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. p. [illegible]

Attaint, (attincta) Is a writ that lieth after judgment againſt a jury that have given a falſe verdict in any court of record, in an action real or perſonal, where the debt or damages amount to above 40*s.* Stat. 5 & 34 Ed. 3. c. 7. It is called attaint, becauſe the party that obtains it endeavours thereby to ſtain or taint the credit of the jury with perjury, by whoſe verdict he is grieved; and if the verdict be found falſe, then the puniſhment by the Common law was, that the jurors meadows ſhould be ploughed up, their houſes broke down, woods grubbed up, and all their lands and tenements be forfeited to the crown; but if it paſſed againſt him that brought the attaint, then he was to be impriſoned and ranſomed at the king's will. Glanv. lib. 2. By the ſtatute 23 H. 8. c. 3. the ſeverity of the Common law is mitigated, where a petty jury is attainted; for that ſtatute enacts, That upon untrue verdicts before judges of record, the thing in demand extending to 40*l.* value, attaints ſhall be granted againſt the petty jury; the proceſs to be ſummons, reſummons, and diſtreſs infinite, &c. but the defendants may plead, they gave a true verdict, &c. to bar the attaint: and the grand jury is to try the verdict of the petty jury on the attaint; and if ſuch petty jury be found to have given an untrue verdict, they ſhall each forfeit 20*l.* to be divided between the king and the plaintiff, and incur ſeveral fines at the diſcretion of the juſtices, and be diſabled to give teſtimony in any court. Alſo an attaint ſhall lie for a perſonal thing under the value of 40*l.* in manner as aforeſaid; but here the forfeiture of each petty juror ſhall be but 5*l.* &c. Stat. Ibid.

It may be material, however, under this head, to ſtate more particularly,

I. By and againſt whom attaint may be brought.
II. In what caſes it will lie.
III. Of the proceedings in attaint.

I. The party grieved may have writ of attaint againſt the other party, (whether plaintiff or defendant) and againſt the jurors or ſuch of them as ſhall be then living; it is ſaid any one that is hurt by the falſe verdict may bring this writ; and if the verdict be for matter of land, the remedy commonly runs with the land, ſo that any party or privy, as an heir or executor may have it. F. N. B. 109. Co. Lit. 294.

Attaint was brought upon the ſtatute 23 H. 8. c. 3. againſt the executors of Sir John Barker, whereas the verdict was in a cauſe between him and one Auſtin, and the ſtatute gives an attaint between the parties, and doth not mention heirs or executors, yet this attaint was held good; ſo an executor ſhall have reſtitution upon the ſtatute 21 H. 8. though that ſtatute does not mention executors. 1 And 24, 25.

Where treſpaſs is brought againſt baron and feme, and the plaintiff recovers, the baron alone ſhall not have attaint, for it ſhall be brought according to the record. Br. Baron and feme, pl. 22. Succeſſors of a parſon ſhall have error or attaint of judgment againſt the predeceſſor. Br. Attaint, pl. 110. None ſhall have attaint but he that may be reſtored to the thing loſt by the judgment; per Bramſtone Ch. J. Mar. 210. Reverſioners may have an attaint upon a falſe verdict, &c. againſt a particular tenant, who ſhall be reſtored to his poſſeſſion, and the reverſioner to his arrearages. Stat. 9 R. 2. c. 3. This action muſt be brought againſt the jurors, and the parties to the firſt ſuit; or, if the parties be dead, their heirs, or executors, or any other for the moſt part that recovered by the firſt judgment. Dyer 201. If all the jurors but one are dead, the action is gone, and no attaint can be brought; and where any one dies depending the ſuit, it is gone; but not by the death of the defendant that recovered in the firſt action. Dyer 139. Hob. 227.

II. As to the caſes in which an attaint lies.

Attaint lies where a jury gives a verdict contrary to evidence: where a judge declares the law erroneouſly, judgment may be reverſed; but in this caſe the jury ſhall be excuſed. Vaugh. 145. Attaint lies not for that which is not given in evidence; nor upon an inqueſt of office, &c. or when a thing found is impertinent to the iſſue. Hob. 53. Co. Lit. 355. And no attaint lieth where the king is ſole party, and the jury find for him. 4 Leon. 46. aliter where the ſuit is tam pro domino rege quam pro ſeipſo. 4 Leon. 46. An attaint may be brought where any material falſhood is found, though ſome truth may be found with it; as where a jury ſhall find a man guilty of many treſpaſſes, who is guilty but of one treſpaſs. So if a jury find any thing againſt the Common or Statute law, that all men are to take notice of, this may make them chargeable in attaint. Bro. 44. Hob. 227.

Where the evidence given to the jury is falſe in part, tho' it be in a point not material, yet this is ſufficient excuſe for their not giving him credit in any other part of his evidence, and ſo had no cauſe to find their verdict upon this oath againſt the party againſt whom it was given. Cro. Eliz. 309, 310. It lies againſt a jury, for finding the bond of Edward the bond of Edmond. Palm. 286.

The jury may be attainted two ways; 1ſt, where they find contrary to evidence; 2dly, where they find out of the compaſs of the allegata. But to attaint them for finding contrary to evidence is not eaſy, becauſe they may have evidence of their own conuſance of the matter by them, or they may find upon diſtruſt of the witneſſes, or their own proper knowledge; but if they find upon evidence that does not prove the allegata, there it is eaſy to ſubject them to an attaint, becauſe it is manifeſt that what is ſo found is an evidence not correſponding to their iſſue, and this was the only curb they had over the jurors; for the judge being beſt maſter of the allegata, if they did not follow his direction touching the proof, they were then liable to the danger of an attaint; and therefore ſince the judges, from the difficulty of attainting the jury have granted new trials, whereby jurors have been freed from the fear of attaint, they have taken a great liberty in giving verdicts; but ſince the attaint is only diſuſed, and not taken away, 'tis neceſſary that a certain matter ſhould be brought before them; and therefore in treſpaſs, the quantity and value of the thing demanded muſt be ſo conveniently deſcribed, that if the jury find damages beyond ſuch quantities and value, it may be apparently exceſſive, and they ſubject to the attaint; and ſo on ſpecial contracts, they muſt be ſet forth ſo preciſely, that if evidence be given of another contract, and not in the allegations, and yet the jury find for the plaintiff, they may be ſubject to an attaint; and were it otherwiſe, if the plaintiff had a jury to his turn, and the judge ſhould direct that the plaintiff be nonſuit, yet if the plaintiff would ſtand the trial, the judge muſt give poſitive directions to find for the defendant, there would be no means of compelling the jury to find according to the direction of the judge, if they were not under the terror of an attaint, if they did otherwiſe; ſo this is the only curb that the law has put in the hands of the judges to reſtrain jurors from giving corrupt verdicts. Gilb. H. C. B. 128. But this doctrine does not imply that a jury are at all events to follow the direction of a judge. They are to uſe their own diſcretion. Vide Hawles on Juries.

Where a jury finds a thing which is out of the iſſue, there a verdict is void, becauſe they are ſworn to try the iſſue between the parties, according to the evidence given; ſo that whatſoever they try beſides the iſſue, is not per juratores; and therefore if that matter ſo tried is falſe, 'tis no perjury, nor doth an attaint lie againſt them. Hob. 53.

III. With regard to the proceedings in attaint.

The proceſs to be iſſued is directed by the 23 H 8. c. 3. already mentioned: and by the ſaid ſtatute if any of the petit jury appear at the return of the writ of attaint, the plaintiff ſhall aſſign the falſe oath of the verdict untruly given. And if the defendant, or any of the petit jury appear not on diſtreſs, the grand inqueſt ſhall be taken by default.

The petit jury can plead no plea, but ſuch as may excuſe them of the falſe oath. 1 Rol. Abr. 285.

The petit jury cannot plead that the plaintiff in the attaint was tenant after the attaint purchaſed. 1 Rol. Abr. 285. The plaintiff in attaint may not produce more witneſſes, nor give further matter in evidence, than what was depoſed in the firſt action; but the defendant in attaint may give new matter in evidence to inforce the firſt verdict, and the plaintiff ſhall have time to diſprove it. Dyer 59. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 288. 1 Rol. Abr. 285.

In an attaint the plaintiff cannot give in evidence a record which was not given to the petit jury; for they were not bound to find it, if it was not ſhewn to them. 1 Rol. Abr. 285.

In the court of King's Bench and Common Pleas, and the court of Huſtings of London, attaint may be brought; and the plaintiff ſetting aſide the verdict, ſhall have reſtitution, &c. But if the firſt verdict be affirmed, the plaintiff ſhall be impriſoned and fined. 11 H. 7. c. 21.

In attaint the parties and the jury appeared and demanded oyer of the record upon which the attaint was founded, which record being in the Common Pleas, they had it, and thereupon the plaintiff aſſigned the falſe oath; the defendants pleaded, that they made a good and lawful oath; upon which they were at iſſue, and in the ſame term the record was removed by a writ of error into the King's Bench; adjudged, that notwithſtanding it was thus removed, the court of Common Pleas might proceed if the proceſs for the grand jury were returned. Dyer 284.

Attaint was brought in the Common Pleas againſt a jury, for a verdict given in the King's Bench, whereupon the record was removed from that court to the Common Pleas, and there the verdict was affirmed; adjudged, that the plaintiff in the action ſhall have execution according to the verdict, for the record is in the King's Bench, and nothing but the tenor thereof in the Common Pleas; but if the verdict had been ſet aſide, and execution had been put upon it before it was ſet aſide, then the court of Common Pleas might have awarded reſtitution to the party grieved. Cro. Eliz. 371.

A nonſuit in attaint is peremptory: and no ſuperſedeas is grantable upon attaint. Co. Lit 227.

An attaint as well as a writ of error ſhall follow the nature of the action upon which 'tis founded; ſo that if ſummons and ſeverance lies in the firſt action; it ſhall do ſo likewiſe in the attaint, but this is not a ſuperſedeas as a writ of error is; adjudged likewiſe, if damages are recovered againſt ſeveral in an action of conſpiracy, all of them muſt join in an attaint, and the nonſuit of one of them ſhall not hurt the reſt. 6 Rep. 25.

But adjudged, that where an aſſiſe was brought againſt three coparceners, who all pleaded that there was no tenant of the freehold named in the writ, and the jury found that two of them were diſſeiſors and tenants, &c. and that the third had nothing, &c. and afterwards they all three joined in an attaint, and after appearance the third ſiſter, who was acquitted as aforeſaid by the ſaid verdict, was now nonſuited in the attaint, in that caſe the attaint was abated, becauſe ſhe had no cauſe to bring an attaint, for there was no verdict againſt her. 1 Leon. 317.

In an attaint the plaintiff ſhall recover againſt all the jurors, tenants, and defendants, the coſts and damages, which he ſhall ſuſtain by delay or otherwiſe in that ſuit; and if the defendant's plea in bar be found againſt him, the plaintiff will have judgment to be reſtored to what he loſt, with damages, by Stat. 11 H. 6. c. 4. and 15 H. 6. c. 5.

Beſides the ſtatutes abovementioned in the courſe of this article, there are others to which it will be ſufficient barely to refer, as the ſubject of them is in a great meaſure grown obſolete. See 3 Edw. 1. c. 38. 14 Edw. 2. c. 2. 1 Edw. 3. c. 6. 28 Edw. 3. c. 8. 18 Hen. 6. c. 2. 37 Hen. 8. c. 5.

This writ to attaint ſo many men of ſuch a foul crime is ſeldom uſed, unleſs the corruption be very groſs and apparent: and inſtead of attaint, where the verdict is ſuppoſed to be given againſt evidence, it is now uſual to have new trials granted; but an iſſue found by verdict ſhall be always intended true, until reverſed by attaint, according to our old books. Co. Lit. 227. The writ of attaint is generally to ſummon a jury to inquire if the former jurors made a falſe oath, and who were the jury of the firſt inqueſt, &c. and to have them before the lord the king, or before the juſtices, &c. *F. Attorney, (attornatus) Is he that is appointed by another man to do any thing in his abſence. Weſt. Symb. Crompt. Juriſdict. 105. An attorney is either publick, in the courts of record, the King's Bench and Common Pleas, &c. and made by warrant from his client: or private, upon occaſion for any particular buſineſs, who is commonly made by letter of attorney. In antient times thoſe of authority in courts had it in their power whether they would ſuffer men to appear or ſue by any other but themſelves: and the king's writs were to be obtained for the admiſſion of attornies: but, ſince that, attornies have been allowed by ſeveral ſtatutes. As by 27 Ed. 1. St. 2. &c. Attornies may be made in ſuch pleas whereon appeal lieth not: in criminal caſes there will be no attornies admitted. Stat. 6 Ed. 1. St. 1. c. 8. An infant ought not to appear by attorney, but by guardian; for he cannot make an attorney, but the court may aſſign him a guardian; 1 Lill. Abr. 138. Infants, after they come to full age, may ſue by attorney, though admitted before by guardian, &c. In action againſt baron and feme, the feme being within age, ſhe muſt appear by guardian: but if they bring an action, the huſband ſhall make attorney for both. 1 Danv. Abr. 607. And it is ſaid, that where baron and feme are ſued, though the wife cannot make attorney, the huſband may do it for both of them. 2 Sand. 213. One non compos mentis, being within age, is to appear by guardian; but after he is of age he muſt do it by attorney. Co. Lit. 135. An ideot is not to appear by attorney, but in proper perſon. Attornies at Law, Are ſuch perſons as take upon them the buſineſs of other men, by whom they are retained.

Before the ſtatute of Weſt. 2. c. 10. [13 Ed. 1. A. D. 1285.] all attornies were made by letters patent under the great ſeal, commanding the juſtices to admit the perſon to be his attorney. Theſe patents, where they were obtained, ſeemed to have been inrolled by a proper officer, called the clerk of the warrants; and alſo the courts inrolled thoſe patents on which any proceedings were. If ſuch letters patent could not be obtained, the perſons were obliged to appear each day in court in their proper perſons. Gilb. H. C. P. 32, 33.

The ſaid ſtatute of Weſt. 2. c. 10. gives to all perſons a liberty of appearing, and appointing an attorney, as if they had letters patent; and therefore the clerk of the warrants received each perſon's warrant, and upon the warrant it equally appeared to the court, that he had appointed ſuch a one his attorney to the end of the cauſe, unleſs revoked; ſo that on each act there is no occaſion of the plaintiff's and defendant's preſence, as was uſed before that time. This authority continues till judgment, and for a year and a day, and afterwards to ſue out execution, and for a longer time, if they continue execution; but if not, the judgment is ſuppoſed to be ſatisfied; and to make it appear otherwiſe, the plaintiff muſt again come into court, which he either does by a ſcire fac' or an action of debt on the judgment. Gilb. H. C. P. 33.

Parties to fines, as well demandant or plaintiff as tenants or defendants, that will acknowledge their right of lands unto others in pleas of warrantia chartæ, covenant, &c. before the fines paſs, ſhall appear perſonally, ſo that their age, ideocy, or other default (if any be) may be diſcerned: provided that if any, by age, impotency, or caſualty, is not able to come into court, one of the juſtices ſhall go to the party and receive his cognizance, and ſhall take with him a knight or man of good fame. Barons of the Exchequer and juſtices ſhall not admit attornies, but in pleas that paſs before them, and where they be aſſigned. Reſerving to the Chancellor his authority in admitting attornies, and to the Chief Juſtices. Stat. 15. Edw. 2. ſtat. 1.

In reſpect of the ſeveral courts, there are attornies at large; and attornies ſpecial, belonging to this or that court only. An attorney may be a ſolicitor in other courts, by a ſpecial retainer: one may be attorney on record, and another do the buſineſs; and there are attornies who manage buſineſs out of the courts, &c. Anno. 4. H. 4. it was enacted, that the juſtices ſhould examine attornies, and remove the unſkilful; and attornies ſhall ſwear to execute their offices truly, &c.

By 3 Jac. 1. c. 7. Attornies &c. ſhall not be allowed any fees laid out for counſel, or otherwiſe, unleſs they have tickets thereof ſigned by them that receive ſuch fees; and they ſhall give in true bills to their clients of all the charges of ſuits, under their hands, before the clients ſhall be charged with the payment thereof; if they delay their clients ſuit for gain; or demand more than their due fees and diſburſements, the clients ſhall recover coſts and treble damages; and they ſhall be for ever after diſabled to be attornies: none ſhall be admitted attornies in courts of record, but ſuch as have been brought up in the ſaid courts, or are well practiſed and ſkilled, and of an honeſt diſpoſition; and no attorney ſhall ſuffer any other to follow a ſuit in his name, on pain of forfeiting 20 l. to be divided between the king and the party grieved. This ſtatute, as to fees to counſel, doth not extend to matters tranſacted in inferior courts, but only to ſuits in the courts of Weſtminſter Hall. Carth. 147. Attornies, &c. are to take the oaths to the government, under penalties and diſability to practice. 13 W. 3. cap. 6.

By the Stat. 12 Geo. 1. cap. 29. If any who hath been convicted of forgery, perjury, &c. ſhall practiſe as an attorney or ſolicitor in any ſuit or action in any court, the judge where ſuch action ſhall be brought hath power to tranſport the offender for ſeven years, by ſuch ways, and under ſuch penalties as felons.

The act 2 Geo. 2, c. 23. ordains, That all attornies ſhall be ſworn, admitted and inrolled, before allowed to ſue out writs in the courts at Weſtminſter; and after the firſt of December 1730 none ſhall be permitted to practiſe but ſuch as have ſerved a clerkſhip of five years to an attorney, and they ſhall be examined, ſworn and admitted in open court; and attornies ſhall not have more than two clerks at one time, &c. every writ and copy of any proceſs ſerved on a defendant, and alſo every warrant made out thereon, ſhall be indorſed with the name of the attorney by whom ſued forth; and no attornies or ſolicitors ſhall commence any action for fees till a month after the delivery of their bills ſubſcribed with their hands: alſo the parties chargeable may in the mean time get ſuch bills taxed, and upon the taxation the ſum remaining due is to be paid in full of the ſaid bills, or in default the parties ſhall be liable to attachment, &c. And the attorney is to pay the coſts of taxation, if the bill be reduced a ſixth part.

There is a penalty of 50*l*. inflicted, and diſability to practiſe, for acting contrary to this ſtatute. By the 6 Geo. 2. cap. 27. Perſons having ſerved five years as clerks to attornies, though not bound by contract; or who had been bound, but not ſerved five years; and ſons of attornies that ſerved that time with their fathers, &c. were to be ſworn and admitted. By 12 Geo. 2. c. 13. Attornies, &c. that act in any county-court, without being admitted according to the ſtatute 2 Geo. 2. c. 23. ſhall forfeit 20*l*. recoverable in the courts of record; and no attorney, who is a priſoner in any priſon, ſhall ſue out any writ, or proſecute ſuits; if he doth, the proceedings ſhall be void, and ſuch attorney, &c. is to be ſtruck off the roll. But ſuits commenced before by them may be carried on. A quaker ſerving a clerkſhip, and taking his ſolemn affirmation inſtead of an oath, ſhall be admitted an attorney.

By the Stat. 22 Geo. 2. c. 46. Perſons bound clerks to attornies or ſolicitors are to cauſe affidavits to be made and filed of the execution of the articles, names and places of abode of attorney or ſolicitor, and clerk, and none to be admitted till the affidavits be produced and read in court; no attorney having diſcontinued buſineſs to take any clerk. Clerks are to ſerve actually during the whole time, and make affidavits thereof. Perſons admitted ſworn clerks in Chancery, or ſerving a clerkſhip to ſuch, may be admitted ſolicitors. By the Stat. 23 Geo. 2. c. 26. Any perſon, duly admitted a ſolicitor, may be admitted an attorney, without any fee for the oath, or any ſtamp to be impreſſed on the parchment, whereon his admiſſion ſhall be wrote.

Attornies of courts, &c. ſhall not receive or procure any blank warrant for arreſts from any ſheriff, without writ firſt delivered, on pain of ſevere puniſhment, expulſion, &c. And no attorney ſhall make out a writ with a clauſe ac etiam billæ, &c. where ſpecial bail is not required by law. Paſch. 15 Car. 2. Attornies are to enter and file warrants of attorney in every ſuit, on pain of 10*l*. and impriſonment. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 30. And the plaintiff's attorney is to file his warrant the term he declares, and the defendant his the term he appears. 4 Ann. c. 16. §. 3. Action upon the caſe lies for a client againſt his attorney, if he appear for him without a warrant; or if he plead a plea for him, for which he hath not his warrant. 1 Lill. Abr. 140. But if an attorney appear without warrant, and judgment is had againſt his client, the judgment ſhall ſtand, if the attorney be reſponſible: contra, if the attorney be not reſponſible. 1 Salk. 88.

Action lies againſt an attorney for ſuffering judgment againſt his client by nil dicit, when he had given him a warrant to plead the general iſſue: this is underſtood where it is done by covin. 1 Danv. Abr. 185. If an attorney makes default in a plea of land, by which the party loſes his land, he may have a writ of deceit againſt the attorney, and recover all in damages. Ibid. An attorney owes to his client ſecrecy and diligence, as well as fidelity; and if he take reward on the other ſide, or cauſe an attorney to appear and confeſs the action, &c. he may be puniſhed. Hob. 9.

But action lies not againſt an attorney retained in a ſuit, though he knows the plaintiff hath no cauſe of action; he only acting as a ſervant in the way of his profeſſion. 4 Inſt. 117. 1 Mod. 209. Though, where an attorney or ſolicitor is found guilty of a groſs neglect, the court of Chancery has in ſome caſes ordered him to pay the coſts. 1 P. Williams 593. He who is attorney at one time, is attorney at all times, pending the plea. 1 Danv. 609. And the plaintiff or defendant may not change his attorney, while the ſuit is depending, without leave of the court, which would reflect on the credit of attornies; nor until his fees are paid. Mich. 14 Car. A cauſe is to proceed notwithſtanding the death of an attorney therein; and not be delayed on that account. For if an attorney dieth, the plaintiff or defendant may be required to make a new attorney. 2 Keb. 275.

An attorney, ſolicitor, &c. having fees due to him, may detain writings until his juſt fees are paid: but if there be no fees due to him, the court on motion will compel the delivery of them. 1 Lill. 148. Any papers may be detained by an attorney till the money is paid for drawing them; but he cannot detain writings which are delivered to him on a ſpecial truſt, for the money due to him in that very buſineſs, &c. if he doth, a rule may be obtained that he ſhall deliver them by ſuch a day, or an attachment ſhall iſſue againſt him. Mod. Caſ. in Law and Equity 306. The court will make a rule for delivery of writings when they come to the attorney's hands by way of his buſineſs; and when they come to him in any other manner, the party muſt bring his action. 1 Salk. 87.

Attornies have the privilege to ſue and be ſued only in the courts at Weſtminſter, where they practiſe: they are not obliged to put in ſpecial bail, when defendants; but when they are plaintiffs, they may inſiſt upon ſpecial bail in all bailable caſes. 1 Vent. 299. Wood's Inſt. 450. But an attorney of one court, may in that court, hold an attorney of another court to bail. Attornies ſhall not be choſen into offices, againſt their wills. See Privilege.

Attorney of the Duchy Court of Lancaſter, (attornatus curiæ ducatus Lancaſtriæ) Is the ſecond officer in that court; and ſeems for his ſkill in law to be there placed as aſſeſſor to the chancellor, and choſen for ſome ſpecial truſt repoſed in him, to deal between the king and his tenants. Cowel.

Attorney General, Is a great officer under the king, made by letters patent. It is his place to exhibit informations, and proſecute for the crown, in matters criminal; and to file bills in the Exchequer, for any thing concerning the king in inheritance or profits; and others may bring bills againſt the king's attorney. His proper place in court, upon any ſpecial matters of a criminal nature, wherein his attendance is required, is under the judges, on the left hand of the clerk of the crown: but this is only upon ſolemn and extraordinary occaſions; for uſually he does not ſit there, but within the bar in the face of the court. Mich. 22 Car. B. R.

Attornment, (attornamentum, from the Fr. tourner) Signifies the tenant's acknowledgment of a new lord, on the ſale of lands, &c. As where there is tenant for life, and he in reverſion grants his right to another; it is neceſſary the tenant for life agree thereto, which is called attornment. It gives no intereſt, but only perfects the grant of another: and tenant in tail is not compellable to attorn, on the reverſion being granted; he having an eſtate of inheritance. Co. Lit. 316, 319. This attornment is in deed, or in law; voluntary and compulſory; and may be made, as ſet down by Littleton, in theſe words, viz. I attorn to you by force of the grant, or I agree to the grant, or I become your tenant, &c. Or by any words or act which import an aſſent to the grant. Litt. 551. 1 Danv. 623. It may be made by payment of a penny rent, &c. to the grantee. Co. Lit. 309. Where an eſtate is granted to one for life, remainder to another in fee, attornment to the tenant for life is good to him in remainder. Co. Lit. 312. By feoffment of a manor, the ſervices do not paſs without attornment. 1 Danv. Abr. 612. But if a perſon comes to an eſtate by recovery; or where a fine is levied of lands; or by deed of bargain and ſale inrolled, according to the ſtatute, there needs no attornment, they being in by the Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. And if a reverſion be deviſed by will to another, the eſtate paſſeth without attornment. 8 Hen. 6. This was a large head in our Common law; but now much of this learning is out of uſe.

And by a late ſtatute, it is enacted, That all grants and conveyances of manors, lands, rents, reverſions, &c. by fine, or otherwiſe, ſhall be good without the attornment of the tenants of ſuch lands, or of the particular tenant upon whoſe eſtate any ſuch reverſion, &c. ſhall be expectant or depending; but notice muſt be given of the grant, to the tenant; before which he ſhall not be prejudiced by payment of any rent to the grantor, or for breach of the condition for non-payment. Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16. ſ. 9. And attornments of lands, &c. made by tenants to ſtrangers ſhall be void, and their landlord's poſſeſſion not affected thereby: though this ſhall not extend to vacate any attornment made purſuant to a judgment at law, or with conſent of the landlord; or on a forfeited mortgage, &c. by 11 Geo. 2. c. 19.

Audience Court, (curia audientiæ Cantuarienſis) Is a court belonging to the archbiſhop of Canterbury, having the ſame authority with the court of arches, though inferior to it in dignity and antiquity. It is held in the archbiſhop's palace; and in former times the archbiſhops were wont to try and determine a great many eccleſiaſtical cauſes in their own palaces; but before they pronounced their definitive ſentence, they committed the matter to be argued by men learned in the law, whom they named their auditors: and ſo in time it grew to one ſpecial man, who at this day is called cauſarum negotiorumque audientiæ Cantuarienſis auditor officialis. And to the office of auditor was formerly joined the chancery of the archbiſhop, which meddleth not with any point of contentious juriſdiction; that is, deciding of cauſes between party and party, but only ſuch as are of office, and eſpecially as are voluntaria juriſdictionis, as the granting the cuſtody of ſpiritualties, during the vacancy of biſhopricks, inſtitutions to benefices, diſpenſations, &c. but this is now diſtinguiſhed from the audience. The auditor of this court anciently by ſpecial commiſſion was vicar general to the archbiſhop, in which capacity he exerciſed eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction of every dioceſe becoming vacant within the province of Canterbury. 4 Inſt. 337. But now the three great offices of official principal of the archbiſhop, dean or judge of the peculiars, and official of the audience are, and have been for a long time paſt, united in one perſon under the general name of dean of the arches, who keepeth his court in Doctors Commons hall. Johnſ. 254.

Audiendo & terminando, A writ, or rather a commiſſion to certain perſons, when any inſurrection or great riot is committed in any place, for the appeaſing and puniſhment thereof. F. N. B. 110. See Oyer and Terminer.

Audita Querela, Is a writ that lies where a man hath any thing to plead, but hath not a day in court to plead it: And it is uſually brought where one is bound in a ſtatute merchant, ſtatute ſtaple, or recogniſance, or judgment is given againſt him for debt, and his body in execution thereupon, at the complaint of the party upon ſuggeſtion of ſome juſt cauſe why execution ſhould not be granted; as a releaſe, or other exception. This writ is granted, by the lord chancellor, to the juſtices of either bench, willing them to grant ſummons to the county where the creditor lives, for his appearance before them at a certain day. F. N. B. 102. To writs of execution the defendant cannot plead; ſo that if there be any matter ſince the judgment, to diſcharge him of the execution, he is to have audita querela; upon which, the juſtices ſhall hear the complaint, and do right: and audita querela cannot be brought on a releaſe, until judgment is entered of record. 1 Mod. 111.

An audita querela is in nature of a ſuit in equity, where a perſon is charged with a debt that is paid, or releaſed, &c. Cro. Jac. 29. And there muſt be a charge and burthen come, or coming upon the party that is to have it, of which he ought by law to be diſcharged; and then it is to be in ſuch a caſe wherein he hath no other way to relieve himſelf. Cro. Jac. 29. Cro. Eliz. 44. And it may be brought againſt the proſecutor himſelf, and ſometimes againſt him and others that ought to bear part of the burthen with him. Keilw. 25.

On a ſtatute, the conuſor or his heir may bring audita querela, before execution is ſued out; but this may not be done by a ſtranger to the ſtatute, or a purchaſer of the land. 1 Danv. Abr. 630. 3 Rep. 13. If a leſſee covenants for him and his aſſigns to repair, and the leſſee aſſign over, and the covenant is broken; if the leſſor ſues one of them and recovers damages, and then ſues the other, he may bring audita querela for his relief. Bro. 74. And where a man hath goods from me by my delivery, and another takes them from him, ſo that he is liable to both our ſuits: and one of us ſue and recover againſt him, and then the other ſues him, his remedy is this writ. Dyer 232. One binds himſelf and his heirs in an obligation, if the obligee recover of the heir, and after ſue the executors for the ſame cauſe, &c. they may have the writ audita querela. Plowd. 439. If two joint and ſeveral obligors are ſued jointly, and both taken in execution, the death or eſcape of one will not diſcharge the other, ſo as to give him this action; but if ſuch obligors be proſecuted ſeverally, and a ſatisfaction is once had againſt one of them, or againſt the ſheriff upon the eſcape of one, the other may have it. Hob. 58. 5 Rep. 87. Judgment is had againſt a ſheriff on an eſcape of a perſon in execution, and after the firſt judgment is reverſed for error, the ſheriff ſhall have relief by audita querela. 8 Rep. 142.

If the plaintiff hath had ſatisfaction againſt one treſpaſſer, and he proceed to require it againſt the other, he ſhall have this writ. Hob. 66. But qu. if it may not be pleaded in bar? Where there is judgment againſt three, and one of them taken in execution, they may all join in audita querela, when they have cauſe to have the ſame. 3 Cro. 443. A plaintiff, that ſues as adminiſtrator, and recovers judgment and ſues out execution, has his letters of adminiſtration revoked; the defendant muſt be relieved by audita querela. Style 417. If one accepts of a leſſer ſum of money for a greater debt, and after the day, and yet ſues the bond; this writ will not lie, becauſe it lieth only where a diſcharge is in law. Trin. 18 Jac. 1. B. R. It may be brought by an infant in the King's Bench or Common Pleas, to avoid a ſtatute acknowledged by him whilſt he was within age. 1 Cro. 208.

If A. being within age becomes bail for B. and after two ſcire fa. and nihil returned, judgment is given againſt A. &c. he may have an audita querela, and avoid the recognizance, and ſo the judgment thereupon of conſequence ſhall be avoided. Yelv. 155.

But if A. being within age enters into a bond to B. who procures C. without any warrant, to appear for A. and confeſſes a judgment thereupon, yet A. ſhall not have an audita querela, but he muſt take his remedy by action of diſceit againſt the attorney. Cro. Jac. 694.

If a ſtatute be acknowledged to two, of which one is an infant, and they make a defeazance, and after ſue execution contrary to it, an audita querela ſhall be brought againſt both; for it does not appear within the deed that he was an infant; alſo the deed of an infant is only voidable, and peradventure he will affirm it. 1 Rol. Abr. 312.

The writ of audita querela may be had, where a recogniſance or ſtatute entered into is defective, and not good; or being upon an uſurious contract, by dureſs or impriſonment, or where there is a defeaſance upon it, &c. Moor, ca. 1097. 1 Brownl. 39. 2 Bulſt. 320. So upon ſhewing an acquittance of the cogniſee, on a ſuggeſtion that he had agreed to deliver up the ſtatute. 1 Rol. 309. Where one enters into a ſtatute, and after ſells his lands to divers purchaſers; or judgment is had againſt a man, who leaves land to ſeveral heirs, &c. and one of the purchaſers, or one heir alone is charged, he may have this writ againſt the reſt to contribute to him. 3 Rep. 44. 2 Bulſt. 15.

If tenant in tail acknowledges a ſtatute and dies, and the cogniſee ſues execution againſt the heir, he may avoid it by aſſiſe, without being put to his audita querela. 1 Rol. Abr. 304.

So if a diſſeiſor acknowledges a ſtatute, and the diſſeiſee enters, the cogniſee extends the land, the diſſeiſee is not put to his audita querela to avoid the extent; the conuſor having only a tortious and unlawful ſeiſin of the land, and conſequently no power to charge it. 1 Rol. Abr. 304.

But if A. be tenant for life, remainder to B. his ſon in tail, and A. enters into a recognizance to C. and dies; C. brings a ſci. fac. and B. is returned heir and tertenant, and warned, but makes default; he can have no audita querela to avoid this execution, becauſe he had a day given him in court to ſet aſide the recognizance, and it was his folly not to appear when warned. Raym. 19. 1 Sid. 54.

Where a ſtatute or recogniſance is acknowledged before one who hath not power to take it, and afterwards the cogniſor makes a feoffment of the land to another, and the cogniſee taketh out execution, in ſuch caſe the feoffee may have an audita querela, and avoid the execution. Dyer 27, 35.

If A. enters into a ſtatute to B. and pays the money at the day aſſigned, upon which the ſtatute is cancelled, and after B. forges a new ſtatute in the name of A. in this caſe A. may relieve himſelf by audita querela; for the forged ſtatute having all the eſſentials of a true one, the court was obliged to look on it as ſuch till the contrary appeared, which the cogniſor could not ſet forth before execution, having no day to appear judicially in court, and therefore is put to this writ to avoid the execution founded on the injuſtice of the pretended conuſee. F. N. B. 104.

If the conuſee of a ſtatute, upon agreement with the conuſor, delivers up the ſtatute in lieu of an acquittance, and after ſues execution, and the cogniſor prays a re-extent becauſe that the land was extended too low, and has it granted him, he ſhall never avoid the extent by audita querela; becauſe by his praying the re-extent he admits the ſtatute good and executory. 1 Rol. Abr. 313.

If upon an elegit the ſheriff takes an inquiſition, and there are ſeveral lands found ſubject to the extent, and ſeveral values found, and the ſheriff returns, that he has delivered ſome of the lands in particular for the moiety, where it appears according to the values found, that an equal moiety is not delivered to the party who recovered, but more than a moiety; yet this is not void, nor is it a diſſeiſin by the entry, but only voidable by audita querela, 1 Rol. Abr. 305.

If a man in execution upon a judgment for debt or damages, be delivered out of execution by the ſheriff or gaoler who hath him in execution, with the aſſent of him at whoſe ſuit he is in execution, and after, by colour of this judgment, he takes him again and puts him in priſon, an audita querela lies upon this matter, and thereupon he ſhall be delivered. 1 Rol. Abr. 307.

But if A. be in execution at the ſuit of B. and after A. eſcapes with the conſent of the ſheriff, and after A. returns to the priſon, and the ſheriff keeps him in priſon upon the ſaid execution, A. ſhall not be diſcharged by audita querela, for B. has it ſtill in his election to have him in execution at his ſuit, and ſhall not be compelled to take his remedy againſt the ſheriff for this voluntary eſcape, who perhaps may be worth nothing. 1 Rol. Abr. 307.

If a ſtatute be made to baron and feme, and they make a defeaſance, and ſue execution contrary to it, the audita querela ſhall be brought againſt both, although the defeaſance be void as to the wife; for this action is in lieu of an anſwer of the execution, which is ſued by both; and this is all one as if the baron alone had made the defeaſance, which would have been a ſufficient diſcharge. 1 Rol. Abr. 312.

If a ſtatute be acknowledged to a feme ſole and J. S. and after the feme takes huſband, and J. S. releaſes, and after execution is ſued, the audita querela may be brought againſt the baron and feme and J. S. 1 Rol. Abr. 312.

If two executors ſue execution for damages recovered by the teſtator, where one hath releaſed, an audita querela lies againſt both. 1 Rol. Abr. 312.

If A. cogniſee of a ſtatute releaſes to the tenant all right, intereſt, and demands, together with all ſuits and executions, and afterwards ſues execution, the tertenant ſhall have an audita querela to ſet aſide this execution. Cro. Eliz. 40. 1 And. 133.

So in treſpaſs or other action, if it be found for the plaintiff by niſi prius, and after, before the day in bank, the plaintiff releaſes to the defendant, and after judgment is given for the plaintiff, the defendant ſhall have an audita querela upon this matter; becauſe he could not plead the releaſe at the day in bank. 1 Rol. Abr. 307.

In an audita querela, the proceſs is a venire facias, diſtringas, alias, pluries, and if non eſt inventus be returned, or that he hath nothing, the plaintiff ſhall have a capias againſt the defendant. F. N. B. 104. Dyer, 297. b.

If an audita querela is founded on a record, or the perſon bringing it is in cuſtody, the proceſs upon it is a ſcire facias but if founded on matter of fact, or the party is at large, then the proceſs is a venire. 1 Salk. 92.

And if there be a default by the defendant upon a ſcire feci, or two nihils returned, the plaintiff ſhall have judgment. 1 Salk. 93. But, where an audita querela is ſued quia timet, and the party is at large, there ſhall never be a ſcire facias. 1 Salk 92.

Adjudged, that where the party hath ſome matter which he might have pleaded to the ſci. fa. in his diſcharge, and two nihils are returned, and judgment againſt him, the court will relieve him upon motion, without putting him to bring an audita querela. 1 Salk. 93.

An audita querela ſhall be granted out of the court, where the record upon which it is founded, remains, or it may be returnable in the ſame court. F. N. B. 105. b. And therefore if a man recover in B. R. or C. B. the defendant having a releaſe after judgment, and before execution, ſhall ſue the audita querela out of B. R. or C. B. where the record is. F. N. B. 105. So, if a recognizance be acknowledged in C. B. and execution be ſued upon it after releaſe, the defendant ſhall ſue the audita querela out of C. B. F. N. B. 105. But an audita querela may be by original, and upon a judgment in C. B. It goes out of chancery returnable in C. B. F. N. B. 105.

The writ of audita querela ſhall be allowed only in open court. 1 Bulſt. 140. 2 Bulſt. 97. 2 Show. 240.

Upon audita querela brought, a ſuperſedeas ſhall go to ſtay execution: and the judgment in this action is to be diſcharged of execution. Hob. 2. If an audita querela be unduly gotten, upon a falſe ſurmiſe, it may be quaſhed. 1 Bulſt. 140. This writ lies not after judgment upon a matter which the party might have pleaded before. Cro. Eliz. 35. A bare ſurmiſe is not ſufficient to avoid a judgment; but generally ſome ſpecialty muſt be ſhewn. Cro. Jac. 579. Upon a releaſe or other deed pleaded, no ſuperſedeas will be granted till the plaintiff in the audita querela hath brought his witneſſes into court to prove the deed: and if execution be executed before, bail is to be put in by allowance of the court. 1 Lill. Abr. 151.

Upon a motion for an allowance of an audita querela, it was held, that bail muſt be given in court, and not elſewhere, unleſs in caſes of neceſſity, to be allowed by the court, and then it may be put in before two judges. Palm. 422.

And by bail the party is in cuſtody of the law, and if he make not out his audita querela, he muſt render his body in execution again, or pay the debt for which he is in execution, or elſe his bail muſt pay it. If after judgment againſt bail, the judgment againſt the principal is reverſed, or the money paid by the principal; the bail may have audita querela. Cro. Jac. 645. 8 Rep. 143. And it may be brought by the bail to avoid an execution againſt them, where no proceſs is ſued forth againſt the principal in his life-time, &c. Goldſb. 174. Where a plaintiff in audita querela gets judgment, he ſhall have reſtitution of his goods, though taken in execution before the writ brought. Sid. 74.

A man nonſuited in an audita querela, may have a new writ. F. N. B. 104. When lands are extended on any ſtatute, &c. before the time, audita querela lieth. 22, 46 E. 3. A writ in the nature of an audita querela, has been made out returnable in B. R. on a ſpecial pardon, ſetting forth the whole matter. Jenk. Cent. 109 And in ſome caſes after a judgment, the court will relieve the party on motion, without audita querela. 1 Salk. 93.

A writ of audita querela.

GEORGE the Third, &c. To our juſtices aſſigned to hold pleas before us, greeting. We having received information, by the grievous complaint of A. B. That whereas C. D. in Eaſter term, &c. and now hath to the damage of the ſaid A, &c. wherefore the ſaid A. hath beſought us to provide him relief, and being unwilling that the ſaid A. ſhould be any ways injured, and deſirous that what is right and juſt ſhould be done in this caſe: We command you, that in order to hear the complaint of the ſaid A. you call before you the aforeſaid parties, and ſuch others as it ſhall ſeem meet to you to convene; and having heard the aforeſaid parties, and their ſeveral reaſons, you cauſe to be done full and ſpeedy juſtice to the ſaid parties, which of right, and according to the laws and cuſtoms of our kingdom, you ſhall ſee ought to be done. Witneſs, &c.

Auditor, (Lat.) Is an officer of the king, or ſome other great perſon, who examines yearly the accounts of all under-officers, and makes up a general book, which ſhews the difference between their receipts and charge, and their ſeveral allowances, commonly called allocations: as the auditors of the exchequer take the accounts of thoſe receivers who collect the revenues. 4 Inſt. 106. Receivers general of fee-farm rents, &c. are alſo termed auditors, and hold their audits for adjuſting the accounts of the ſaid rents at certain times and places appointed. And there are auditors aſſigned by the court to audit and ſettle accounts in actions of account, and other caſes, who are proper judges of the cauſe, and pleas are made before them, &c. 1 Brownl. 24.

Auditor of the Receipts, An officer of the exchequer, that files the tellers bills, and having made an entry of them, gives the lord treaſurer, &c. weekly, a certificate of the money received; he makes debentures to the tellers, before they pay any money; and takes their accounts: he alſo keeps the black book of receipts, and the treaſurer's key of the treaſury, and ſeeth every teller's money locked up in the treaſury 4 Inſt. 107.

Auditores, Is the ſame with audientes, i. e. the catechumens, or thoſe who were newly inſtructed in the myſteries of the chriſtian religion before they were admitted to baptiſm; and auditorium is that place in the church where they ſtood to hear, and be inſtructed. 'Tis what we now call navis eccleſiæ: and in the primitive times, the church was ſo ſtrict in keeping the people together in that place, that the perſon who went from thence in ſermon time was excommunicated. Blount.

Auditors of the Impreſt, Are officers in the exchequer, who have the charge of auditing the great accounts of the king's cuſtoms, naval and military expences, of the mint, &c. and any money impreſſed to men for his majeſty's ſervice. Pract. Excheq. 83.

Avenage. (from the Lat. avena) A certain quantity of oats paid by a tenant to his landlord as a rent, or in lieu of ſome other duties.

Avenor, (avenarius, from the Fr. avoine, i. e. oats) Is an officer belonging to the king's ſtables, that provides oats for his horſes; he is mentioned 13 Car. 2. cap. 8.

Aventura, Adventures or trials of ſkill at arms, and ſignifies military exerciſes on horſeback.—Aſſiſa de armis 36 Hen. 3. Brady's Append. Hiſt. Eng. 250. And 'tis mentioned in Addit. Mat. Pariſ. p. 149. Quod nulli conveniant ad turniandum, vel burdandum nec ad alias quaſcunque aventuras.

Aventure, (properly adventure) A miſchance cauſing the death of a man: as where a perſon is ſuddenly drowned, or killed by any accident, without felony. Co. Lit. 391.

Avera, (quaſi overa, from the Fr. ouvre and ouvrage, velut operagium) ſignifies a days work of a ploughman, formerly valued at 8*d.* It is found in domeſday. 4 Inſt. 269.

Average, (averagium) Is ſaid to ſignify ſervice which the tenant owes to his lord by horſe or carriage: but it is more commonly uſed for a contribution that merchants and others make towards their loſſes, who have their goods caſt into the ſea for the ſafeguard of the ſhip, or of the other goods and lives of thoſe perſons that are in the ſhip, during a tempeſt. It is in this ſenſe called average, becauſe it is proportioned and allotted after the rate of every man's goods carried. By the laws of the ſea, in a ſtorm, when there is an extreme neceſſity, the goods, wares, guns, or whatſoever elſe is on board the ſhip, may (by conſulting the mariners) be thrown over-board by the maſter, for the preſervation of the ſhip; and it ſhall be made good by average and contribution. Mo. 297. But if the maſter takes in more goods than he ought, without leave of the owners and freighters, and a ſtorm ariſeth at ſea, and part of the freighters goods are thrown over-board, the remaining goods are not ſubject to average; but the maſter is to make good the loſs out of his own eſtate: and if the ſhip's gear or apparel be loſt by ſtorm, the ſame is not within the average. Leg. Rhod.

If goods are caſt over-board before half the voyage is performed, they are to be eſtimated at the price they coſt: but if they are ejected afterwards, then at the price as the reſt are ſold at the port of arrival. Leg. Oleron. Where goods are given to pirates by way of compoſition to ſave the reſt, there ſhall be average, by the civil law. Moor 297.——Average is likewiſe a ſmall duty, paid to maſters of ſhips when goods are ſent in another man's ſhip, for their care of the goods, over and above the freight——Paying ſo much freight for the ſaid goods, with primage and average accuſtomed. Words in bills of lading.

Average of Corn Fields, The ſtubble or remainder of ſtraw and graſs left in corn fields after the harveſt is carried away. In Kent it is called the gratten, and in other parts the roughings, &c.

Aver Corn, Is a reſerved rent in corn, paid by farmers and tenants to religious houſes: and ſignifies by Somner corn drawn to the lord's granery, by the working cattle of the tenant. 'Tis ſuppoſed that this cuſtom was owing to the Saxon cyriac ſceat, church ſeed, a meaſure of corn brought to the prieſt annually on St. Martin's day, as an oblation for the firſt-fruits of the earth: under which title the religious had corn-rent paid yearly; as appears by an inquiſition of the eſtate of the abbey of Glaſtonbury. A. D. 1201.

Aver Land, Seems to have been ſuch lands as the tenants did plough and manure, cum averiis ſuis, for the proper uſe of a monaſtery, or the lords of the ſoil. Mon. Angl.

Aver Penny, (or average penny) Money paid towards the king's averages or carriages, or to be freed thereof.—Aver peny hoc eſt, quietum eſſe de diverſis denariis pro averagiis domini regis. Raſtal.

Aver Silver, A cuſtom or rent formerly ſo called. Cowel.

Averia, Cattle: Spelman deduces the word from the Fr. ouvrer, to work, as if chiefly working cattle: though it ſeems to be more probably from avoir, to have or poſſeſs: the word ſometimes including all perſonal eſtate, as catalla did all goods and chattels, This word is uſed for oxen or horſes of the plough; and in a general ſenſe any cattle.——Homines per averia ſua, viz. Equos & boves, & affros graviter diſtrixit. W. Thorn, in Ed. 2. 'Tis uſed in the ſame ſenſe in W. 2. c. 18. Averia elongata; ſee Elongata.

Averiis Captis in Withernam, A writ for the taking of cattle to his uſe, who hath cattle unlawfully diſtrained by another, and driven out of the county where they were taken, ſo that they cannot be replevied by the ſheriff. Reg. Orig. 82. If the cattle are put into any ſtrong place in the ſame county, the ſheriff may take the poſſe comitatus, and break into it, to make the replevin. But when they are driven out of the county, he hath no authority to purſue them. Vide 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12.

Averment, (verificatio, from the Fr. averer, i. e. verificare, teſtari) Is an offer of the defendant to make good or juſtify an exception pleaded in abatement or bar of the plaintiff's action: and it ſignifies the act, as well as the offer of juſtifying the exception; and not only the form, but the matter thereof. Co. Litt. 362. Averment is either general, or particular; general, which concludes every plea, &c. or is in bar, or in a replication, or other pleadings, containing matter affirmative, and ought to be with theſe words, and this he is ready to verify, &c. Particular averment is when the life of tenant for life, or of tenant in tail, &c. is averred. Ibid.

In replevin the defendant made cogniſance as bailiff to baron and feme, he being ſeiſed in right of the feme for rent in aretro exiſten'; the plaintiff demurr'd ſpecially; for that the life of the wife was not averr'd. But Hale Ch. J. held, that the rent in aretro exiſten' is quaſi an averment, and after verdict, or upon a general demurrer, had been good; and Twiſden and Wild held it good enough on a ſpecial demurrer, which Hale doubted, and judgment was for the cogniſor. 2 Lev. 88.

He that claims eſtate from tenant for life, or in tail, or from parſon of a church, ought to aver his life. Br. Eſtate. pl. 18.

Where one thing is to be done in conſideration of another, on contracts, &c. there muſt be an averment of performance, but where there is promiſe againſt promiſe, there needs no averment; for each party hath his action. 1 Lev. 87. The uſe of averment being to aſcertain what is alledged doubtfully, deeds may ſometimes be made good by averment, where a perſon is not certainly named; but when the deed itſelf is void for incertainty, it cannot be made good by averment. 5 Rep. 155. Averment cannot be made againſt a record, which imports in itſelf an uncontrolable verity. Co. Lit. 26.

Where a ſtatute is recited, there one may not aver that that there is no ſuch record; for generally an averment, as this is, doth not lie againſt a record; for a record is a thing of ſolemn and high nature, but an averment is but the allegation of the party, (21 Car. B. R.) and not ſo much credit in law to be given to it. Lil. P. R. 155.

Where D. has appeared as an attorney for A. in an action brought by A. againſt B. it cannot be aſſigned for error, that D. was not an attorney, or that there is no ſuch perſon in rerum natura; for it is againſt the record; and the admittance of him for an attorney by the court, makes him an attorney, if he was not an attorney before this admittance; in a writ of error brought in this ſuit, and error aſſigned ut ſupra, the defendant in the writ of error in this caſe pleads in nullo eſt erratum; this does not confeſs that he was not an attorney; but this plea eſt quaſi a demurrer, that this is not an error at all; adjudged and affirmed in error. Jenk. 232.

Averment lies not againſt the proceedings of a court of record. 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 1. ſect. 14. Nor ſhall it be admitted againſt a will concerning lands. 5 Rep. 68. And an averment ſhall not be allowed where the intent of the teſtator cannot be collected out of the words of the will. 4 Rep. 44. One may not aver a thing contrary to the condition of an obligation, which is ſuppoſed to be made upon good deliberation, and before witneſſes, and therefore not to be contradicted by a bare averment. 1 Lill. Abr. 156.

An averment of a wicked and unlawful conſideration of giving a bond, may well be pleaded, though it doth not appear on the face of the deed: and any thing which ſhews an obligation to be void may well be averred, although it doth not appear on the face of the bond. Adjudged on demurrer, after two arguments in the caſe of Collins and Blantern, C. B. Eaſter, 7 Geo. 3. Wilſon, par. 2. fo. 347, &c.

N. B. The plea in this caſe was ſettled by Lord Lifford, now Chancellor of Ireland, then Mr. ſerjeant Hewitt, and afterwards peruſed and ſigned by Mr. ſerjeant Glyn, Mr. ſerjeant Hewitt being made a judge of B. R. before the plea was delivered. Vide the plea, fo. 345. Wilſon.

One cannot avoid a ſtatute-merchant, obligation, releaſe, &c. againſt the party himſelf named in it, by averring a delivery thereof upon condition, unleſs he ſhews a writing of the condition. Br. Faits, pl. 10. Sed qu. for defendant may plead that the bond was delivered as an eſcrow, to be delivered upon a certain condition to the obligee. Wilſ. par. 2. fo. 347.

But 'tis otherwiſe in detinue againſt a ſtranger, where the thing is bailed into an indifferent hand; nota the diverſity; for there it is averrable contrary againſt the party himſelf. Br. Faits, pl. 10.

If an heir is ſued on the bond of his anceſtor, it muſt be averred that the heirs of the obligor were expreſly bound. 2 Saund. 136. In declaring you ſhew that the obligor bound his heirs. Another conſideration than mentioned in a deed, may be averred, where it is not repugnant or contrary to the deed. Dyer 146. But a conſideration may not be averred, that is againſt a particular expreſs conſideration; nor may averment be againſt a conſideration mentioned in the deed, that there was no conſideration given. 1 Rep. 176. 8 Rep. 155. No averment will lie upon a deed of another uſe, againſt the uſes expreſſed in the deed; but where no uſe is expreſſed, or but uncertainly, an averment ſhall be admitted, and may ſerve for addition or explication. 2 Rep. 75. But vide caſe of Collins and Blantern, before referred unto. If an eſtate is made to a woman that hath a huſband, by fine or deed, for her life; in this caſe it may be averred to be made to her for her jointure, although there be another uſe or conſideration expreſſed. 4 Rep. 4. Averment may be of a uſe upon any fine, or common recovery; though not of any other uſe than what is expreſſed in it: it may be received to reconcile a fine, and the indenture to lead the uſes. Dyer 311. 2 Bulſt. 235. 1 And. 312.

If one has two manors known by the name of W. and levies a fine of his manor of W. he ſhall by averment aſcertain which of them it was; per cur. 6 Mod. 235.

Two manors were known by the name of W. and ſometimes diſtinguiſhed with an alias; an annuity of 200*l. per ann.* is granted out of the manor of W. one of them is but 80*l. per ann.* and the other of more than the annuity. It is a good averment in law, that the greater manor ſhould be liable to the rent-charge. Chan. Rep. 138.

If a piece of ground was anciently called by one name, and of late is called by another, and it is granted to me by this new name; an averment may be taken that it is all one thing, and it will make it good. Dyer 37, 44. No averment lies againſt any returns of writs, that are definitive to the trial of the thing returned; as the return of a ſheriff upon his writs, &c. But it may be where ſuch are not definitive; and againſt certificates upon commiſſions out of any court: alſo againſt the returns of bailiffs of franchiſes, ſo that the lords be not prejudiced by it. Dyer 348. 8 Rep. 121. 2 Cro. 13. When certainty is expreſſed by argument and implication in pleading, there it need not be averred. 2 Bulſt. 95. 142.

In an action on the caſe for theſe words, viz. Thy ſon hath robbed me, the plaintiff cannot maintain the action, without averring, that the defendant had no more ſons; but if the words had been ſpoken to the ſon inſtead of the father or to the wife, viz. Thy father hath robbed me, &c. there needs no averment, becauſe a ſon can have but one father, and a huſband but one wiſe. 2 Cro. 443.

The father having two ſons, both of one name, levied a fine of lands to the uſe of W. his ſon and his heirs; in this caſe the judges cannot take notice to which of his ſons the land doth belong; but if the party averreth, that the cogniſor had two ſons, named W. the elder, and

W. the younger, and that his intent was to levy the fine to W. the younger, this averment is good, it being of matter of fact not apparent in the fine, but out of it, and therefore it ſhall be tried by a jury: but if a man, by deed executed under his hand and ſeal, giveth goods to one of the ſons of G. D. who hath ſeveral ſons at that time, there an averment ſhall not be allowed which ſon he meant; becauſe the deed itſelf being void for incertainty, it cannot be made good by an averment. 5 Rep. 155.

Where a man is to take a benefit by an act of parliament, there in pleading he muſt aver, that he is not a perſon excepted; but where he claims no benefit by it, but only to keep that which he had before, in ſuch caſe 'tis not neceſſary to make ſuch averment. Plow. Com. 488.

Augmentation, (augmentatio) The name of a court erected 27 H. 8. for determining ſuits and controverſies relating to monaſteries and abbey lands. The intent of this court was, that the king might be juſtly dealt with touching the profits of ſuch religious houſes, as were given to him by act of parliament. It took its name from the augmentation of the revenues of the crown, by the ſuppreſſion of religious houſes: and the office of augmentation, which hath many curious records remains to this day, though the court hath been long ſince diſſolved. Terms de Ley 68.

Aumone, (Fr. aumoſne, alms) Tenure in aumone is where lands are given in alms to ſome church, or religious houſe, upon condition that a ſervice or prayers ſhall be offered at certain times for the repoſe of the donor's ſoul. Brit. 164. Vide Frankalmoign.

Auncel-weight, (quaſi hand ſale weight, or from anſa, the handle of the balance) An antient manner of weighing, by the hanging of ſcales or hooks at each end of a beam or ſtaff, which by lifting up in the middle with one's finger or hand, diſcovered the equality or difference between the weight at one end and the thing weighed at the other. Aunciatus, A word ſignifying antiquated.——Sicut charta eorum aunciata eſt et libertas anterior. Brompton, lib. 2. cap. 24. par. 6.

Avoidance, In the general ſignification, is when a benefice is void of an incumbent; in which ſenſe it is oppoſed to plenarty. Avoidances are either in fact, as by death of the incumbent; or in law: and may be by ceſſion, deprivation, reſignation, &c. In the firſt caſe,

Where the avoidance is by the death of the incumbent, or by his being made a biſhop, in ſuch caſes the patron is to take notice of it at his peril; and the ſix months, in which he is to preſent another, ſhall be accounted from the death of the one, and the creation of the other; but if the avoidance be by reſignation, which is the act of the party himſelf, or by deprivation which is the act of the law, in both thoſe caſes the patron muſt have notice, and the ſix months ſhall be accounted from the time of the notice, and not from the reſignation or deprivation. Dyer 327.

Where the patron himſelf took notice of a deprivation, which was obtained at his own proſecution, for not reading the thirty-nine articles; yet, in ſuch caſe, lapſe ſhall not incur, without an actual notice of the deprivation given to him by the biſhop; for 'tis he, and no other perſon, who is required by the law to give notice, and it muſt not be a general notice, but it muſt be particular, and the cauſe be expreſſed for which he was deprived. 6 Rep. 29.

Where the biſhop refuſeth to inſtitute a clerk, he muſt give notice of ſuch refuſal to the patron himſelf, if he is within that county where the church is become void; but if he is not in that county, then notice muſt be given at the door of that church; but where 'tis doubtful who is patron, and upon jus patronatus awarded, 'tis found, that ſuch a one is patron, though it may happen he is not the true patron, yet if he gives him notice, and no preſentation is made within ſix months after ſuch notice, the biſhop may collate to the church; and though that collation ſhall not bind the true patron, yet the biſhop ſhall be excuſed from being a diſturber. 1 Leon. 32.

There are avoidances by act of parliament, wherein there muſt be a judicial ſentence pronounced to make the living void: if a man hath one benefice with cure, &c. and take another with cure without any diſpenſation to hold two benefices, in ſuch caſe the firſt is void by the act 21 Hen. 8. c. 13. if it was above the value of 8 l. During an avoidance, it is ſaid that the houſe and glebe of the benefice are in abeyance: but by the Stat. 28 Hen. 8. cap. 11. The profits ariſing during the avoidance are given to the next incumbent towards payment of the firſt fruits; though the ordinary may receive the profits to provide for the ſervice of the church, and ſhall be allowed the charges of ſupplying the cure, &c. for which purpoſe the churchwardens of the pariſh are uſually appointed. The next avoidance of a church may be granted by deed, where the church is full: if a grant be made of the next avoidance when it ſhall happen, and the church is void at that time, this will make the grant void as to that very avoidance, but it may be good for the next turn after that.

And the diſtinction which hath obtained is this: if it come in queſtion, whether the church be full of an incumbent or not, the ſame ſhall be tried by the certificate of the biſhop, who beſt knows of the inſtitution; but if the iſſue to be tried be, whether the church be void or not, the ſame ſhall be tried by a jury at the Common law, unleſs the iſſue to be tried be upon ſome ſpecial act of avoidance, for then the ſame ſhall be tried by the certificate of the biſhop, ſo as the ſpecial cauſe of the avoidance be ſpiritual. Gib. 793. Hughes, c. 13. 1 Burn E. L. 78. And ſee 25 Ed. 3. ſt. 3. c. 8.

If a clerk is inſtituted to a benefice of the yearly value of 8*l.* and before induction accepts another benefice with cure, and is inſtituted, the firſt benefice is void by the ſtatute 21 H. 8. c. 13. for he who is inſtituted, only, is properly ſaid to have accepted a benefice within the words of the act. 4 Rep. 78.

The patron granted the next avoidance to two jointly and ſeverally; adjudged, that this grant is not good, becauſe an intereſt cannot be divided; ſo where there was a grant of the next avoidance to three, habendum to them and to each of them jointly and ſeverally, the firſt preſented the third, and adjudged good; but if the biſhop had refuſed to admit the preſentee, he might have failed in a quare impedit, becauſe the ſeverance in the habendum is void in law; but it is otherwiſe in caſe of an authority, for that may be divided. Goldſ. 142.

But if he is inducted into a ſecond benefice, the firſt is void in facto et jure, and not voidable only, quoad the patron, and until he preſents another; and in ſuch caſe the patron ought to take notice of the avoidance at his peril, and preſent within the ſix months. Cro. Car. 258.

A grant of the next avoidance is no more than a chattel, and goes to executors. Right Clerg. 68.

Avoirdupois, or averdupois, (Fr. avoir du poids, i. e. habere pondus, aut juſti eſſe ponderis) Signifies a weight different from that which is called troy weight, which contains but twelve ounces in the pound, whereas this hath ſixteen ounces: and in this reſpect it is probably ſo called, becauſe is is of greater weight than the other. It alſo ſignifieth ſuch merchandizes as are weighed by this weight; and is mentioned in divers ſtatutes, as 9 Ed. 3. 27 Ed. 3. c. 10. 2 R. 2. c. 1. Averium ponderis, full weight, or avoirdupois. Cart. 3 Ed. 2.

Avowee, Of a church benefice. Britt. c. 29. See Advowee.

Avowry, (Fr. advouerie) Is where a man takes a diſtreſs for rent or other thing, and the party on whom taken ſues forth a replevin, then the taker ſhall juſtify his plea for what cauſe he took it; and if in his own right, he muſt ſhew the ſame, and avow the taking; but if he took it in right of another, he muſt make cogniſance of the taking, as bailiff or ſervant to the perſon in whoſe right he took the ſame. Terms de Ley 70 2 Lill. 454. The avowry muſt contain ſufficient matter for judgment to have return: but ſo much certainty is not required in an avowry as in a declararation; and the avowant is not obliged to alledge ſeiſin within the ſtatute of limitations. Nor ſhall a lord be required to avow on any perſon in certain; but he muſt alledge ſeiſin by the hands of ſome tenant within forty years. 21 Hen. 8. c. 19. 1 Inſt. 268. In avowry ſeiſin in law is ſufficient, ſo that where a tenant hath done homage or fealty, it is a good ſeiſin of all other ſervices to make an avowry, though the lord, &c. had not ſeiſin of them within ſixty years. 32 H. 8. cap. 2. 4 Rep. 9. A man may diſtrain and avow for rent due from a copyholder to a lord of a manor; and alſo for heriots, homage, fealty, amercements, &c. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 315.

If a perſon makes an avowry for two cauſes, and can maintain his avowry but for one of them, it is a good avowry: and if an avowry be made for rent, and it appears that part of it is not due, yet the avowry is good for the reſt. Suppoſing ſufficient rent due to juſtify a diſtreſs. An avowry may be made upon two ſeveral titles of land, though it be but for one rent; for one rent may depend upon ſeveral titles. 1 Lill. Abr. 157. Saund. 285. If a man takes a diſtreſs for rent reſerved upon a leaſe for years, and afterwards accepts a ſurrender of the lands, be may nevertheleſs avow, becauſe he is to have the rent due, notwithſtanding the ſurrender. 1 Danv. Abr. 652. Where tenant in tail aliens in fee, the donor may avow upon him, the reverſion being in the donor, whereunto the rent is incident. Ibid. 650. If there be tenant for life, remainder in fee, the tenant for life may compel the lord to avow upon him: but where there is tenant in tail, with ſuch remainder, and the tenant in tail makes a feoffment, the feoffee may not compel the lord to avow upon him. 1 Danv. Abr. 648. Co. Lit. 268. If the tenant enfeoffs another, the lord ought to avow upon the feoffor for the arrearages before the feoffment, and not upon the feoffee. 1 Danv. 650. The lord may avow upon a diſſeiſor. 20 Hen. 6. And if a man's tenant is diſſeiſed, he may be compelled to avow, by ſuch tenant or his heir. A defendant in replevin may avow or juſtify; but if he juſtifies he cannot have a return. 3 Lev. 264. The defendant need not aver his avowry with an hoc paratus eſt, &c. The avowant ſhall recover his damages and coſts, by 21 Hen. 8. c. 19. By which ſtatute it is enacted, That if in any replegiare for rents, &c. the avowry, cogniſance, or juſtification be found for the defendant, or the plaintiff be nonſuit, &c. the defendant ſhall recover ſuch damages and coſts as the plaintiff ſhould have had, if he had recovered. And by 17 Car. 2. c. 7. When a plaintiff ſhall be nonſuit before iſſue in any ſuit of replevin, &c. removed or depending in any of the courts at Weſtminſter, the defendant making ſuggeſtion in the nature of an avowry for rent, the court on prayer ſhall award a writ to inquire of the ſum in arrear, and the value of the diſtreſs, &c. Upon return whereof the defendant ſhall recover the arrears, if the diſtreſs amounts to that value, or elſe the value of the diſtreſs with coſts; and where the diſtreſs is not found to the value of the arrears, the party may diſtrain for the reſidue. Vide 17 Car. 2. c. 7. Auſcultare. Formerly perſons were appointed in monaſteries to hear the monks read, and direct them how, and in what manner they ſhould do it with a graceful tone or accent, to make an impreſſion on their hearers, which was required before they were admitted to read publickly in the church; and this was called auſcultare, viz. to read or recite a leſſon.—*Quicunque lecturus vel cantaturus eſt aliquid in monaſterio, ſi neceſſe habeat, ab eo, (viz. Auter Droit, Is where perſons ſue or are ſued in another's right; as executors, adminiſtrators, &c.

Auterfoits acquit, Is a plea by a criminal that he was heretofore acquitted of the ſame treaſon or felony: for one ſhall not be brought into danger of his life, for the ſame offence more than once. 3 Inſt. 213. We muſt except out of this general rule, the right which the widow hath to ſue an appeal for the death of her huſband, and the heir for the death of his anceſtor. There is alſo plea of auterfoits convict, and auterfoits attaint; that he was heretofore convicted, or attainted, of the ſame felony. In appeal of death, auterfoits acquit, or auterfoits attaint, upon indictment of the ſame death, is no plea. H. P. C. 244. But in other caſes where a perſon is attainted, it is to no purpoſe that he ſhould be attainted a ſecond time. And conviction of manſlaughter, where clergy is admitted thereon, will bar any ſubſequent proſecution for the ſame death. 2 Hawk. P. C. 377.

Authority, Is nothing but a power to do ſomething: it is ſometimes given by word, and ſometimes by writing: alſo it is by writ, warrant, commiſſion, letter of attorney, &c. and ſometimes by law. The authority that is given muſt be to do a thing lawful; for if it be for the doing any thing againſt law, as to beat a man, take away his goods, or diſſeiſe him of his lands, this will not be a good authority to juſtify him that doth it. Dyer 10. Keilw. 89. An authority given to another perſon, to do that which a man himſelf cannot do, is void: and where an authority is lawful, the party to whom given muſt do the act in the name of him who gave the authority. 11 Rep. 87.

87. Where an authority is given by law, it muſt be ſtrictly purſued; and if a perſon acting under ſuch anthority, exceeds it, he is liable to an action for the exceſs.

An authority in ſome caſes cannot be transferred.

One, who has an authority to do any act for another, muſt execute it himſelf, and cannot transfer it to another; for this being a truſt and confidence repoſed in the party, cannot be aſſigned to a ſtranger whoſe ability and integrity were not ſo well thought of by him for whom the act was to be done. 9 Co. 77. b. 1 Rol. Abr. 330.

If A. lends B. a horſe to ride to York, B. cannot let his man ride him; for the licence is a matter of pleaſure annexed to the perſon of B. and cannot be transferred; adjudged upon a demurrer, in an action of treſpaſs, for immoderately riding the plaintiff's mare; where the defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff licentiam eidem dedit equitare; and that the defendant and his ſervant alternatim had rid upon the ſaid mare. 1 Rol. Abr. 330. 1 Mod. 110.

Some authorities likewiſe determine with the life of the perſon who gave them.

The authority given by letter of attorney muſt be executed during the life of the perſon that gives it; becauſe the letter of attorney is to conſtitute the attorney by repreſentative for ſuch a purpoſe, and therefore can continue in force only during the life of me that am to be repreſented. 2 Rol. Abr. 9. Co. Lit. 52.

But if any corporation aggregate, as a mayor and commonalty, or dean and chapter, make a feoffment and letter of attorney to deliver ſeiſin, this authority does not determine by the death of the mayor or dean, but the attorney may well execute the power after their death: becauſe the letter of attorney is an authority from the body aggregate, which ſubſiſts after the death of the mayor or dean, and therefore may be repreſented by their attorney; but if the dean or mayor be named by their own private name, and die before livery, or be removed, livery after ſeems not good. Co. Lit. 52. 2 Rol. Abr. 12.

It is a rule that every authority ſhall be countermandable, and determine by the death of him that gives it, &c. But where an intereſt is coupled with an authority, there it cannot be countermanded or determined. And. 1 Dyer 190.

A deviſe to another to have the diſpoſing, ſelling, and letting his land; ſo a deviſe to his ſon, but that his wife ſhall take the profits; ſo a deviſe, that his executor ſhall have the overſight and dealing of his lands; ſo a deviſe to an infant in tail, but that G. D. ſhall have the overſight of his will, aad the education of his ſon till of age, and, to receive, ſet, and let for him; theſe and ſuch like words give the deviſee an authority, but no intereſt. Dyer 26. b. 2 Leon. 221. 3 Leon. 78, 216. Moor 635, S. P. Cro. Eliz. 674, 678, 734.

Where goods are deviſed to a particular purpoſe, there the deviſee hath no intereſt in them; as for inſtance, the teſtator deviſed ſeveral legacies, and after thoſe were paid, then he deviſed the reſidue to his wife to diſpoſe for the good of his ſoul, and payment of his debts, and made her ſole executrix; adjudged, that by this deviſe ſhe had no intereſt in the reſidue, for it was deviſed for a particular purpoſe, viz. to pay the teſtator's debts. Dyer 331.

The law makes a difference where lands are deviſed to executors to ſell, and where the deviſe is, that his lands ſhall be ſold by his executors; for in the firſt caſe an intereſt paſſes to the executors, becauſe the lands are expreſsly deviſed to them, but in the other caſe they have only an authority to ſell. Goldſ. 2. Dyer 219. Moor 61. Keilw. 107. b. 1 And. 145.

The teſtator deviſed, that his executors ſhould receive the iſſues and profits of his lands till his ſon came of age, to pay his debts and legacies, and to breed up his younger children; the teſtator died, ſo did the executor, during the minority of the ſon, having firſt made J. S. his executor; adjudged, that this executor of an executor may diſpoſe of the iſſues and profits for the purpoſes mentioned in the will during the infancy of the ſon; becauſe the firſt executor had not only a bare authority, but an intereſt veſted in him. Dyer 210.

An authority may be delegated by deed indented, tho' the attorney be not party to the deed; becauſe the attorney takes nothing by the deed, but has only a naked authority delegated to him; and therefore, ſince a man may take an eſtate in remainder, though he is no party to the deed, a fortiori one not party to the deed may receive a naked authority or power by it. 2 Rol. Abr. 8, 9.

N. B. Indenting is not neceſſary.

Where the teſtator gives another authority to ſell his lands, he may ſell the inheritance, becauſe he gave him the ſame power he had himſelf, and in ſuch caſe the purchaſer ſhall be in by the deviſe. 2 Rep. 53.

An authority may be apportioned or divided, but an intereſt is inſeparable from the perſon, and where an act, which is in its nature indifferent, will work two ways, the one by an authority, and the other by an intereſt, the law will attribute it to the intereſt. But where an intereſt and authority meet, if the party declare, that the thing ſhall take effect by virtue of his authority, there it ſhall prevail againſt the intereſt. 6 Rep. 17.

In many caſes authorities muſt be ſtrictly executed according to the power given.

If a man deviſe that his executors ſhall ſell his land, this gives but a naked authority; and the lands, till the ſale is made, deſcend to the heir at law; and in this caſe all muſt join in the ſale; and if one die, it being a bare authority, cannot ſurvive to the reſt. Co. Lit. 112. b. 113. a. 181. b.

But if a man by will give land to executors to be ſold, and one of them die, the ſurvivors may ſell; for the truſt being coupled with an intereſt, ſhall ſurvive together with it. Co. Lit. 113. b. 181. b.

If a letter of attorney be to make livery upon condition, ſo as to make a conditional feoffment, and the attorney delivers ſeiſin abſolutely, the livery is not good; becauſe the attorney had no authority to create an abſolute fee-ſimple; and therefore ſuch abſolute feoffment ſhall not bind the feoffor, becauſe he gave no ſuch authority. 2 Rol. Abr. 9.

But if the letter of attorney had been to make livery abſolutely, and the attorney had made it upon condition, this ſeems a good execution of his power, and the feoffment good; becauſe when the attorney had once delivered ſeiſin, he has fully executed his power; and the condition annexed to it being without authority, is void; and therefore ſhall not deſtroy the operation of the livery. 2 Rol. Abr. 9.

If a warrant of attorney be given to make livery to one, and the attorney makes livery to two; or if the attorney had authority to make livery of Black-Acre, and he made livery of Black-Acre and White-Acre, though the attorney has in theſe caſes done more, yet there is no reaſon that ſhall vitiate what he has done purſuant to his power, ſince what he did beyond it is a perfect nullity, and void. Perk. ſect. 189.

If a letter of attorney be given to two jointly to take livery, and feoffor makes livery to one in the abſence of the other, in the name of both, this is void; becauſe they being appointed jointly to receive livery, are to be conſidered but as one. Co. Lit. 49. b. 2 Rol. Abr. 8.

But if a feoffment be made to A. and B. and the feoffor gives a letter of attorney to deliver ſeiſin, and J. S. gives livery to A. in the abſence of B. in the name of both, this is a good livery; for though the intire poſſeſſion be delivered to one only, yet they being jointenants by the deed of feoffment, ſuch livery to one makes no alteration or change in the poſſeſſion; becauſe if the livery had been made to both, each had been placed in the whole poſſeſſion; beſides that, every man being preſumed to accept a gift for his advantage, A. is looked upon as the attorney of B. to receive the poſſeſſion for him; and therefore the livery to A. enures to the benefit of B. till he diſagrees to it. Co. Lit. 49. 2 Rol. Abr. 8.

But if a letter of attorney be made to three conjunctim & diviſim, and two only make livery, this is not good, becauſe not purſuant to their authority; for the delegation was to them all three, or to each of them ſeparately; yet if the third was preſent at the time of the livery made by two, though he did not actually join with them in the act of livery, yet the livery is good; becauſe when they all three are upon the land for that purpoſe, and two make livery in the preſence of the third, there is his concurrence to the act, though he did not join in it actually, ſince he did not diſſent to it. Dyer 62. 1 Rol. Abr. 329. Co. Lit. 181. b. 1 Rol. Rep. 299. Yelv. 26.

If a letter of attorney be given to A. to make livery of lands already in leaſe, the attorney may enter upon the leſſee in order to make livery; becauſe, whilſt the leſſee continues in poſſeſſion, the attorney cannot deliver ſeiſin of it; and therefore, to execute the power given him by the letter of attorney, it is neceſſary he ſhould have a power to enter upon the leſſee. *Co. If a ſheriff makes a warrant to four or three, or a capias jointly or ſeverally to arreſt one, two of them may arreſt the party, for the greater expedition of juſtice. Co. Lit. 181. Palm. 52. 2 Rol. Rep. 137.

So if the lord gives licence to a copy-holder for life, to leaſe the copyhold for five years, if the copy-holder tamdiu vixerit, and he leaſes it for five years generally without limitation, this is a good execution, and purſuant to the licence; for the leaſe is determinable by his death, by a limitation in law; and therefore as much is implied by law, as if he had made an actual limitation. 1 *Rol. Autumn, Is the decline of the ſummer. Some computed the years by autumns; but the Engliſh Saxons by winters; Tacitus ſays, that the ancient Germans knew the other diviſions of the year, but did not know what was meant by autumn. Lindewood tells us, in the following lines, when the ſeveral ſeaſons of the year begin.

Dat Clemens Hiemem, dat Petrus ver Cathedratus,
Æſtuat Urbanus, Autumnat Bartholomæus.

Autumnalia, Thoſe fruits of the earth which are ripe in autumn or harveſt.

Auxilium ad filium Militem faciendum & filiam Maritandam, A writ formerly directed to the ſheriff of every county where the king or other lord had any tenants, to levy of them an aid towards the knighting of a ſon, and the marrying of a daughter. F. N. B. 82. See Aid.

Auxilium Curiæ, A precept or order of court for the citing or convening of one party, at the ſuit and requeſt of another, to warrant ſome thing.——Vocat inde ad warrantiam Johannem Sutton de Dudley chevaler & Iſabellam uxorem, ut habeat eos hoc in Octabis S. Award, (from the Fr. agard) Is the judgment and arbitration of one or more perſons, at the requeſt of two parties who are at variance, for ending the matter in diſpute without public authority: and may be called an award, becauſe it is impoſed on both parties to be obſerved by them. Dictum quod ad cuſtodiendum ſeu obſervandum partibus imponitur. Spelm. An award may be by word, or in writing; but it is uſually in writing; and muſt be exactly according to the ſubmiſſion.

It muſt likewiſe be equal, certain, and final, and the performance of it muſt be poſſible and lawful.

If an award be according to the ſubmiſſion by bond, though it is void in law, if it be not obſerved, the obligation will be forfeited. 1 Danv. Abr. 515.

The ſubmiſſion to an award may be by bond, covenant, or by an aſſumpſit or promiſe; or without all this, by a bare agreement to refer the matter to ſuch a perſon or perſons. 10 Rep. 131. Dyer 270. or by rule of court.

An award may be void in ſome part, and good in another part, if it makes an end of all the differences ſubmitted; and if an award be good in part, and void in part, the good ſhall be performed. 10 Rep. 31. 2 Saund. 293. An award without a deed of ſubmiſſion, will be a good bar of a treſpaſs. Danv. 548. But the delivery of the award in writing, under hand and ſeal, &c. muſt be pleaded, and be exactly replied to by the plaintiff, in action of debt on an award, or it will be ill on demurrer. Dyer 243. 2 Mod. 77, 78, 269. Debt on obligation to perform an award, which was, that the defendant ſhould enjoy a houſe of which the plaintiff was leſſee for years during the term, paying to the plaintiff 20*s.* yearly, and for non-payment of this the action was brought; and it was held to lie. Cro. Eliz. 211. If more is awarded than ſubmitted, the award will be void; but when an award ſeems to extend to more than in the ſubmiſſion, the words de & ſuper præmiſſis reſtrain it to the thing ſubmitted. Cro. Eliz. 861. So if an award be made of any other thing than what is contained in the ſubmiſſion, it is void; for no acts are my own, or binding to me, unleſs done by me or by commiſſion from me. Plow. 396. Dyer 242.

If arbitrators award to do an act to a ſtranger, this is good; for the ſtranger is put by the arbitrators in the place of the party, and they have power to award this act, ſince it is not impoſſible or unequal, and it is relating to the ſubmiſſion. Mo. 3, 359. 10 Co. 131. 3 Leon. 62. 1 Rol. Abr. 248. Hard. 46. 1 Leon. 316.

But an award that an act ſhould be done by a ſtranger, is void; becauſe he is not within the ſubmiſſion. Hard. 46.

If two ſubmit to an award all actions, and the arbitrators award a releaſe of all actions till the time of the award, ſome books have ſaid, that this is void for the whole, becauſe it extends to things partly in the ſubmiſſion and partly to things out of it, and it is one intire act; for ſay they, to do that act they are not obliged, becauſe not within the ſubmiſſion; and to do an act relating only to things contained in the ſubmiſſion, is another act from what is awarded; others have ſaid, that this is not void, unleſs there are ſhewn, on the other ſide, cauſes of action ariſing between the time of making the award, otherwiſe none ſhall be intended; and then the releaſe only relates to the things in ſubmiſſion. 10 Co. 131, 132. 1 Rol. Rep. 45, 162, 270. 1 Rol. Abr. 242. Cro. Eliz. 809. Cro. Jac. 353, 447. Poph. 137. 1 Sid. 365. 2 Mod. 169.

But it has been reſolved, and ſeems now ſettled, that the act is not intire; for he may releaſe all actions to the time of the ſubmiſſion; for though there is one deed of releaſe awarded, yet that deed relates to ſeveral things that are dividable in their own nature one from another, and ſo it ſhall be good for what is in the ſubmiſſion, and void for the reſidue. 3 Lev. 188. 2 Mod. 169. 1 Salk. 74. 3 Lev. 413. 2 Lev. 3.

A ſubmiſſion is of all actions and demands, &c. though there be but one cauſe or matter between them, an award may be made for this: and where two things are ſubmitted, and the award but of one, it is good, if the arbitrators have no further notice of the other; though if it be of three things, or ſome particulars, with a general clauſe of all other matters, in that caſe they muſt make the award for the things particularly named, without any other notice given. Dyer 216. Cro. Jac. 130. Godb. 146.

If two ſubmit all quarrels concerning tithes in a place certain, and the arbitrator awards that one ſhall pay to the other 20 l. and the other ſhould releaſe to him all actions, this ſhall be intended all actions concerning tithes, unleſs the contrary appear on the other ſide, and the actions may be ſevered; and this ſhall be good for the acts in the ſubmiſſion, and void for the reſt. Palm. 107. 1 Rol. Rep 362. Cro. Jac. 66.

An award may be good, though made of leſs than is contained in the ſubmiſſion; as if the ſubmiſſion be of all actions, treſpaſſes, demands and controverſies, and the award be made of ſome only, this is good; for no more ſhall be ſuppoſed to be made known to the arbitrator: and if there be other cauſes of action in being, and they be made known to the arbitrator, they muſt be ſhewn on the other ſide; and this as well where the ſubmiſſion is conditional by ita quod, as where it is abſolute; for the award being made de præmiſſis ſhall be ſuppoſed to ſettle all things Hob. 49. 8 Co. 98. Cro. Jac. 278. 1 Sand. 32. 1 Brownl. 63. 2 Brownl. 310. 1 Sid. 12. Dyer 216, 242. Hard. 45.

If the ſubmiſſion be by divers perſons, and the arbitrators award between ſome of them only, this is good: but if a ſubmiſſion is of certain things in ſpecial, with a proviſo in the condition, that the award may be made of the premiſes, &c. by ſuch a day, there the award muſt be made of all, or it will be void. 8 Rep. 79. Hob. 49. an award of all actions real, when the ſubmiſſion is of actions perſonal, is not good. Plowd. 306. 10. Rep. 132. Yet if the ſubmiſſion be of things perſonal, and the award is, that one of the parties ſhall do an act real, in ſatisfaction of a perſonal injury, &c. or a ſubmiſſion be of one thing, and the award made of ſomething incident to or neceſſarily depending upon it; or if the ſubmiſſion is of all actions real and perſonal, and the award only of matters perſonal, &c. it will be good in theſe caſes; if nothing elſe is notified to the arbitrators. Dyer 216.

Where the ſubmiſſion is general and conditional to end all controverſies, an indictment for a battery is not a controverſy between the parties, within the meaning of the ſubmiſſion, for that is the King's ſuit; and if the arbitrators award the ceaſing of ſuch a proſecution, it would be void, becauſe it would be to obſtruct juſtice. Reſolved, Freem. Rep. 204. pl. 208.

A ſubmiſſion of all debts and demands, and a releaſe of all judgments, executions and extents awarded, is a good award. 2 Sand. 190.

A ſubmiſſion of all matters between the plaintiff and another, and an award made of things that the party hath in right of his wife, is good; for theſe things are comprehended under the words all matters. 10 Hen. 6. 18. 3 Bulſt. 65.

A ſubmiſſion of all injuries; an award of all debts, duties and treſpaſſes, is a good award; for whatever is againſt law is an injury. 3 Bulſt. 312, 313.

A ſubmiſſion of all actions now depending, and an award of all actions, good; for it ſhall be intended actions depending. Cro. Eliz. 66, 858.

If there be a controverſy between the parſon and his pariſhioners, whether tithes ſhall be paid in ſpecie or not, and they ſubmit all controverſies, and the arbitrators award that they ſhall pay ſo much a year for tithes, this is good; for that was the debate on the award. 1 Rol. Abr. 254.

If the ſubmiſſion be of all controverſies to the time of the ſubmiſſion, and the award be that one of them ſhould deliver up an obligation made ſince the ſubmiſſion, in ſatisfaction of all matters, &c. this is good; becauſe the bond is given only in ſatisfaction. 1 Rol. Abr. 246.

An award may be good, though part of it be made of a thing not within the ſubmiſſion; as if an award be to pay 1000 l. and to procure a perſon to be bound to pay 22 l. per ann. the plaintiff muſt lay the breach in not paying the 1000 l. for as to the other part it is wholly void. See 1 Leon. 304, 305. Cro. Jac. 149. Poph. 134. 10 Co. 131. 5 Co. 78.

An award made only on one ſide, without any thing on the other, is void in law: as that one ſhall pay or give bond for money to the other party, and he do nothing for it; but if it be to give bond to pay, or to pay a debt, and that the other ſhall be diſcharged of the debt, &c. this is good: ſo where it is, that one party ſhall pay money to the other, and then the other ſhall releaſe all actions to him. 8 Rep. 72, 98.

Thus in caſe of a treſpaſs ſubmitted, the arbitrators award that one ſhall pay the other 3 l. this is void, becauſe only on one ſide; for it is not ſaid for what, and ſo the treſpaſs is not diſcharged, and then the other party hath no advantage by the award; but if it were awarded de et ſuper præmiſſis, it would be well enough; likewiſe if the award had been that he ſhall pay 3 l. for a treſpaſs, it had been good, and yet one only was to do an act, but then the treſpaſs by that award had been diſcharged. 1 Rol. Abr. 253, 254. Hob. 49.

Upon a ſubmiſſion of all treſpaſſes, duties, and demands, the award was, that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff, in ſatisfaction of all treſpaſſes done to him by the defendant before the day of the ſubmiſſion, ſo much. In debt upon this award defendant demurred to the declaration, and inſiſted that the award was void, it being of one ſide; for the plaintiff was to do nothing. But adjudged good; for by the payment of the money he is acquitted of all treſpaſſes done to the plaintiff, and it is a good bar againſt him, and it ſhall not be intended that the arbitrators had notice that the defendant had any cauſe of action againſt the plaintiff, unleſs ſhewn on the defendant's part; and judgment for the plaintiff, Haughton hæſitante. Cro. Jac. 354.

If an award be, that an obligor in a ſingle obligation ſhall pay the debt, this is no award, unleſs it be provided that he be diſcharged; for payment in that caſe is no diſcharge. Hob. 49. pl. 55.

But if the award be, that the one ſhall pay 10 l. for treſpaſs, it is good; for a ſatisfaction implies a diſcharge, and that is the reaſon of the judgment in Baſpool's caſe. Hob. 49.

If divers treſpaſſes be referred to arbitrament, and the award is, that one of the parties ſhall make the other party amends, or give a releaſe, and ſay not what amends, or what releaſe, &c. it is void for incertainty. 5 Rep. 78. March 18.

A naked award is no good plea in treſpaſs, unleſs ſomething be awarded to the plaintiff in amends; for if there be no treſpaſs there is nothing about which an award can be made; and if there be one, and they do not award ſatisfaction, they do not act according to the deſign of their inſtitution, for they are not indifferent, and ſo there is no good award. 1 Brownl. 63. Cro. Eliz. 904. 1 Rol. Abr. 251.

If an award be to pay ſo much money in diſcharge of all actions, a releaſe ſhall be intended to be awarded, unleſs the contrary be ſhewn on the other ſide. 2 Rol. Rep. 1.

A ſubmiſſion to award was of all matters in controverſy by rule of court; and award was made, that ſo much money ſhould be paid on one ſide, and nothing was awarded of the other ſide; and moved to ſet it aſide as being an award only ex parte. Per Holt, The common exceptions againſt an award will not hold here, it being an award upon ſubmiſſion by rule of court; for tho' there be no releaſe awarded of one ſide, yet the ſubmiſſion was of all matters in controverſy; and we will not grant an attachment before they tender a releaſe; for if one comes to have aid of the court, he ſhall do that which is fair and equitable before he has it. 12 Mod. 234.

As an award is in nature of a judgment, it ought to be wholly deciſive, for if it doth not determine the matter, it becomes a new controverſy; therefore if the arbitrators award a bond for quiet enjoyment of lands, without appointing a certain ſum, this is a void award, and the party is not obliged to give bond to the value of the land; for then the ſenſe of the award muſt be ſupplied by averment; now if it hath the credit of a judgment, there can be no interpretation made of the award, but by the words of the award itſelf; for if it receives its meaning from any matters out of the award, the mind of the arbitrators is only gueſt at, and not expreſs'd; but the parties intended to be obliged only by what the arbitrators themſelves declare to be their award, and the bond to be according to the value, they cannot aſſign their power to any perſon to aſſeſs the value. 5 Co. 77. Cro.

An award was to pay money, but expreſſed no place where it ſhould be paid. Reſolved, that in law this ſhould have a reaſonable conſtruction, and the party ought to have a reaſonable time for the payment; but Foſter conceived it not good, becauſe in ſuch caſe the bond of ſubmiſſion would be immediately forfeited, as there was neither time nor place where the money ſhould be paid; but in anſwer to this were cited 3 H. 7. and 16 E. 4. where it is ſaid, that if an arbitrator awards that one party ſhall pay ſo much ſuch a day, and keeps the award in his pocket till the day be paſt, yet the bond ſhall not be forfeited; and ſo it was adjudged by all the other juſtices. 2 Brownl. 211.

If the condition of an obligation be to ſubmit to an award all controverſies between A. and B. and an award is made that A. ſhall permit B. to enjoy certain leaſes of lands purchaſed from J. S. and that B. ſhall pay the rents, and perform the covenants, and deliver to A. a true copy of the leaſes, and pay the arrears to the time of the purchaſe from J. S. this is a good award as to the rents and covenants, though not particularly ſpecified; for it is true, an award is to be interpreted by its own words, and not by any matter out of the award which doth not appear in the words; but when the words of an award have relation to things certain out of the award, theſe things may be averred; for that is the expreſs mind of the arbitrators, which they have expreſsly referred to; but as to the arrears the award is void, becauſe they have not referred to any matter that falls within the conuzance of B. for he cannot compel A. or J. S. to ſet the time of the purchaſe; and an award of what cannot be certainly done is not a certain determination. 1 Rol. Abr. 264.

An award may be good for part only, but then it muſt be final as to that part. 19 Hen. 6. 36. 8 Ed. 4. 10.

An award that all ſuits ſhall ceaſe is a final award; ſo an award that one of the parties ſhall not ſue an obligation; for this amounts to an extiguiſhment of the debt.

An award that a ſuit in chancery ſhall be diſmiſſed, is a final award; ſo if the arbitrators award a retraxit, or an award that one ſhall not proſecute nor proceed in ſuch a term, ſeems to be good; but an award that one of the parties ſhall be nonſuit is not good, becauſe the party may begin again, ſo that each party ſhall diſcontinue their actions which they have againſt each other; for this is not a final determination. 2 Mod. 227. 1 Lev. 58. 1 Rol. Abr. 54. 1 Salk. 75. 6 Mod. 282.

If they arbitrate that all controverſies ſhall ceaſe, except that concerning one bond, this is final; for as to the bond, they arbitrate that it ſhall continue in force. Cro. Jac. 277, 400.

A conditional award not good, becauſe not final to determine matters in difference; the ſame law where any thing is referred to the arbitrator's future judgment or expoſition. 1 Sid. 59. Cro. Jac. 508. Hob. 218. Palm. 110.

An award to give ſuch a releaſe as council, &c. ſhould adviſe, is good, for this is only a miniſterial, and not a judicial act. Style 219.

The performance of what is awarded likewiſe muſt be poſſible and lawful.

If the arbitrators award a thing impoſſible ex natura rei, it is void; as if they award a ſum of money to be paid at a day paſt, it is void. 8 Ed. 4. 1. b. But if they award a thing which cannot be done, but is not in the nature of the act itſelf contradictory or repugnant; this may be a good award; for there is no conſtruction to be made of the award, but by the words thereof. 1 Rol. Abr. 248.

An award to levy a fine is good; for though it is an act of the court, yet, by the law and public juſtice of the kingdom, it is not to be refuſed to any man; but if the award be to command the juſtices to do it, this is no good award; for the parties in effect pray leave to agree from the King himſelf, which is quite different from the nature of a command. 1 Rol. Abr. 249.

An award to pay ſo much apud domum J. S. good; for he is not bound to pay it in the houſe, but as near as he can to it, or it ſhall be intended a common inn; and if the party will not let him pay there, it has been ſaid that the endeavour is ſufficient; for they cannot award any thing that will make the party a treſpaſſer. 1 Rol. Abr. 249. 1 Rol. Rep. 6. Cro. Car. 226. 2 Bulſt. 39. 3 Lev. 153. An award that one of the parties ſhall do a thing out of his power, as to deliver up a deed which is in the cuſtody of J. S. is void; agreed per cur'. 12 Mod. 585. If an arbitrator awards a thing againſt law, this is void. 1 Rol. Abr. 249. And a party is not to be made a judge in his own cauſe by award. 1 Salk. 71. Where a thing is to be done on payment of money, a tender of the money is as much as an actual payment. Mod. Caſ. 33. Action of debt may be brought for money adjudged to be paid by arbitrators, declaring on the award; and alſo action of debt upon the bond for not performing the award. Brownl. 55.

With reſpect to pleading awards in bar, there is a difference between an accord with ſatisfaction and an award; for in an accord a man muſt plead preſent ſatisfaction, and it is no plea in bar to plead an accord with ſatiſfaction at a day to come; for in all perſonal injuries the law gives damages as an equivalent; and when the party accepts of an equivalent, there is no injury or cauſe of complaint, and therefore a preſent ſatisfaction is a good plea; but where the wrong-doer promiſes a future ſatiſfaction, the injury continues till ſatisfaction is made, and conſequently there is a cauſe of complaint in being, and if the treſpaſs were now barred by this plea, he can have no remedy for the future ſatisfaction, for that ſuppoſes the injury ſtill to have continuance; but where perſons ſubmit to arbitration, the arbitrators are judges of the injury; and if they award money payable at a day to come, that is a good award, and may be a good plea in bar to an action of treſpaſs brought in the mean time, becauſe this thereby becomes the immediate debt attainable by law. 5 Ed. 4. 7. Plowd. 5. b.

A man cannot plead generally the award performed, but he ought to ſet forth the award, and ſhew how he hath performed it. Moor 3. pl. 9. In pleading a countermand to a ſubmiſſion to arbitrate, it need not be alledged, that the party gave notice to the arbitrators, for without that it is no countermand, and therefore, if no notice be given, iſſue may be joined upon the point quod non revocavit. 8 Co. 82.

Arbitrators are to make their award ſecundum allegata & probata, but they may not injoin any oath to the witneſſes: the award ought to be publiſhed; and no one is bound to perform till he can know what the award is. 4 Rep. 82. Brownl. 311. A ſubmiſſion to award may be revoked and countermanded, before the award made; where there is no ſpecialty to abide the award of J. S. &c. 8 Rep. 8.

By Stat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 13. Submiſſions to awards, by agreement of the parties, may be made a rule of any of his majeſty's courts of record; and on a rule of court thereupon, the parties ſhall be finally concluded by ſuch arbitrament: and, in caſe of diſobedience thereto, the party refuſing to perform the ſame, ſhall be ſubject to the penalties of contemning a rule of court, &c. unleſs it appears on oath that ſuch award was unduly procured, when it ſhall be ſet aſide: but this ſtatute extends only to perſonal matters, for which there is no other remedy but by perſonal action, or by ſuit in equity.

Attachment lies for non-performance of an award made a rule of court; after perſonal demand of performance. 1 Salk. 83. In making a ſubmiſſion to an award a rule of the court of Chancery, which the parties may agree to, it muſt be done purſuant to the act of parliament; and the method is to move that court, to confirm the award, upon the maſter's report: though if there be ſuch ſubmiſſion to a reference, and the award made is to be confirmed by decree, without appeal; yet exceptions may be taken thereto. 2 Vern. 109. Awm, or aume, (Teut. ohm. i. e. cadus vel menſura) A meaſure of Rheniſh wine, containg forty gallons; mentioned in the ſtatute 1 Jac 1. c. 33. and 12 Car. 2. c. 4. This word is otherwiſe called awame.—The rood of Rheniſh wine of Dordreight is ten awmes, and every awme fifty gallons: The rood of Antwerp is fourteen awmes, and every awme thirty-five gallons. By this account it contains different quaintities in ſeveral countries.

Axe and Axen, Comes from the Saxon verb axian, to demand, and from hence we have our Engliſh word aſk. In Somerſetſhire, and ſome other counties of England, in the country dialect the word axe is made uſe of for aſk.

Batchelor, (baccalaureus, from the Fr. bachelier, viz. tyro, a learner:) In the univerſities there are batchelors of arts, &c. which is the firſt degree taken by ſtudents, before they come to greater dignity. And thoſe that are called batchelors of the companies of London, are ſuch of each company, as are ſpringing towards the eſtate of thoſe that are employed in council, but as yet are inferiors; for every of the twelve companies conſiſts of a maſter, two wardens, the livery, (which are aſſiſtants in matters of council, or ſuch as the aſſiſtants are choſen out of) and the batchelors. The word batchelor is uſed 13 R. 1. and ſignifies the ſame with knight-batchelor. By 3 E. 4. c. 5. it is a ſimple knight, and not knight banneret, or Knight of the Bath. Anno 28 E. 3. a petition was recorded in the Tower, beginning thus: A noſtre Seigneur le Roy monſtrent votre ſimple batchelor, Johan de Bures, &c. Batchelor was antiently attributed to the admiral of England, if he were under a baron. In Pat. 8 R. 2. we read of a baccalarius regis. And touching the further etymology of this word, baccalaurei (teſte Renano) a bacillo nominati ſunt, quia primi ſtudii authoritatem quæ per exhibitionem baculi concedebatur jam conſecuti fuiſſent, &c.

Backberinde, (Sax.) Signifieth bearing upon the back, or about a man. Bracton uſeth it for a ſign or circumſtance of theft apparent, which the Civilians call furtum manifeſtum; for, dividing furtum into manifeſtum & non manifeſtum, he defineth the former thus; furtum vero manifeſtum eſt, ubi latro deprehenſus eſt ſeiſitus de aliquo latrocinio, ſcil. handhabend, & backerind, & inſecutus fuerit per aliquem cujus res illa fuerit. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 32. Manwood remarks it as one of the four circumſtances or caſes, wherein a foreſter may arreſt the body of an offender againſt vert or veniſon in the foreſt: by the aſſiſe of the foreſt of Lancaſter (ſays he) taken with the manner, is when one is found in the king's foreſt in any of theſe four degrees, ſtable-ſtand, dog-draw, backbear, and bloody-hand. Badger, (from the Fr. bagage, a bundle, and thence is derived bagagier, a carrier of goods) Signifies with us one that buys corn or victuals in one place, and carries them to another to ſell and make profit by them: and ſuch a one is exempted in the Stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 14. from the puniſhment of an ingroſſer within that ſtatute. But by 5 Eliz. c. 12. badgers are to be licenſed by the juſtices of peace in the ſeſſions; whoſe licences will be in force for one year, and no longer; and the perſons to whom granted muſt enter into a recogniſance that they will not by colour of their licenſes foreſtal, or do any thing contrary to the ſtatutes made againſt foreſtallers, ingroſſers, and regrators. If any perſon ſhall act as a badger without licence, he is to forfeit 5 l. one moiety to the king, and the other to the proſecutor, leviable by warrant from juſtices of peace, &c. Vide 13 El. c. 25. ſect. 20.

Bail, ballium, (from the Fr. bailler, which comes of the Greek Βάλλειν, and ſignifies to deliver into hands) Is uſed in our Common law for the freeing or ſetting at liberty of one arreſted or impriſoned upon any action, either civil or criminal, on ſurety taken for his appearance at a day and place certain. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 8. The reaſon why it is called bail, is becauſe by this means the party reſtrained is delivered into the hands of thoſe that bind themſelves for his forthcoming, in order to a ſafe keeping or protection from priſon: and the end of bail is to ſatisfy the condemnation and coſts, or render the defendant to priſon.

With reſpect to bail in civil caſes it is to be obſerved, that there is both common and ſpecial bail: common bail is in actions of ſmall concernment, being called common, becauſe any ſureties in that caſe are taken; whereas in cauſes of greater weight, as actions upon bonds, or ſpecialty, &c. where the debt amounts to 10*l.* Special bail or ſurety muſt be taken, ſuch as ſubſidy men at leaſt, and they according to the value. 4 Inſt. 179. For common bail fictitious names only are now uſed.

By Stat. 23 Hen. 6. c. 9. Sheriffs, &c. are to let to bail perſons by them arreſted by force of any writ, in any perſonal action, &c. upon reaſonable ſureties, having ſufficient within the county to keep their days in ſuch place, &c. as the writs require. And the Stat. 1 W. M. ſeſſ. 2. c. 2. (36.) provides againſt exceſſive bail.

By the Stat. 12 Geo. 1. c. 29. None ſhall be held to ſpecial bail on proceſs out of any ſuperior court, where the cauſe of action doth not amount to 10*l.* or upwards; nor out of any inferior court where it doth not amount to 40*s.* Affidavit is to be made of the cauſe of action. Vide 21 Geo. 2. c. 3. And Affidavit and Arreſt.

In actions of battery, treſpaſs, ſlander, &c. though the plaintiff is like to recover large damages, ſpecial bail is not to be had, unleſs by order of court, and the proceſs is marked for ſpecial bail: nor is it required in actions of account, or of covenant, except it be to pay money; nor againſt heirs or executors, &c. for the debt of the teſtator, unleſs they have waſted the teſtator's goods. 1 Danv. Abr. 681.

Neither is an executor, adminiſtrator or heir, upon the removal of a cauſe out of an inferior court, obliged to put in bail. 2 Lev. 204. 1 Sid. 418. 1 Lev. 945, 268. 2 Jones 82. 1 Salk. 98. S. P. cont. Lit. Rep. 81.

But if there be a devaſtavit ſuggeſted, which can only be on an action of debt on a judgment, they muſt find ſpecial bail. 1 Lev. 145. 1 Sid. 63. 1 Salk. 98.

If baron and feme are ſued, the huſband muſt put in bail for both, but if the huſband does not appear upon the arreſt, the wife muſt file common bail before ſhe can be diſcharged; for otherwiſe the plaintiff could not proceed to obtain judgment. Goldſ. 127. Cro. Eliz. 370. Cro. Jac. 445. Style 475. 1 Mod. 8. 6 Mod. 17, 105.

In all actions brought in B. R. upon any penal law, the defendant is to put in but common bail. Yelv. 53. In actions where damages are uncertain, bail is to be at the diſcretion of the court: on a dangerous aſſault and battery, upon affidavit of ſpecial damages, a judge's hand may be procured for allowance of an ac etiam in the writ: and in action of ſcandalum magnatum the court on motion ordered ſpecial bail. Raym. 74. When bail is taken by the chief juſtice, or other judge on a habeas corpus, the bail taken in the inferior court is diſmiſſed; though the laſt bail be not filed preſently, nor till the next term. Yelv. 120, 121. Yet it has been held, where a cauſe is removed out of an inferior court by habeas corpus, if the bail below offer themſelves to be bail above, they ſhall be taken, not being excepted againſt below, unleſs the cauſe comes out of London. For the ſufficiency of the bail there is at the peril of the clerk, and he is reſponſible to the plaintiff; ſo that the plaintiff had not the liberty of excepting againſt them, and the clerk is not reſponſible for their deficiency in the court above, though he was in London. 1 Salk. 97.

In London it is ſaid, ſpecial bail is to be given in action of account, &c. But on removal by habeas corpus into B. R. that court will accept common bail. 2 Keb. 404.

There is not only bail to appear, &c. on writs of error; but alſo in audita querela, a recogniſance of bail muſt be acknowledged; and upon a writ of attaint, to proſecute, &c. Jenk. Cent. 129.

By the Stat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 8. No execution ſhall be delayed by any writ of error or ſuperſedeas thereupon, unleſs bail ſhall be given, in double the ſum adjudged, to proſecute the writ of error with effect; and alſo to ſatisfy the debt, damages, and coſts adjudged, &c.

Note; by the Stat. 3 Jac. 1. cap. 8. When a writ of error is brought on a judgment had upon a bond to pay money (only) there ſpecial bail ought to be given; and after a year a ſcire facias ought to precede the levari, or fieri facias. 11 Mod. 2.

If a cauſe removed from an inferior court, be remanded back by procedendo the ſame term, the original bail in the inferior court are chargeable, but not if remanded in another term. Cro. Jac. 363. One taken on a writ of execution is not bailable by law; except an audita querela be brought: but where a writ of error is brought and allowed, if the defendant be not in execution, there ſhall not be an execution awarded againſt him, at the requeſt of the bail, though he be preſent in court, 1 Nelſ. Abr. 331. The bail ought not to join with the principal, nor the principal with the bail, in a writ of error to reverſe the judgment againſt either. Cro. Jac. 384.

On capias ad ſatisfaciendum againſt the defendant returned non eſt inventus, ſcire facias is to iſſue againſt the bail, or an action may be brought. Where a defendant renders his body in diſcharge of the bail, the plaintiff is by the rules of the court to make his choice of proceeding in execution, whether he will charge body, goods, or lands. 1 Lill. 183. And if the principal after judgment renders not himſelf in diſcharge of his bail, it is at the election of the plaintiff to take out execution either againſt him or proceed againſt his bail: but if he takes the bail in execution, though he hath not full ſatisfaction, he ſhall vever after take the principal; and if the principal be taken, he may not after meddle with the bail.

Where two are bail, although one be in execution, the plaintiff may take the other. Cro. Jac. 320. 2 Bulſt. 68. If a principal render himſelf, and there is none to require his commitment, the court is ex officio to commit him; and if the plaintiff refuſe him, he ſhall be diſcharged, and an entry made of it upon the record. Moor, Caſ. 1249. A defendant having rendered himſelf to diſcharge the bail, and prayed entry of it; the court aſked the plaintiff if he would have execution of his body, and he ſaid no: the bail was diſcharged. 1 Leon. 59. See Hob. 210.

There muſt be an exoneretur entered, to diſcharge the bail. If the defendant dies before a capias ad ſatisfac. againſt him returned and filed, the bail will be diſcharged. 1 Lill. 177.

The bail upon a writ of error cannot render the party in their diſcharge; becauſe they are bound in a recogniſance that the party ſhall proſecute the writ of error with effect, and pay the money if judgment be affirmed. 1 Lill. Abr. 173. Before a ſcire facias taken out againſt bail, the principal may render his body in diſcharge of the bail: and if the bail bring in the principal before the return of the ſecond ſci. fac. againſt them, they ſhall be diſcharged. 1 Rol. Abr. 250. 1 Lill. 471. Anciently the bail were to bring in the principal upon the firſt ſcire fac. or it would not be allowed. 3 Bulſt. 182.

If bail ſurrender the principal at or before the return of the ſecond ſcire facias, it is good, although there be not immediate notice of it to the plaintiff; and if, through want of notice, he is at further charge againſt the bail, that ſhall not vitiate the ſurrender, but the bail ſhall not be delivered till they pay ſuch charges: if at any time, after the return of the capias, the bail ſurrender the principal at a judge's chamber, and he thereupon is committed to the tipſtaff, from whom he eſcapes, &c. this will not be a good ſurrender; but if it be before or on a capias returned, it is otherwiſe, the one being an indulgence, and the other matter of right. Mod. Caſ. 238.

When a perſon makes his eſcape out of priſon, and is retaken and bailed; the bail ſhall be diſcharged on a writ to the ſheriff commanding him to keep the priſoner in diſcharge of the bail. Stat. 1 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 6. Sec. 3. The judges of the courts at Weſtminſter have power by ſtatute to appoint commiſſioners in every county to take recogniſances of bail, in cauſes depending in their courts; and to make ſuch rules for juſtifying the bail as they ſhall think fit, &c. Stat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 4.

The commiſſioners are to take bail, but are obliged by rule of court to keep a book wherein are the names of the plaintiff, defendant, and bail, and the perſon who tranſmits the ſame, and who makes affidavit that the recogniſance was duly acknowledged in his preſence: on ſuch affidavit the judges make a conditional allocatur, and the bail are to ſtand abſolute, unleſs the plaintiff excepts againſt them within twenty days, and if he excepts, the bail may juſtify by affidavit before the commiſſioners in the country. Gilb. H. C. B. 32.

If a defendant puts in bail by a wrong name, the proceedings ſhall nevertheleſs be good; for otherwiſe every man impleaded may give a falſe name to his attorney by which he will be bailed, and then plead it in arreſt of judgment. Goldſb. 138. But it hath been held, that if the bail be entered in one name, and the declaration and all the proceedings are by a contrary name, it will be erroneous. Cro. Eliz. 223. So if there is bail, and the bail be taken off the file, the plaintiff is without remedy: though a habeas corpus and bail-piece were loſt in B. R. new ones were ordered to be made out. Style 261.

Stat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 26. enacts, That it is felony without benefit of clergy to acknowledge, or procure to be acknowledged, any bail in the name of another perſon not privy or conſenting thereto, provided that it ſhall not corrupt the blood, or take away dower.

Stat. 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 4. ſ. 4. enacts, That any perſon repreſenting or perſonating another before commiſſioners appointed to take bail, ſhall be adjudged guilty of felony.

Special bail, which is taken before a judge, or by commiſſioners in the country, when accepted, is to be filed; after twenty days notice given of putting in ſpecial bail before a judge, on a cepi corpus, if there be no exception the bail ſhall be filed in four days. 1 Lill. Abr. 174. Upon a cepi corpus twenty days are allowed to except againſt the bail: ſo on a writ of error; and you need not give notice; but you cannot take out execution without giving a four days rule to put in better bail: in all other caſes, notice muſt be given. Upon a habeas corpus, eight and twenty days are appointed to except againſt the bail, and after that, if it be not excepted againſt, it ſhall be filed in four days. 1 Salk. 98.

As to putting in common bail, or entering a common appearance, vide the books of practice by Richardſon or Harriſon.

The exception to bail put in before a judge, muſt be entered in the bail book, at the judge's chambers at the ſide of the bail there put in, after this manner: I do except againſt this bail, A. B. attorn. for the plaintiff. And if there be no ſuch exception, the defendant's attorney may take the bail-piece from the judge's chamber, and file it. Bail is not properly ſuch until it is filed, when it is of record: but it ſhall be accounted good, till the ſame is queſtioned and diſallowed. When bail are excepted to, they are to juſtify themſelves in open court, by oath of their abilities; or before one of the judges of the court, (by conſent;) or by affidavit before commiſſioners who took the bail.

Bail cannot be juſtified before a judge in his chamber, except it be by conſent, or for neceſſity in vacation; but in the latter caſe they ought to be juſtified again in term, and upon that the defendant is compelled to accept a declaration to go to trial at the aſſiſes, if it be an iſſuable term; and upon putting in bail, it it not enough to give notice of their being put in, but it ought to be of their names, places of abode, and trade or vocation, that the plaintiff may know how to enquire after them. 6 Mod. 24, 25.

It being doubtful whether Sunday ſhould be reckoned as one day in notice to juſtify bail, it was determined per Cur. that for the future Sunday ſhall not be counted one, (it not being a proper day to enquire after bail) but two days notice muſt be given, of which Sunday ſhall not be one; upon motion for defendant to juſtify bail, notice was ſerved Saturday June 23, to juſtify bail Monday 25; the notice being inſufficient, the bail was not ſuffered to juſtify. Notes in C. B. 220.

The court may adjudge bail ſufficient, when the plaintiff will not accept of it. Alſo the court on motion, or a judge at his chamber, will order a common appearance to be taken, when ſpecial bail is not required, on affidavit made by the defendant of the ſmallneſs of the debt due, &c. The putting in of a declaration, and the acceptance of it by the defendant's attorney with the privity of the plaintiff's attorney, is an acceptance of the bail.

If a plaintiff accepts of an aſſignment of the bail bond, and the defendant puts in the ſame bail that were put in to the ſheriff at the return of the writ, the plaintiff cannot except againſt them; but 'tis otherwiſe where he hath not taken an aſſignment. Farreſt. Mod. Caſ. 62. When a ſheriff hath taken good bail of the defendant, he will on a rule return a cepi, and aſſign the bail bond to the plaintiff, which may be done by indorſement without ſtamp; ſo as it be ſtampt before action brought thereupon; and then the defendant and bail may be ſued on the bond, by the plaintiff in his own name, i. e. as aſſignee of the ſheriff. Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. But if the plaintiff takes an aſſignment of the bail-bond, though the bail is inſufficient, the court will not amerce the ſheriff. 1 Salk. 99.

In caſe the defendant doth not put in bail, the attorney for the plaintiff is to call on the ſheriff for his return of the writ; and ſo proceed to an attachment againſt the ſheriff. If on a cepi corpus no bail is returned, a rule will be made out to bring in the defendant's body. Though a defendant, with leave of the court, may depoſit money in court inſtead of bail; and in ſuch caſe the plaintiff ſhall be ordered to waive other bail. Lill. Abr. Trin. 23. Car B. R.

If more damages, &c. are recovered than mentioned in the plaint, or than the ſum wherein the bail is bound, the bail will not be liable for the ſurplus. 1 Salk. 102.

In C. P. and in B. R. where ſuits are by original, if the original is in one county, and the venue in the declaration laid in another county, the bail are not liable contra, where the ſuit is, by bill of Middleſex or latitat.

If defendant lives in a county, where plaintiff does not chooſe to try his action, and he proceeds in the C. P. or by original in B. R. he muſt ſue out a teſtatum.

A bail cannot be witneſs for the defendant at the trial; but the court, on motion, will diſcharge the bail, upon giving other ſufficient bail. Wood's Inſt. 582. Bail-pieces are written on a ſmall ſquare piece of parchment, with the corners cut off at the bottom. A ſpecial bail-piece is in the following form: and all the difference between a ſpecial bail-piece and a common one is, that in the former the real names of the bail, with their additions, are inſerted; whereas in the latter the fictitious names of John Doe and Richard Roe are inſerted,

As to bail for crimes, at Common law bail was allowed for all offences except murder. 2 Inſt. 190. And if the party accuſed could find ſufficient ſureties, he was not to be committed to priſon; for all perſons might be bailed till convicted of the offence; 2 Inſt. 186. But by ſtatute it was after enacted, that in caſe of homicide the offender ſhould not be bailed: and by our ſtatutes, murderers, outlaws, houſe-burners, thieves openly defamed, &c. are not bailable; but where perſons are guilty of larceny, are acceſſaries to felony, or guilty of light ſuſpicion, they may be admitted to bail. Stat 3 Ed. 1. c. 15.

One indicted and found guilty of the death of a man by miſadventure, as by caſting a ſtone over a houſe, and by chance killing a man, woman, or child, is not bailable. Cook of Bail, &c. c. 5. cites 3 Ed. 3. Corone 354.

R.* by habeas corpus, prayed to be bailed, and took two exceptions to the indictment; 1ſt, That he was in priſon, and knew nothing of the outlawry; 2dly, that the charge is too general, and no body proſecutes; but per Roll Ch. J. He cannot be bailed. Sty. 418. But ſee 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. which enacts, that perſons outlawed, except for treaſon or felony, may appear by attorney and reverſe the ſame without bail; except ſpecial bail ſhall be ordered by the court: and that perſons arreſted upon any capias utlagatum, except for treaſon or felony, may be diſcharged by an attorney's engagement to appear: and in caſes where ſpecial bail is required, the ſheriff may take bond with ſureties.

One charged with buggery is not bailable; per Holt Ch. J. 12 Mod. 435.

It was doubted whether perſons committed by rule of court are intitled to the benefit of the habeas corpus act; and it was reſolved by two judges, viz. Eyre and Forteſcue, (abſente Powis & diſſentiente Pratt) that none are intitled to make their prayer, but ſuch as are committed by warrant of a juſtice of peace, or ſecretary of ſtate, and not thoſe committed by rule of court; for that is not in the meaning of the act of parliament, (a commitment by warrant.) 10 Mod. 429.

But in the late caſe of Bingley, he was brought before a judge of B. R. and bailed.—And the judges never denied him an habeas corpus, when applied for, though a perſon under ſuch circumſtances, on obtaining ha' cor' might perhaps be remanded.

Having thus briefly ſhewn what criminals are bailable, it remains to conſider by whom they may be bailed.

By the Common law the ſheriff might bail perſons arreſted on ſuſpicion of felony, or for other offence bailable; but he hath loſt this power by the Stat. 1 Ed. 4. c. 2. Juſtices of peace may let to bail perſons ſuſpected of felony, or others bailable, until the next ſeſſions: though where perſons are arreſted for manſlaughter or felony, being bailable by law, they are not to be let to bail by juſtices of peace but in open ſeſſions, or where two juſtices (quorum unas) are preſent; and the ſame is to be certified with the examinatian of the offender, and the accuſers bound over to proſecute, &c. 3 H. 7. c. 3. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13. § 3. not to reſtrain Juſtices in London and Middleſex, and towns corporate. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13. § 6. If a perſon be dangerouſly wounded, the offender may be bailed till the perſon is dead; but 'tis uſual to have aſſurance from ſome ſkilful ſurgeon, that the party is like to do well. 2 Inſt. 186. A man arreſted and impriſoned for felony, being bailable, ſhall be bailed before it appears whether he is guilty or not; but when convicted, or if on examination he confeſſeth the felony, he cannot be bailed. 4 Inſt. 178. For where in manſlaughter, felony, &c. it is certainly known that the party did it, he ought not to be bailed.

It is to be obſerved, that the Stat. Weſt. 1. 3 Ed. 1. c. 15. above mentioned, doth not extend to the judges of B. R. &c. only to ſheriffs and other inferior officers. H. P. C. 98, 99.—Likewiſe, Juſtices of goal-delivery not being within the reſtraint of the ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. may bail perſons convicted before them of homicide by miſadventure, or ſelf-defence, the better to enable them to purchaſe their pardon. Cromp. 154. a. H. P. C. 101. F. N. B. 246. S. P. C. 15.

Alſo it ſeems that in diſcretion they may bail a perſon convicted before them of manſlaughter, upon ſpecial circumſtances, as if the evidence againſt him were ſlight, or if he had purchaſed his pardon. H. P. C. 101. Cromp. 153.

The court of B. R. bails in all caſes, and may bail murder, &c. If a man is found guilty of murder by the coroner's inqueſt, yet B. R. may bail him; for they may examine into the depoſitions taken by the coroner. 1 Salk. 104. But if a criminal be indicted of murder, the court will not bail him, though upon affidavits of evidence which might diſcharge the proſecution: nor when a perſon is found guilty of any crime by the grand jury, becauſe they cannot have notice of what evidence was before the jury, which by their oath they are obliged to conceal. 1 Salk. 104. Yet vide 2 Jones 222. cont. tho' the doctrine in Salk. ſeems the moſt rational.

Here it muſt be obſerved, that with reſpect to the nature of the offence, although this court is not tied down by the rules preſcribed by the ſtat. of Weſtm. 1. yet it will in diſcretion pay a due regard to thoſe rules, and not admit a perſon to bail who is expreſly declared to be irreplevifable, without ſome particular circumſtances in his favour. 2 Inſt. 185, 186, 189. H. C. P. 104. 1 Salk. 61. 3 Bulſt. 113. 2 Hawk. P. C. 113, 114. 5 Mod. 454.

And therefore if a perſon be attainted of felony, or convicted thereof by verdict general or ſpecial, or notoriouſly guilty of treaſon or manſlaughter, &c by his own confeſſion or otherwiſe, he is not to be admitted to bail without ſome ſpecial motive to induce the court to grant it. Kelynge 90. Dyer 79. 1 Bulſt. 87. 2 Hawk. P. C. 114.

The defendant was indicted for murder, and the trial coming on, the proſecutor alledged, that there had been great labouring of the jury, and therefore did not proceed, ſuſpecting a partial jury, but brought an appeal; and though by the appeal the indictment ſtill continued, and was not gone, yet the delay being occaſioned by the proſecutor, the party was bailed; but by Croke J. If the labouring the jury had been proved, peradventure he would not be bailable. Bulſt. 85

The jury on an indictment of murder found a ſpecial verdict, whereupon the court were divided, two againſt one, and thereupon the priſoner moved to be bailed, but all the court denied it; and as for the verdict there was a curia adviſare, and the matter adjourned, and the priſoner carried away in cuſtody. Bulſt. 89.

Formerly perſons committed for treaſon, by the king's command, or order of council, were not to be delivered without trial, &c. But it is ſaid that the court of B. R. has power to bail in all caſes of treaſon. Skin. 163. cites the opinion of the judges in the houſe of lords 1678. in Zachary Crofton's caſe.

Upon a commitment of either houſe of parliament, when it ſtands indifferent on the return of the habeas corpus, whether it be legal, or not, the court of B. R. ought not to bail a priſoner; but when it appears to be illegal, they may do it, as well as on an unwarrantable commitment of the king and council. 2 Hawk. 110. And a perſon committed for a contempt, by order of either houſe of parliament, may be diſcharged by B. R. after a diſſolution or prorogation, which determine all orders of parliament: alſo it is ſaid on an impeachment, when the parliament is not ſitting, and the party has been long in priſon, B. R. may bail him. The court of B. R. hath bailed perſons committed to the Fleet Priſon by the Lord Chancellor; when the crime of commitment was not mentioned, or only in general terms, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 111.

And B. R. having the control of all inferior courts, may at their diſcretion bail any perſon unjuſtly committed by any of thoſe courts. In admitting a perſon to bail in the court of B. R. for felony, &c. a ſeveral recogniſance is entered into to the king in a certain ſum from each of the bail, that the priſoner ſhall appear at a certain day, &c. And alſo that the bail ſhall be liable for the default of ſuch appearance, body for body. And it is at the diſcretion of juſtices of the peace, in admitting any perſon to bail for felony, to take the recogniſance in a certain ſum, or body for body: but where a perſon is bailed by any court, &c. for a crime of an inferior nature, the recogniſance onght to be only in a certain ſum of money, and not body for body. 2 Hawk. 115. And the bail are to be bound in double the ſum of the criminal. Where perſons are bound body for body, if the offender doth not appear, whereby the recogniſance is forfeited, the bail are not liable to ſuch puniſhment to which the principal would be adjudged if found guilty, but only to be fined, &c. Wood's Inſt. 618. If bail ſuſpect the priſoner will fly, they may carry him before a juſtice to find new ſureties; or to be committed in their diſcharge. 1 Rep. 99.

The courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, in term time, and the Chancery in the term or vacation, may bail perſons by the habeas corpus act; but not ſuch as are committed for treaſon, or felony ſpecially expreſſed in the warrant of commitment; unleſs it be where a Seſſions is paſt from the time of commitment of the priſoner, without any proſecution; when he may be bailed. And B. R. will not admit a perſon to bail on the habeas corpus ſtatute, on commitment for treaſon or felony, without four ſureties. The court of B. R. may bail perſons committed by the king's ſpecial command, or by the privy council, on the like circumſtances upon which it will grant bail on other commitments: this is where the crime is ſpecified in the warrant of commitment; and wherever any commitment by the privy council hath not expreſſed with ſome certainty the crime alledged againſt the party, it has been uſual to admit him to bail on his habeas corpus. 2 Hawk. P. C. 107, 109 See Stat. 16 Car. 1. cap. 10 But concerning bail on habeas corpus, ſee title Habeas Corpus.

To refuſe bail when any one is bailable; or to admit any to bail who ought not by law to be admitted, or to take ſlender bail, is puniſhable by fine, &c. 2 Inſt 291. H. P. C. 97. And ſee farther, 3 Edw. 1. c. 15. 27 Edw. 1. St. 1. c. 3. 4 Edw. 3. c. 2. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13. & 31. Car. 2. c. 2.

No perſon ſhall be bailed for felony by leſs than two, and it is ſaid not to be uſual for the King's Bench to bail a man on a habeas corpus, on a commitment for treaſon or felony, without four ſureties; the ſum in which the ſureties are to be bound, ought to be never leſs than 40 l. for a capital crime; but it may be higher in diſcretion, on conſideration of the ability and quality of the priſoner, and the nature of the offence; and the ſureties may be examined on oath concerning their ſufficiency, by him that takes the bail; and if a perſon be bailed by inſufficient ſureties, he may be required either by him who took the bail, or by any other who hath power to bail him, to find better ſureties, and on his refuſal may be committed; for inſufficient ſureties are as none. 2 Hawk. P. C. 88. H. P. C. 97.

But juſtices muſt take care, that under pretence of demanding ſufficient ſurety, they do not make ſo exceſſive a demand, as in effect amounts to a denial of bail; for this is looked upon as a great grievance, and is complained of as ſuch by 1 W. & M. St. 2. c. 2. (the Bill of Rights) by which it is declared, that exceſſive bail ought not to be required. 2 Hawk. P. C. 89.

If where a felony is committed, one is brought before a juſtice on ſuſpicion, the perſon ſuſpected is to be bailed, or committed to priſon; but if there is no felony done, he may be diſcharged. H. P. C. 98, 106.

Perſons committed for treaſon or felony, and not indicted the next term, are to be bailed. 31 Car. 2. c. 2. §. 7.

Bailiff, (ballivus) From the French word bayliff, that is, præfectus provinciæ, and as the name ſo the office itſelf was anſwerable to that of France; where there are eight parliaments, which are high courts from whence there lies no appeal, and within the precincts of the ſeveral parts of that kingdom which belong to each parliament there are ſeveral provinces to which juſtice is adminiſtered by certain officers called bailiffs: and in England we have ſeveral counties in which juſtice hath been, and ſtill is in ſmall ſuits, adminiſtered to the inhabitants, by the officer whom we now call ſheriff or viſcount, (one of which names deſcends from the Saxons, the other from the Normans;) and tho' the ſheriff is not called bailiff, yet it is probable that was one of his names alſo, becauſe the county is often called balliva: as in the return of a writ, where the perſon is not arreſted, the ſheriff ſaith, Infranominatus A. B. non eſt inventus in balliva mea, &c. Kitch. Ret. Brev. fol. 285 And in the ſtatute of Magna charta, cap. 28. and 14 Ed. 3. c. 9. the word bailiff ſeems to compriſe as well ſheriffs, as bailiffs of hundreds.

As the realm is divided into counties, ſo every county is divided into hundreds; within which in ancient times the people had juſtice adminiſtered to them by the ſeveral officers of every hundred, which were the bailiffs, as thoſe officers do in France and Normandy, being chief officers of juſtice within their precincts. Cuſtum. of Normand. cap. 1. And it appears by Bracton, (lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 34.) that bailiffs of hundreds might anciently hold plea of appeal and approvers: but ſince that time the hundred courts, except certain franchiſes, are ſwallowed in the county-courts; and now the bailiff's name and office is grown into contempt, they being generally officers to ſerve writs, &c. within their liberties. Though in other reſpects, the name is ſtill in good eſteem; for the chief magiſtrates in divers towns, are called bailiffs: and ſometimes the perſons to whom the king's caſtles are committed are termed bailiffs, as the bailiff of Dover Caſtle, &c.

Of the ordinary bailiffs there are ſeveral ſorts, viz. bailiffs of liberties; ſheriffs bailiffs; bailiffs of lords of manors; bailiffs of huſbandry, &c.

Bailiffs of liberties are thoſe bailiffs who are appointed by every lord within his liberty, to execute proceſs and do ſuch offices therein, as the bailiff errant doth at large in the county; but bailiffs errant or itinerant, to go up and down the county to ſerve proceſs, are out of uſe.

Bailiffs of liberties and franchiſes, are to be ſworn to take diſtreſſes, truly impanel jurors, make returns by indenture between them and ſheriffs, &c. and ſhall be puniſhed for malicious diſtreſſes, by fine and treble damages, by ancient ſtatutes. Vide 12 Ed. 2. St. 1. c. 5. 14 Ed. 3. St. 1. c. 9. 20 Ed. 3. c. 6. 1 Ed. 3. St. 1. c. 5. 2 Ed. 3. c. 4. 4 Ed. 3. c. 9. 5 Ed. 3. c. 4. 11 H. 7. c. 15. 27 H. 8. c. 24. 3 Geo. 1. c. 15. §. 10.

The bailiff of a liberty, may make an inquiſition and extent upon an elegit: the ſheriff returned on a writ of elegit, elegit, that the party had not any lands but within the liberty of St. Edmund's Bury, and that J. S. bailiff there had the execution and return of all writs, and that he inquired and returned an extent by inquiſition, and the bailiff delivered the moiety of the lands extended to the plaintiff, who by virtue thereof entered, &c. and it was held a good return. Cro. Car. 319. Theſe bailiffs of liberties cannot arreſt a man without a warrant from the ſheriff of the county: and yet the ſheriff may not enter the liberty himſelf, at the ſuit of a ſubject, (unleſs it be on a quo minus, or capias utlagatum) without clauſe in his writ, Non omittas propter aliquam libertatem, &c. If the ſheriff, &c. enters the liberty without ſuch power, the lord of the liberty may have an action againſt him; tho' the execution of the writ may ſtand good. 1 Vent. 406. 2 Inſt. 453.

Sheriffs bailiffs are ſuch who are ſervants to ſheriffs of counties to execute writs, warrants, &c. Formerly bailiffs of hundreds were the officers to execute writs; but now it is done by ſpecial bailiffs, put in with them by the ſheriff. A bailiff of a liberty is an officer which the court takes notice of; though a ſheriff's bailiff is not an officer of the court, but only the ſheriff himſelf. Paſch. 23. Car. 1. B. R. The arreſt of the ſheriff's bailiff is the arreſt of the ſheriff; and if any reſcous be made of any perſon arreſted, it ſhall be adjudged done to the ſheriff: alſo if the bailiff permit a priſoner to eſcape, action may be brought againſt the ſheriff. Co. Lit. 61, 168. Sheriffs are anſwerable for miſdemeanors of their bailiffs; and are to have remedy over againſt them. 2 Inſt. 19. And the court of B. R. will puniſh bailiffs that miſbehave themſelves in executing proceſs, &c.

Bailiffs of lords of manors are thoſe that collect their rents, and levy their fines and amercements: but ſuch a bailiff cannot diſtrain for an amercement without a ſpecial warrant from the lord or his ſteward. Cro. Eliz. 698. He cannot give licence to commit a treſpaſs, as to cut down trees, &c. though he may licence one to go over land, being a treſpaſs to the poſſeſſion only, the profits whereof are at his diſpoſal. Cro. Jac 337, 377. A bailiff may by himſelf, or by command of another take cattle damage-feaſant upon the land. 1 Danv. Abr. 685. Yet amends cannot be tendered to the bailiff, for he may not accept of amends, nor deliver the diſtreſs when once taken. 5 Rep. 76. Theſe bailiffs may do any thing for the benefit of their maſters, and it ſhall ſtand good till the maſter diſagrees; but they can do nothing to the prejudice of their maſters. Lit. Rep. 70.

Bailiffs of courts baron ſummon thoſe courts, and execute the proceſs thereof; they preſent all pound breaches, cattle-ſtrayed, &c.

Bailiffs of huſbandry are belonging to private men of good eſtates, and have the diſpoſal of the under-ſervants, every man to his labour; they alſo fell trees, repair houſes hedges, &c. and collect the profits of the land for their lord and maſter, for which they render account yearly, &c.

Beſides theſe there are alſo bailiffs of the foreſt, of which you may read Manwood, part 1. page 113.

An Appointment of a Bailiff of a Manor.

KNow all men by theſe preſents, That I W. B. of &c. Eſq; lord of the manor of D. in the county of G. Have made, ordained, deputed and appointed, and by theſe preſents do make, ordain, depute, and appoint, J. G. of, &c. my bailiff, for me and in my name, and to my uſe, to collect and gather, and to aſk, require, demand and receive of all and every my tenants, that have held, or enjoyed, or now do, or hereafter ſhall hold or enjoy, any meſſuages, lands, or tenements, from, by, or under me, within my ſaid manor of D. all rents, and arrears of rent, heriots, and other profits, that now are, or hereafter ſhall become payable, due, owing or belonging to me, within the ſaid manor; and, in default of payment thereof, to diſtrain for the ſame from time to time, and ſuch diſtreſs or diſtreſſes to impound, detain and keep, until payment be made of the ſaid rents and profits, and the arrears thereof. And I do alſo further impower and authorize the ſaid J. G. to take care of and inſpect into all and every my meſſuages, lands and woods, within the ſaid manor, and to take an account of all defects, decays, waſtes, ſpoils, treſpaſſes, or other miſdemeanors, committed or permitted within my ſaid manor, or in any meſſuages, lands or woods there; and from time to time, to give me a juſt and true account in writing thereof: and further to act and do all other things that to the office of a bailiff of the ſaid manor belongs and appertains, during my will and pleaſure. In witneſs, &c.

Bailiwick, (balliva) Is not only taken for the county; but ſignifies generally that liberty which is exempted from the ſheriff of the county, over which the lord of the liberty appointeth a bailiff with ſuch powers within his precinct, as an under-ſheriff exerciſeth under the ſheriff of the county; ſuch as the bailiff of Weſtminſter, &c. Stat. 27 Eliz. cap. 12. Wood's Inſt. 206.

Bailment, (from bailer to deliver) Is a delivery of things to another, ſometimes to be delivered back to the bailor that delivered them, ſometimes to the uſe of the bailee to whom delivered, and ſometimes to the uſe of a third perſon. This delivery is called a bailment; which may be ſimple, or general, as to keep for my uſe; or ſpecial, or conditional, to be redelivered when money is paid, &c.

The learning under this head is well exemplified in the caſe of Coggs and Bernard, which was thus——The defendant did undertake to remove a quantity of brandy from Brook's Market to Water-Lane, and by reaſon of his neglect one of the caſks broke; and on Not guilty, a verdict was for the plaintiff; and in arreſt of judgment two exceptions were taken: 1ſt, Becauſe in the declaration he was not alledged to be a common porter. 2dly, Becauſe it was not averred that he had a reward.

My lord chief juſtice Holt in his argument on this caſe enumerated ſix ſpecies of bailment.

The firſt is a bare and naked bailment to another, to keep for the uſe of the bailor, which is called depoſitum.

2. A delivery of goods to another which are in themſelves uſeful to keep, and theſe are to be reſtored again in ſpecie, which is called accommodatum.

3. A delivery of goods for hire, which is called locatio or conductio.

4. A delivery by way of pledge, which is called vadium.

5. A delivery of goods to be carried for a reward.

6. Such a delivery as here in the caſe at bar, where the goods are delivered to do ſome act about them, as the carrying, and without a reward which is called mandatum, by Bracton, lib. 3. 100. in Engliſh, an acting by commiſſion.

As to the firſt, if a perſon out of kindneſs keeps the goods of another, he ſhall not be anſwerable if they be ſtolen, without there be a particular default in him: and 2*dly*, ſuch a bailee is not chargeable for a common neglect, for it muſt be a groſs neglect for which he ſhall be liable.

2. A lending gratis to uſe for his advantage; there the borrower is ſtrictly bound to keep it, for if he be guilty of the leaſt neglect he ſhall be anſwerable; as if I lend a horſe to go to the North of England, and he goes to the Weſt, and the horſe is ſtole, he ſhall in that caſe be chargeable; for if he had gone as I directed, the horſe, perhaps, would not have been ſtolen; this ſort of bailment is mentioned in Bracton 99. but in this caſe, if the horſe had been in the ſtable of the bailee, and ſtolen thence without his default, as perhaps the thieves might firſt have bound the bailee, and then have taken the horſe, he ſhall not be anſwerable; but if he left the ſtable door open, he ſhall for that neglect be anſwerable: Bracton ſays he ought to take the utmoſt care, but in no place ſays he ſhall be charged where no default was in him.

3. As to the third bailment, where goods are hired out for a reward, Bracton 62. ſays, the hirer is to take all imaginable care, and to reſtore them at the time, and he is bound to ſuch a care as a diligent maſter of a family uſeth to his family, which care, if he ſo uſeth, he ſhall not be bound; now the moſt diligent man is liable to be robbed, and therefore I collect, that if he be ſo careful, as according to Bracton's definition, and be robbed, he ſhall not be liable.

4. If goods be pawned, the pawnee has a ſpecial property, which is in nature of a ſecurity to compel the pawner to pay; and if the goods be the worſe for uſing, the pawnee muſt not uſe them; as clothes, &c. but if they be not the worſe for uſing, he may uſe them at his peril; as jewels pawned to a lady, and ſhe keeps them in a box, and they are ſtolen, ſhe ſhall not be charged; but if ſhe goes abroad with them to a play, and there they are ſtolen, ſhe ſhall be anſwerable. 2dly, If the pawnbroker be at charge in keeping of them, as if it were a horſe, and he gives it meat, he may uſe it for his reaſonable charge he has been at. Bracton 99. If a creditor takes a pawn, he is bound to reſtore it upon payment; but if he, notwithſtanding all his diligence, loſe it, he ſhall howſoever recover his debt, 29 Aſſ. pl. 28. for the law does not lay upon him an obligation to keep againſt all accidents; but if the money be tendred, and he after detains, and then it is loſt, he ſhall then be liable, for he is then a wrong-doer, and his keeping it after is the occaſion of its being ſtolen, and he is then anſwerable at all events.

5. Goods to be carried for a reward. 1. If you deliver them to a public or common carrier, and they are ſtolen, he muſt be liable, for the law charges him at all events; but yet the act of God, or the enemies of the Queen, may excuſe, and this is a political inſtitution by the laws of England, that people may be ſafe in their dealing; for otherwiſe carriers, that are frequently truſted with things of greateſt value, would be often tempted to confederate with thieves. 2dly, But he who has a particular private employment, though he has a reward, yet he is not bound againſt all events, as a factor or a bailiff, if they do to the beſt of their power; and that is Southcott's caſe, and he is bound no otherwiſe than as his maſter himſelf ſhould do; for it were unjuſt to charge him with what he cannot prevent.

6. To this point; here is a man not intruſted to keep, but to carry, and not to have any thing for his pains, and through his negligence miſcarries, though he be to have nothing, yet it appears there was a neglect, and for that reaſon he is chargeable; but if the goods had been miſuſed by a third perſon in the way as he carried them, and without any neglect of his, I hold that he would not then be liable, becauſe he had nothing for a reward. In this caſe the court reſolved that the plaintiff ſhould have judgment. 1 New Abr. 243. Comyn. 133. S. C. 2 Ld. Raym. 909. S. C. Vide alſo 2 Inſt. 89. 4 Rep. 83. 1 Rol. Abr. 338. Co. Lit. 89. a. 4 Co. 83. b. Doct. & Stud. 129.

A man leaves a cheſt locked up with another to be kept, and doth not make known to him what is therein; if the cheſt and goods in it are ſtolen, the perſon who received them ſhall not be charged for the ſame, for he was not truſted with them. Ibid. And what is ſaid as to ſtealing is to be underſtood of all other inevitable accidents: but it is neceſſary for a man that receives goods to be kept, to receive them in a ſpecial manner, viz. to be kept as his own, or at the peril of the owner. 1 Lill. Abr. 193, 194. And vide 1 Rol. Abr. 338. 2 Show. pl. 166.

If I deliver 100*l.* to A. to buy cattle, and he beſtows 50*l.* of it in cattle, and I bring an action of debt for all, I ſhall be barred in that action for the money beſtowed and charges, &c. but for the reſt I ſhall recover. Hob. 207.

If one deliver his goods to another perſon, to deliver over to a ſtranger; the deliverer may countermand his power, and require the goods again; and if the bailee refuſe to deliver them, he may have an action of account for them. Co. Litt. 286.

If A. delivers goods to B. to be delivered over to C. C. hath the property, and C. hath the action againſt B. for B. undertakes for the ſafe delivery to C. and hath no property or intereſt but in order to that purpoſe. 1 Rol. Abr. 606.

But if the bailment were not on valuable conſideration, the delivery is countermandable; and in that caſe, if A. the bailor bring trover, he reduces the property again in himſelf, for the action amounts to a countermand; but if the delivery was on a valuable conſideration, then A. cannot have trover, becauſe the property is altered, and in trover the property muſt be proved in the plaintiff. 1 Bulſt. 68.

If goods be bailed to bail over on a conſideration precedent, on his part, to whom they ought to be bailed, the bailor cannot countermand it; otherwiſe where it is voluntary; and without conſideration. But where it is in conſideration of a debt, it is not countermandable; otherwiſe if it be to ſatisfy the debt of another; per Egerton. 1 Leon. 30. pl. 36.

And where a man delivers goods to another to be redelivered to the deliverer at ſuch a day, and before the bailee doth ſell the goods in market overt; the bailor may at the day ſeize and take his goods, for the property is not altered. Godb. 160.

If A. borrows a horſe to ride to Dover, and he rides out of his way, and the owner of the horſe meets him, he cannot take the horſe from him; for A. has a ſpecial property in the horſe till the journey is determined; and being in lawful poſſeſſion of the horſe, the owner cannot violently ſeize and take it away, for the continuance of all property is to be taken from the form of the original bargain, which in this caſe was limited till the appointed journey was finiſhed. Yelv. 172.

But if A. borrows a horſe to go to Dover, and goes to other places, the owner may have an action on the caſe againſt him for exceeding the purpoſes of the loan; for ſo far it is a ſecret and fallacious abuſe of his property; but no general action of treſpaſs, becauſe it is not an open and violent invaſion of it. 1 Rol. Rep. 128.

As to borrowing a thing periſhable, as corn, wine, or money, or the like, a man muſt, from the nature of the thing, have an abſolute property in them; otherwiſe it could not ſupply the uſes for which it was lent, and therefore he is obliged to return ſomething of the ſame ſort, the ſame in quantity and quality with what is borrowed. Dr. & Stud. 129.

If one delivers a ring to another to keep, and he breaks and converts the ſame to his own uſe; or if I deliver my ſheep to another to be kept, and he ſuffers them to be drowned by his negligence; or if the bailee of a horſe, or goods, &c. kill or ſpoil them, in theſe caſes action will lie. 5 Rep. 13. 15 E. 4. 20. b. 12 E. 4, 13.

If a man delivers goods to another, the bailee ſhall have a general action of treſpaſs againſt a ſtranger, becauſe he is anſwerable over to the bailor; for a man ought not to be charged with an injury to another, without being able to retire to the original cauſe of that injury, and in amends there to do himſelf right. 13 Co. 69. 14 Hen. 4, 28. 25 H. 7. 14.

If a man bail goods to one, to bail over to another, and the bailee, contrary to the truſt in him, doth not deliver but convert them to his own uſe; he ſhall be chargeable both to the bailor, and him to whom the goods ought to have been bailed. 1 Bulſt 68, 69.

For if a ſheriff chuſe one to be bailiff of a hundred; or if the lord of a liberty elect one to be bailiff of the liberty, who hath not land ſufficient in the county to anſwer the king and his people, according to the ſtatute of Weſtmin. 2. then this writ ſhall be ſent to the ſheriff to diſcharge ſuch bailiff, and chuſe another in his place.

Balkers, Are derived from the word balk, becauſe they ſtand higher, as it were on a balk or ridge of ground, to give notice of ſomething to others. Shep. Epitom. vide Conders.

Ballance of Trade, A computation of the value of all commodities which we buy from foreigners, and on the other ſide the value of our own native products, which we export into neighbouring kingdoms; and the difference or exceſs between the one ſide and the other of ſuch account or computation is called the ballance of trade: which exceſs can be anſwered by us in nothing but our coin or bullion. The overplus of goods brought from our colonies in America, and other foreign parts, with which we ſupply our neighbours, is computed in time of peace at leaſt to ballance our trade.

Ballare, Signifies ſcopus expurgare. It is mentioned in Fleta lib. 2. cap. 87.

Ballaſt, Is gravel or ſand to poiſe ſhips, and make them go upright: and ſhips and veſſels taking in ballaſt in the river Thames, are to pay ſo much a tun to Trinity houſe Deptford; who ſhall employ ballaſtmen, and regulate them, and their lighters to be marked, &c. on pain of 10*l.* Stat. 6 Geo. 2. c. 29.

Ballium, A ſort of fortreſs or bulwark——Eam civitatem cum exteriori ballio caſtri bellatorum ſuorum inſultibus occupavit. Matt. Weſtm. Anno 1265.

Ban, or bans, (from the Brit. ban, i. e. clamor) Is a proclamation, or public notice; any public ſummons or edict, whereby a thing is commanded or forbidden. It is a word ordinary among the feudiſts; and there is both bannus and bannum which ſignify two ſeveral things. This word bans we uſe here in England, eſpecially in publiſhing matrimonial contracts, which is done in the church before marriage, to the end that if any man can ſpeak againſt the intention of the parties, either in reſpect of kindred, precontract, or for other juſt cauſe, they may take their exception in time, before the marriage is conſummated: and in the canon law, Bannæ ſunt proclamationes ſponſi & ſponſæ in eccleſiis fieri ſolitæ. But there may be a faculty or licence for the marriage, and then this ceremony is omitted; and miniſters are not to celebrate matrimony between any perſons without a licence, except the bans have been firſt publiſhed three ſeveral times; upon pain of ſuſpenſion, &c. Can. 62. See the Stat. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 35. See Marriage and Stat. 26. Geo. 2. c. 33.

Bancale, A covering of eaſe and ornament for a bench, or other ſeat; mentioned in the Monaſticon, Tom. 1. pag. 222.

Bane, (from the Sax. bana, a murderer) Signifies deſtruction or overthrow: as, I will be the bane of ſuch a man, is a common ſaying; ſo when a perſon receives a mortal injury by any thing, we ſay it was his bane: and he who is the cauſe of another man's death, is ſaid to be le bane, i. e. a malefactor. Bract. lib. 2. tract. 8. cap. 1.

Baneret, (banerettus, miles vexilarius) Sir Tho. Smith, in his Repub. Angl. cap. 18. ſays, is a knight made in the field, with the ceremony of cutting off the point of his ſtandard, and making it as it were a banner, and accounted ſo honourable that they are allowed to diſplay their arms in the king's army as barons do, and may bear arms with ſupporters. Cambden, in his Brittan. fol. 109. hath theſe words, baneretti, cum vaſſalorum nomen jam deſierat, a baronibus ſecundi erant; quibus inditum nomen a vexillo; conceſſum illis erat militaris virtutis ergo, quadrato vexillo (perinde ac barones) uti, unde & equites vexillarii a nonnullis vocantur, &c. It is ſaid that they were anciently called by ſummons to parliament: and that they are next to the barons in dignity, appears by the ſtatute 14 R. 2. c. 11. and 5 R. 2. Stat. 2. cap. 4. William de la Pole was created baneret by K. Edward the Third, by letters patent, Anno Regni ſui 13. And thoſe banerets, who are created ſub vexillis regiis, in exercitu regali, in aperto bello, & ipſo rege perſonaliter præſente, explicatis, take place of all Baronets; as we may learn by the letters patent for creation of Baronets. 4 Inſt. 6. Some maintain that knights banerets ought not to be made in a civil war: but Hen. 7. made divers banerets upon the Corniſh commotion, in the year 1495. See Selden's Titles of Honours, f. 799.

Baniſhment, (Fr. banniſſement) Exilium, abjuratio, is a forſaking or quitting of the realm; and a kind of civil death, inflicted on an offender: there are two kinds of it, one voluntary and upon oath, called abjuration; and the other upon compulſion for ſome offence. Staundf. Pl. Cr. f. 117. By Magna charta, none ſhall be outlawed or baniſhed his country, but by lawful judgment of his peers, or according to the law of the land. 9 H. 3. c. 29 And by the common law no perſon ſhall be baniſhed, but by the authority of parliament; or in caſe of abjuration for felony, &c. but this is taken away by ſtatute, 3 Inſt. 115. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 28. See Abjuration.

Bank, (Lat. bancus, Fr. banque) In our Common law, is uſually taken for a ſeat or bench of judgment; as Bank le Roy, the King's Bench, Bank le Common Pleas, the Bench of Common Pleas, or the Common Bench; called alſo in Latin Bancus Regis, and Bancus Communium Placitorum. Cromp. Juſt. 67, 91. Jus Banci, or the privilege of the Bench, was anciently allowed only to the king's judges, qui ſummam adminiſtrant juſtitiam, for inferior courts were not allowed that privilege.

There are, in each of the terms, ſtated days, called days in bank, dies in banco, that is, days of appearance in the court of Common Pleas. They are generally at the diſtance of about a week from each other, and regulated by ſome feſtival of the church. On ſome one of theſe days in bank all original writs muſt be made returnable; and therefore they are generally called the returns of that term. Vide Black. Com. 3 V. 277.

The adjournment day, or firſt return day after the trial of a cauſe, and whereon the diſtringas juratores is returnable, is called a day in bank, until four days after which, judgment cannot be ſigned. The uſe of which four days is, that the party, againſt whom judgment is given, may have an opportunity of moving in arreſt of judgment, if he thinks proper.

There is another ſort of bank, which ſignifies a place where a great ſum of money is to let out to uſe, returned by exchange, or otherwiſe diſpoſed of to profit: and a Bank of England managed by a governor and directors, eſtabliſhed by parliament, with funds for maintaining thereof, appropriated to ſuch perſons as were ſubſcribers; and the capital ſtock, which is enlarged by divers ſtatutes, is exempted from taxes, accounted a perſonal eſtate aſſignable over, not ſubject to forſeiture; and the company make dividends of the profits half-yearly, &c. The funds are redeemable by the parliament, on paying the money borrowed: and the Company of the Bank is to continue a corporation, and enjoy annuities till redeemed, &c. During the continuance of the Bank, no body politick, &c. other than the Company, ſhall borrow any ſums on bills payable at demand; and forging or altering Bank-notes, or tendering ſuch forged notes in payment, demanding to have them exchanged for money, &c. is felony. And officers or ſervants of the Company, that imbezil any Bank-note, &c. wherewith they are intruſted, being duly convicted, ſhall ſuffer death as felons. Vide the ſtatutes 5 & 6 and 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 20. and 7 Annæ, &c. See alſo 1 Geo. 1. c. 12. and 11 Geo. 1. c. 9. and Perſons not authoriſed by the Bank, making or uſing moulds, for the marking of paper, with the words Bank of England, viſible in the ſubſtance, or having ſuch moulds in their poſſeſſion, are guilty of felony without benefit of clergy. 13 Geo. 3. c. 79. §. 1.

Penalty of making and iſſuing notes and bills engraved to reſemble thoſe of the Bank, or having the ſum expreſſed in white characters on a black ground, impriſonment, for any ſpace, not exceeding ſix months. Id. §. 2.

But innocent perſons poſſeſſed of ſuch notes carrying them for payment, not affected. Id. §. 3.

Vide the ſtatute at large. See Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 4. for enabling the Bank of England to hold general courts and courts of directors in the manner therein mentioned.

Bankers, The moneyed goldſmiths firſt got the name of bankers in the reign of K. Charles the Second, as by the words of an act of parliament, anno 22 & 23 Car. 2. appears,——Whereas ſeveral perſons, being goldſmiths, and others, by taking up or borrowing great ſums of money, and lending out the ſame again for extraordinary hire and profit, have gained and acquired to themſelves the reputation and name of bankers, &c. thus runs the ſtatute: but bankers of late are thoſe goldſmiths and private perſons in whoſe hands money is depoſited and lodged for ſafety, to be drawn out again as the owners have occaſion for it.

Bankrupt, (bancus ruptus) Is ſo called, becauſe when the bank or ſtock is broken or exhauſted, the owner is ſaid to be a bankrupt. And this word bankrupt is derived from the Fr. banqueroute, which ſignifies a breaking or failing in the world: banque in French is as much as menſa in Latin, and route is the ſame as veſtigium; and this term is ſaid to be taken originally from the Roman menſarii, which were ſet in publick places, and when a tradeſman ſlipped away, with an intention to deceive his creditors, he left only ſome veſtigia or ſigns of his table or ſhop behind him. Cowel. But a bankrupt with us ſignifieth generally either man or woman, that living by buying and ſelling hath gotten other mens goods into his or her hands, and hideth himſelf in places unknown, or in his own houſe, in order to deceive and defraud his creditors. 4 Inſt. 277.

For the better underſtanding of this head, it will be proper to conſider,

I. Who may be a bankrupt, and by what acts a perſon may become ſo.
II. Who may take out a commiſſion of bankrupt, and of the power and duty of commiſſioners.
III. Of the chuſing of aſſignees, and of their intereſt in the bankrupt's eſtate; with the manner in which creditors are to prove their debts.
IV. Of the diſtribution of the bankrupt's eſtate.
V. Of the duty, privilege, diſcharge, and certificate of the bankrupt.

I. By Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. A bankrupt is thus deſcribed, viz. All and every perſon who ſhall uſe the trade of merchandiſe by way of bargaining, exchange, bartering, or otherwiſe in groſs, or by ſeeking his or her living by buying and ſelling, who ſhall depart his houſe, or abſent himſelf, or ſuffer himſelf to be arreſted for any debt or other thing not grown due, for money delivered, wares ſold, or other good conſideration; or ſhall ſuffer himſelf to be outlawed, or go to priſon, or fraudulently procure himſelf to be arreſted, or his money or goods attached; or make any fraudulent conveyance of his lands, goods, or chattels, whereby his creditors may be defeated in the recovery of their juſt debts; or being arreſted for debt ſhall lie in priſon ſix months, or more, upon ſuch arreſt or detention, ſhall be adjudged a bankrupt.

The 21 Jac. 1. c. 19. hath other deſcriptions of a bankrupt; but they are all declared void by a late ſtatute. It is not buying and ſelling of land, but of perſonal things, that will make a man liable to be a bankrupt; nor is it buying only, or ſelling only, but both buying and ſelling. Every one that gets his living by buying and ſelling in trade and merchandiſe, may come under the denomination of a bankrupt, upon his failing therein. But adventurers in the Eaſt-India company, members of the Bank of England, of the South-Sea company, and other ſocieties, ſhall not be adjudged bankrupts, in reſpect of their ſtock, &c. Alſo no perſon concerned as receiver general of taxes, &c. ſhall be a bankrupt: and farmers, graziers, &c. are excepted out of the ſtatutes; as buying and ſelling is not their only or principal means of livelihood. 14 Car. 2. c. 24. But vide the ſtatutes 4 Ann. c. 17. 5 Ann. c. 22. 3 Geo. 1. c. 12. 5 Geo. 1. c. 24. 10 Ann. c. 15. 7 Geo. 1. c. 31. 3 Geo. 2. c. 29. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. 24 Geo. 2. c. 57. 28 Geo. 2. c. 13. ſect. 22. & 1 Geo. 3. c. 17. §. 30.

An inn-keeper is not within the ſtatutes, for though he buys proviſions to be ſpent in his houſe, yet he doth not properly ſell it, but utters it to his gueſts at no certain price. Cro. Car. 395. A ſhoe-maker hath been adjudged within the ſtatutes, as he lives by his credit in buying leather, and ſelling it again in ſhoes, &c. And carpenters in London, weavers, dyers, tanners, bakers, brewers, vintners, &c. may be bankrupts: but handicraftmen, huſbandmen, labourers, &c. are not within the ſtatutes. Cro. Car. 21. Cro. Jac. 585. 3 Mod. 330.

It hath lately been determined in the court of King's Bench, that a victualler, following the buſineſs of a victualler only, is not within the bankrupt laws. In the caſe of Perkin v. Proctor and Green, vide Wilſon Rep. par. 2. fo. 382, &c A feme ſole merchant in London may be a bankrupt. And in Crooke and Pigeon.

If a merchant gives over his trade, and ſome years after becomes inſolvent for money he owed while a merchant, he is a bankrupt: but if it be for new debts, or old debts continued on new ſecurity, it is otherwiſe. 1 Vent. 5, 29.

By Stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 39. Perſons dealing as bankers, brokers, and factors, being frequently intruſted with large ſums of money, and with goods and effects of very great value belonging to other perſons, are declared to be ſubject to all the ſtatutes made concerning bankrupts.

By Stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 40. No driver of cattle, or any receiver general of taxes, ſhall be deemed a bankrupt.

An ironmonger, who buys rod iron, or bar iron, and cauſes it to be worked up into wares, may be a bankrupt. Good. 11. Stone 120.

A ſaleſman may be a bankrupt. Good. 12.

A man born in England goes over to Ireland, and there trades and buys goods in England, and ſells them in Ireland, and being indebted in England becomes bankrupt, adjudged a bankrupt in England. Raym. 375. A gentleman of the Temple went to Liſbon, and traded to England and broke; it was adjudged, he was a bankrupt by reaſon of his trading hither and back again, which gained him credit here, though he was out of the realm. Salk. 110.

By 4 Geo. 3. c. 33. Members of parliament are made ſubject to bankrupt laws; but not ſubject to arreſt, except in caſes made felony by thoſe laws.

The ſtatutes relating to bankrupts have been adjudged to extend to phyſicians, when they have been proved to have traded or merchandized, or to have bought and ſold goods, effects, and merchandizes, and accordingly on the 29th of October 1726, a commiſſion of bankruptcy was taken out againſt Doctor John Lane, a phyſician in Briſtol, and he was found a bankrupt, on his being proved a dealer in copper and lead. Dav. 9. And every one who buys and ſells goods and chattels, &c. and thereby endeavours to get a living, is, in reſpect of ſuch trading, ſubject to the bankrupt laws, any other profeſſion that they follow being out of the queſtion.

Private gentlemen may be bankrupts, though never bred up to trade, but have only inveſted their money in it, in order to make better intereſt thereof, notwithſtanding they have never acted or appeared in the trade, or been known to any perſons trading with the perſon to whom they ſo lent the money, or been perſonally concerned in the buying and ſelling any goods whatſoever. See Dav. 9. And why not? For, if intitled to the profits, they ought to be ſubject to all the conſequences of trading.

And ſeveral caſes have of late years been tried before Lord Mansfield, particularly in London, where ſuch perſons have been adjudged partners, though under the moſt ſubtle contracts, and his determination acquieſced in by by the moſt able lawyers. Conſequently, ſuch perſons would be liable to the bankrupt laws.

A pawnbroker, merely as ſuch, is not liable to the ſtatutes relating to bankrupts, becauſe he does not buy nor ſell for himſelf, and is only a common lender of money at intereſt, and the pledges which he ſells are for the benefit of the borrower; but if he is in any other way a trader, he is then liable to become a bankrupt: for if a man hath ſeveral trades, and one is within, but another not within the ſtatutes, he ſhall nevertheleſs be adjudged a trader, ſo as to make him a bankrupt.

With reſpect to the acts by which a man may become a bankrupt, they may be collected from the foregoing and following ſtatutes, and are briefly thus:

1. To depart the realm.

2. To begin to keep his houſe privately, to abſent himſelf from and avoid his creditors.

3. To ſuffer himſelf willingly to be arreſted for any debt, or other thing, not grown due, for money delivered, wares ſold, or any other juſt or lawful cauſe, or good conſideration or purpoſe.

4. To ſuffer himſelf to be outlawed.

5. To yield himſelf to priſon.

6. To depart from his dwelling-houſe, to the intent or purpoſe to defraud or hinder a juſt creditor or creditors of his or their juſt debt or duty. Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 7. 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. ſect. 2.

7. Willingly or fraudulently to procure himſelf to be arreſted, or his goods, money, or chattels, to be attached or ſequeſtered.

8. To make any fraudulent grant or conveyance of his lands, tenements, goods, or chattels, to the intent, or whereby his creditors ſhall and may be defeated or delayed for the recovery of their juſt debts. 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. ſect. 2. And, if the editor miſtakes not, a warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment, on which judgment has been entered, and execution levied on all, or the greateſt part of the debtor's eſtate and effects, thereby giving an unjuſt preference to one creditor, in prejudice to all the reſt, has been adjudged ſuch a fraudulent conveyance, and, conſequently, an act of bankruptcy.

9. Being arreſted for debt, to lie in priſon two months, after his arreſt, upon that or any other arreſt, or detention for debt.

10. To obtain privilege other than that of parliament.

11. Being arreſted for 100 l. or more, to eſcape out of priſon.

12. To prefer to any court any petition or bill againſt any of the creditors, thereby endeavouring to inforce them to accept leſs than their juſt debts, or to procure time, or longer days of payment, than was given at the time of their original contracts. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 19. ſect. 2.

13. For a bankrupt to pay, ſatisfy, or ſecure the petitioning creditor his debt. Stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 24. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 478, &c.

By 4 Geo. 3. c. 33. Neglecting to make ſatisfaction for any juſt debt to the amount of 100 l. within two months after ſervice of legal proceſs, for ſuch debt, upon any trader having privilege of parliament, is an act of bankruptcy.

If a merchant departs the realm with the conſent of his creditors, he does not thereby commit an act of bankruptcy. Dav. 30.

But if a merchant departs the realm to merchandize, and becomes indebted, and to avoid arreſts, defers his return; this is tantamount to a departing of the realm. Stone 123.

As to keeping of the houſe, &c. if a man keeps his houſe for a long time, this does not immediately make him a bankrupt; but if he conceals himſelf within his houſe but for a day or an hour to delay or defraud his creditors, he is a bankrupt. Palm. 325.

If a man denies himſelf to a creditor wilfully, knowing he comes for money, and with an intent to defraud and delay him of his debt, ſuch denials are taken to be acts of bankruptcy; and ſeveral perſons have been found bankrupts on ſuch accounts.

But in a petition which came on before the late Lord Chancellor Hardwicke, on the 6th of Auguſt 1743, it was ſaid, that the being denied to a creditor was only an evidence of an act of bankruptcy; but that the abſconding was the material part of it. Dav. 92, 93.

A merchant trader indebted, keeps in another man's houſe, or on ſhipboard, adjudged a keeping in his houſe: but a withdrawing muſt be on purpoſe to defraud creditors; and if a man goes ſometimes at large, ſo as he may be met with one time or other, it will excuſe him. But this muſt be ſuch a going at large, as that it is evident he did not intend to avoid his creditors, and muſt be a going abroad in the day time, at uſual times of buſineſs, and in the common and uſual way.

Keeping houſe for fear of an attachment in Chancery, is no act of bankruptcy. Stone 123.

So if a man abſents himſelf for felony, it is not an act of bankruptcy, it not being to defraud the creditor of his juſt debt or duty due to him. Dav. 91.

As to an outlawry, if a jury on a verdict find a man to be outlawed, it muſt be proved to be done in fraudem creditorum, or to defraud his creditors. Keb. 11. 2 Sid. 69, 114, 176.

A man may be ſo unfortunate as to be outlawed, and know nothing at all of the matter, and may afterwards come and procure the outlawry to be reverſed; and if ſo, it is not an act of bankruptcy; and this was determined in the caſe of Radford v. Bildworth, or Bludworth. 1 Danv. 688 p. 3.

If an outlawry be reverſed for want of proclamations, all done in the mean time by the commiſſioners, is void; but if it were reverſed for error, contrary. Stone 124. Good. 23.

As to lying in priſon upon an arreſt, it is ſaid, that lying in priſon makes a man a bankrupt from the firſt arreſt, that is, from the time of the firſt arreſt upon which he lies in priſon, and not where he puts in ſufficient bail, for that might be infinitely prejudicial and miſchievous, and no man could ever ſafely pay or receive from a tradeſman. Salk. 109. adjudged in B. R. and affirmed in error. Came v. Coleman.

But it is held by Holt C. J. that if a defendant renders in diſcharge of his bail, and lies in priſon two months, he is a bankrupt from the firſt arreſt, not from the render only. Salk. 110. 2 Show. 519.

Yet in order to make it a compleat act of bankruptcy, his lying in priſon two months without putting in bail ought to be proved, otherwiſe a third perſon, who may be an innocent man, may be affected thereby; and the intention or deſire of any man to be a bankrupt, or to be unjuſt, ought not to prejudice ſuch innocent perſon, unleſs an eſſential fact, which creates an act of bankruptcy, is proved againſt the perſon ſo intending to be a bankrupt. Dav. 94.

With regard to the bankrupt's paying or ſecuring the debt of the petitioning creditor,

The doing this is declared, ſhall be taken to be ſuch an act of bankruptcy, that on good proof ſuch commiſſion ſhall be ſuperſeded, and the Lord Chancellor, &c. may, on any creditor's petitioning, award a new commiſſion.

And ſuch perſon, ſo taking or receiving ſuch goods, or ſatisfaction, ſhall loſe his whole debt, and the money received, and ſhall pay the ſame to ſuch perſons as the commiſſioners ſhall appoint, in truſt for the bankrupt's creditors in proportion. See 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 24.

But if a banker, who hath many peoples money in his hands, refuſes payment, yet keeps his ſhop open, and as often as he is arreſted gives bail; by this means he may give preference of payment to his friends; and if when he hath done he runs away, ſuch payment ſhall ſtand againſt a commiſſion of bankruptcy. Farreſt. Rep. 139. If after a plain act of bankruptcy, one goes abroad and is a great dealer, yet this will not purge the firſt act of bank- ruptcy; though if he pays off or compounds with his creditors, he is become a new man. Trin. 2 Ann. 1 Salk. 110. The commiſſioners of bankrupts have the power to adjudge a man a bankrupt; yet in an action the jury muſt find whether he was ſo, or not. 1 Danv. 687. He that is a bankrupt to one creditor, is accounted in law a bankrupt to all the creditors; and being once adjudged ſo, is always ſo to the reſt of the creditors. 22 Car. 2. B. R.

Where there are two partners in trade, and one breaks, you ſhall not charge the other with the whole; but the eſtate belonging to the joint trade ought to be divided, &c. Mod. Rep. 45. And if one of them becomes a bankrupt, it will not affect his companion. 3 Salk. 61. Acts diſcharging bankrupts ſhall not diſcharge any partner in trade, or one jointly bound with the bankrupt. 1 Danv. Abr. 686. Diſcharge of a bankrupt, is not to diſcharge his partner, or ſurety. 10 Ann. c. 15. §. 3.

II. As to the taking out the commiſſion,

The commiſſion of bankrupt, which arms the commiſſioners with all the power which they are to exerciſe over the bankrupt and his eſtate, is to be granted by the Lord Chancellor, Lord Keeper, or Commiſſioners of the Great Seal, on the application of creditors only; for if twenty ſwear that ſuch a one is a bankrupt, yet a commiſſion cannot be awarded without a petition from the creditors for that purpoſe; and this is a matter not diſcretionary, but to be granted de jure. 1 New Abr. 252.

By 34 H. 8. cap. 4. "The Lord Chancellor, Treaſurer, &c. were to take order with the bankrupt's lands and goods for payment of his debts."

And by 13 Eliz. cap. 7. "The Lord Chancellor or Keeper, upon complaint in writing, ſhall have power, by commiſſion under the Great Seal, to appoint honeſt and diſcreet perſons, who, or the moſt of them, may take ſuch order with the body, &c." By 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. The commiſſion does not abate by the bankrupt's death. And

By 5 Geo. 2. cap. 30. ſect. 44. it is enacted, "That no commiſſion of bankrupt ſhall abate by the death of the king; and where, by the death of the commiſſioners or otherwiſe, it becomes neceſſary to renew the commiſſion, no more than half fees are payable thereupon."

No commiſſion of bankrupt ſhall be granted, unleſs the debt of one creditor amount to 100*l.* or of two creditors to 150*l.* or of three or more to 200*l.* 5 Geo. 2. c. 30.

In order to the taking out a commiſſion of bankrupt, it is uſual firſt for a creditor to make affidavit before a Maſter in Chancery, that the party is indebted in a ſum ſufficient to make him a bankrupt; then to petition the Lord Chancellor for a commiſſion; give bond to prove the perſon a bankrupt, &c. within ſome or one of the ſtatutes; and next follows the commiſſion, directed to five commiſſioners, (whereof two are to be eſquires of the quorum.)

By the 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 22. it is enacted, "That perſons who have bills, bonds, promiſſory notes, or other perſonal ſecurity for their money, payable at a future day, who by the 7 Geo. 1. cap. 31. are enabled to come in as creditors, and allowed to diſcount ſuch debts, allowing 5*l. per cent.* &c. may (though diſabled by the ſtatute) petition for, or join with others in petitioning for any commiſſion of bankruptcy."

By the 13 Eliz. c. 7. the commiſſioners have power over the whole eſtate, freehold and copyhold, goods, debts, chattels, and effects of the bankrupt, and may ſell his land.

They have no eſtate, and have only power to ſell; and to paſs the eſtate there muſt not only be a deed indented, but the ſame muſt be inrolled alſo. 2 Show. 156. i. e. as to the real eſtate.

They may break open houſes. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 19. ſect. 8.

But they cannot break open a houſe to ſearch for the bankrupt's goods, unleſs the bankrupt's goods be in the houſe of the bankrupt. 2 Show. 247.

Bankrupts are to be apprehended, on a commiſſion iſſued and certified, by virtue of a juſtice's warrant; and refuſing to be examined, the commiſſioners may commit them. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30.

Alſo commiſſioners may examine bankrupt's wife touching his eſtate. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 19. ſect. 6.

But ſhe cannot be examined againſt her huſband touching his bankruptcy, or whether he had committed any act of bankruptcy, or as to how and when he became a bankrupt; and if they commit her, and though the warrant of commitment mention to be, as well for refuſing to diſcover the goods, &c. of the bankrupt as the time and manner of his bankruptcy, yet the commitment will be held illegal, and the wife ordered to be diſcharged. 1 Will. Rep. 610, 611.

By 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. The commiſſioners may commit ſuch perſons as have the bankrupt's goods, or are indebted to him; who refuſe to come before them, or to be ſworn when preſent.

They may likewiſe examine and commit any other perſon, not anſwering interrogatories. Stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 16.

A perſon once examined by the commiſſioners of bankrupts cannot be examined again without a new commiſſion. 2 Show. 102.

Equity will not compel a man to diſcover what goods he really bought of a bankrupt after the bankruptcy, and before the commiſſion ſued out, where the party has no notice of the bankruptcy. 1 Vern. 27.

Though ſuch perſons have been examined by the commiſſioners, yet it is ſaid a bill for a diſcovery of the ſame matters may be filed againſt them in Chancery. 2 Chan. Ca. 73.

With reſpect to the duty of the commiſſioners, they are by 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. to take an oath, before they proceed, for the due execution of their truſt; and by the ſame ſtatute,

The commiſſioners are not to eat, &c. at bankrupt's or creditors expence, or to take more than 20*s.* each commiſſioner for each meeting.

The commiſſioners are to appoint three meetings within forty-two days, but the Lord Chancellor may enlarge the time.

They are to give notice of their meeting in the Gazette, and to admit creditors to prove their debts. Same ſtatute.

The farther particulars of their duty may be collected by attending to the ſubſequent diviſions:

III. As to the maner of chuſing aſſignees, and their intereſt, &c.

It is enacted by 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 26. That commiſſioners are to aſſign the bankrupt's effects to ſuch perſons as ſhall be choſen by a major part of the creditors; who (by ſect. 35. with conſent of creditors) may compound with debtors, &c. And by the ſame ſtatute, None are to vote for the choice of aſſignees, whoſe debt doth not amount to 10*l.* Notice ſhall be given to creditors to meet and chuſe aſſignees, and prove debts, &c. which they may do without paying contribution.

New aſſignees may be choſen by the creditors; and the old ones ſhall deliver up effects to them, under the penalty of 200*l.* And after the end of four months and within twelve months are to account, and then a dividend ſhall be made; and there may be a ſecond dividend in eighteen months, if the eſtate be not wholly divided on the firſt, which ſhall be final, unleſs any law-ſuit is depending, or the effects are not diſpoſed of, &c.

Aſſignees or commiſſioners may pay off mortgages on the bankrupt's eſtate: likewiſe aſſignees of the commiſſioners ſhall have the benefit of covenants of re-entry, &c. on lands. 2 Rep. 25.

All the goods and chattels of the bankrupt, which he was poſſeſſed of at the time of his becoming bankrupt, may be ſold by the commiſſioners; and notwithſtanding the bankrupt ſell them in market overt. Sale of goods by a bankrupt, after an act of bankruptcy, may be avoided by the commiſſioners of bankrupt; and they may in this caſe bring trover for the goods, or debt, or aſſumpſit for the value, &c. 3 Salk. 60.

By 19 Geo. 2. c. 32. Payments made by a bankrupt in the way of his trade without notice, are declared valid.

Sale of goods by a bankrupt after an act of bankruptcy is not merely void, the contract is good between the parties; but it may be avoided by the commiſſioners or aſſignees at pleaſure; therefore they may either bring trover for the goods, as ſuppoſing the contract may be void, or may bring debt or aſſumpſit for the value, which affirms the contract. 3 Salk. 59. pl. 2.

The aſſignee of a bankrupt exhibits his bill againſt the defendant, to diſcover goods of the bankrupt, that came to his hands after the bankruptcy. The defendant, by way of plea, ſets forth that he had no goods of the bankrupt's, or that ever were his, but what he bought for full and valuable conſideration, and bona fide; and that, at the time of the ſale and payment of his money, he had no notice either of the commiſſion, or of any act of bankruptcy committed by the bankrupt. On long debates, the plea was allowed by the Lord North, and to take what remedy they could before the commiſſioners, or at law. Hutchins, counſel for the defendant, cited a former precedent, but it was not produced. 2 Chan. Ca. 135.

A. purcaſes of a man, who had committed an act of bankruptcy, but without notice thereof: afterwards a commiſſion is taken out, and there being a term ſtanding out in truſtees, the aſſignee brings a bill againſt them and the purchaſer, to have the term aſſigned to him; but bill diſmiſſed. 2 Vern 599.

Offices of inheritance may be ſold; but not offices of truſt, annexed to the perſon for life. If a bankrupt commits felony, it is ſaid his land ſhall not eſcheat, but the commiſſioners may ſell it; and his creditors ſhall have his goods, not the King. Stone 126, 130.

Commiſſioners may aſſign debts, &c. to the creditors, who may proceed to execution, though the bankrupt dies; perſons ſuſpected to detain any of the bankrupt's goods or eſtate may be arreſted, and ſtill refuſing to deliver them ſhall be committed. Sed quære? The uſual method is to bring an action of trover.

Freehold and copyhold lands, goods and debts may be aſſigned, tho' transferred into other mens names, except bona fide, and on valuable conſideration. Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 7. ſect. 7. 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. ſect. 5.

Aſſignees ſhall compound with the lord for fine of copyhold lands, and be admitted. Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 7. ſect. 3.

The commiſſioners may ſell a copyhold intailed, which by cuſtom may be intailed and cut off; otherwiſe, if there be no ſuch cuſtom. Stone 127. Billing. 148.

Aſſignees may ſue actions in their own names for the debts due to the bankrupt, for they are transferred by act of parliament, but yet it is not a debt upon record; but as in debt upon contract defendant might have waged his law againſt the bankrupt, ſo he may againſt the aſſignees. Geo. Jac. 105.

But if the commiſſion be not taken out within ſix years, directed by law for ſuing of debts, and the aſſignment made within that time, a defendant in an action may plead the ſtatute of limitations: if the commiſſion be taken out in ſix years, the ſtatute preſerves the debt, being to relieve the creditors againſt fraud, &c. 1 Saund. 37.

Notice of the aſſignment of the debt is not neceſſary to be given to the debtor, before action brought by the aſſignees for the debt. Lutw. 456.

When an action is brought by an aſſignee under a commiſſion of bankrupt, it need not be ſet forth in the declaration how he became aſſignee. Burnard. K. B. 309. and vide Carth. 29.

In caſe of bankruptcy trover will lie generally; per cur'. 3 Keb. 294. pl. 22.

Though aſſignees may as aboveſaid bring actions at law in their own names, yet no bill in equity ſhall be commenced by any aſſignee or aſſignees, without the conſent of the major part in value of the creditors of ſuch bankrupt, who ſhall be preſent at a meeting of the creditors, purſuant to notice to be given in the London Gazette for that purpoſe. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 36.

They may alſo, with the like conſent of creditors, ſubmit diſputes to arbitration, and compound with debtors to the bankrupt's eſtate. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30, ſec. 33, 34.

Aſſignees likewiſe, or the major part of the commiſſioners, may ſettle open, unbalanced and mutual accounts; and what ſhall appear on the balance before the perſon became bankrupt, and no more, ſhall be claimed or paid on either ſide. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 28.

The aſſignees are to keep fair accounts in their books, of all monies received and paid, and to make oath or affirmation before the commiſſioners of the truth of ſuch accounts. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 33.

Aſſignees may be removable on the petition of creditors to the Lord Chancellor, &c. and if a new aſſignment is made, the eſtate ſhall be veſted in ſuch new aſſignees; and the commiſſioners ſhall give notice in the two London Gazettes that ſhall immediately follow the removal of ſuch aſſignees, and the appointment of the new ones, for the debtors to the bankrupts not to pay any money to the old aſſignees. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 31.

If an aſſignee is guilty of a breach of truſt, he will be liable to pay intereſt and coſts.

If one aſſignee dies, the truſt goes to the ſurvivor, and the executors of the deceaſed aſſignee muſt account with the ſurvivor; and if aſſets are denied, he muſt account for aſſets before a Maſter in Chancery.

If the bankrupt's real eſtate is conveyed to aſſignees, and one of them dies, this is a jointenancy, and goes to the ſurvivor; and he may alone ſell ſuch eſtate to a purchaſer. But if both die before any conveyance is made, then the heir at law of the ſurvivor muſt convey to ſuch new aſſignees as the court ſhall appoint, or join with ſuch new aſſignees in the conveyance to a purchaſer. Dav. Bank. 409.

The law is very clear, that the aſſignees are exactly in the ſame place as the bankrupt, and ſtand in his place to every particular, and any agreement entered into ſhall bind them; and though there may not be the ſame remedy againſt them, that is not from the nature but the neceſſity of the thing; for he ſhall make an adequate and compleat ſatisfaction as far as his fortune in the hands of the aſſignees will admit of. Select Ca. in Ch. 77.

The aſſignees are bound by all acts done by the bankrupt before he becomes ſo, whether of a legal or equitable nature, if they were done upon a valuable conſideration, and without fraud; and whatever diſpoſition of his eſtate he makes, that will affect himſelf, does equally conclude the aſſignees, who ſtand directly in his place. 2 Eq. Abr. 101. pl. 5.

A. puts out 1000 l. at intereſt to the Eaſt-India company, and takes bond for it in the name of J. S. his wife's relation, and afterwards A. is bankrupt; J. S. is ſummoned before the commiſſioners, but, before his examination, tells the company, that the money was not his, but that they ſhould pay it to the perſon who ſhould bring the bond; and accordingly A.'s wife brought the bond, and received the money. The court would not inforce J. S. to pay the money. Ch. Pre. 18.

A man had deviſed lands, which were in mortgage, to be ſold, and the ſurplus of the money to be paid to his daughter; the daughter married a man who ſoon after became a bankrupt, and the commiſſioners aſſigned this intereſt of the wife's; the huſband died, and the aſſignees brought this bill againſt the wife and truſtees, to have the land ſold, and the ſurplus of the money paid to them; but the court would not aſſiſt in ſtripping the wife (who was wholly unprovided for) of this intereſt, but diſmiſſed the bill at the Rolls. Eq. Ca. Abr. 54.

The creditors have a right to the bankrupt's goods, by the act of bankruptcy, and thereby they are bound: though until aſſignment by the commiſſioners, the property is not transferred out of the bankrupt. 1 Salk. 108. The commiſſioners are to ſell all the bankrupt's lands in fee, for life, or years, &c. and it will be binding againſt the bankrupt and his iſſue, &c. 1 Lill. Abr. 204. They may ſell all entailed lands in poſſeſſion, reverſion, or remainder, except entailed in the crown, of the gift of the king; and this ſhall bind the iſſue in tail, and all others, which a common recovery might cut off. Ibid. 205. If a bankrupt grant his lands or goods in the names of other perſons, the commiſſioners, notwithſtanding, may make ſale of them: but not lands, &c. conveyed bona fide before the party became a bankrupt. Wood's Inſt. 310. And no purchaſe of lands ſhall be impeached, unleſs the commiſſion of bankrupt be ſued out within five years after a man becomes bankrupt. Lands held by a bankrupt in joint-tenancy may be ſold as to the moiety: alſo lands which a perſon hath in right of his wife, (but not her dower), and lands deviſed to a bankrupt, the commiſſioners may ſell.

With reſpect to the manner of creditors proving their debts, it may be proper to conſider the nature of their debts, and how far they are legally to be received as creditors.

An aſſignee, or indorſee of a bankrupt's notes at an under value is a creditor for the full ſums, and may ſue out a commiſſion. But it is otherwiſe where he is aſſignee of a bond, or where the indorſement of the note is ſubſequent to the bankruptcy. 1 Peer. Will. 782.

Perſons who are ſecurity for another may come in as creditors. Cro. Jac. 127.

But a ſeller of lands need not come in as a creditor for the remainder of his purchaſe money. 1 Vern. 267.

If a creditor advances money to a bankrupt after a commiſſion ſued out, though he did not know it, he will loſe his money. 2 Vern. 156.

When money is obtained by judgment in action of debt, and the plaintiff becomes bankrupt, and a commiſſion of bankrupt is taken out againſt him, though the ſheriff may bring the money into court, it ſhall be delivered to the plaintiff, and not the aſſignee of the commiſſion, unleſs he take out a ſcire facias againſt the defendant, in order to try the bankruptcy. 1 Vent. 193. Qu. If ſuch a caſe was now to happen whether the courts at Weſtminſter would not, on motion, and producing the commiſſion and aſſignment, order the money to be paid over to the aſſignee? the property being diveſted out of the plaintiff, and it being a part of his eſtate and effects, which the aſſignee is to diſtribute. A plaintiff that hath a defendant's body in execution, who becomes bankrupt, ſhall not come in to be relieved by the ſtatutes: but if the plaintiff recovers damages, &c. againſt the defendant, and hath judgment, and then the defendant becomes bankrupt, the plaintiff is a creditor; for it is a debt due to him, and action of debt lies on the judgment. Cro. Car. 166. If a debtor to a bankrupt pays him his debt voluntarily, he muſt pay it over again; but it is otherwiſe in caſe of payment by compulſion of law. 2 Vent. 258. Sureties or bail, when they have paid the debt, may come in as creditors. Thoſe that attach goods of the bankrupt, are to come in as creditors. And aliens as well as denizens may come in as creditors; for all ſtatutes concerning bankrupts extend to aliens, who ſhall be ſubject to the laws againſt bankrupts, &c. Hob. 287. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 19.

Though a creditor comes under a commiſſion of bankrupt, and proves his debt, being prevailed to be an aſſignee, being informed that otherwiſe he will loſe his debt, yet if the bankrupt has no eſtate, the creditor may take the bankrupt in execution, if he will waive any benefit of the ſtatute. 1 Peer. Will. 560.

Creditor coming in under a commiſſion, though only to prove his debt, and oppoſe the bankrupt's obtaining his certificate, yet he ſhall not ſue the bankrupt at law, unleſs he will waive all benefit of the commiſſion, as to the dividends; and by the Lord Chancellor King ordered, he ſhould waive it as to voting againſt his certificate. But now the creditor is to make his election, whether he will proceed at law, or come in under the commiſſion; and if he has received any dividend, he is to refund it, but may oppoſe the certificate. Dav. Bank.

Creditors by recogniſances, ſtatute-ſtaple, or judgments, ſpecialties with penalties, attachments and ſecurities, where no execution or extent ſued out, ſhall only be relieved as to a ratable part with the reſt of the creditors, without any regard to the penalty; and to prove their debt under a commiſſion of bankruptcy. 1 Peer. Will. 92.

A trader ſeiſed of lands in fee, gives judgment to B. and then ſells the lands to C. and afterwards becomes bankrupt; though the judgment-creditor cannot come in for more than his proportion with the bankrupt's creditors; yet it is ſaid that he may extend the land in C. the purchaſer's hands, C. having purchaſed before the bankruptcy, and this not prejudicing the creditors. So if A. the trader gives judgment to B. and articles for a valuable conſideration to ſell to C. and then becomes a bankrupt; it ſeems the judgment ſhall bind the lands in the hands of C. who articled to buy them; but whatever money the purchaſer was to pay the bankrupt, the ſame ſhall be liable to the bankruptcy. 1 Peer. Will. 737.

But where a commiſſion iſſues againſt the obligor in a bottomree or reſpondentia bond, or the under-writer or aſſurer in an aſſurance, before loſs of the ſhip or goods, the obligee or aſſured may claim, and after loſs prove his debt in like manner as if the loſs had happened before the ſuing forth the commiſſion; and have a proportionable dividend. And the bankrupt ſhall be diſcharged from the debt due by the bond or policy, and have all advantages of the ſtatutes now in force, as if the contingency had happened before the ſuing forth the commiſſion. Vide Stat. 19 Geo. 2. c. 32. §. 2.

If a creditor has 100*l.* due to him from two bankrupts, and proves his debt of 100*l.* under the firſt commiſſion, and receives 40*l.* for the 100*l.* he ſhall only come in as a creditor for 60*l.* under the ſecond commiſſion. 2 Peer. Will. 89, 407.

A merchant mortgages his land; the mortgagee may chuſe to come in as a creditor. Stone 130.

A. makes a mortgage, and afterwards a commiſſion of bankruptcy is taken out againſt him, and commiſſioners make an aſſignment of his eſtate, and then B. lends 2000*l.* to the bankrupt on a ſecond mortgage, having no notice of the bankruptcy, and afterwards he gets in the firſt mortgage. The prior mortgage ſhall not protect the mortgage ſubſequent to the bankruptcy. 2 Vern. 157.

A merchant pledges goods, and becomes a bankrupt, the party need not come in. Stone 130.

An executor becomes a bankrupt, a legatee ſhall be relieved. Stone 131.

If there be an act of bankruptcy committed, and a creditor obtains a judgment ſubſequent to it, then a commiſſion is taken out; now the judgment is thereby avoided. 12 Mod. 446.

Rent due to a landlord is a debt of the higheſt nature, and affects the goods, chattels, and ſtock of the tenant upon the premiſes; and (if there is no ſeizure made by the landlord) in the caſe of an execution or extent, a year's rent is to be reſerved for him, as appears by the ſtatute 8 Ann. c. 14. ſect. 1.

But in commiſſions of bankruptcy it is otherwiſe, and though no commiſſion can remove or carry away any goods belonging to the bankrupt, if the landlord ſeizes for the rent before the goods are removed, and he is to be firſt diſcharged, even if there are ſeveral years rent in arrear; yet if the landlord does not ſeize before the commiſſion of bankruptcy carries away the goods from off the premiſes, he muſt then come in as a creditor for his rent, with the reſt of the bankrupt's creditors. Dav. Bank. 314.

Alſo if there are not ſufficient goods upon the premiſſes to pay the landlord's rent, he can then only take what goods there are upon the premiſſes, and after they are appraiſed and ſold, as the law, in caſes of diſtreſs for rent, directs; then the landlord may come in as a creditor for the rent remaining due to him, with the reſt of the creditors under the commiſſion. Dav. Bank. 314.

As to the manner of creditors proving their debts, they may prove them without paying any contribution on account of the ſame: and the commiſſioners after they have declared the party to be a bankrupt ſhall cauſe notice thereof to be given in the London Gazette, and ſhall appoint a time and place for the creditors to meet, in order to chuſe aſſignees, at which meeting the ſaid commiſſioners ſhall admit the proof of any creditors debts, that ſhall live remote from the place of ſuch meeting of the commiſſioners, by affidavit, or, being quakers, by ſolemn affirmation, and alſo permit any perſon duly authoriſed by letter of attorney from ſuch creditors, oath or affirmation being made of the due execution thereof, either by an affidavit ſworn or affirmation made before a Maſter in Chancery, or before the commiſſioners viva voce, and in caſe of creditors reſiding in foreign parts before a magiſtrate where the party ſhall be reſiding, to be, together with ſuch creditors letters of attorney atteſted by a notary public, to vote in the choice of aſſignees.

If any perſon ſhall prove a debt, which ſhall not be really due, and under ſuch fictitious debt ſign the bankrupt's certificate, unleſs the bankrupt ſhall diſcloſe the fraud, and object to the reality of the debt, the certificate ſhall be void, and the bankrupt ſhall not be intitled to be diſcharged from his debts, or to any benefit or allowances under 5 G. 2. c. 30. ſect. 26 & 29.

The commiſſioners, after ſale of the bankrupt's eſtate, are to make diſtribution among the creditors, firſt making the bankrupt his allowance, &c. After four months, and diſtribution made, no creditor can come in to diſturb it; but he may come in for the reſidue, of which no diſtribution is made. 1 Danv. 693. The court of Chancery hath ſometimes allowed creditors to come in after diſtribution, upon particular circumſtances which have happened; and the Lord Chancellor ordered the execution of the commiſſion to be ſuſpended. Chan. Rep. 307. If commiſſioners refuſe to pay a creditor his proportionable part, he may be relieved in Chancery: where the commiſſioners do not purſue the acts of their commiſſion, the party injured muſt bring his action, and ſet forth the finding of the commiſſioners, that the debtor is a bankrupt. But if a commiſſion is not duly obtained againſt a perſon, he may traverſe, by ſaying he is not a bankrupt. 8 Rep. 121. By 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. In actions againſt commiſſioners, or others under them, executing any matter by force of the 13 Eliz. c. 7. or that ſtatute, the defendants may plead Not guilty, or juſtify that it was done by the authority of thoſe acts, &c. without ſhewing forth the commiſſion; to which the plaintiff may reply, that the defendant did the fact of his wrong, &c. 1 Danv. 694.

Creditors before chooſing aſſignees, ſhall fix the method of dividends: and aſſignees ſhall, after the expiration of four months, and within twelve months from the time of iſſuing of ſuch commiſſion, cauſe at leaſt 21 days publick notice to be given in the London Gazette, of the time and place the commiſſioners and aſſignees intend to meet, to make a dividend or diſtribution of ſuch bankrupt's eſtate and effects; at which time the creditors, who have not before proved their debts, ſhall then be at liberty to prove the ſame, and upon every ſuch meeting aſſignees ſhall produce their accounts, and the ſaid commiſſioners, or the major part of them, ſhall order ſuch part of the neat produce of the ſaid bankrupt's eſtate, as by ſuch accounts, or otherwiſe, ſhall appear to be in the hands of the ſaid aſſignees, to be forthwith divided amongſt ſuch of the bankrupt's creditors, who have duly proved their debts under ſuch commiſſion, in proportion to their ſeveral and reſpective debts. And a final dividend ſhall be made within eighteen months after the iſſuing of any commiſſion. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 32, 33, and 37.

Creditors, upon what ſecurity ſoever they be, come in all equal, unleſs ſuch as have obtained actual execution before the bankruptcy, or had taken pledges for their juſt debts; and the reaſon is, becauſe, from the act of bankruptcy, all the bankrupt's eſtate is veſted in the commiſſioners who are eſtabliſhed as courts of juſtice touching the bankrupt's eſtate, and before whom the creditors muſt authenticate their debts, in order to receive their dividends; and therefore they muſt equally admit all perſons to make proof of their debts; but ſuch as have pawns or mortgages have a property in the thing ſo pledged, precedent to the tranſlation of the property to the commiſſioners, in which caſe they have only an equity of redemption, and are in no better condition than the bankrupt himſelf. New Abr. 258. in notes. See Salk. 108.

Joint debts are to be paid out of the joint ſtock firſt; and if there be any overplus, then that ought to be applied to pay particular debts of each partner; but if there be not enough to pay all the joint debts; and if either of the partners ſhall pay more than a moiety of the joint debts, then ſuch partner is to come in before the commiſſioners of bankrupts, and be admitted as a creditor for what he ſhall pay over and above his moiety. 2 Chan. Rep. 226.

On a joint commiſſion of bankruptcy againſt two traders, ſeparate creditors are allowed to come in, for the joint effects are to be applied, firſt to pay the partnerſhip debts, and then the ſeparate debts; and the ſeparate effects to pay the firſt ſeparate creditors, and afterwards the partnerſhip creditors. Per Cowper, Chan. 2 Vern. 706.

Two partners in trade put in each an equal ſtock, and agreed by covenant, that the ſtock ſhould pay the debts of the ſtock, and neither of their ſeparate debts ſhould charge the ſtock, but only his own eſtate, or to that effect; they both became bankrupts, and a commiſſion iſſued againſt them both; one of them owed ſeparately more than the other; the queſtion was between the ſeparate creditors of each bankrupt, and the creditors on account of the joint ſtock, for theſe would exclude the ſeparate creditors from charging the joint ſtock, but that it ſhould ſatisfy the ſtock debts; but Lord North was of a contrary opinion, for the covenant of the partners cannot bind any of the creditors, but only themſelves. 2 Chan. Ca. 139.

If one or more of the joint traders become bankrupt, his or their proportions only are aſſignable by the commiſſioners to be held in common with the reſt, who were not bankrupts. 12 Mod. 446.

The 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ordains, that if bankrupts do not, after notice in the Gazette, ſurrender to the commiſſioners in forty-two days, to be examined, and diſcover and deliver up all their eſtates real and perſonal, they ſhall be adjudged guilty of felony; but the Lord Chancellor may enlarge the time for ſurrendering, not exceeding fifty days further: they are to deliver all books of account, writings, &c. on oath to the aſſignees; and ſhall be allowed 5 l. per cent. ſo as not to exceed 200 l. if they pay 10 s. in the pound, 7 l. 10 s. per Cent. not above 250 l. if they pay 12 s. 6 d. per pound, and 10 l. per Cent. not exceeding 300 l. if they pay 15 s. in the pound; but no advantage is given to any bankrupt, who hath loſt 5 l. a day, or 100 l. in a year at gaming, or 100 l. by ſtock-jobbing, &c. And the body of the bankrupt only, not his future eſtate, ſhall be diſcharged, except he pays 15 s. per pound. §. 9. On a ſecond bankruptcy, four parts in five in number and value of creditors, not for leſs than 20 l. are to ſign certificates, and conſent to the bankrupt's diſcharge, &c. of which oath is to be made, and other creditors may be heard againſt it: bonds or notes given to any creditor to conſent to a certificate, ſhall be void; and if the perſon iſſuing any commiſſion have privately more than the other creditors, the commiſſion may be ſuperſeded, and he ſhall loſe his debt. And when the commiſſion is executed, and the party hath conformed to the ſtatutes, his certificate is granted and allowed, &c.

The commiſſioners are to certify to the Lord Chancellor, that the bankrupt hath conformed, and four parts in five, in number and value, of the creditors muſt ſign the bankrupt's certificate.

The 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 13. empowers any judge of the court wherein judgment has been obtained againſt a bankrupt, for any debt owing before he became a bankrupt, the bankrupt being in priſon in execution on ſuch judgment, to diſcharge ſuch bankrupt on producing his certificate.

The Stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 7. extends not to debts due to a bankrupt as executor, but it is for this particular reaſon, becauſe they are appropriated to pay teſtator's debts; and if they were aſſigned it would be a wrong, viz. a devaſtavit; and it being objected, that it extends not to debts due to the bankrupt jointly with another, it was anſwered by Ld. Ch. J. Parker, in delivering the opinion of the court, that the caſe cited for that purpoſe, from Lev. 17. is not determined. Will. Rep. 254. Gilb. Ca. 323

If a bankrupt has a certificate, and an action be brought againſt him afterwards for a debt precedent to the ſtatute, he may plead his certificate, or otherwiſe he is without relief. 2 Vern. 696, 697.

The common method of pleading is, generally, that he became a bankrupt within the intent and meaning of the ſtatutes made and in force concerning bankrupts, and that the cauſe of action accrued before he became a bankrupt. This general plea is given by Stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. ſect. 7.

Per Lord C. Talbot; Though a creditor of a bankrupt under 20*l.* is by the laſt act excluded from aſſent or diſſent to the certificate, yet as he is affected by the conſequence of allowing the certificate, he hath right to petition, and ſhew any fraud againſt allowing the certificate. 7 Vin. Abr. 134. pl. 18.

The defendant and his partner in trade had a joint commiſſion of bankruptcy taken out againſt them, under which they obtained a certificate. The plaintiff was a ſeparate creditor and had obtained a judgment before the commiſſion or act of bankruptcy; and having now the body of the defendant in execution, the court was moved to diſcharge him, upon the authority of Howard v. Poole, where it was held, that a ſeparate creditor might come in under a joint commiſſion; and alſo on Eq. Caſ. Abr. 55. 2 Vern. 707. 2 Will. Rep. 500. and the court diſcharged him accordingly. 2 Stra. 1157.

If there be two partners, and one of them becomes bankrupt, and, on a ſeparate commiſſion being ſued out againſt him, his certificate is allowed; this does not only diſcharge the bankrupt of what he owed ſeparately, but alſo of what he owed jointly, and on the partnerſhip account; becauſe, by the act of parliament, the bankrupt, upon making a full diſcovery, and obtaining his certificate, is to be diſchaged of all debts. Now, as the debts he owes jointly with another are equally his debts as what he owes on his ſeparate account, conſequently he is to be diſcharged of both his joint and ſeparate debts. And ſo it has been determined by the judges of B. R. By the Lord Chancellor Parker. 3 Will. Rep. 24. in a note.

On a joint commiſſion againſt two partners, the ſeparate creditors, though they have taken out ſeparate commiſſions, ſhall yet be at liberty to come in to oppoſe the allowing of the certificate. 3 Will. Rep. 23.

Where two partners are bankrupts, and a joint commiſſion is taken out againſt them, if they obtain an allowance of their certificate, this will bar as well their ſeparate as their joint creditors. 3 Will. Rep. 24.

The ſtatute 5 Geo. 2. c. 30. is general, and takes no notice of ſeparate commiſſions; and a diſcharge under a ſeparate commiſſion has been determined to be a diſcharge of debts, owing under the joint trade: before the ſtatute 10 Ann. cap. 15. if there were two partners, and only one party became bankrupt, and a ſeparate commiſſion was taken out againſt him; there was no doubt but the diſcharge of that bankrupt, diſcharged him from all debts which he owed in his joint as well as private capacity; but the great queſtion in that caſe was, whether, by ſuch diſcharge of the bankrupt, the partner of ſuch bankrupt ſhould likewiſe be diſcharged from ſuch debts as he was diſcharged of; and therefore that ſtatute has enacted, that ſuch partner ſhall not be diſcharged; though if a joint debt is diſcharged by a ſeparate commiſſion, there can be no queſtion but a joint commiſſion will diſcharge a ſeparate debt.

Bargain and Sale, Is an inſtrument whereby the property of lands and tenements is for valuable conſideration granted and transferred from one perſon to another: it is called a real contract upon a valuable conſideration, for paſſing of lands, tenements and hereditaments, by deed indented and inrolled. 2 Inſt. 672. *Accomp. IV. Of the manner of pleading bargains and ſales.

I. All things, for the moſt part, that are grantable by deed in any other way, are grantable by bargain and ſale; and lands, rents, advowſons, tithes, &c. may be granted by it, in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life, &c. 1 Rep. 176. 11 Rep. 25.

Any freehold or inheritance in poſſeſſion, reverſion or remainder upon an eſtate for years, or life, or in tail, may be bargained and ſold, but the deed ſhall be inrolled. 2 Co. 54. Dyer 309. 2 Inſt. 671.

A bargain and ſale of the profits of land, is a bargain and ſale of the land itſelf; for the profits and the land are the ſame thing in ſubſtance. Dyer 71.

A rent in eſſe may be bargained and ſold, becauſe this is a freehold within the ſtatute; and before the ſtatute (27 H. 8. c. 10.) a rent newly created might be bargained and ſold, becauſe when money, as an equivalent, was given, and ceremonies or words of law were wanting, the Chancery ſupplied them; but it ſeems, that ſince the ſtatute, a rent newly created cannot be bargained and ſold, becauſe there ought to be a freehold in ſome other perſon, to be executed in ceſtui que uſe; but here can be no ſeiſin of his rent in the bargainor, becauſe no man can be ſeiſed of a rent in his own land, and conſequently there can be no eſtate to be executed in the bargainee. Kelw. 85. 1 Co. 126. 1 And. 327. 1 Jones 179. Sed qu. de hoc.

If A. by indenture inrolled bargains and ſells lands to B. and his heirs, with a way over other lands of A. this is void as to the way; for nothing but an uſe paſſes by the deed, and there can be no uſe of a thing not in eſſe, as a way, common, &c. before they are created. Cro. Jac. 189. But may it not amount to a covenant, that the purchaſer ſhall enjoy?

II. As to the perſons by whom and to whom bargains and ſales may be made, it is to be premiſed, that

The king, and all other perſons that cannot be ſeiſed to a uſe, cannot bargain and ſell, for at Common law, when a man had ſold his land for money without giving livery, the uſe only paſſed in equity, and this is now executed and becomes a bargain and ſale by the ſtatute: but antecedent to any ſuch execution there muſt be a uſe well raiſed, which cannot be without a perſon capable of being ſeiſed to a uſe, which the king is not, there being no means to compel him to perform the uſe or truſt; for the Chancery has only a delegated power from the king over the conſciences of his ſubjects; and the king is the univerſal judge of property, and ought to be perfectly indifferent, and not to take upon him the particular defence of any man's eſtate as a truſtee. Bro. Feoffment to Uſes 33. Hard. 468. Poph. 72.

If tenant in tail bargains and ſells his land in fee, this paſſes an eſtate determinable upon the life of the tenant in tail; for at Common law the uſe could not be granted of any greater eſtate than the party had in him; now tenant in tail had an inheritance in him, but he could diſpoſe of it only during his own life; and therefore when he ſells the uſe in fee, ceſtui que uſe has a kind of an inheritance, yet determining within the compaſs of a life; and the ſtatute executes it in the ſame manner as he has the uſe, and conſequently he will have ſome properties of a tenant in fee, and ſome of a tenant for life only; but if tenant for life bargains and ſells in fee, this paſſes only an eſtate for life, for he could not paſs the uſe of an eſtate for life to the bargainee, and the ſtatute executes the poſſeſſion as the party has the uſe. 10 Co. 96, 98. 1 Sand. 260, 261. 1 Co. 14, 15. Co. Lit. 151.

A man may bargain and ſell to a corporation, for they may take a uſe, though the money be given by the governors in their natural capacity. 10 Co. 24, 34. 2 Rol. Abr. 788.

A man may bargain and ſell to his ſon; but then the conſideration of money ought to be expreſſed, and it ought to have all the other circumſtances of a bargain and ſale; but this ſhall operate as a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed, if there be none but the conſideration of natural love and affection expreſſed. 7 Co. 40. 2 Co. 24. *Cro. If a ſon and heir bargains and ſells the inheritance of his father, this is void, becauſe he hath no right to transfer; the ſame law of a releaſe. Keilw. 84. Co. Lit. 265.

If an infant bargains and ſells his land by deed indented and inrolled, yet he may plead non-age; for notwithſtanding the ſtatute the bargainee claims by the deed as at Common-law, which was, and therefore is ſtill defeazible by non-age. 2 Inſt. 673.

If a huſband ſeiſed of lands in right of his wife, or tenant in tail bargains and ſells the trees growing on the lands, and dies before ſeverance, the bargainee cannot afterwards cut them down and take them away. Mo. 41.

If a wife joins with her huſband in a bargain and ſale by deed indented and inrolled, of her lands, yet it ſhall not bind her, for the wife cannot be examined by any court without writ, and there is no writ allowed in this caſe, which is for the better ſecurity of wives, who are by our law intirely ſubjected to the will of the huſband. 2 Inſt. 673.

If there be two jointenants, and one of them makes a bargain and ſale of his own eſtate in fee, and then the other dies, the other moiety ſhall ſurvive to the bargainor; for ſince the freehold is in the bargainor the inheritance continues; but if ſuch jointenant had bargained and ſold totum ſtatum ſuum in fee, though he died before inrollment; yet, if the deed were afterwards inrolled, the moiety would not ſurvive, but would paſs to the bargainee. Cro. Jac. 53. Co. Lit. 186. 1 Bulſt. 3.

As to the words neceſſary.

The very words bargain and ſell are not of abſolute neceſſity in this deed, for other words equivalent will ſuffice; as if a man ſeiſed of lands in fee by the words alien or grant, ſell the ſame to another, the deed being made in conſideration of money, and indented and inrolled, will be an effectual bargain and ſale. In ſhort, whatever words upon valuable conſideration would have raiſed an uſe of any lands, &c. at Common law, the ſame would amount to a bargain and ſale within this act; as if a man by deed, &c. for a valuable conſideration covenants to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of another, &c. 2 Inſt. 672. Cro. Jac. 210. Mo. 54. Cro. Eliz. 166.

At Common law, land might be bargained and ſold by words only, for it was the conſideration that in equity raiſed the uſe, but ſince the ſtatute of 27 Hen. 8. c. 16. lands cannot paſs without indenture. 2 Inſt. 675. Dyer 229. Poph. 48. Dal. 63.

Bargains and ſales of lands are to be in writing indented, and inrolled in one of the courts at Weſtminſter, or in the county where the lands lie, before the Cuſtos Rotulorum, juſtices of the peace, &c. And the inrolment ſhall be made within ſix months after the date of the deeds. Stat. 27 H. 8. cap. 16. Vide Tab. to Stat. tit. Regiſter.

III. As to the conſideration and inrolment.

There muſt be a good conſideration given, or at leaſt ſaid to be given, for lands in theſe deeds: and for a competent ſum of money, is a good conſideration; but not the general words for divers conſiderations, &c. Mod. Ca. 777. Where money is mentioned to be paid in a bargain and ſale, and in truth no money is paid, ſome of our books tell us this may be a good bargain and ſale; becauſe no averment will lie againſt that which is expreſly affirmed by the deed, except it comes to be queſtioned whether fraudulent or no, upon the ſtatute againſt fraudulent deeds. Dyer 90. If no conſideration of money is expreſſed in a deed of bargain and ſale, it may be ſupplied by an averment that it was made for money: and after a verdict on a trial, it ſhall be intended that evidence was given at the trial of money paid. 1 Ventr. 108. If lands are bargained and ſold for money only, the deed is to be inrolled according to the ſtatute; but if it be in conſideration of money, and natural affection, &c. the eſtate will paſs without it. 2 Inſt. 672. 2 Lev. 56.

If a man, in conſideration of ſo much money to be paid at a day to come, bargains and ſells, the uſe paſſes preſently, and after the day the party has an action for the money, for it is a ſale, be the money paid preſently or hereafter. Dyer 337. a.

With reſpect to the inrollment.

If the deed of bargain and ſale be not inrolled within the ſix months (which are to be reckoned after twenty-eight days to the month, the day of the date taken excluſively) it is of no force; ſo that if a man bargains and ſells his land to me, and the trees upon it, although the trees might be ſold by deed without inrolment, yet in this caſe if the deed be not inrolled, it will be good neither for the trees nor the land. Dyer 90. 7 Rep. 40. 2 Bulſt. 8. A bargain and ſale of a manor to which an advowſon is appendant by indenture not inrolled, will not paſs the advowſon or the manor, for it was to go as appendant. Bro. Caſ. 240.

But in ſome caſes where a deed will not enure by way of bargain and ſale, by reaſon of ſome defect therein, it may be good to another purpoſe. Dyer 90.

If two bargains and ſales are made of the ſame land, to two ſeveral perſons, and the laſt deed is firſt inrolled; if afterwards the firſt deed is alſo inrolled within ſix months, the firſt buyer ſhall have the land; for when the deed is inrolled, the bargainee is ſeiſed of the land from the delivery of the deed, and the inrolment ſhall relate to it. Hob. 165. Wood's Inſt. 259. Neither the death of the bargainor or bargainee, before the inrolment of the deed of bargain and ſale, will hinder the paſſing of the eſtate to the bargainee: but the eſtate of freehold is in the bargainor, until the deed is inrolled; ſo that the bargainee cannot bring any action of treſpaſs before entry had: though it is ſaid he may ſurrender, aſſign, &c. Cro. Jac. 52. Co. Lit. 147.

A bargainee ſhall have rent which incurs after the bargain and ſale, and before the inrolment. Sid. 310. Upon the inrolment of the deed, the eſtate ſettles ab initio, by the Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 16. And the ſtatute of inrolment ſays, that it ſhall not veſt, except the deed be inrolled; and when it is inrolled, the eſtate veſts preſently, by the ſtatute of uſes. 1 Danv. Abr. 696.

Every deed may be inrolled at Common law, for its ſecurity. If ſeveral ſeal a deed of bargain and ſale, and but one acknowledge it, and thereupon the deed is inrolled; this is a good inrolment within the ſtatute. Style 462. None can make a bargain and ſale of lands, that hath not the actual poſſeſſion thereof at the time of the ſale; if he hath not the poſſeſſion, the deed muſt be ſealed upon the land, to make it good. 2 Inſt. 672. 1 Lill. 290.

Houſes and lands in London, and any city, &c. are exempted out of the ſtatute of inrolments. 2 Inſt. 676. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 342.

But the general method now uſed to convey eſtates, is, by leaſe and releaſe, whereby the poſſeſſion and the fee immediately paſs without inrolment.

IV. In regard to the manner of pleading a bargain and ſale, it is to be obſerved, that

In pleading theſe deeds, the deed itſelf muſt be ſhewn under ſeal. 1 Inſt. 225. For though the inrollment being on record is of undoubted veracity, being the tranſaction of the court; yet the private deed has not the ſanction of a record, though publicly acknowledged and inrolled; for it might have been falſely and fraudulently dated, or ill executed. Co. Lit. 225. b. 251. b. 2 Inſt. 673. 4 Co. 71. 5 Co. 53. 2 Rol. Rep. 119.

It muſt likewiſe be ſet forth that the inrolment was within ſix months, or ſecundum formam ſtatuti, &c. vide, Allen 19. Carter 221. Style 34. S. C.

In pleading a bargain and ſale, the party ought regularly to aver payment of the money. 1 Leon. 170. See Moor 504.

In replevin the caſe upon the pleadings was, that the defendant made a title under bargain and ſale, inrolled within ſix months, and the ſtatute of uſes, and did not ſhew that it was in conſideration of money; but adjudged, that after a verdict, as this caſe was, it ſhall be intended, that evidence was given at the trial of money paid. 1 Vent. 108.

The party that claims by any bargain and ſale, muſt ſhew in what court the deed is inrolled, becauſe he muſt ſhew all things in certain that make out his title; otherwiſe his adverſary would be put to an infinite ſearch before he could traverſe with ſecurity. Yelv. 213. *Cro. Barkary, (barkaria. corticulus) A tan-houſe or place to keep bark in for the uſe of tanners. New Book Entr. tit. Aſſiſe, Corp. Polit. 2.

Baron, (baro) Is a French word, and hath divers ſignifications here in England. Firſt, it is taken for a degree of nobility next to a viſcount. Bracton, lib. 1. cap. 8. ſays they are called barones, quaſi robur belli. In which ſignification it agrees with other nations, where baroniæ are as much as provinciæ: ſo that barons are ſuch as have the government of provinces, as their fee holden of the king; ſome having greater and others leſs authority within their territories. It is probable, that formerly, in this kingdom, all thoſe were called barons that had ſuch ſeigniories as we now call courts-baron; as they are at this day called ſeigneurs in France, who have any manor or lordſhip: and ſoon after the conqueſt, all ſuch came to parliament, and ſat as peers in the lords houſe. But when by experience it appeared that the parliament was too much thronged by theſe barons, who were very numerous it was in the reign of King John ordained that none but the barones majores ſhould come to parliament, who, for their extraordinary wiſdom, intereſt, or quality, ſhould be ſummoned by writ. After this, men obſerving the eſtate of nobility to be but caſual, and depending merely upon the king's will, they obtained of the king letters patent of this dignity to them and their heirs male, who were called barons by letters patent, or by creation, whoſe poſterity are now by inheritance thoſe barons that are called lords of the parliament; of which kind the king may create at his pleaſure. Neverthele ſs there are ſtill barons by writ, as well as barons by letters patent: and thoſe barons who were firſt by writ, may now alſo juſtly be called barons by preſcription, for that they and their anceſtors have continued barons beyond the memory of man. The calling up by writ is at this day ſeldom practiſed unleſs it be to ſummon the ſon of ſome lord to parliament, in the life-time of his anceſtor; for creation by letters patent is almoſt altogether in uſe. 2 Inſt. 48. The original of barons by writ, Camden refers to King Hen. 3. and barons by letters patent, or creation, commenced 11 R. 2. Camb. Brit. pag. 109. To theſe is added a third kind of barons, called barons by tenure, which are ſome of our ancient barons; and likewiſe the biſhops, who, by virtue of baronies annexed to their biſhopricks, always had place in the lords houſe of parliament, as barons by ſucceſſion. Seager of Honour, lib. 4. cap. 13.

There are alſo barons by office; as the barons of the Exchequer, barons of the Cinque Ports, &c. of which you may read under their proper heads. In ancient records, the word baron included all the nobility of England, becauſe regularly all noblemen were barons, though they had a higher dignity; and therefore the charter of King Ed. 1. which is an expoſition of what relates to barons in Magna Charta, concludes teſtibus archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, baronibus, &c. And the great council of the nobility, when they conſiſted, beſides earls and barons, of dukes, marqueſſes, &c. were all comprehended under the name de la councell de baronage. Glanv. cap. 4. Theſe barons have given them two enſigns to remind them of their duties; firſt, a long robe of ſcarlet, in reſpect whereof they are accounted de magno concilio regis; and ſecondly they are girt with a ſword, that they ſhould ever be ready to defend their king and country. 2 Inſt. 5. A baron is vir notabilis & principalis: and the chief burgeſſes of London were in former times barons, before there was a lord mayor, as appears by the city ſeal, and their antient charters.—Henricus 3. Rex. Sciatis nos conceſſiſſe & hac præſenti charta noſtra confirmaſſe baronibus noſtris de civitate noſtra London quod eligant ſibi mayor de ſeipſis ſingulis annis, &c. Spelm. Gloſſ. The Earl palatines and marches of England had anciently their barons under them; but no barons but thoſe who held immediately of the king were peers of the realm. 'Tis certain the king's tenants were called barons; as we may find in Mat. Pariſ. and other writers: and in days of old, all men were ſtiled barons; but this, We take it, was only a term in the law, not a title of nobility.

Barony, (baronia) Is that honour and territory which gives title to a baron; comprehending not only the fees and lands of temporal barons, but of biſhops alſo who have two eſtates; one as they are ſpiritual perſons, by reaſon of their ſpiritual revenues and promotions; the other grew from the bounty of our Engliſh kings, whereby they have baronies and lands added to their ſpiritual livings and preferments. The baronies belonging to biſhops are by ſome called regalia, becauſe ex ſola libera- litate regum eis olim conceſſa, & à regibus in feudum tenentur. Blount. Barony, Bracton ſays, (lib. 2. cap. 34.) is a right indiviſible; and therefore if an inheritance be to be divided among coparceners. though ſome capital meſſuages may be divided, yet ſi capitale meſſuagium ſit caput comitatus vel caput baroniæ, they may not be parcelled. In antient times thirteen knight fees and a quarter made a tenure per baroniam, which amounted to 400 marks per annum.

Baronet, (baronettus) Is a dignity or degree of honour, which hath precedency before all knights, as knights of the bath, knights bachelors, &c. except Bannerets, made ſub vexillis regiis in exercitu regali in aperto bello, & ipſo rege perſonaliter præſente. This order of baronets was inſtituted by King James I. in the year 1611. with ſuch precedency as aforeſaid, and other privileges, &c. Their number at firſt was but two hundred; but now they are without limitation: they are created by patent with an habendum ſibi & hæredibus maſculis, &c. And their dignity, on its firſt inſtitution, was a kind of purchaſed honour, by men of great eſtates, qualified for titles.

II. What acts and agreements of the wife before marriage bind the huſband.

III. Of the huſband's power over the perſon of his wife, and of her remedy for any injury done to her by him, and of actions by him for criminal converſation with her.

IV. Of his intereſt in her eſtate and property.

V. Where the huſband ſhall be liable to the wife's debts contracted before marriage; and therein of a wife that is executrix or adminiſtratrix.

VI. Of her contracts during marriage, and how far the huſband is bound by ſuch contracts.

VII. Where ſhe alone ſhall be puniſhed for a criminal offence, and where the huſband ſhall be anſwerable for what ſhe does in a civil action.

VIII. What acts done by the huſband or wife alone, or jointly with the wife, will bind the wife; and therein of her agreement or diſagreement to ſuch acts after the death of the huſband.

IX. Where the huſband and wife muſt join in bringing actions.

XI. Where a wife ſhall be conſidered as a feme ſole.

XII. Of divorce, ſeparate maintenance, and pin-money.

I. Marriage is a compact between a man and a woman, for the procreation and education of children, which is to continue during both their lives; and it may be celebrated in a private houſe as well as in a church, 1 New. Abr. 283.

Before the time of pope Innocent the Third, there was not any ſolemnization of marriage in the church; but the man came to the houſe where the woman inhabited, and led her home to his own houſe, which was all the ceremony then uſed. Moor 170. Per Goldingham, Doctor of the Civil Law, arguendo.

The age of conſent to a marriage in an infant male is fourteen, and in a female twelve; but they may marry before; and if they agree to it when they attain theſe ages, the marriage is good; but they cannot diſagree before then; alſo if one of them be above the age of conſent, and the other under ſuch age, the party ſo above the age may as well diſagree as the other; for both muſt be bound or neither. Co. Lit. 33, 78, 79. 2 Inſt. 434. 3 Inſt. 88, 89. 6 Co. 22. 7 Co. 43. 1 Rol. Abr. 340.

A man within the age of fourteen (his age of conſent to marry) takes a woman to wife, they are baron and feme, ſo that he may have treſpaſs de muliere abducta cum bonis viri, &c.

By the ſtatute 32 Hen. 8. cap. 38. it is enacted, "That no reſervation or prohibition (God's law excepted) ſhall trouble or impeach any marriage without the Levitical degrees, and that no perſon, of what eſtate, degree or condition ſoever he be, ſhall be admitted in any of the ſpiritual courts within the King's realm, or any of his Grace's other lands and dominions, to any proceſs, plea or allegation contrary to the ſtatute." For the expoſition of this ſtatute, ſee Co. Lit. 24. a. 2 Inſt. 684. See 25 Hen. 8. c. 22. 28 Hen. 8. c. 7. 28 Hen. 8. c. 16. See Vaugh. 214. But if a man marries his couſin within the degrees, or his mother or ſiſter, they continue huſband and wiſe till a ſentence of divorce be pronounced. 1 Rol. Abr. 340, 357.

By 6 & 7 Will. 3. cap. 6. By 7 & 8 Will. 3. cap. 35. By 10 Ann. cap. 19. Certain penalties were inflicted on parſons, &c. marrying perſons without publication of bans or licence, as alſo on the man ſo married. And by 26 Geo. 2. cap. 33.

All bans of matrimony ſhall be publiſhed in an audible manner in the pariſh church, or in ſome public chapel, where the perſons to be married dwell; upon three Sundays preceding the ſolemnization of marriage: and when the perſons dwell in divers pariſhes, or chapelries, the bans ſhall be publiſhed in the church or chapel where each of them dwell; and where both or either dwell in any extraparochial place having no church or chapel, then the bans ſhall be publiſhed in the pariſh church or chapel belonging to ſome pariſh or chapelry adjoining to ſuch extraparochial place.

And in all caſes where bans ſhall have been publiſhed, the marriage ſhall be ſolemnized in one of the pariſh churches or chapels where ſuch bans have been publiſhed.

Sect. 2. No parſon, &c. obliged to publiſh bans of matrimony, unleſs the perſons ſhall ſeven days before the time required for the firſt publication, cauſe to be delivered to ſuch parſon, &c. a notice in writing of their chriſtian and ſurnames, and of their reſpective abodes within ſuch pariſh, &c. and of the time during which they have dwelt in ſuch houſes reſpectively.

Sect. 3. No parſon, &c. ſolemnizing marriages between perſons, both or one of whom ſhall be under the age of 21 years, after bans publiſhed, ſhall be puniſhable by eccleſiaſtical cenſures, for ſolemnizing ſuch marriages without conſent of parents or guardians, whoſe conſent is required by law, unleſs ſuch parſon, &c. have notice of the diſſent of ſuch parents or guardians. And in caſe ſuch parents or guardians, or one of them, publicly cauſe to be declared, in the church or chapel where the bans ſhall be ſo publiſhed, at the time of ſuch publication, their diſſent to ſuch marriage, ſuch publication of bans ſhall be void.

Sect. 4. No licence of marriage ſhall be granted by any perſon having authority to grant ſuch licences, to ſolemnize any marriage in any other church or chapel, than in the pariſh church or public chapel belonging to the pariſh or chapelry, within which the uſual place of abode of one of the perſons to be married ſhall have been for four weeks, immediately before the granting of ſuch licence; or where both or either of the parties to be married dwell in an extraparochial place having no church or chapel wherein bans have been uſually publiſhed, then in the pariſh church or chapel belonging to ſome pariſh or chapelry adjoining to ſuch extraparochial place.

Sect. 6. Nothing herein contained ſhall deprive the archbiſhop of Canterbury and his officers, of the right which hath hitherto been uſed in virtue of 25 Hen. 8. cap. 21. of granting ſpecial licences to marry at any convenient time or place.

Sect. 8. If any parſon ſhall ſolemnize matrimony in any other place than a church or public chapel, where bans have been uſually publiſhed, unleſs by ſpecial licence from the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; or ſhall ſolemnize matrimony without publication of bans, unleſs licence of marriage be firſt obtained from ſome perſon having authority to grant the ſame; every perſon wilfully ſo offending and convicted ſhall be adjudged guilty of felony, and be tranſported to ſome of his Majeſty's plantations in America for 14 years, according to the laws for tranſportation of felons. And all marriages ſolemnized in any other places than a church or public chapel, unleſs by ſpecial licence as aforeſaid, or without publication of bans, or licence of marriage from a perſon having authority to grant the ſame ſhall be void.

Sect. 9. All proſecutions for ſuch felony ſhall be commenced within three years after the offence committed.

Sect. 10. After the ſolemnization of any marriage under a publication of bans, it ſhall not be neceſſary in ſupport of ſuch marriage to give any proof of the dwelling of the parties in the reſpective pariſhes, &c. or where the marriage is by licence, it ſhall not be neceſſary to give any proof that the uſual place of abode of one of the parties, for four weeks as aforeſaid, was in the pariſh church or chapelry where the marriage was ſolemnized; nor ſhall any evidence in either of the ſaid caſes be received to prove the contrary in any ſuit touching the validity of ſuch marriage. This clauſe renders a trip to Scotland unneceſſary, and almoſt invalidates the act.

Sect. 11. All marriages ſolemnized by licence, where either of the parties not being a widower or widow, ſhall be under the age of 21 years, which ſhall be had without the conſent of the father of ſuch of the parties ſo under age, if living, or if deed, of the guardians of the perſon of the party ſo under age, or one of them; and in caſe there be no ſuch guardian, then of the mother, if living and unmarried; or if there be no mother living and unmarried, then of a guardian of the perſon appointed by the court of Chancery, ſhall be void.

Sect. 12. In caſe any ſuch guardian or mother, or any of them, whoſe conſent is made neceſſary, ſhall be non compos mentis, or beyond the ſeas, or ſhall refuſe their conſent to the marriage, it ſhall be lawful for any perſon deſirous of marrying to apply by petition to the Lord Chancellor, who is hereby impowered to proceed upon ſuch petition in a ſummary way; he may declare the ſame to be proper by an order of court.

Sect. 13. In no caſe ſhall any ſuit or proceeding be had in any eccleſiaſtical court, to compel a celebration of any marriage in facie eccleſiæ, by reaſon of any contract of matrimony, whether per verba de præſenti, or per verba de futuro, entered into after the 25th of March 1754.

By ſect. 16. forging a regiſter, of marriage, or a licence, or uttering ſame knowing it to be forged, &c. is felony.

Sect. 18. Nothing in this act ſhall extend to Scotland; nor to any marriages amongſt Quakers, or amongſt perſons profeſſing the Jewiſh religion, where both the parties to ſuch marriage ſhall be Quakers, or perſons profeſſing the Jewiſh religion; nor to any marriage ſolemnized beyond the ſeas.

By the 13 Sec. of this ſtatute the law for inforcing contracts in the ſpiritual court is altered.

But in theſe cauſes the temporal courts have given a remedy by action, for the breach of promiſe. Cro. Eliz. 79. Carter 273. In an action againſt huſband and wife, the plaintiff declared that he promiſed to marry the defendant's wife whilſt ſole, and that ſhe the ſame time promiſed to take him for her huſband, and averred that he tendered himſelf, and that ſhe refuſed, &c. It was objected that marriage was no advancement to a man, though it was to a woman; alſo that no time was laid when this agreement was to be executed; but the court over-ruled both the objections. Carth. 467. Harriſon v. Cage et ux. 1 Salk. 24. S. C. See 2 Salk. 437, 438. If a man and an infant at the age of fifteen, promiſe to intermarry, and the man refuſes, and after marries another, ſhe may, notwithſtanding her infancy, maintain an action; for this is a contract which ſhe may at theſe years enter into, being for her advantage; and though it may be voidable as to her, yet it is good againſt the man, who muſt be preſumed to have acted with as much caution as if he had contracted with a perſon of full age. Trin. 5 Geo. 2. adjudged between Holt and Ward. Note; By the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries, theſe contracts muſt be reduced into writing. That is contracts in conſideration of marriage (if not to be performed within one year). But mutual promiſes to marry each other, are not within the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries. Vide 1 Stra. 34.—Alſo ſee 1 Lord Ray. 316. 2 Show. 16. Skin. 142, 143. 2 Mod. 310.

A wife cannot be a witneſs againſt or for her huſband, nor he againſt or for her, (except in caſe of high treaſon), becauſe they are duæ animæ in una Carne. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 349. At Common law a man could neither in poſſeſſion, reverſion or remainder, limit an eſtate to his wife; but by Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. A man may covenant with other perſons to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of his wife; or may make any other conveyance to her uſe, but he may not covenant with his wife to ſtand ſeiſed to her uſe, for they are one perſon in law. A man may deviſe lands by will to his wife, becauſe the deviſe doth not take effect till after his death. Co. Litt. 112.

A wife cannot deviſe lands to her huſband: for a feme covert cannot make a will, as ſhe is ſo entirely under the power of her huſband, that what ſhe doth cannot be called her will. Nelſ. Abr. 347.

If a man takes A. S. to wife, per dureſs, though marriage be ſolemnized in facie eccleſiæ, yet it is merely void; and they are not baron and feme, becauſe there is not any conſent; and it cannot be a marriage without conſent. 1 Rol. Abr. 340.

II. As to the acts and agreements of the wife before marriage binding the huſband.

By the marriage the huſband and wife become one perſon in law, and therefore ſuch an union works an extinguiſhment or revocation of ſeveral acts done by her before the marriage; and this not only for the benefit of the huſband, but likewiſe of the wife, who, if ſhe were allowed at her pleaſure to reſcind and break through, or confirm ſeveral acts, might be ſo far influenced by her huſband, as to do things greatly to her diſadvantage. 4 Co. 60. 5 Co. 10. Keilw. 162. Co. Lit. 55. Hetl. 72. Cro. Car. 304.

But in things which would be manifeſtly to the prejudice of both huſband and wife, the law does not make her acts void; and therefore if a feme ſole makes a leaſe at will, or is leſſee at will, and afterwards marries, the marriage is no determination of her will, ſo as to make the leaſe void; but ſhe herſelf cannot without the conſent of her huſband determine the leaſe in either caſe. 5 Co. 10.

So where a warrant of attorney was given to confeſs a judgment to a feme ſole; and the court gave leave, notwithſtanding the marriage, to enter up judgment, for that the authority ſhall not be deemed to be revoked or countermanded, becauſe it is for the huſband's advantage; like a grant of a reverſion to a feme ſole, who marries before attornment, yet the tenant may attorn afterwards; otherwiſe if a feme ſole gives a warrant of attorney, and marries, for that is to charge the huſband. 1 Salk. 117, 399.

But if a feme ſole makes her will, and deviſes her land to J. S. and afterwards marries him, and then dies, yet J. S. takes nothing by the will, becauſe the marriage was a revocation of it; for as the law will not allow a woman under coverture to make a will, leſt ſhe ſhould be influenced by her huſband in the diſpoſition of her eſtate; ſo for the ſame reaſon a will made by a feme ſole is countermanded by the marriage, leſt ſhe ſhould be influenced by her huſband (if it continued after the coverture) to revoke it, or let it ſtand, as it beſt anſwered his intereſt. 4 Co. 60.

Agreements between baron and feme before marriage, are by the marriage generally extinguiſhed: but if a perſon, in conſideration of marriage, promiſe to leave his wife worth ſo much at his death, this being no duty in the life-time of the huſband, is not extinguiſhed by the marriage. Cro. Jac. 571, 623.

Alſo equity will ſet aſide the intended wife's contracts, though legally executed, when they appear to have been entered into with an intent to deceive the huſband, and are in derogation of the rights of marriage; as where a widow made a deed of ſettlement of her eſtate, and married a ſecond huſband, who was not privy to ſuch ſettlement; and it appearing to the court, that it was in confidence of her having ſuch eſtate that the huſband married her, the court ſet aſide the deed as fraudulent; ſo where the intended wife, the day before her marriage, entred privately into a recognizance to her brother, and it was decreed to be delivered up. See 2 Chan. Rep. 79, 81. 2 Vern. 17.

But where a widow, before her marriage with a ſecond huſband, aſſigned over the greateſt part of her eſtate to truſtees for children by her former huſband; and though it was inſiſted that this was without the privity of the huſband, and done with a deſign to cheat him, yet the court thought, that a widow might thus provide for her children before ſhe put herſelf under the power of a huſband; and it being proved that 8000 l. was thus ſettled, and that the huſband had ſuppreſſed the deed, he was decreed to pay the whole money, without directing any account. 1 Vern. 408.

A. before marriage with M. agrees with M. by deed in writing, that ſhe, or ſuch as ſhe ſhould appoint ſhould, during the coverture, receive and diſpoſe of the rents of her jointure, by a former huſband, as ſhe pleaſed. Per cur. The aforeſaid agreement with the feme herſelf before marriage, was by the marriage extinguiſhed. Chan. Ca. 21.

The baron before marriage articled with the feme to make a ſettlement of certain lands, before the marriage ſhould be ſolemnized; but they intermarried before the ſettlement. Then the baron died; and on a bill by the widow for an execution of the articles, it was decreed againſt the heir at law of the baron; who objected, that marrying before the execution of the ſettlement was a waiver of the articles, and the benefit of them; and ſhe being the only party with whom they were made, her marriage with the other party before performance was a releaſe in law. 2 Vent. 343.

Upon a treaty of marriage the man gave a bond to the woman, conditioned that if he did permit her to diſpoſe of 100 l. then the bond ſhould be void. Afterwards the marriage took effect, ſo that the bond became void, yet this was held to be a good agreement; and the court decreed, that the huſband ſhould give bond to truſtees with the ſame condition; it was held, that a bill may be exhibited by her procbein amy; or if truſtees exhibit a bill for or on her behalf, it is good either way. 2 Freem. Rep. 205.

A man enters into a bond to his intended wife, conditioned to leave her 1000 l. the huſband mortgaged his eſtate, and died, not leaving perſonal aſſets to diſcharge the bond; and it was decreed in equity, that though the bond was void by law, being extinguiſhed by the marriage, yet it ſhould be made good in equity; and that the wife might redeem and hold the land till ſhe was ſatisfied her debt. 2 Vern. 480.

III. As to the power of the huſband over the wife's perſon, &c.

By marriage the huſband hath power over his wife's perſon; and he may correct his wife. Dalt. 284. But if he threaten to kill her, &c. ſhe may make him find ſurety of the peace, by ſuing a writ of ſupplicavit out of Chancery or by preferring articles of the peace againſt him in the court of King's Bench, or ſhe may apply to the Spiritual Court for a divorce propter ſævitiam. Crom. 28. 136. F. N. B. 80. Hetl. 149. cont. 1 Sid. 113, 116. Dalt. c. 68. Lamb. 7. Crom. 133.

But a wife cannot, either by herſelf or her procbein amy, bring a homine replegiando againſt her huſband, for he has by law a right to the cuſtody of her, and may, if he think fit, confine her, but he muſt not impriſon her; if he does, it will be a good cauſe for her to apply to the ſpiritual court for a divorſe propter ſævitiam; and the nature and proceedings in the writ de homine replegiando ſhew that it cannot be maintained by the wife againſt her huſband. Prec. in Ch. 492.

The courts of law will grant a habeas corpus for and relieve a wife from unjuſt impriſonment.

With regard to actions by the huſband for criminal converſation with his wife.

Licence by huſband to the wife to lie with another man, cannot be pleaded in bar to an action of treſpaſs by the huſband; nor that ſhe was a notorious lewd woman; but theſe matters may be given in mitigation of damages. 12 Mod. 232. On licence proved, a verdict ought to be for defendant, the huſband not being damnified.

If adultery be committed with another man's wife without any force, but by her own conſent, though the huſband may have aſſault and battery, and lay it vi & armis; yet they ſhall in that caſe puniſh him below for that very offence; for an indictment will not lie for ſuch an aſſault and battery; neither ſhall the huſband and wife join in an action at Common law; and therefore they proceed below either civilly, that is, to divorce them, or criminally, becauſe they were not criminally proſecuted above. 7 Mod. 81.

IV. Of the huſband's intereſt in her eſtate, &c.

He hath likewiſe power over his wife's eſtate; and if ſhe hath a fee, he gaineth a freehold in her right; he alſo gaineth her chattels real, as terms for years, &c. and all chattels perſonal, in poſſeſſion of the wife, are the huſband's: but where the wife is out of poſſeſſion, or is poſſeſſed only as executrix, or the chattels are debts and things in action, if they are not recovered by him and his wife, the huſband ſhall not have them. Co. Lit. 299, 351. Though money charged on lands, is not in nature of a choſe in action, but of rent, and is given to the huſband by the intermarriage. 1 Chan. Rep. 189. The law gives the huſband an abſolute power of diſpoſing of her perſonal property, no act of her's being of any force to affect or transfer that, which by the intermarriage ſhe has reſigned to the huſband; but the freehold and inheritance of the wife, is ſubject to other rules and regulations; for the huſband by the marriage does not become abſolute proprietor of the inheritance, but as the governor of the family is ſo far maſter of it as to receive the profits of it during her life, but has no power to make an abſolute ſale of it without her conſent. 10 Co. 42. 2 Inſt. 510. 1 Sid. 11. 1 Rol. Abr. 347.

If baron and feme are jointenants for years, the baron may diſpoſe of the whole: and if the baron hath a term in the right of his feme, he may grant over the whole. 1 Danv. 702. But he cannot diſpoſe of it by will, if he doth not ſurvive her. Co. Lit. 46, 184. And as the huſband ſurviving the wife ſhall enjoy her term, againſt her executors: ſo if the wife ſurvive her huſband, ſhe ſhall have her term for years, or other chattels real again, if the huſband hath not altered the property. Co. Lit. 351. And if the huſband charges the chattel real of his wiſe with a rent, &c. if ſhe ſurvives him, it will not bind her; for ſhe ſhall hold it diſcharged, as ſhe comes in paramount the charge.

A huſband poſſeſſed of a term in his wife's right, may make a leaſe for years of the land, rendering rent to his executors or aſſigns, to commence after his death, 1 Nelſ. Abr. 344. But if a leaſe be conveyed by a feme ſole, in truſt for the uſe of herſelf, if ſhe afterwards marries, it cannot be diſpoſed of by the huſband: if ſhe dies, he ſhall not have it, but the executors of the wife. March 44. See 2 Vern. 270. If a promiſe, or bond be to a feme, or the baron and feme, and the huſband dies before he recovers, or releaſes the ſame, the wife, and not his executors, ſhall be intitled to it. F. N. B 121. 7 Hen. 6. 2. Mich. 17 Jac. 1. A man and his wife covenanted by indenture, but the wife did not ſeal it; and it was held, that if the baron ſealed and delivered it in the name of the feme, it would be the deed of the wife, during the life of the huſband: but if land is given to huſband and wife, and the heirs of their two bodies, and the huſband alone ſuffer a common recovery; this will not bind the eſtate tail, although the husband ſurvive his wife. Cro. Eliz. 769. 3 Rep. 5, 34.

The wife ſhall be received to defend her right, on the default of the husband, and he cannnot prejudice his wife, as to her freehold and inheritance. Jenk. Cent. 79. A husband cannot alien the wife's lands but by fine wherein ſhe joins; if he doth, ſhe may recover them after his death by Cui in vita. And by ſtatute, where a huſband makes leaſes of his wife's lands, for twenty-one years, &c. ſhe is to be made a party, and the rent reſerved to husband and wife, and the heirs of the wife, &c. This is of leaſes of lands of the wife's inheritance. Stat. 32 H. 8. cap. 28. If a feme having a rent for life takes husband, the baron ſhall have action of debt for the rent incurred during the coverture, after the death of the feme. 1 Danv. 719. And arrears due in the life-time of the husband, after his death, ſhall ſurvive to the wife, if ſhe outlives him, and her adminiſtrators after her death. 2 Lut. 1151. A feme leſſee for life, rendering rent, takes husband and dies, the baron ſhall be charged in action of debt for the rent which was grown during the coverture, becauſe he took the profits out of which the rent ought to iſſue. Keilw. 125. Raym. 6.

Where a ſtatute or obligation is made to a baron and feme, or to her during coverture; the husband only can make a defeaſance of it, and conclude the wife. Co. Lit. 351.

If a feme covert ſues a woman in the ſpiritual court for adultery with her husband, and obtains a ſentence againſt her, and coſts, the husband may releaſe theſe coſts, for the marriage continues, and whatever accrues to the wife during coverture, belongs to the husband; per Holt Ch. Juſt. on motion for prohibition. 1 Salk. 115.

But if the husband and wife be divorced a menſa & thoro, and the wife has her alimony, and ſues for defamation or other injury, and there has coſts, and the husband releaſes them, this ſhall not bar the wife, for theſe coſts come in lieu of what ſhe hath ſpent out of her alimony, which is a ſeparate maintenance, and not in the power of her husband. 1 Rol. Rep. 426. 3 Bulſt. 264. 1 Rol. Abr 343. 2 Rol. Abr. 293. 1 Salk. 115.

A legacy was given to a feme covert, who lived ſeparate from her husband, and the executor paid it to the feme, and took her receipt for it; yet on a bill brought by the husband againſt the executor, he was decreed to pay it over again, with intereſt. 1 Vern. 261.

V. In regard to debts contracted by the wife before marriage.

If a feme ſole indebted takes husband; it is then the debt of the husband and wife, and both are to be ſued for it; but the husband is not liable after the death of the wife, unleſs there be a judgment againſt both during the coverture. 1 Rol. Abr. 351. Where there is judgment againſt a feme ſole, who marries and dies, the baron ſhall not be charged therewith: though if the judgment be had upon ſcire facias againſt baron and feme, and then the feme dies, he ſhall be charged. 3 Mod. 186. In action brought againſt a feme ſole, if pending the action ſhe marries, this ſhall not abate the action; but the plaintiff may proceed to judgment and execution againſt her, according as the action was commenced. 1 Lill. 217. Trin. 12 W. 3. And if habeas corpus be brought to remove the cauſe, the plaintiff is to move for a procedendo on the return of the habeas corpus: alſo the court of B. R. may refuſe it, where brought to abate a juſt action. 1 Salk. 8.

In general the husband is liable to the wife's debts contracted before marriage, whether he had any portion with her or not; and this the law preſumes reaſonable, becauſe by the marriage the husband acquires an abſolute intereſt in the perſonal eſtate of the wife, and has the receipt of the rents and profits of her real eſtate during coverture; alſo whatever accrues to her by her labour, or otherwiſe, during the coverture, belongs to the husband; ſo that in favour of creditors, and that no perſon's act ſhould prejudice another, the law makes the husband liable to thoſe debts with which he took her attached. F. N. B. 265. 20 Hen. 6. 22. b. Moor 468. 1 Rol. Abr. 352. 3 Mod. 186.

If baron and feme are ſued on the wife's bond, entered into by the feme before marriage, and judgment is had thereupon, and the wife dies before execution, yet the husband is liable; for the judgment has altered the debt. 1 Sid. 337.

When baron and feme are ſued, the husband muſt make an attorney for himſelf and his wife. If a wife be arreſted, ſhe ſhall be diſcharged on common bail, let the cauſe of action be what it will: but if baron and feme be arreſted, the husband ſhall not be diſcharged, unleſs he give bail for his wife as well as himſelf. Mod. Caſ. 17. If judgment be againſt husband and wife, he dies, and ſhe ſurvives, execution may be againſt her. 1 Rol. Abr. 890. l. 10, 50.

Where a man marries a widow executrix, &c. her evidence ſhall not be allowed to charge her ſecond huſband with more than ſhe can prove to have actually come to her hands. Agreed per. cur. Abr. Eq. Ca. 227. Hil. 1719.

D. confeſſed a judgment to F. who made his wife, the plaintiff, executrix and died; ſhe adminiſtered and married a ſecond huſband, and then ſhe alone, without her husband, acknowledged ſatisfaction, though no real ſatisfaction was made. The court held that this was not good. Sid. 31.

A wife adminiſtratrix under 17 ſhall join with her huſband in an action; per Twiſden J. Mod. 297.

If a feme executrix takes baron, and he releaſes all actions, this ſhall be a bar during the coverture without queſtion; by the juſtices. But Choke doubted if it ſhall be a bar after the death of the baron; but per Pigot, once extinct is for ever. Br Releaſes, pl. 29.

If a feme executrix take baron, and the baron puts himſelf in arbitrament for death of the teſtator, and award is made, and the baron dies, the feme ſhall be barred; per tot' cur'. Brook ſays, that from hence it ſeems to him, that the releaſe of the baron without the feme is a good bar againſt the feme; quod conceditur, anno 39 H. 15. and therefore there he excepted thoſe debts in his releaſe, otherwiſe they had been extinct. Br. Releaſes, pl. 79.

Obligee made his wife executrix. She married a ſecond huſband, who became bankrupt, and the commiſſioners aſſigned this debt. But by Holt Ch. J. they have no power to aſſign any thing but what is the bankrupt's eſtate, and if the wife dies before aſſignment by him, there muſt be an adminiſtration de bonis non. His power to diſpoſe of her eſtate does not make a title in him; and though he may diſpoſe of a term which he has in jure uxoris, yet if he becomes a bankrupt, the commiſſioners cannot aſſign over his eſtate; and by Powel J. they have nothing to do with the debts of the teſtator, but only with the debts of the bankrupt. Holt's Rep. 104, 105.

Where the wife is executrix and legatee, if ſhe claims as executrix, and dies, if the ſecond baron would have advantage of it, he muſt take letters of adminiſtration de bonis non of the firſt husband, and not of the wife; but if ſhe had claimed the land and the term in it as legatee, and had not been in poſſeſſion, adminiſtration taken of the rights and debts of the wife had been good as to that intent, though his wife was not actually poſſeſſed of it, but only had a right unto it, and of ſuch things in action the huſband might be executor or adminiſtrator to his wife; and if the baron takes adminiſtration differently, and brings action he will be nonſuit, and if the wife before election marries, the baron may make the election. Lev. 216. pl. 298. Mich. 32 & 33 Eliz. C. B. in caſe of Cheyney v. Smith.

If a man marries an adminiſtratrix to a former husband, who in her widowhood waſted the aſſets of her inteſtate, the husband is liable to the debts of the inteſtate, during the life of the wife; and this ſhall be deemed a devaſtavit in him. Cro. Car. 603.

VI. In regard to her contracts during marriage.

Every gift, grant, or diſpoſition of goods, lands, or other thing whatſoever, and all obligations and feoffments made by a feme covert, without her husband's conſent, are void. 1 H. 5, 125. Fitz. Covert. 18.

The husband is obliged to maintain his wife in neceſſaries: yet they muſt be according to his degree and eſtate, to charge him; and neceſſaries may be ſuitable to a huſband's degree of quality, but not to his eſtate; alſo they may be neceſſaries, but not ex neceſſitate to charge the huſband. 1 Mod. 129. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 354. If a woman buys things for her neceſſary apparel, though without the conſent of her husband, yet the husband ſhall be bound to pay it. Browal. 47. And if the wife buys any thing for herſelf, children, or family, and the baron does any act precedent or ſubſequent whereby he ſhews his conſent, he may be charged thereupon. 1 Sid. 120. Though a wife is very lewd, if ſhe cohabits with her husband, he is chargeable for all neceſſaries for her, becauſe he took her for better, for worſe: and ſo he is if he runs away from her, or turns her away: but if ſhe goes away from her huſband, then as ſoon as ſuch ſeparation is notorious, whoever gives her credit doth it at his peril, and the husband is not liable, unleſs he take her again. 1 Salk. 119.

Although a husband be bound to pay his wife's debts for her reaſonable proviſion, yet if ſhe parts from him, eſpecially by reaſon of any miſbehaviour, and he allows her a maintenance, he ſhall never after be charged with her debts, till a new cohabitation: but if the husband receive her, or come after her, and lie with her but for a night, that may make him liable to the debts. Paſch. 3 Ann. Mod. Caſ. 147, 171. If there be an agreement in writing between husband and wife to live ſeparate, and that ſhe ſhall have a ſeparate maintenance, it ſhall bind them both till they both agree to cohabit again; and if the wife is willing to return to her husband, ſhe may; but it has been adjudged, that the husband hath no coercive power over the wife to force her, though he may viſit her, and uſe all lawful means in order to a reconciliation. Mich. Geo. 1. Mod. Caſ. in L. & E. 22. Sed quære as to her power to return?

Where there is a ſeparation by conſent, and the wife hath a ſeparate allowance, thoſe who truſt her do it upon her own credit. 1 Salk. 116. If a husband makes his wife an allowance for clothes, &c. which is conſtantly paid her, it is ſaid he ſhall not be charged. 1 Sid. 109. And if he forbids particular perſons to truſt her, he will not be chargeable: but a prohibition in general, by putting her in the news-papers, is no legal notice not to truſt her. 1 Vent. 42. Sed qu.?

The baron in an account ſhall not be charged by the receipt of his wife, except it came to his uſe. 1 Danv. 707. Yet if ſhe uſually receives and pays money, it will bind him in equity. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 61. And why not in law, in an action for money had and received? For goods ſold to a wife, to the uſe of the husband, the huſband ſhall be charged, and be obliged to pay for the ſame. Sid. 425.

If the baron is beyond ſea in any voyage, and during his abſence the wife buys neceſſaries, this is a good evidence for a jury to find that the baron aſſumpſit. Sid. 127.

But ſuch evidence is only preſumptive, and not concluſive evidence, and therefore the jury in ſuch caſe finding it ſpecially, the court cannot give judgment againſt the baron; for their being neceſſaries and the employment, with the reſidue of the ſpecial circumſtances, is only matter of evidence, upon which the jury ſhould proceed to aſcertain the fact, whether the baron promiſed or not. Sid. 127. in caſe of Manby v. Scott.

And the baron might contradict ſuch preſumptive evidence by other proofs; as that he gave her ready money to buy, &c. Sid. 127. in caſe of Manby v. Scott.

If the wife pawns her cloaths for money, and afterwards borrows money to redeem them, the husband is not chargeable unleſs he were conſenting, or that the firſt ſum came to his uſe. 2 Show. 283.

If a wife takes up clothes, as ſilk, &c. and pawns them before made into clothes, the husband ſhall not pay for them, becauſe they never came to his uſe; otherwiſe if made up and worn, and then pawned; per Holt Ch. J. at Guildhall. 1 Salk. 118.

A wife may uſe the goods of her husband, but ſhe may not diſpoſe of them: and if ſhe takes them away, it is not felony, for ſhe cannot by our law ſteal the goods of her husband; but if ſhe delivers them to an adulterer, and he receives them, it will be felony in him. 3 Inſt. 308, 310.

VII. As to crimes committed by the wife.

The will of the wife is ſubject to that of the husband; ſo that if they commit a felony together, ſhe ſhall be neither principal nor acceſſary: and if a wife doth damage to another, ſhe can make no ſatisfaction during the coverture, but the husband muſt do it. F. N. B. 188.

But if husband and wife commit treaſon or murder, they ſhall be both found guilty; and the wife ſhall not be diſcharged, on preſumption it was by coercion of the husband. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 47. And a wife, for her own crimes, may be indicted without her husband; and ſhe may ſue and be ſued without her husband, in the ſpiritual court. 9 Rep. 72. 2 Rol. Abr. 298. So if ſhe commit a theft of her own voluntary act, or by the bare command of her husband, ſhe is puniſhable as much as if ſhe was ſole. H. P. C. 65. Dalt. 27, 104. Aſſ. pl. 40. Fitz. Coron. 199.

A man muſt anſwer for the treſpaſſes of his wife: if a feme covert ſlander any perſon, &c. the husband and wife muſt be ſued for it, and execution is to be awarded againſt him. 11 Rep. 62.

A feme covert generally ſhall anſwer as much as if ſhe were ſole, for any offence not capital againſt the Common law or ſtatute; and if it be of ſuch nature, that it may be committed by her alone, without the concurrence of her husband, ſhe may be puniſhed for it without the huſband by way of indictment, which being a proceeding grounded merely on the breach of the law, the husband ſhall not be included in it for any offence to which he is no way privy. 9 Co. 71. Hawk. P. C. 3. See Moor 813. Hob. 93. Noy 103. Savil 25. Cro. Jac. 482. 11 Co. 61.

A feme covert lent 20*l.* to be paid at 20*s.* by the week, and one ſhilling and ſixpence intereſt; the borrower paid the intereſt, which amounted to 30*s.* which the wife exacted and received; and this appearing on evidence, in an action brought by the husband for the money, Holt Ch. J. ruled it to be an uſurious contract by the husband, ſufficient to diſcharge and avoid the obligation civiliter, though not ſufficient to charge the husband criminaliter. Skin. 348.

If the wife incur the forfeiture of a penal ſtatute, the husband may be made a party to an action or information for the ſame, as he may be generally to any ſuit for a cauſe of action given by his wife, and ſhall be liable to anſwer what ſhall be recovered thereon. See 1 Hawk. P. C. 3. and the authorities there cited.

If a feme covert, pretending herſelf to be ſole, marries a ſecond husband, he ſhall have no action againſt the firſt, becauſe this action is founded on the communication and contract of the wife, which will not bind the husband; beſides this is felony. 1 Sid. 375. 1 Lev. 237.

Husband and wife may be found guilty of nuſance, battery, &c. and the reaſon why in burglary, larceny, &c. ſhe is excuſed, is, becauſe ſhe could not tell what property the husband might claim in the goods. Arg. 10 Mod. 63.

Husband and wife were indicted for keeping a bawdy-houſe and procuring lewdneſs. The court held the indictment good, and ſaid, that keeping the houſe does not neceſſarily import property, but may ſignify that ſhare of government which the wife has in a family as well as the husband. 10 Mod. 63.

Husband and wife were indicted for keeping a common gaming-houſe, and held good, and compared it to the caſe of Queen v. Williams; for as there the wife may be concerned in acts of bawdry, ſo here ſhe may be active in promoting gaming, and furniſh the gueſts with all conveniencies for the purpoſe. 10 Mod. 335.

VIII. Of acts done by one or both jointly or ſeverally, &c.

At Common law any alienation made by the husband of the wife's land, whether by feoffment, fine or recovery, was a diſcontinuance, and after his death ſhe was put to her cui in vita, to reinſtate herſelf; but now by the ſtatute 32 H. 8. cap. 38. it is provided, That no fine levied by the husband alone, of lands, being the freehold and inheritance of the wife, ſhall in any wiſe be or make a diſcontinuance, or be otherwiſe prejudicial to her or her heirs, but that the wife and her heirs ſhall and may lawfully enter into the ſaid lands, according to their rights and titles therein. 2 Inſt. 681.

A wife is ſub poteſtate viri, and therefore her acts ſhall not bind her, unleſs ſhe levy a fine, &c. when ſhe is examined in private, whether ſhe doth it freely, or by compulſion of the huſband: if baron and feme levy a fine, this will bar the feme: and where the feme is examined by writ, ſhe ſhall be bound; elſe not. 1 Danv. Abr. 708. Therefore where baron and feme acknowledge a deed to be inrolled, or a ſtatute, &c. this will not bind the feme. becauſe ſhe is not examined by writ.

If a common recovery be ſuffered by huſband and wife of the wife's lands, this is a bar to the wife; for ſhe ought to be examined upon the recovery. Pl. Com. 514. a. 10 Co. 43. a. 1 Rol. 347. l. 19. Vide poſt, this diviſion.

So if huſband and wife are vouchees in a common recovery, the recovery ſhall be a bar, though the wife be not examined; for though it be proper that ſhe be examined, yet that is not neceſſary, and is frequently omitted. Dict. 1 Sid. 11. per Roll, Sti. 319, 320.

A wife is diſabled to make contracts, &c. 3 Inſt. 110. And if a married woman enters into bond as feme ſole, if ſhe is ſued as feme ſole, ſhe may plead Non eſt factum, and the coverture will avoid her bond. 1 Lill Abr. 217. A feme covert may plead non aſſumpſit, and give coverture in evidence, which makes it no promiſe, &c. Raym. 395.

In caſe money be due to the huſband by bill or bond, or for rent on a leaſe, and it is paid to the wife; this ſhall not prejudice him, if after payment he publickly diſagrees to it. 19 Jac. 1. B. R. 2 Shep. Abr. 426. Contra, if ſhe is uſed to receive money for him, or if it can be proved the money paid came to his uſe.

If a feme covert levies a fine of her own inheritance without her huſband, this ſhall bind her and her heirs, becauſe they are eſtopped to claim any thing in the land, and cannot be admitted to ſay ſhe was covert againſt the record; but the huſband may enter and defeat it, either during the coverture, to reſtore him to the freehold he held jure uxoris, or after her death to reſtore himſelf to his tenancy by the courteſy, becauſe no act of a feme covert can transfer that intereſt which the intermarriage has veſted in the huſband; and if the huſband avoids it during the coverture, the wife or her heirs ſhall never after be bound by it. Bro. Tit. Fines, 33 10 Co. 43. Hob. 225. 7 Co. 8. Co. Lit. 46.

Leaſe made by baron and feme ſhall be ſaid to be the leaſe of them both, till the feme diſagrees, which ſhe cannot do in the life of the baron. Br. Agreement, pl. 6.

A man was infeoffed to the uſe of a feme ſole, who took an huſband. They both for money ſell the land to B. who pays it to the wife, and ſhe and her huſband do pray the feoffee to make eſtate to B. Afterwards her huſband dies. Now, by the Chancellor and all the juſtices, ſhe ſhall have aid againſt the firſt feoffee by ſubpoena, to ſatiſfy her for the land; and if the ſecond feoffee were conuſant, a ſubpoena ſhall be againſt him for the land; for all that the wife did during her coverture (as they ſaid) ſhall be taken to be done for fear of the huſband. Cary's Rep. 18, 19.

Fine by E. to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to his wife that ſhould be at the time of his death, for life; remainder to the ſon of E. in tail. E. took to wife A. A fine levied by E. and A. his wife, who afterwards ſurvived him, and other uſes declared, is no bar to her, becauſe it was uncertain who would be the perſon; but had the perſon been certain, there perhaps, notwithſtanding it was but a poſſibility, it might have been a bar; per Walmſley J. Cro Eliz. 826. pl. 31.

The examination of a feme covert is not always neceſſary in levying of fines, becauſe that being provided that ſhe may not at the inſtance of her huſband make any unwary diſpoſition of her property, it follows, that when the huſband and wife do take an eſtate by the fine, and part with nothing, the feme need not be examined; but where ſhe is to convey or paſs any eſtate or intereſt, either by herſelf or jointly with her huſband, there ſhe ought to be examined; therefore if A. levies a fine come ceo to baron and feme, and they render to the conuzor, the feme ſhall be examined; ſo it is where ſhe takes an eſtate by the fine rendering rent. 2 Inſt. 515. 2 Rol. Abr. 17.

If baron and feme by fine ſur conceſſit grant land to J. S. for 99 years, and warrant the ſaid land to J. S. during the ſaid term, and the baron dies, and J. S. is evicted by one that hath a prior title, he may thereupon bring covenant againſt the feme, notwithſtanding ſhe was covert at the time when the fine was levied. 2 Saund. 177. 1 Sid. 466. S. C. 1 Mod. 290. 2 Keb. 684, 703.

A recovery, as well as a fine by a feme covert, is good to bar her, becauſe the præcipe in the recovery anſwers the writ of covenant in the fine, to bring her into court, where the examination of the judges deſtroys the preſumption of the law, that this is done by the coercion of the huſband, for then it is to be preſumed they would have refuſed her. 10 Co. 43. 2 Rol. Abr. 395. Vide ante this diviſion.

If a huſband diſſeiſe another to the uſe of his wife, this does not make her a diſſeiſoreſs, ſhe having no will of her own, nor will any agreement of hers to the diſſeiſin during the coverture, make her guilty of the diſſeiſin, for the ſame reaſon; but her agreement after her huſband's death will make her a diſſeiſoreſs, becauſe then ſhe is capable of giving her conſent, and that makes her tenant of the freehold, and ſo ſubject to the remedy of the diſſeiſee. 1 Rol. Abr. 660. Bro. Diſſeiſin 67.

But if a feme covert actually enters and commits a diſſeiſin, either ſole or together with her huſband, then ſhe is a diſſeiſoreſs, becauſe ſhe thereby gains a wrongful poſſeſſion; but ſuch actual entry cannot be to the uſe of her huſband or a ſtranger, ſo as to make them diſſeiſors, becauſe though by ſuch entry ſhe gains an eſtate, yet ſhe has no power of transferring it to another. Co. Lit. 357. 1 Rol. Abr. 660. Bro. Diſſeiſin 15, 67. See 8 Hen. 6. 14. cont.

If the huſband, ſeiſed of lands in right of his wife, makes a leaſe thereof for years by indenture or deed poll, reſerving rent; all the books agree this to be a good leaſe for the whole term, unleſs the wife, by ſome act after the huſband's death, ſhews her diſſent thereto, for if ſhe accepts rent which becomes due after his death, the leaſe is thereby become abſolute and unavoidable; the reaſon whereof is, that the wife, after her intermarriage, being by law diſabled to contract for, or make any diſpoſition of, her own poſſeſſions, as having ſubjected herſelf and her whole will to the will and power of her huſband; the law therefore transfers the power of dealing and contracting for her poſſeſſions to the huſband, becauſe no other can then intermeddle therewith, and, without ſuch power in the huſband, they would be obliged to keep them in their own manurance or occupation, which might be greatly to the prejudice of both; but to prevent the huſband's abuſing ſuch power, and leſt he ſhould make leaſes to the prejudice of his wife's inheritance, the law has left her at her liberty after his death, either to affirm and make good ſuch leaſe, or defeat and avoid it, as ſhe finds it ſubſervient to her own intereſt; and this ſhe may do, though ſhe joined in ſuch leaſe, unleſs made purſuant to ſtatute 32 Hen. 8. cap. 28. Bro. Acceptance 10. Bro. Leaſes 24. Cro. Jac. 332. 2 And. 42. Co. Lit. 45. Plow. 137. Cro. Jac. 563. Yelv. 1. Cro. Eliz. 769.

Huſband and wife make a leaſe for years, by indenture, of the wife's lands, reſerving rent; the leſſee enters, the huſband before any day of payment dies; the wife takes a ſecond huſband, and he at the day accepts the rents, and dies; and it was held, that the wife could not now avoid the leaſe, for by her ſecond marriage ſhe transferred her power of avoiding it to her huſband, and his acceptance of the rent binds her, as her own act before ſuch marriage would have done; for he by the marriage ſucceeded into the power and place of the wife, and what ſhe might have done either as to affirming or avoiding ſuch leaſe before marriage, the ſame may the huſband do after the marriage. Dyer 159. 1 Rol. Abr. 475. 1 Rol. Rep. 132.

The huſband being ſeiſed of copyhold lands in right of his wife in fee, makes thereof a leaſe for years not warranted by the cuſtom, which is a forfeiture of her eſtate, yet this ſhall not bind the wife or her heirs after the huſband's death, but that they may enter and avoid the leaſe, and thereby purge the forfeiture; and the diverſity ſeems between this act, which is at an end when the leaſe is expired or defeated by the entry of the lord, or the wife after the huſband's death, and ſuch acts as are a continuing detriment to the inheritance, as wilful waſte by the huſband, which tends to the deſtruction of the manor; ſo of non-payment of rent, denial of ſuit or ſervice; for ſuch forfeitures as theſe bind the inheritance of the wife after the huſband's death; but in the other caſe the huſband cannot forfeit by this leaſe more than he can grant, which is but for his own life. 2 Rol. Rep. 344, 361, 372. Cro. Car. 7. Cro. Eliz. 149. 4 Co. 27.

A feme covert is capable of purchaſing, for ſuch an act does not make the property of the huſband liable to any diſadvantage, and the huſband is ſuppoſed to aſſent to this, as being to his advantage, but the huſband may diſagree; and it ſhall avoid the purchaſe; but if he neither agrees nor diſagrees, the purchaſe is good, for his conduct ſhall be eſteemed a tacit conſent, ſince it is to turn to his advantage; but in this caſe, though the huſband ſhould agree to the purchaſe, yet after his death ſhe may waive it, for having no will of her own at the time of the purchaſe, ſhe is not indiſpenſably bound by the contract; therefore if ſhe does not, when under her own management and will, by ſome act expreſs her agreement to ſuch purchaſe, her heirs ſhall have the privilege of departing from it. Co. Lit. 3. a.

Jointreſs paying off a mortgage was decreed to hold over till ſhe or her executor be ſatisfied, and intereſt to be allowed her. Chan. Caſes 271.

The huſband gave a voluntary bond after marriage to make a jointure of ſuch value on his wife; the huſband accordingly makes a jointure; the wife gives up the bond; the jointure is evicted; the jointure ſhall be made good out of the huſband's perſonal eſtate, there being no creditors in the caſe; and the delivery up of the bond by a feme covert could no ways bind her intereſt. Vern. 427. pl. 402.

A feme covert agrees to ſell her inheritance, ſo as ſhe might have 200*l.* of the money ſecured to her; the land is ſold, and the money put out in a truſtee's name accordingly; this money ſhall not be liable to the huſband's debts, nor ſhall any promiſe by the wife, to that purpoſe, ſubſequent to the firſt original agreement, be binding in that behalf. 2 Vern. 64, 65. pl. 58. Trin. 1688.

IX. Of joinder in actions, &c.

In thoſe caſes where the debt or cauſe of action will ſurvive to the wife, the huſband and wife are regularly to join in action; as in recovering debts due to the wife before marriage; in actions relating to her freehold or inheritance, or injuries done to the perſon of the wife. 1 Rol. Abr. 347.

But if a feme ſole hath a rent-charge, and rent is in arrear and ſhe marries, and the baron diſtrains for this rent, and thereupon a reſcous is made, this is a tort to the baron himſelf, and he may have an action alone. Cro. Eliz. 439. Owen 82. S. P. Moor. 584. S. C.

So if a feme ſole hath right to have common for life, and ſhe takes huſband, and ſhe is hindered in taking the common, he may have an action alone without his wife, it being only to recover damages. 2 Bulſt. 14.

But if baron and feme are diſſeiſed of the lands of the feme, they muſt join in action for the recovery of this land. 1 Bulſt. 21.

The baron may have an action alone upon the Stat. 5 R. 2. ſt. 1. c. 2. for entering into the land of the feme; treſpaſs and taking charters of the inheritance of the feme; quare impedit, &c. But for perſonal torts, they muſt join, though the baron is to have the damages. 1 Danv. 709. 1 Rol. Rep. 360. The huſband is to join in actions for battery to the wife; and a wife may not bring any action for wrong to her without her huſband. Co. Lit. 132, 326. An action for a battery on the wife, brought by huſband and wife, muſt be laid to the damage of both. 2 Lord Raym. 1209. For an injury done to the wife alone, action cannot be maintained by the huſband alone, without her; but for aſſault and debauching or lying with the wife, or for a loſs and injury done to the huſband, in depriving him of the converſation and ſervice of his wife, he alone may bring an action; and theſe laſt actions are laid for aſſault, and detaining, &c. the wife, per quod conſortium amiſit, &c. Cro. Jac. 538

For taking any thing from the wife, the huſband only is to bring the action, who has the property; for the wife hath not the property. In all caſes where the feme ſhall not have the thing recovered, but the huſband only, he alone is to bring the action. 1 Rol. Rep. 360. except as above, &c. For a perſonal duty to the wife, the baron only may bring the action: and the huſband is intitled to the fruits of his wife's labour, for which he may bring quantum meruit. 1. Lill. Abr. 227. 1 Salk. 114. Baron and feme ought to join in actions for debt due to the feme before coverture: and where an action will ſurvive to the wife, and ſhe may recover damages, ſhe muſt join with the huſband in the action. 2 Mod. 269. In caſe, before marriage, a feme enters into articles concerning her eſtate, ſhe is as a ſeparate perſon; and the huſband may be plaintiff in equity againſt the wife. Preced. Chanc. 24.

Where the feme is adminiſtratrix, the ſuit muſt be in both their names, for by the intermarriage the huſband hath authority to intermeddle with the goods as well as the wife; but in the declaration the granting adminiſtration to the feme muſt be ſet forth. Vide the Books of Entries, and Godb. 40. pl. 44.

In action for goods which the feme hath as executrix, they muſt join, to the end that the damages thereby recovered may accrue to her as executrix in lieu of the goods. Went. Off. Ex. 207.

In battery the plaintiff declared, that on ſuch a day the defendant aſſaulted and beat his wife. This action was brought by the huſband after the death of his wife, and it being a perſonal wrong is dead with the perſon; and if ſhe had been living, the huſband alone could not have the action, becauſe damages muſt be given for the tort offered to the body of his wife; quod fuit conceſſum. Yelv. 89.

In an action upon a trover before marriage, and a converſion after, the baron and feme ought to join; for this action, as a treſpaſs, diſaffirms the property; but the baron ought alone to bring a replevin, detinue, &c. for the additions admit and affirm a property in the feme at the time of the marriage, which by conſequence muſt have veſted in the baron. 1 Sid. 172. 1 Keb. 641. S. C. 1 Vent. 261. 2 Lev. 107. S. P. and that he may join the wife at his election.

But if A. declares, that the defendant being indebted to him and his wife, as executrix to one J. S. in conſideration that A. would forbear to ſue him for three months, aſſumed, &c. and avers that he forbore, and that his wife is ſtill alive, the action is well maintainable by the huſband alone, for this is on a new contract, to which the wife is a ſtranger. Carth. 462. 1 Salk. 117. Yelv. 84. Cro. Jac. 110. S. P.

In all actions real for the land of the wife, the huſband and wife ought to join. R. 1 Bul. 21. So in actions perſonal for a choſe in action, due to the wife before coverture. 1 Rol. 347. l. 53. Cro. El. 537. Vide Com. Dig. 1 V. 375. & ante & poſt.

X. Of jointly ſuing them.

The huſband is by law anſwerable for all actions for which his wife ſtood attached at the time of the coverture, and alſo for all torts and treſpaſſes during coverture, in which caſes the action muſt be joint againſt them both; for if ſhe alone were ſued, it might be a means of making the huſband's property liable; without giving him an opportunity of defending himſelf. Co. Lit. 133. Doctr. Placit. 3. 2 Hen. 6. 4.

If goods come to a feme covert by trover, the action may be brought againſt huſband and wife, but the converſion may be laid only in the husband, becauſe the wife cannot convert goods to her own uſe; and the action is brought againſt both, becauſe both were concerned in the treſpaſs of taking them. See Co. Lit. 351. 1 Rol. Abr. 6. pl. 7. Yelv. 166. Noy 79. 1 Leon 312. Cro. Car. 254, 494. 1 Rol. Abr. 348. But in debt upon a devaſtavit againſt baron and feme executrix, it ſhall not be laid quod devaſtaverunt, for a feme covert cannot waſte. 2 Lev. 145.

An action on the caſe was brought againſt baron and feme, for retaining and keeping the ſervant of the plaintiff, and judgment accordingly. 2 Lev. 63.

If a leaſe for life or years be made to baron and feme, reſerving rent, an action of debt for rent arrear may be brought againſt both; for this is for the advantage of the wife. 1 Rol. Abr. 348.

If an action be brought againſt the husband and wife, and the wife be arreſted, ſhe ſhall be diſcharged upon common bail; for nobody can be ſuppoſed to undertake for a wife who hath no property of her own. 1 Salk. 114. Comb. 355. 6 Mod. 17, 105.

Where a right of action doth accrue to a woman before marriage, as where a bond is made to her and forfeited, there, if ſhe marry, ſhe muſt be joined with the husband in an action of debt againſt the obligor. Owen 82.

Where the feme ſole is indebted, and afterwards married, ſhe and her husband ſhall both be ſued for her debts, and the action muſt be joint againſt both during her life; but if ſhe dieth, the husband ſhall not be charged with her debts, unleſs judgment was had againſt him and his wife during the coverture. F. N. B. 120.

A husband who has abjured the realm, or who is baniſhed, is thereby civiliter mortuus; and being diſabled to ſue or be ſued in right of his wife, ſhe muſt be conſidered as a feme ſole; for it would be unreaſonable that ſhe ſhould be remedileſs on her part, and equally hard on thoſe who had any demands on her, that not being able to have any redreſs from the husband, they ſhould not have any againſt her. Bro. Baron and Feme, 66. Co. Lit. 133. 1 Rol. Rep. 400. Moor. 851. 3 Bulſt. 188. 1 Bulſt. 140. 2 Vern. 104.

In aſſumpſit the defendant proved that ſhe was married, and her husband alive in France, the plaintiff had judgment, upon which as a verdict againſt evidence ſhe moved for a new trial, but it was denied; for it ſhall be intended that ſhe was divorced: beſides the husband is an alien enemy, and in that caſe, why is not his wife chargeable as a feme ſole? 1 Salk. 116. Deerly verſus Dutcheſs of Mazarine.

By the cuſtom of London, if a feme covert trades by herſelf, in a trade with which her husband does not intermeddle, ſhe may ſue and be ſued as a feme ſole. 10 Mod. 6.

A woman, whoſe husband had left her about twelve years before, had carried on a trade in her own name as a widow, and gave receipts in her own name; being ſued for debt contracted in the courſe of her trade, gave coverture in evidence, and gave evidence of her husband's having been lately alive in Ireland; and Lord Ch. Juſtice Holt directed the jury to find for the defendant; and ſo they did. 12 Mod. 603.

Where a married man is tranſported for any felony, &c. the wife may be ſued alone, for any debt contracted by her, after the tranſportation.—So determined in a caſe before Mr. Juſtice Yates, at Carliſle, and afterwards in another caſe, before Lord Mansfield, in Kent, and both determinations acquieſced in.

The feme, after divorce, ſhall re-have the goods which ſhe had before marriage. Br. Coverture, pl. 82. D. 13 pl. 63. per Fitzherbert Keilw. 122. b. pl. 75.

But if he had given or ſold them without colluſion before the divorce, there is no remedy; but if by colluſion, ſhe may aver the colluſion, and have detinue for the whole, whereof the property may be known; and as for the reſt, which conſiſts of money, &c. ſhe ſhall ſue in the ſpiritual court. Br. Deraignment and Divorce, pl. 1. cites 26 H. 8. 7.

If a man is bound to a feme ſole, and after marries her, and after they are divorced, the obligation is revived. Br. Coverture, pl. 82. Becauſe the divorce being a vinculo matrimonii, by reaſon of ſome prior impediment, as precontract, &c. makes them never husband and wife ab initio; but if the husband had made a feoffment in a fee of the lands of his wife, and then the divorce had been, that would have been a diſcontinuance as well as if the husband had died, becauſe there the intereſt of a third perſon had been concerned, but between the parties themſelves it will have relation to deſtroy the husband's title to the goods, and it proves no more than the common rule, viz. that relations will make a nullity between the parties themſelves, but not amongſt ſtrangers. Lord Raym. 521. Hill. 11 W. 3.

If a man gives lands in tail to baron and feme, and they have iſſue, and after divorce is ſued, now they have only frank tenement, and the iſſue ſhall not inherit. Br. Tail et dones, &c. pl. 9.

If the baron and feme purchaſe jointly and are diſſeiſed, and the baron releaſes, and after they are divorced, the feme ſhall have the moiety, tho' before the divorce they were no moieties; for the divorce converts it into moieties. Br. Deraignment, pl. 18. cites 32 Hen. 8.

If baron alien the wife's land, and then there is a divorce cauſa præcontractus, or any other divorce which diſſolves the marriage a vinculo matrimonii, the wife during the life of the baron may enter by ſtatute 32 Hen. 8. c. 28. Dyer 13. pl. 61. But vide Ld. Raym. 521.

But if after ſuch alienation and divorce the baron dies, ſhe is put to her cui in vita ante divortium; and yet the words of the ſtatute are, that ſuch alienation ſhall be void, but this ſhall be intended to toll the cui in vita. Mo. 58. pl. 164. Paſch. 8 Eliz. Broughton v. Conway.

Divorce cauſa adulterii of the husband; afterwards the wife ſues in the ſpiritual court for a legacy; the executor pleads the releaſe of the baron; the releaſe binds the wife, for the vinculum matrimonii continues. Cro. Eliz. 908. Vide 1 Salk. 115.

Holt held, that if feme covert after divorce a menſa & thoro, ſues for a legacy, which, if recovered, comes to her husband, there the husband may releaſe it, becauſe there is no alimony; and if he may releaſe the duty, he may releaſe the coſts. 1 Salk. 115. pl. 4. S. C. & S. P.

A divorce was a menſa & thoro, and then the husband dies inteſtate. The wife by bill pray'd aſſiſtance as to dower and adminiſtration (it being granted to another) and diſtribution. The Maſter of the Rolls bid her go to law to try if ſhe was intitled to her dower, there being no impediment, and as to that diſmiſſed the bill; and as to the adminiſtration, the granting that is in the eccleſiaſtical court; but the diſtribution more properly belongs to this court; but ſince in that court ſhe is ſuch a wife as is not intitled to adminiſtration, he diſmiſs'd the bill as to diſtribution too, and ſaid, if they could repeal that ſentence, ſhe then would be intitled to diſtribution. Ch. Prec. 111.

The eccleſiaſtical court is the proper court for alimony, and if the perſon will not obey, they cannot but excommunicate him. Het. 69.

If baron and feme are divorced cauſa adulterii, which is a divorce a menſa & thoro, they continue baron and feme: it is otherwiſe in a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, which diſſolves the marriage.

As to the conſequences of a ſeparate maintenance.

Where, on a ſeparation, lands are conveyed by the baron in truſt for the feme, Chancery will not bar the feme from ſuing the baron in the truſtee's name, and a ſurrender or releaſe by the baron ſhall not be made uſe of againſt the feme. 2 Chan. Ca. 102.

A woman living ſeparate from her husband, and having a ſeparate maintenance, contracts debts. The creditors, by a bill in this court, may follow the ſeparate maintenance whilſt it continues; but when that is determined, and the husband dead, they cannot by a bill charge the jointure with the debts: by Lord Keeper North; and the rather, becauſe the executor of the huſband, who may have paid the debt, is no party. Vern. 326.

Where the husband, during his cohabitation with the wife, makes her an allowance of ſo much a year for her expences, if ſhe out of her own good houſewifry ſaves any thing out of it, this will be the husband's eſtate, and he ſhall reap the benefit of his wife's frugality, becauſe when he agrees to allow her a certain ſum yearly, the end of the agreement is, that ſhe may be provided with clothes and other neceſſaries, and whatſoever is ſaved out of this, redounds to the husband; per Lord Keeper Finch. Freem. Rep. 304.

A term was created on the marriage of A. with B. for raiſing 200*l.* a year for pin-money, and in the ſettlement A. covenanted for payment of it. There was an arrear of one year at A.'s death, which was decreed, becauſe of the covenant to be charged on a truſt-eſtate ſettled for payment of debts, it being in arrear for one year only; ſecus had it been in arrear for ſeveral years. Chan. Prec. 26.

The plaintiff's relation (to whom he was heir) allow'd the wife pin-money, which being in arrear, he gave her a note to this purpoſe; I am indebted to my wife 100*l.* which became due to her ſuch a day; after by his will he makes proviſion out of his lands for payment of all his debts, and all monies which he owed to any perſon in truſt for his wife; and the queſtion was, whether the 100*l.* was to be paid within this truſt; and my Lord Keeper decreed not; for in point of law it was no debt, becauſe a man cannot be indebted to his wife; and it was not money due to any in truſt for her. Hill. 1701. between Cornwall and the earl of Montague. But quære; for the teſtator looked on this as a debt, and ſeems to intend to provide for it by his will. Abr. Eq. Ca. 66.

Where the wife hath a ſeparate allowance made before marriage, and buys jewels with the money ariſing thereout, they will not be aſſets liable to the husband's debts. Chan. Prec. 295.

Where there is a proviſion for the wife's ſeparate uſe for clothes, if the huſband finds her clothes, this will bar the wife's claim; nor is it material whether the allowance be provided out of the eſtate which was originally the huſband's, or out of what was her own eſtate; for in both caſes her not having demanded it for ſeveral years together, ſhall be conſtrued a conſent from her that he ſhould receive it; per Lord C. Maccleſfield. 2 Wms's Rep. 82, 84.

So where 50*l.* a year was reſerved for clothes and private expences, ſecured by a term for years, and ten years after the husband died, and ſoon after the wife died; the executors in equity demanded 500*l.* for ten years arrear of this pin-money; but it appearing that the husband maintain'd her, and no proof that ſhe ever demanded it, the claim was diſallowed. 2 Wms's Rep. 341.

Bar, or Barr, (Lat. barra, and in Fr. barre) In a legal ſenſe is a plea or peremptory exception of a defendant, ſufficient to deſtroy the plaintiff's action. And it is divided into bar to common intendment, and bar ſpecial; bar temporary, and perpetual: bar to a common intendment is an ordinary or general bar, which uſually is a bar to the declaration of the plaintiff: bar ſpecial is that which is more than ordinary, and falls out upon ſome ſpecial circumſtance of the fact, as to the caſe in hand. Termis de Ley.

Bar temporary is ſuch a bar that is good for the preſent, but may afterwards fail: and bar perpetual is that which overthrows the action of the plaintiff for ever. Plowd. 26. But a plea in bar, not giving a full anſwer to all the matter contained in the plaintiff's declaration is not good. 1 Lill. Abr. 211. If one be barred by plea to the writ, or to the action of the writ, he may have the ſame writ again, or his right action: but if the plea in bar, be to the action itſelf, and the plaintiff is barred by judgment, &c. it is a bar for ever in perſonal actions. 6 Rep. 7. And a recovery in debt is a good bar to action on the caſe for the ſame thing: alſo a recovery on aſſumpſit in caſe, is a good bar in debt, &c. Cro. Jac. 110. 4 Rep. 94.

In all actions perſonal, as debt, account, &c. a bar is perpetual, and in ſuch caſe the party hath no remedy, but by writ of error or attaint; but if a man is barred in a real action or judgment, yet he may have an action of as high a nature, becauſe it concerns his inheritance; as for inſtance, if he is barred in a formedon in deſcender, yet he may have a formedon in the remainder, &c. 6 Rep. 7. It has been reſolved, that a bar in any action real or perſonal by judgment upon demurrer, verdict, or confeſſion, is a bar to that action, or any action of the like nature for ever: but, according to Pemberton Chief Juſtice, this is to be underſtood, when it doth appear that the evidence in one action would maintain the other; for otherwiſe the court ſhall intend that the party hath miſtaken his action. Skin. 57, 58.

Bar to a common intent is good: and if an executor be ſued for his teſtator's debt, and he pleadeth that he had no goods left in his hands at the day the writ was taken out againſt him, this is a good bar to a common intendment, till it is ſhewn that there are goods; but if the plaintiff can ſhew by way of replication, that more goods have fallen into his hands ſince that time, then, except the defendant alledge a better bar, he ſhall be condemned in the action. Plowd. 26. Kitch. 215. Bro. tit. Barre.

There is a bar material, and a bar at large: bar material may be alſo called ſpecial bar; as when one, in ſtay of the plaintiff's action, pleadeth ſome particular matter, viz. a deſcent from him that was owner of the land, &c. a feoffment made by the anceſtor of the plaintiff, or the like: a bar at large is, when the defendant, by way of exception, doth not traverſe the plaintiff's title, by pleading, nor confeſs, nor avoid it, but only makes to himſelf a title in his bar. Kitch. 68. 5 H. 7. 29.

This word bar is likewiſe uſed for the place where ſerjeants and counſellors at law ſtand to plead the cauſes in court; and where priſoners are brought to anſwer their indictments, &c. whence our lawyers, that are called to the bar, are termed barriſters. 24 H. 8. c. 24.

Barraſter, Barriſter. (barraſterius) Is a counſellor learned in the law, admitted to plead at the bar, and there to take upon him the protection and defence of clients. They are termed juriſconſulti; and in other countries called licentiati in jure: and antiently barriſters at law were called apprentices of the law, in Lat. apprenticii juris nobiliores. Forteſc. The time before they ought to be called to the bar, by the ancient orders, was eight years, now reduced to five; and the exerciſes done by them (if they were not called ex gratia) were twelve grand moots performed in the inns of Chancery in the time of the grand readings, and twenty-four petty moots in the term times, before the readers of the reſpective inns: and a barriſter newly called is to attend the ſix (or four) next long vacations the exerciſe of the houſe, viz. in Lent and Summer, and is thereupon for thoſe three (or two) years ſtiled a vacation barriſter. Alſo they are called utter barriſters, i. e. pleaders ouſter the bar, to diſtinguiſh them from benchers, or thoſe that have been readers, who are ſometimes admitted to plead within the bar, as the king, queen, or prince's counſel are. Barriſters, who conſtantly attend the King's Bench, &c. are to have the privilege of being ſued in tranſitory actions in the county of Middleſex. But it hath been queſtioned, whether an action of debt doth lie for their fees; unleſs it be upon ſpecial retainer; for a counſellor's fee is honorarium quiddam, not mercenariam, as that of an attorney or ſolicitor. 2 Inſt. 213, 214, &c. Wood's Inſt. 448.

Barrator, or Barretor, (Lat. barractator, Fr. barrateur) A common mover of ſuits and quarrels, either in courts, or elſewhere in the country, that is himſelf never quiet, but at variance with one or other. Lambert derives the word barretor from the Lat. balatro, a vile knave: but the proper derivation is from the Fr. barrateur, i. e. a deceiver, and this agrees with the deſcription of a common barretor in my Lord Coke's Reports, viz. that he is a common mover and maintainer of ſuits in diſturbance of the peace, and in taking and detaining the poſſeſſion of houſes and lands, or goods by falſe inventions, &c. And therefore it was adjudged, that the indictment againſt him ought to be in theſe words, viz. That he is communis malefactor, calumniator & ſeminator litium & diſcordiarum inter vicinos ſuos, & pacis regis perturbator, &c. And there it is ſaid that a common barretor is the moſt dangerous oppreſſor in the law; for he oppreſſeth the innocent by colour of law, which was made to protect them from oppreſſion. 8 Rep. 37. No one can be a barretor in reſpect of one act only; for every indictment for ſuch crime muſt charge the defendant with being communis barractator, and conclude contra pacem, &c. And it hath been holden, that a man ſhall not be adjudged a barretor for bringing any number of ſuits in his own right, though they are vexatious, eſpecially if there be any colour for them; for if they prove falſe, he ſhall pay the defendant coſts. 1 Rol. Abr. 355. 3 Mod. 98.

A barriſter at law entertaining a perſon in his houſe, and bringing ſeveral actions in his name, where nothing was due, was found guilty of barretry. 3 Mod. 97. An attorney is in no danger of being convicted of barretry, in reſpect of his maintaining another in a groundleſs action, to the commencing whereof he was no way privy. Ibid. A common ſolicitor, who ſolicits ſuits, is a common barretor, and may be indicted thereof, becauſe it is no profeſſion in law. 1 Danv. Abr. 725. Barretors are puniſhed by fine and impriſonment, bound to the good behaviour, &c. And belonging to the profeſſion of the law, they ought to be further puniſhed by diſability to practice. 34 Ed. 3. c. 1. Hawk. P. C. 244. Vide Black. Com. 4 V. 133.

Barrel, (barillum) Is a meaſure of wine, ale, oil, &c. Of wine it contains the eighth part of a tun, the fourth part of a pipe, and the moiety of a hogſhead; that is, thirty-one gallons and a half. 1 R. 3. c. 13. Of beer it contains thirty-ſix gallons; and of ale, thirty-two gallons. Anno 23 H. 8. c. 4. and 12 Car. 2. c. 23. It is declared, that the aſſiſe of herring barrels is thirty-two gallons wine meaſure, containing in every barrel uſually a thouſand full herrings. Anno 13 El. c. 11. The eel barrel contains thirty gallons. 2 H. 6. c. 13.

Barriers, (Fr. barrieres) Signifies that which the French call jeu de barres, i. e. palæſtra, a martial exerciſe of men armed and fighting together with ſhort ſwords, within certain bars or rails which ſeparated them from the ſpectators; it is now diſuſed here in England. There are likewiſe barrier towns, or places of defence on the frontiers of kingdoms.

Barrow, (from the Sax. boerg, a heap of earth) A large hillock or mount, raiſed or caſt up in many parts of England, which ſeem to have been a mark of the Roman tumuli, or ſepulchres of the dead. The Sax. beora was commonly taken for a grove of trees on the top of a hill. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Barter, (from the Fr. baretre, circumvenire) Signifies in our books to exchange one commodity for another, or truck wares for wares. Anno 1 R. 3. c. 9. And the reaſon may be, becauſe they that exchange in this manner do endeavour, for the moſt part, one to over-reach and circumvent the other.

Barton, Is a word uſed in Devonſhire, for the demeſne lands of a manor; ſometimes the manor-houſe itſelf; and in ſome places for out-houſes and fold-yards. In the Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 12. barton lands, and demeſne lands, are uſed as ſynonyma. See Berton.

Baſe Court, (Fr. cour baſſe) Is any inferior court, that is not of record, as the court baron, &c. Kitch. fol. 95, 96.

Baſe Eſtate, (Fr. bas eſtat) Is that eſtate which baſe tenants have in their lands. And baſe tenants, according to Lambert, are thoſe who perform villainous ſervices to their lords; Kitchen fol. 41. makes baſe tenure and frank tenure to be contraries, and puts copy-holders in the number of baſe tenants; where it may be gathered that every baſe tenant holds at the will of the lord: but there is a difference between a baſe eſtate and villenage; for to hold in pure villenage is to do all that the lord will command him; and if a copy-holder have but a baſe eſtate, he not holding by the performance of every commandment of his lord, cannot be ſaid to hold in villenage: copy-holders are by the cuſtoms of manors, and continuance of time, grown out of that extreme ſervitude wherein they were firſt created.

Baſe Fee, Is a tenure in fee at the will of the lord, diſtinguiſhed from ſocage free tenure: but the Lord Coke ſays, that baſe fee is what may be defeated by limitation, or on entry, &c. Co. Lit. 1, 18. Baſſa tenura, or baſe tenure, was a holding by villenage, or other cuſtomary ſervice, oppoſed to alta tenura, the higher tenure in capite or by military ſervice, &c.——Manerium de Cheping Farendon cum pertinentiis eſt de antiquo dominico coronæ domini regis, unde omnia prædicta tenementa ſunt parcella, & de baſſa tenura ejuſdem manerii. Conſuetud. Baſtard, (baſtardus) From the Brit. baſtaerd, i. e. nothus or ſpurius, is one that is born of any woman not married, ſo that his father is not known by the order of law; and therefore is called filius populi, the child of the people.

If a woman be with child by a man, who afterwards marries her, and then the child is born, this child is no baſtard: but if a man hath iſſue by a woman before marriage, and after they marry, the iſſue is a baſtard by our law; but legitimate by the Civil law. 2 Inſt. 96, 97. If a man marries a woman groſſly big with child by another, and within three days after ſhe is delivered, in our law the iſſue is no baſtard. 1 Danv. Abr. 729. And where a child is born within a day after marriage between parties of full age, if there be no apparent impoſſibility that the huſband ſhould be the father of it, the child is no baſtard, but ſuppoſed to be the child of the huſband. 1 Rol. Abr. 358. But if the huſband be but eight or nine years of age, or if he be within the age of fourteen, the iſſue is a baſtard: ſo where a husband is gelt, or hath loſt his genitals, &c. which ſhews an impoſſibility to get a child, the iſſue of his wife, though born within marriage, is a baſtard. Co. Lit. 244. 1 Danv. 728.

By the law of the land a perſon cannot be a baſtard who is born after eſpouſals, unleſs it be by ſpecial matter. If a woman elope from her husband, ſo as he be within the four ſeas, her iſſue ſhall not be a baſtard by our law, though by the ſpiritual law he ſhall: but if the wife continues in adultery and hath iſſue, this is a baſtard in our law. 1 Danv. 730. By the common law, if the huſband be infra quatuor maria, ſo that by intendment he may converſe with his wife, and the wife hath iſſue, the child will not be a baſtard: but he is a baſtard who is born of a woman when her husband, at and from the time of the begetting to the birth, is extra quatuor maria. Co. Lit. 244. 2 Salk. 483. If a woman hath iſſue, the husband being over ſea ſo long before the birth of the iſſue, which his wife hath in his abſence, that the iſſue cannot be his, this is a baſtard. 1 Danv. 729. If the husband be only over in Ireland, it is otherwiſe.

A divorce cauſa precontractus, cauſa affinitatis, cauſa frigiditatis, &c. baſtardiſes the iſſue; not for cauſe ſubſequent to the marriage: but if the man and woman continue husband and wife for all their lives, the iſſue cannot be a baſtard by divorce after their death. 1 Danv. 730. Where a woman, on divorce a menſa & thoro, lives in adultery with another, her children by ſuch other are baſtards; for children born in adultery, are born out of the limits of matrimony. Though if husband and wife conſent to live ſeparate, the children born after ſuch ſeparation ſhall be taken to be ligitimate, becauſe the acceſs of the huſband ſhall be preſumed; but if it be found there was no acceſs, then they are baſtards. 1 Salk. 122.

But this non-acceſs of the husband ought to be proved otherwiſe than upon the wife's oath; as in the following caſe: the defendant Reading was adjudged by an order of baſtardy, to be the putative father of a baſtard child, begotten of the wife of one Almont of Shelborn. The ſaid woman, on the appeal, gave evidence, that the ſaid Reading had carnal knowledge of her body in or about Auguſt 1732, and ſeveral times ſince; and that her husband had no acceſs to her from May 1731, to the time of her examination in that court, being the 3d of October 1733, and that the ſaid Reading was the father of the ſaid child. And the queſtion on removal of the ſame into the King's Bench was, whether the wife in this caſe could be admitted as an evidence for or againſt her husband, and to baſtardize her own child. And the whole court were of opinion, that the wife could be a witneſs to no other fact but that of incontinence, and that this ſhe muſt be admitted to be a witneſs to from the neceſſity of the thing: But not for the abſence of the husband; which might properly be proved by other witneſſes; and likened it to the caſe of hue and cry, where the perſon robbed ſhall be admitted a witneſs of the fact of robbery, but not to prove any other matter relating thereto, as in what hundred the place was, and the like, becauſe that may be proved by others. 2 Seſſ. Ca. 175.

A man who hath iſſue a ſon by a woman before marriage, and afterwards marries the ſame woman, and hath iſſue a ſecond ſon born after the marriage; the firſt of theſe is termed in law a baſtard eigne, and the ſecond a mulier; by the common law, as hath been ſaid, ſuch baſtard eigne is as incapable of inheriting, as if the father and mother had never married; but yet there is one caſe in which his iſſue was let into the ſucceſſion, and that was by the conſent of the lord and perſon legitimate; as if upon the death of the father the baſtard eigne enters, and the mulier during his whole life never diſturbs him, he cannot upon the death of the baſtard eigne enter upon his iſſue. Lit. ſect. 399. Co. Lit. 245.

To exclude the mulier from the inheritance, there muſt not only be an uninterrupted poſſeſſion of the baſtard eigne during his life, but a deſcent to his iſſue. Co. Lit. 244. 1 Roſ. Abr. 624.

No man can baſtardize another after his death, that was a mulier by the laws of holy church, and who carried the reputation of legitimate during his life; for a man muſt be baſtardized by the rules of the Civil or Common law: by the rules of the Civil law, this perſon is by ſuppoſition legitimate; and if the Common law be made the judge, he cannot be baſtardized; for it is a rule of Common law, that a perſonal defect dies with the perſon, and cannot after his death be objected to his ſucceſſor that repreſents him; and this rule of law was taken from the humanity of the antients, which would not allow the calumny of the dead, as alſo from an important reaſon of convenience, for pedigrees are often derived through ſeveral perſons, concerning whom there remains little knowledge or remembrance of any thing, but only of their being; and therefore it were an eaſy matter to throw on them the aſperſion of baſtardy by any forged evidence, which cannot be confronted by oppoſite proof; and ſo it is fit to limit a time in which all proofs of baſtardy are to be diſallowed. 7 Co. 44. Jenk. Rep. 268. 1 Brownl. 42. Co. Lit. 33. a. Lit. ſect. 399. Co. Lit. 245.

Though this ſeems to be the doctrine of the old books, yet there is this modern caſe. An ejectment was brought by one Pride, againſt the earls of Bath and Montague; Pride made title as heir to George, duke of Albemarle, proving himſelf the ſon of one who was brother to the duke, and that the duke died without iſſue; the defendant gave evidence, that duke George had iſſue duke Chriſtopher, who conveyed to him; plaintiff gave evidence, that duke Chriſtopher was a baſtard, begotten of ſuch a woman, who, at the time of her marriage with the ſaid George, duke of Albemarle, was married to another man, who was then, and yet living: upon which it was objected, that ſince duke George and this woman lived together as man and wife, and were now dead, the plaintiff could not be admitted to baſtardize the iſſue, who was dead alſo; and who, during his whole life, was reputed and taken to be the legitimate ſon of the duke, and ſo ſtiled by the duke himſelf in his deed of ſettlement, and in his will, his ſon and heir; & quod juſtum non eſt aliquem poſt mortem facere baſtardum. The court held this true of ſuch a baſtard as is meant by Littleton, in his caſe of baſtard eigne, and mulier puiſne, that is, ſuch a baſtard as is born before the eſpouſals of a father and mother, who afterwards marry; and ſaid, the rule extended only to that caſe. 1 Salk. 120. Pride v. Earls of Bath, &c. 7 W. & M. 3 Lev. 410. S. C. Who tells us, that though the evidence was admitted by Holt, and Gil. Eyre, who were only in court, the jury were not ſatisfied with it, and gave a verdict for the Earl of Bath.

If a woman hath a child forty weeks and eight days after the death of her husband, it ſhall be legitimate, the law having appointed no exact certain time for birth of legitimate iſſues. 1 Danv. 726. 2 Lill. Abr. 236. If a man or woman marry a ſecond wife or husband, the firſt being living, and have iſſue by ſuch ſecond wife or husband, the iſſue is a baſtard. 39 Ed. 3. cap. 14, &c. Before the ſtatute 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 21. One was adjudged a baſtard, Quia filius ſacerdotis.

Baſtard is terminus a quo, he is the firſt of his family; for he hath no relation of which our law takes any notice; yet this muſt be underſtood as to civil purpoſes, there being a relation as to moral purpoſes; for he cannot marry his own mother, or baſtard ſiſter. 3 Salk. 66, 67.

A baſtard cannot inherit land as heir to his father; nor can any perſon inherit lands as heir to him, but one that is heir of his body. Lit. Sec. 401.

But though he cannot inherit to any anceſtor, yet when he hath gotten a name of reputation, he may purchaſe by it; for all ſurnames were originally acquired by reputation. George Shelly conveyed lands to the uſe of himſelf, the remainder to George Shelly his ſon; whereas in truth George was born of one B. in matrimony of one C. yet was reputed the ſon of George, and educated by him; though the boy was but ſix years old, it was ruled that he ſhould take the remainder; for having got by reputation the name of George Shelly, theſe words are a certain deſignation of the perſon to take the remainder. But if a remainder be limited to the eldeſt iſſue of J. S. whether legitimate or illegitimate, and J. S. hath iſſue a baſtard, he ſhall not take this remainder; for it is not veſted in J. S, as it was in the other caſe, but is in contingency, and the certain time is not defined when this contingency ſhall happen; for the baſtard at his birth does not acquire the reputation of being the iſſue of J. S, and ſince the baſtard, when firſt in being, cannot take by virtue of this limitation, he can never take it; for he cannot be underſtood to be the perſon deſigned and marked out by theſe words, if after his birth it depends on the uncertainty of popular reputation, whether he ſhould take the remainder or not; and ſuch a deſignation of the perſon as contains no certainty in itſelf, or no relation to any other certain matter that may reduce it to certainty, is a void limitation. Co. Lit. 3. b. 6 Co. 65. 1 New Abr. 309.

But where a remainder is limited to the eldeſt ſon of Jane S. whether legitimate or illegitimate, and ſhe hath iſſue, a baſtard ſhall take this remainder, becauſe he acquires the denomination of her iſſue by being born of her body; and ſo it was never uncertain, who was deſigned by this remainder. Noy 35.

If parents are married, and afterwards divorced, this gives the iſſue the reputation of children; and ſo doth a ſubſequent marriage of the parents. 6 Co. 65. Hugh's Abr. 363.

If a man, in conſideration of natural affection and love, covenants to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of a baſtard, this is not good; for he is not de ſanguine patris; but it is ſaid that a woman may give lands in frank-marriage with her baſtard, becauſe he is of the blood of the mother; but he hath no father, but from reputation only. Dyer 374. And. 79. 6 Co. 77. Noy 35.

A court of equity will not ſupply the want of a ſurrender of a copyhold eſtate, in favour of a baſtard, as it will for a legitimate child. Preced. Chan. 475.

Baſtardy, in relation to the ſeveral manners of its trial, is diſtinguiſhed into general and ſpecial baſtardy. General baſtardy is the baſtardy tried by the biſhop, which in it's notion contains two things. 1ſt, It ſhould not be a baſtard made legitimate by a ſubſequent marriage. 2dly, That it ſhould be a point collateral to the original cauſe of action. 1 Rol. Abr. 361.

Formerly baſtards had a way in ſuch iſſues to trick themſelves into legitimation, for they uſed to bring feigned actions, and get ſuborned witneſſes before the biſhop to prove their legitimation, and then got the certificate returned of record, and after that their legitimation could never be conteſted; for being returned of record as a point adjudged by its proper judges, and remaining among the memorials of the court, all perſons were concluded by it; but this created great inconveniencies, as it is taken notice of in the preamble of the 9 Hen. 6. cap. 11. in the caſe of ſeveral perſons of quality; for the evidence of the contrary parties concerned were never heard at the trial, and yet their intereſt was concluded: To remedy this inconvenience without altering the rules of law, it was enacted, that before any writ to the biſhop there ſhould be a proclamation made in the ſame court, and after that the iſſue ſhould be certified into Chancery, where proclamation ſhould be made once in every month for three months, and then the Chancellor ſhould certify to the court where the plea depends, and afterwards it ſhall be again proclaimed in the ſame court, that all that are concerned may go to the ordinary to make their allegations; and without theſe circumſtances, any writ granted to the ordinary, and all proceedings thereupon, ſhall be utterly void. 1 Rol. Abr. 361.

If the ordinary certify or try baſtardy without a writ from the King's temporal courts, it is void; for the ſpiritual juriſdiction within theſe kingdoms is derived from the King, and therefore it muſt be exerciſed in the manner the King hath appointed; for it would be injurious if they ſhould declare legitimation where the rights of inheritance are ſo nearly concerned, without any apparent neceſſity. 1 Rol. Abr. 361.

The certificate muſt be under the ſeal of the ordinary, and not under the ſeal of the commiſſary only, for the command is to the biſhop himſelf to certify, and therefore the execution of the command muſt appear to be by the biſhop in proper perſon. 1 Rol. Abr. 362.

If a man be certified baſtard, this binds perpetually, though the perſon ſo adjudged a baſtard is not party to the action, for all perſons are eſtopped to ſpeak againſt the memorial of any judicatory; becauſe the act of the public judicatory under which any perſon lives, is his own act; and were he not thus bound, there might be contradiction in certificates. 1 Rol. Abr. 362.

If a man be certified baſtard, that doth not bind a ſtranger till returned of record, becauſe it is no judicial act till recorded in the place appointed to record ſuch tranſactions, nor doth it bind the party to the action till judgment thereon, becauſe if he avoid the action he avoids all conſequences of the action; and therefore if the defendant be certified baſtard by the ordinary, yet if the plaintiff be non-ſuit they cannot go on to trial, and ſo the biſhop's certificate never appears of record, and therefore is not binding. 1 Rol. Abr. 362.

If a man be certified mulier, no man is eſtopped to baſtardize him, for though he may be a mulier by the Spiritual law, yet he may be a baſtard by our law; and therefore any man, notwithſtanding the certificate, may plead the iſſue of ſpecial baſtardy. 1 Rol. Abr. 362.

Special baſtardy, which is always tried by a jury in the temporal courts, is twofold: 1ſt, Where the baſtardy is the giſt of the action, and the material part of the iſſue. 2dly, Where thoſe are baſtards by the Common law that are muliers by the Spiritual law, and ſuch are thoſe that are born before marriage, whoſe parents afterwards intermarry, and whoſe marriage is admitted. 1 New Abr. 314. Co. Lit. 134. 1 Rol 367. Hob. 117.

If a man receives any temporal damage by being called a baſtard, and brings his action in the temporal courts, and the defendant juſtifies that the plaintiff is a baſtard, this muſt be tried at Common law, and by writ to the biſhop; for otherwiſe you ſuppoſe an action brought in a court which hath not a capacity to try the cauſe of action. 1 Brownl. 1. Hob. 179. Godol. 479. Co. Ent. 29.

If it be found by an aſſiſe taken at large that a man is a baſtard, the temporal courts are judges of it, for the jury cannot be eſtopped to ſpeak truth which may fall within their own knowledge, and what they find becomes the record of the temporal courts, and ſo within their conuzance. Bro. Baſtardy, 97.

A baſtard by the Common law is made incapable of any eccleſiaſtical benefice; for the ſacraments ought not to be committed to infamous perſons: and it is the law of nature, that a baſtard who is born out of lawfull marriage, (unleſs there be ſome particular law to the contrary) has not any relation to his father, who begot him, but ſhall rely on his mother that bore him. Forteſcue 88, 89.

By ſtatute a woman with child of a baſtard, muſt be firſt examined by a juſtice of peace, and the fact of her being with child proved by her oath, and then the juſtice is to ſend his warrant for the reputed father; when the party is brought before the juſtice, he muſt enter into a recognizance with ſufficient ſureties for his appearance at the next ſeſſions, &c. and he may be continued on the recognizance till the woman is delivered of the child: after the child is born, two juſtices (quorum unus) reſiding neareſt the place, are to examine the matter by witneſſes, &c. and make their order for relief of the pariſh from the baſtard: and if the two juſtices cannot agree, they may refer it to the ſeſſions; alſo the putative father may appeal from the order of the two juſtices; or may give ſecurity to the pariſh, &c. Stat. 18 Eliz. c. 3. 3 Car. 1. c. 4.

The two next juſtices of peace (one being of the quorum) may make orders for puniſhing the mother and father of a baſtard child; and by order of the juſtices, the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor may ſeize goods, and receive the annual rents of lands, &c. of the father and mother to diſcharge the pariſh: and juſtices of the peace have power to commit lewd women having baſtards to the houſe of correction, for one year, &c. But perſons able to keep them, are not within the ſtatute. It is adjudged murder to conceal the death of a baſtard child when born, unleſs there be proof to the contrary that it was ſtill-born. 18 Eliz. c. 3. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. 7 Jac. 1. c. 4. 21 Jac. 1. c. 27.

It hath been adjudged, that in order to convict a woman by force of this laſt ſtatute, there is no need that the indictment be drawn ſpecially, or conclude againſt the form of the ſtatute; for the ſtatute doth not make a new offence, but only makes ſuch concealment an undeniable evidence of murder. 2 Hawk. 438.

Alſo, it hath been agreed, that where a woman appears to have endeavoured to conceal the death of ſuch child within the ſtatute, there is no need of any proof that the child was born alive, or that there were any ſigns of hurt upon the body, but it ſhall be undeniably taken that the child was born alive, and murdered by the mother. 2 Hawk. 438.

But it hath been adjudged, that where a woman lay in a chamber by herſelf, and went to bed without pain, and waked in the night, and knocked for help but could get none, and was delivered of a child, and put it in a trunk, and did not diſcover it till the following night, yet ſhe was not within the ſtatute, becauſe ſhe knocked for help. 2 Hawk. 438.

Alſo, it hath been agreed, that if a woman confeſs herſelf with child beforehand, and afterwards be ſurprized and delivered, no body being with her, ſhe is not within the ſtatute, becauſe there was no intent of concealment; and therefore in ſuch caſes it muſt appear by ſigns of hurt upon the body, or ſome other way, that the child was born alive. 2 Hawk. 438.

If a woman be with child, and any gives her a potion to deſtroy the child within her, and ſhe takes it, and it works ſo ſtrongly that it kills her, this is murder; for it was not given to cure her of a diſeaſe, but unlawfully to deſtroy the child within her; and therefore he that gives her a potion to this end, muſt take the hazard, and if it kills the mother, it is murder. 1 Hal. H. P. C. 429, 430.

If a woman be quick or great with child, if ſhe take, or any other give her any potion to make an abortion, or if a man ſtrike her, whereby the child within her is killed; though it be a great crime, yet it is not murder nor manſlaughter by the law of England, becauſe it is not yet in rerum natura, nor can it legally be known, whether it were killed or not: ſo it is, if after ſuch child were born alive, and after die of the ſtroke given to the mother, this is not homicide. 1 Hal. H. P. C. 433. Yet the offender may be indicted for a miſdemeanor, at Common law.

If a man procure a woman with child to deſtroy her infant when born, and the child is born, and the woman, in purſuance of that procurement, kill the infant; this is murder in the mother, and the procurer is acceſſary. 1 Hal. H. P. C. 433.

If a woman declares herſelf to be with child of a baſtard, and on oath before a juſtice charge any perſon with getting it; he may grant his warrant to apprehend the perſon charged, and for bringing him before any juſtice, &c. who may commit him to gaol or the houſe of correction, unleſs he give ſecurity to indemnify the pariſh, or enter into recognizance with ſureties to appear at the next Quarter-Seſſions, and perform ſuch order as ſhall be made purſuant to the ſtatute 18 Eliz. c. 3. But in caſe the woman ſhall die, or be married, or miſcarry, &c. or if no order is made in due time, the man ſhall be diſcharged: and no juſtice may ſend for, or compel any woman before ſhe is delivered, and one month after, to anſwer queſtions, &c. Stat. 6 Geo. 2. c. 31. He that gets a baſtard in the hundred of Middleton, in the county of Kent, forfeits all his goods and chattels to the king. MS. de Temp. Ed. 3. Qu. if now law.

If any one conſpire to charge another to be the father of a baſtard child, he may be indicted and puniſhed with public whipping, &c. It is only in the power of the king and parliament to make a baſtard legitimate. Danv. Rep. 37. See 13 Geo. 2. c. 29.

Baſtardy, (baſtardia) Signifies a defect of birth, objected to one born out of wedlock. Bract. lib. 5. c. 19. See Baſtard.

Baſtard-eigne, (Fr.) Is where the eldeſt child of a married perſon is a baſtard. See Baſtard.

Baſton, (Fr.) A ſtaff, or club; and by our ſtatutes it ſignifies one of the warden of the Fleet's ſervants or officers who attend the king's courts with a red ſtaff for taking ſuch into cuſtody who are committed by the court. 1 R. 2. c. 12. 5 Eliz. c. 23. See Tipſtaff.

Baſum, Per baſum tolnetum capere. To take toll by ſtrike; and not by heap; per baſum, being oppoſed to in cumulo vel cantello——Tolnetus ad molendinum ſit ſecundum conſuetudinem regni; menſuræ per quas tolnetus capi debet ſint concordantes menſuris domini regis, & capiatur tolnetus per baſum, & nichil incumulo vel cantello. Conſuetud. Batable Ground, Is taken for the land that lay between England and Scotland, heretofore in queſtion, when they were diſtinct kingdoms, to which it belonged. Anno 23 H. 8. c. 6. and 32 H. 8. cap. 6. It ſeems to mean, as if we ſhould ſay, litigious or debatable ground, i. e. land about which there is debate; and by that name Skene calls ground that is in controverſy. Camb. Britan. Tit. Cumberland.

Bath, (Lat. bathon, called by the Britons badiza) Has been termed the city of ſickmen: it is a place of reſort in Somerſetſhire famous for its medicinal waters. The chairmen are there to be licenſed by the mayor and aldermen, for carrying perſons to and from the hot baths, &c. under the penalty of 10*s.* by ſtatute 7 Geo. 1. c. 19. And a public hoſpital or infirmary for poor is eſtabliſhed in the city of Bath, the governors whereof have power to hold all charities, &c. and appoint phyſicians, ſurgeons and other officers: any perſons not able to have the benefit of the Bath waters, may be admitted into this hoſpital, their caſe being atteſted by ſome phyſician, and the poverty of the patients certified by the miniſter and churchwaadens of the place where they live, &c. Every perſon ſo admitted, ſhall have the uſe of the old hot bath, and be entertained and relieved in the hoſpital; and when cured or diſcharged, ſuch perſons ſhall be ſupplied with 3*l.* each, to defray the expence of removing them back to their pariſhes, &c. Stat. 12 Geo. 2. c. 31.

Battel, (Fr. battaile) Signifies a trial by combat, which was anciently allowed of in our laws, where the defendant in appeal of murder or felony might fight with the appellant, and make proof thereby whether he be culpable or innocent of the crime. Glanv. lib. 14. c. 1. When an appellee of felony wages battel, he pleads that he is Not guilty, and that he is ready to defend the ſame by his body, and then flings down his glove; and if the appellant will join battel he replies, That he is ready to make good his appeal by his body upon the body of the appellee, and takes up the glove: and then the appellee lays his right hand on the book, and with his left hand takes the appellant by the right, and ſwears thus: Hear this thou who calleſt thyſelf John by the name of baptiſm, that I who call myſelf Thomas by the name of baptiſm, did not feloniouſly murder thy father W. by name, on the day and year of, &c. at B. as you ſurmiſe, nor am any way guilty of the ſaid felony; ſo help me God. And then he ſhall kiſs the book and ſay; And this I will defend againſt thee by my body, as this court ſhall award. Then the appellant lays his right hand on the book, and with his left hand takes the appellee by the right, and ſwears to this effect: Hear this thou who calleſt thyſelf Thomas by the name of baptiſm, that thou didſt feloniouſly on the day, and in the year, &c. at B. murder my father W. by name; ſo help me God. And then he ſhall kiſs the book, and ſay; And this I will prove againſt thee by my body, as this court ſhall award. This being done, the court ſhall appoint a day and place for the battle, and in the mean while the appellee ſhall be kept in cuſtody of the marſhal, and the appellent ſhall find ſureties to be ready to fight at the time and place, unleſs he be an approver, in which caſe he ſhall alſo be kept by the marſhal: and the night before the day of battle, both parties ſhall be arraigned by the marſhal, and ſhall be brought into the field before the juſtices of the court where the appeal is depending, at the riſing of the ſun, bare-headed and bare-legged from the knee downwards, and bare in the arms to the elbows, armed only with baſtons an ell long, and four cornered targets: and before they engage, they ſhall both make oath That they have neither eat nor drank, nor done any thing elſe by which the law of God may be depreſſed, and the law of the devil exalted: and then, after proclamation for ſilence under pain of impriſonment, they ſhall begin the combat wherein if the appellee be ſo far vanquiſhed that he cannot or will not fight any longer, he may be adjudged to be hanged immediately; but if he can maintain the fight till the ſtars appear, he ſhall have judgment to be quit of the appeal: and if the appellant becomes a crying coward, the appellee ſhall recover his damages, and may plead his acquittal in bar of a ſubſequent indictment or appeal; and the appellant ſhall for his perjury loſe his liberam legem. If an appellant becomes blind by the act of God after he has waged battel, the court will diſcharge him of the battel; and in ſuch caſe it is ſaid that the appellee ſhall go free.

This trial by battel is at the defendant's choice; but if the plaintiff be under an apparent diſability of fighting, as under age, maimed, &c. he may counterplead the wager of battel, and compel the defendant to put himſelf upon his country; alſo any plaintiff may counterplead a wager of battel, by alledging ſuch matters againſt the defendant, as induce a violent preſumption of guilt; as in appeal of death, that he was found lying upon the deceaſed with a bloody knife in his hand, &c. for here the law will not oblige the plaintiff to make good his accuſation in ſo extraordinary a manner, when in all appearance he may prove it in the ordinary way. It is a good counterplea of battel that the defendant hath been indicted for the ſame fact; when if appeal be brought, the defendant ſhall not wage battel. And if a peer of the realm bring an appeal, the defendant ſhall not be admitted to wage battel, by reaſon of the dignity of the appellant. 2 Hawk. P. C. 426, 427. This trial by battel is before the conſtable and marſhal; but with all its ceremonies is now diſuſed. See Glanv. lib. 14. Bracton, lib. 3. Britton, c. 22. Smith de Rep. Angl. lib. 2. Co. Litt. 294, &c. Vide Trial by Battel, deſcribed Black. Com. 3 V. 339. Vide Combat.

Battery, (from the Fr. batre, to ſtrike, or Sax. batte, a club) Is an injury done to another in a violent manner; as by ſtriking or beating of a man, puſhing, jolting, filipping upon the noſe, &c. And it is alſo defined by our law to be a treſpaſs committed by one man upon another vi & armis & contra pacem, &c. This offence is puniſhable by action and indictment; on action for the injury at the ſuit of the party, the defendant ſhall render damages, &c. And on indictment at the ſuit of the king, for a breach of the peace, he ſhall be fined according to the heinouſneſs of the offence. Dalt. 282. 1 Hawk. P. C. 134. For here the perſon offending is ſubject to a twofold puniſhment, viz. a fine to the king, and damages to the party; though it is uſual only to bring an action for damages, which in battery and maihem the court may increaſe upon view of the record and the perſon. 2 Rol. Abr. 572.

But a man may beat another who firſt aſſaults him, in his own defence, and juſtify in an action by ſpecial pleading, as that the battery was occaſioned by his own aſſault; or the defendant may give that in evidence upon Not guilty to an indictment: and the record of the conviction of the offender by indictment may ſerve afterwards for evidence in action of treſpaſs for the ſame aſſault and battery. Terms de Ley. 2 Rol. Abr. 546 By Holt Chief Juſtice the leaſt touching of another in anger is a battery: if two or more meet in a narrow paſſage, and without any violence or deſign of harm, the one touches the other gently, it will be no battery: but if either of them uſe violence to force his way in a rude manner, or any ſtruggle is made about the paſſage to that degree as to do hurt, it will be a battery. Mod. Caſ. 149. The beating of another in a moderate manner, is lawful in ſome caſes, as the parent of his child, a maſter his ſervant, or apprentice, &c. The attorney general will in moſt caſes grant a noli proſequi, upon an indictment, where the party injured hath an action depending, unleſs he diſcontinues his action, and engages to proceed by indictment only. See Aſſault.

Batus, (Lat. from the Sax. bat) A boat, and battellus a little boat—Conceſſit etiam idem Hugo Wake pro ſe & hæred. ſuis, quod predictus abbas & ſucceſſores ſui & eccleſia ſua de Croyland habeat tres battellos in Harnolt, &c. Chart. Ed. 1. 20 Julii 18 regni. Hence we have an old word batſwain, for ſuch as we now call boatſwain of a ſhip.

Baudekin, (baldicum, and baldekinum) Cloth of baudekin, or gold: it is ſaid to be the richeſt cloth, now called brocade, made with gold and ſilk, or tiſſue, upon which figures in ſilk, &c. were embroidered. Anno 4 Hen. 8. c. 6. erat pannus auro rigidus, plumatoque opere intertextus: but ſome writers account it only cloth of ſilk.

Bawdy-Houſe, (lupanar, fornix) A houſe of ill fame, kept for the reſort and commerce of lewd people of both ſexes. The keeping of a bawdy-houſe comes under the cognizance of the temporal law, as a common nuſance, not only in reſpect of its endangering the public peace by drawing together diſſolute and debauched perſons, and promoting quarrels, but alſo in reſpect of its tendency to corrupt the manners of the people, by an open profeſſion of lewdneſs. 3 Inſt. 205. 1 Hawk. P. C. 196. Thoſe who keep bawdy-houſes are puniſhed with fine and impriſonment; and alſo ſuch infamous puniſhment, as pillory, &c. as the court in diſcretion ſhall inflict: and a lodger who keeps only a ſingle room for the uſe of bawdry, is indictable for keeping a bawdy-houſe. 1 Salk. 382. Perſons reſorting to a bawdy-houſe, are puniſhable, and they may be bound to the good behaviour, &c. But if one be indicted for keeping or frequenting a bawdy-houſe, it muſt be expreſly alledged to be ſuch a houſe, and that the party knew it; and not by ſuſpicion only. Poph. 208. A conſtable, upon information, that a man and woman are gone to a lewd houſe, or about to commit fornication or adultery, may, if he finds them together, carry them before a juſtice of peace without any warrant, and the juſtice may bind them over to the ſeſſions. Dalt 214

It ſeems always to have been the better opinion, that a man may be bound to his good behaviour, for haunting bawdy-houſes with women of bad fame, as alſo for keeping bad women in his own houſe. 1 Hawk. 132.

Conſtables in theſe caſes may call others to their aſſiſtance, enter bawdy-houſes, and arreſt the offenders for a breach of the peace: in London they may carry them to priſon; and by the cuſtom of the city, whores and bawds may be carted. 3 Inſt 206.

A wife may be indicted together with her huſband, and condemned to the pillory with him for keeping a bawdy-houſe; for this is an offence as to the government of the houſe; in which the wife has a principal ſhare; and alſo ſuch an offence as may generally be preſumed to be managed by the intrigues of her ſex. 1 Hawk. 2.

On an indictment for keeping a diſorderly houſe, a female witneſs ſwore, that ſhe was a ſailor's wife, and during her huſband's abſence out of the realm, ſhe had often proſtituted herſelf there: Lord Raymond ſaid it was an odious piece of evidence, and ought not to be heard. Barlow's Juſtice, tit. Bawdy-houſe.

But it is ſaid, a woman cannot be indicted for being a bawd generally; for that the bare ſolicitation of chaſtity is not indictable. 1 Hawk. 196. 1 Salk. 382.

It was always held infamous to keep a bawdy-houſe; yet ſome of our hiſtorians mention bawdy-houſes publicly allowed here in former times till the reign of Hen. 8. and aſſign the number to be eighteen thus allowed on the bank-ſide in Southwark. See Stews and Brothel-Houſes.

If two inhabitants, paying ſcot and lot, ſhall give notice to a conſtable of any perſon keeping a bawdy-houſe, the conſtable ſhall go with them before a juſtice of peace, and ſhall, (upon ſuch inhabitants making oath, that they believe the contents of ſuch notice to be true, and entering into a recognizance of 20*l* each, to give material evidence of the offence,) enter into a recognizance of 30*l.* to proſecute with effect ſuch perſon for ſuch offence at the next ſeſſions; the conſtable ſhall be paid his reaſonable expences by the overſeers of the poor, to be aſcertained by two juſtices; and if the offender be convicted, the overſeers ſhall pay to the two inhabitants 10*l.* each. On the conſtable's entering into ſuch recognizance as aforeſaid, the juſtice ſhall bind over the perſon accuſed to the next ſeſſions, and, if he ſhall think proper, demand ſecurity for ſuch perſon's good behaviour in the mean time. A conſtable neglecting his duty forfeits 20*l.* Any perſon appearing as maſter or miſtreſs, or as having the care or management of any bawdy-houſe, ſhall be deemed the keeper thereof, and liable to be puniſhed as ſuch. Stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 36.

Bay, or pen, Is a pond-head made up of a great height, to keep in water for the ſupply of a mill, &c. ſo that the wheel of the mill may be driven by the water coming thence, through a paſſage or flood-gate. A harbour where ſhips ride at ſea, near ſome port, is alſo called a bay: and this word is mentioned anno 27 Eliz. c. 19.

Beacon, (from the Sax. beacen, i. e. ſignum) A ſignal well known; being a fire maintained on ſome eminence near the coaſts of the ſea, to prevent invaſions, &c. 4 Inſt. 148. 8 Eliz. c. 13. Hence beaconage (beaconagium) money paid towards the maintenance of beacons: and we ſtill uſe the word beckon to give notice unto. See Stat. 5 Hen. 4. &c. The king hath an excluſive power by commiſſion, under the Great Seal, to appoint them. Black. Com. 1 V. 265. They are uſually veſted by letters patent in the office of Lord High Admiral. Ib. See the power given to the Trinity Houſe, per Stat. 8 Eliz. c. 13.

Bead, or bede, (Sax. bead, oratio) A prayer; ſo that to ſay over beads, is to ſay over one's prayers. They were moſt in uſe before printing, when poor perſons could not go to the charge of a manuſcript book: though they are ſtill uſed in many parts of the world, where the Roman Catholic religion prevails. They are not allowed to be brought into England, or any ſuperſtitious things, to be uſed here, under the penalty of a præmunire, by Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 2.

Beam, Is that part of the head of a ſtag where the horns grow, from the Sax. beam, i. e. arbor; becauſe they grow out of the head as branches out of a tree. Beam is likewiſe uſed for a common balance of weights in cities and towns.

Bearers, Signifies ſuch as bear down or oppreſs others, and is ſaid to be all one with maintainers.—Juſtices of aſſiſe ſhall inquire of, hear, and determine maintainors, bearers, and conſpirators, &c. Stat. 4 Ed. 3. c. 11.

Beaſts of chaſe (feræ campeſtres) Are five, viz. the buck, doe, fox, marten, and roe. Manw. part 1. pag. 342. Beaſts of the foreſt (feræ Silveſtres) otherwiſe called beaſts of venary, are the hart, hind, boar, and wolf. Ibid. par. 2. c. 4. Beaſts and fowls of the warren, are the hare, coney, pheaſant, and partridge. *Ibid. Beau-pleader, (pulchre placitando, Fr. beauplaider, i. e. to plead fairly) Is a writ upon the ſtatute of Marlbridge, 52 Hen. 3. c. 11. whereby it is enacted, That neither in the circuit of juſtices, nor in counties, hundreds, or courts-baron, any fines ſhall be taken for fair pleading, viz for not pleading fairly or aptly to the purpoſe; upon which ſtatute this writ was ordained, directed to the ſheriff, bailiff, or him who ſhall demand ſuch fine, and it is a prohibition not to do it; whereupon an alias and pluries and attachment may be had, &c. New. Nat. Br. 596, 597. And beau-pleader is as well in reſpect of vicious pleadings, as of the fair pleading, by way of amendment. 2 Inſt. 122.

Bedel, (bedellus, Sax. bydel) A cryer or meſſenger of a court, that cites men to appear and anſwer: and is an inferior officer of a pariſh, or liberty, very well known in London, and the ſuburbs. There are likewiſe univerſity bedels, and church bedels; now called ſummoners and apparitors: and Manwood in his Foreſt Laws, ſaith there are foreſt bedels, that make all manner of garniſhments for the courts of the foreſt, and all proclamations, and alſo execute the proceſs of the foreſt, like unto bailiffs errant of a ſheriff in his county.——Edgarus interdicit omnibus miniſtris, ideſt vicecomitibus, bedellis & balivis, &c. Ne introeant fines & limites dicti mariſci. Ingulph. Benefice, (beneficium) Is generally taken for any eccleſiaſtical living or promotion; and benefices are divided into elective and donative: ſo alſo it is uſed in the Canon law. 3 Inſt. 155. Duarenus de Beneficiis, lib. 2. c. 3. All church preferments and dignities are benefices; but they muſt be given for life, not for years, or at will. Deaneries, prebendaries, &c. are benefices with cure of ſouls, tho' not comprehended as ſuch within the Stat. 21 H. 8. c. 13. of reſidence: but, according to a more ſtrict and proper acceptation, benefices are only rectories, and vicarages.

Beneficia were formerly portions of land, &c. given by lords to their followers for their maintenance; but afterwards, as theſe tenures became perpetual and hereditary, they left their name of beneficia to the livings of the clergy, and retained to themſelves the name of feuds. And beneficium was an eſtate in land at firſt granted for life only, ſo called, becauſe it was held ex mero beneficio of the donor; and the tenants were bound to ſwear fealty to the lord, and to ſerve him in the wars, thoſe eſtates being commonly given to military men: but at length, by the conſent of the donor, or his heirs, they were continued for the lives of the ſons of the poſſeſſors, and by degrees paſt into an inheritance: and ſometimes ſuch benefices were given to biſhops, and abbots, ſubject to the like ſervices, viz. to provide men to ſerve in the wars; and when they as well as the laity had obtained a property in thoſe lands, they were called regalia when given by the king; and on the death of a biſhop, &c. returned to the king till another was choſen. Spelm. of Feuds, c. 2. Blount, verb. Beneficium. Lands were anciently held in beneficio; and then granted in alodium perpetuo jure, &c.

Under this head the following particulars are to be attended to, which include ſeveral requiſites in order to conſtitute a legal title to a benefice, as,

I. Preſentation, for which ſee title Preſentation.

II. Examination and refuſal, &c.

It is very well known, that in the firſt ſettlement of the church of England, the biſhops of the ſeveral dioceſes had them under their own immediate care; and that they had the clergy living in a community with them, whom they ſent abroad to ſeveral parts of their dioceſes, as they ſaw occaſion to employ them; but that by degrees, they found a neceſſity of fixing preſbyters within ſuch a compaſs, to attend upon the ſervice of God amongſt the inhabitants, and thoſe precincts, which are ſince called pariſhes, were at firſt much larger; that when lords of manors were inclined to build churches for their own conveniency, they found it neceſſary to make ſome endowments, to oblige thoſe who officiated in their churches to a diligent attendance; that upon this, the ſeveral biſhops were very well content to let thoſe patrons have the nomination of perſons to ſuch churches, provided they were ſatisfied of the fitneſs of thoſe perſons, and that it were not deferred beyond ſuch a limited time. So that the right of patronage is really but a limited truſt; and the biſhops are ſtill, in law, the judges of the fitneſs of the perſons to be employed in the ſeveral parts of their dioceſes. But the patrons never had the abſolute diſpoſal of their benefices upon their own terms; but if they did not preſent fit perſons within the limited time, the care of the places did return to the biſhop, who was then to provide for them. 1 Still. 309.

And by the ſtatute of Articuli Cleri, 9 Ed. 2. ſt. 1. cap. 13. it is enacted as followeth: "It is deſired, that ſpiritual perſons, whom our lord the king doth preſent unto benefices of the church (if the biſhop will not admit them, either for lack of learning, or for other cauſe reaſonable) may not be under the examination of lay perſons in the caſes aforeſaid, as it is now attempted, contrary to the decrees canonical; but that they may ſue unto a ſpiritual judge for remedy, as right ſhall require. The anſwer: Of the ability of a parſon preſented unto a benefice of the church, the examination belongeth to a ſpiritual judge; ſo it hath been uſed heretofore, and ſhall be hereafter."

As to cauſes of refuſal.

The moſt common and ordinary cauſe of refuſal is want of learning. But there are alſo many other cauſes for which a clerk preſented may lawfully be refuſed; as, if he be perjured before a lawful judge; or if he be an heretick or ſchiſmatick; or irreligious; or (as is ſaid in the old books) if he is a baſtard, and not diſpenſed withal; or if he is within age; or if he or his patron be excommunicated for the ſpace of forty days; or if he be outlawed; or guilty of forgery; or hath committed ſimony in the procuring the preſentment he brings; or of any other preſentment to a former benefice; or hath committed manſlaughter; that is, if he be attainted thereof, and not pardoned; and that it is ſaid, that the ordinary may refuſe a clerk upon his own knowledge for an offence committed by him, which is a good cauſe of refuſal, although he be not convicted thereof by the law; and this ſhall be tried by iſſue, whether it be true or not: and generally, all ſuch as are ſufficient cauſes of deprivation, are alſo ſufficient cauſes of refuſal. Watſ. c. 20.

If the clerk refuſed be the preſentee of a biſhop, or other eccleſiaſtical patron, the ordinary is not bound to give notice of the refuſal: or if he ſhould do it, ſuch patron can never revoke nor vary his preſentation, by preſenting one afterwards that is better qualified, without the ordinary's conſent; the law ſuppoſing him that is a ſpiritual perſon to be capable of chuſing an able clerk: and ſo lapſe may come upon him unavoidably, if the clerk firſt preſented be juſtly refuſed. But if the clerk preſented be the preſentee of a lay patron, and be refuſed by the ordinary, the ordinary in moſt caſes is bound to give notice to the patron of ſuch refuſal: for if in ſuch caſe no notice is given, no lapſe can run, tho' no other clerk be preſented; nor if notice be given, unleſs upon trial the clerk was juſtly refuſed. But if a clerk be for good cauſe refuſed, and notice thereof be in due time and manner given to the patron, and no other clerk be preſented in time; lapſe doth run to the ordinary. Watſ. c. 12.

In the caſe of Hale and the biſhop of Exeter, M. 3 Will. it was ſaid by the court, That if the ordinary refuſe becauſe he is criminous, he need not give notice of the refuſal; for the crime is as much in the cognizance of the patron as of the biſhop; but if he refuſe becauſe illiterate, he muſt give notice. 2 Salk. 539.

Berghmaſter, (from the Sax. berg a hill, mons quaſi, maſter of the mountains) Is a chief officer among the Derbyſhire miners, who alſo executes the office of a coroner.—Juratores dicunt, quod in principio quando mineratores veniunt in campum mineras quærentes, inventa minera, veniunt ad ballivum, qui dicitur bergmaſter, et petunt ab eo duas metas, &c.——Eſc de An. 16 Ed. 1. num. 34. in Turri London. The Germans call a mountaineer, or miner, a bergman.

Bergmoth, or Berghmote, Comes from the Sax. berg. a hill, and gemote, an aſſembly; and is as much as to ſay an aſſembly or court upon a hill, which is held in Derbyſhire, for deciding pleas and controverſies among the miners.—Juratores etiam dicunt quod placita del berghmoth debent teneri de tribus ſeptimanis in tres ſeptimanas ſuper mineram de Pecco. Beria, berie, berry, A large open field; and thoſe cities and towns in England which end with that word, are built in plain and open places, and do not derive their names from boroughs, as Sir Henry Spelman imagines. Moſt of our gloſſographers in the names of places have confounded the word berie with that of bury and borough, as if the appellative of ancient towns; whereas the true ſenſe of the word berie is a flat wide campain, as is proved from ſufficient authorities by the learned Du Freſne, who obſerves that Beria Sancti Edmundi, mentioned by Mat. Pariſ. ſub ann. 1174. is not to be taken for the town, but for the adjoining plain. To this may be added, that many flat and wide meads, and other open grounds, are called by the name of beries, and berryfields: the ſpacious meadow between Oxford and Iſley was in the reign of king Athelſtan called Bery. B. Twine, MS. As is now the largeſt paſture ground in Quarendon in the county of Buckingham, known by the name of Beryfield. And tho' theſe meads have been interpreted demeſne or manor meadows, yet they were truly any flat or open meadows, that lay adjoining to any vil or farm.

Bernet, Incendium, comes from the Sax. byran, to burn: it is one of thoſe crimes which by the laws of Hen. 1. cap. 15. emendari non poſſunt. Sometimes it is uſed to ſignify any capital offence. Leges Canuti apud Brompt. c. 90. Leg. Hen. 1. c 12, 47.

Berſa, (Fr. bers) A limit or bound.—Paſturum duorum taurorum per totam berſam in foreſta noſtra de Chippenham, &c. Mon. Angl. tom. 2. pag. 210. A park pale.

Berſare, (Germ. berſen, to ſhoot) Berſare in foreſta mea ad tres arcus. Chart. Ranulf. Comit. Ceſtr. ann. 1218. viz. to hunt or ſhoot with three arrows in my foreſt. Berſarii were properly thoſe that hunted the wolf.

Berſelet, (berſeletta) A hound——Ad berſandum in foreſta cum novem arcubus & ſex berſelitis. Chart. Reg. de Quincy.

Berton, or Barton, (bertona) Is that part of a country farm where the barns and other inferior offices ſtand, and wherein the cattle are foddered, and other buſineſs is managed. See Clauſ. 32. Ed. 1. m. 17. It alſo ſignifieth a farm, diſtinct from a manor: in ſome parts of the weſt of England they call a great farm a berton; and a ſmall farm a living.——Bertonarii were ſuch as we now call farmers or tenants of bertons; huſbandmen that held lands at the will of the lord.——Cum bertona, terris & tenementis, quæ bertonarii modo tenent ad voluntatem. Chart. Johan. Epiſc. Exon. 24 Dec. Ann. 1337.

Berewicha, or Berwica, Villages or hamlets belonging to ſome town or manor. This word often occurs in Domeſday: iſtæ ſunt berewichæ ejuſdem manerii.——

Berwick, Merchandize carried into or brought out of Scotland, or the iſles thereof, ſhall be brought firſt to Berwick, on pain of forfeiture: and the merchants and freemen there ſhall have the farm of the waters royal and fiſhings within the ſeigniory. Stat. 22 Ed. 4. c. 8. The liberties of Berwick are declared, by the Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 28.

By Stat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 42. ſect. 3. Wales and Berwick upon Tweed ſhall be included in all acts of parliament, wherein the kingdom of England, or that part of GREAT BRITAIN called England, ſhall be mentioned. As to Berwick, vide Black. Com. 1 V. 98. &c.

Bery, or Bury, The vill or ſeat of habitation of a nobleman, a dwelling or manſion houſe, being the chief of a manor; from the Sax. beorg, which ſignifies a hill or caſtle; for heretofore noblemens ſeats were caſtles, ſituate on hills, of which we have ſtill ſome remains. As in Herefordſhire, there are the beries of Stockton, Hope, &c. It was anciently taken for a ſanctuary.

Beſaile, (Fr. biſayeul, proavus) The father of the grandfather: and in the Common law it ſignifies a writ that lies where the great grandfather was ſeiſed the day that he died, of any lands or tenements in fee-ſimple; and after his death a ſtranger entereth the ſame day upon him, and keeps out the heir. F. N. B. 222. Vide Booth on Real Actions.

Beſcha, (from the Fr. bercher, fodere, to dig) A ſpade or ſhovel.——In communi paſtura turbas, cum una ſola beſcha fodient & nihil dabunt. Prior. Lew. Cuſtumar. de Hecham, pag. 15. Hence perhaps, una Beſcata terra incluſa—Mon. Ang. tom. 2. fol. 642. may ſignify a piece of land uſually turned up with a ſpade, as gardiners fit and prepare their grounds; or may be taken for as much land as one man can dig with a ſpade in a day.

Beſtials, (beſtials) Beaſts or cattle of any ſort; anno 4 Ed. 3. c. 3. it is written beſtayle; and is generally uſed for all kinds of cattle, though it has been reſtrained to thoſe purveyed for the king's proviſion. 12 Car. 2. c. 4.

Beverches, Bed-works, or cuſtomary ſervices done at the bidding of the lord by his inferior tenants.——Inter ſervitia cuſtumaria tenentium in Blebury, de dominio abbatis & conventus Reading——prædictus abbas habebit de eis duas precarias carrucarum per annum, quae vocantur beverches, & cum qualibet carruca duos homines qualibet die ad prandium abbatis. Cartular. Rading. MS. f. 225.

Bewared, An old Saxon word ſignifying expended; for before the Britons and Saxons had plenty of money, they traded wholly in exchange of wares.

Bidale, or Bidall, (precaria potaria, from the Sax. biddan, to pray or ſupplicate) Is the invitation of friends to drink ale at the houſe of ſome poor man, who thereby hopes a charitable contribution for his relief: it is ſtill in uſe in the weſt of England: and is mentioned 26 Hen. 8. c. 6. And ſomething like this ſeems to be what we commonly call houſe-warming, when perſons are invited and viſited in this manner on their firſt beginning houſe-keeping.

Bidding of the Beads, (bidding from the Sax. biddan) was anciently a charge or warning given by the pariſh prieſt to his pariſhioners at ſome ſpecial times to come to prayers, either for the ſoul of ſome friend departed, or upon ſome other particular occaſion. And at this day our miniſters, on the Sunday preceding any feſtival or holiday in the following week, give notice of them, and deſire and exhort their pariſhioners to obſerve them as they ought; which is required by our canons. See Stat. 27 Hen. 8. c. 26.

Bidentes, Two yearlings or ſheep of the ſecond year.—Will. Longſpe A. D. 1234. granted to the prior and canons noas of Bereſter, paſturam ad quinquaginta bidentes, cum dominicis bidentibus meis ibidem paſcendis. Paroch. Antiq. p. 216.

Biduana, A faſting for the ſpace of two days. Matt. Weſt. p. 135.

Biga, bigata, A cart or chariot drawn with two horſes coupled ſide to ſide; but it is ſaid to be properly a cart with two wheels, ſometimes drawn by one horſe; and in our ancient records it is uſed for any cart, wain or waggon.——Et quod sunt cum bigis & carris cum caeteris phaleris ſuper tenementum ſuum, &c. Mon. Angl. tom. 2. fol. 256.

Bigamus, Is a perſon that hath married two or more wives, ſucceſſively after each other, or a widow; for the canoniſts account a man that hath married a widow, to have been twice married. It is mentioned in the ſtatutes 18 Ed. 3. c. 2. 1 Ed. 6. c. 12. And 2 Inſt. 273.

Bigamy, (bigamia) Signifies a double marriage, or marriage of two wives; it is uſed in our law, for an impediment to be a clerk, by reaſon he hath been twice married. 4 Ed. 1. c. 5. Which ſeems to be grounded upon the words of St. Paul to Timothy epiſt. 1. cap. 5. verſ. 2. Oportet ergo epiſcopum irreprehenſibilem eſſe & unius uxoris virum: upon which it is ſaid the canoniſts have founded their doctrine, that he who hath been twice married, may not be a clerk; ſo that they do not only exclude ſuch from holy orders, but alſo deny them all privileges that belong to clerks: but this law is aboliſhed by 1 Ed. 6. and ſee the Stat. 18 Eliz. cap 7. The ſtatute called the Statute de Bigamis, is the 4 Ed. 1. and the 1 Jac. 1. c. 11. calls it bigamy, where a perſon marries the ſecond wife, &c. the firſt being living, which is felony; but this is properly polygamy, and not bigamy, which laſt is not where a perſon hath two wives together, but where he hath two wives one after another. 2 Inſt. 273.

There is a proviſo in the 1 Jac. 1. c. 11. that the ſaid ſtatute ſhall not extend to any perſon or perſons, who ſhall be at the time of ſuch marriage divorced by a ſentence in the eccleſiaſtical court declared to be void and of no effect; nor to any perſon or perſons, for or by reaſon of any former marriage had or made within age of conſent.

According to the conſtruction of this proviſion, divorces a menſa et thoro, cauſa adulterii and ſævitiæ are within the exception in the ſtatute, though the word ſeparamus, and not divortiamus, be made uſe of in the ſentence; for the ſtatute being penal, ſhall be conſtrued favourably; and ſuch ſeparations are taken for divorces in common underſtanding. 1 Hawk. P. C. 111. 3 Inſt. 89. H. P. C. 122. Kel. 27. Cro. Car. 461.

It has been held likewiſe with reſpect to the conſent of parties. If one of the parties only were under the age of conſent at the time of ſuch marriage, the exception extends as well to the party above the age of conſent, as to the other; becauſe the power of diſagreeing was equal on both ſides. Vide on this ſubject Black. Com. 4 V. 163.

Bigot, Is a compound of ſeveral old Engliſh words, and ſignifies an obſtinate perſon; or one that is wedded to an opinion, in matters of religion, &c. It is recorded that when Rollo the firſt duke of Normandy, refuſed to kiſs the King's foot, unleſs he held it out him, it being a ceremony required in token of ſubjection for that dukedom, with which the King inveſted him; thoſe who were preſent taking notice of the duke's refuſal, adviſed him to comply with the king's deſire, who anſwered them ne ſe bigot; whereupon he was in deriſion called bigot, and the Normans are ſo called to this day.

Bilagines, (Lat.) By-laws of corporations, &c. See By-laws.

Bilanciis deferendis, A writ directed to a corporation, for the carrying of weights to ſuch a haven, there to weigh the wool that perſons by our ancient laws were licenſed to tranſport. Reg. Orig. 270.

Bilinguis, Signifies generally a double tongued man; or one that can ſpeak two languages; but it is uſed in our law for a jury that paſſeth between an Engliſhman and a foreigner, whereof part ought to be Engliſh, and part ſtrangers. Though this is properly a jury de medietate linguæ. 28 Ed. 3. c. 13.

Bill, (billa) Is diverſly uſed: in law proceedings; it is a declaration in writing, expreſſing either the wrong the complainant hath ſuffered by the party complained of, or elſe ſome fault committed againſt ſome law or ſtatute of the realm: and this bill is ſometimes addreſſed to the Lord Chancellor of England, eſpecially for unconſcionable wrongs done to the complainant; and ſometimes to others having juriſdiction, according as the law directs. It contains the fact complained of, the damage thereby ſuſtained, and petition of proceſs againſt the defendant for redreſs; and it is made uſe of as well in criminal as civil matters. In criminal caſes, when a grand jury upon a preſentment or indictment find the ſame to be true, they indorſe on it billa vera; and thereupon the offender is ſaid to ſtand indicted of the crime, and is bound to make anſwer unto it: and if the crime touch the life of the perſon indicted, it is then referred to the jury of life and death, viz. the petty jury, by whom if he be found guilty, then he ſhall ſtand convicted of the crime, and is by the judge condemned to death. Terms de Ley 86. 3 Inſt. 30. See Ignoramus and Indictment.

Many of the proceedings in the King's Bench are by bill: it is the ancient form of proceeding, and was, and yet ſhould be filed in parchment, in all ſuits, not by original. The declaration is a tranſcript of it, or ſuppoſed ſo to be. See Amendment.

Bill is alſo a common engagement for money given by one man to another; being ſometimes with a penalty, called penal bill, and ſometimes without a penalty, though the latter is moſt frequently uſed. By a bill we ordinarily underſtand a ſingle bond, without a condition; and it was formerly all one with an obligation, ſave only its being called a bill when in Engliſh, and an obligation when in Latin. Weſt. Symbol. lib. 2 ſect. 146. A bill has been defined to be a writing, wherein one man is bound to another, to pay a ſum of money on a day that is future, or preſently on demand, according to the agreement of the parties at the time it is entered into, and the dealings between them, and it is divided into ſeveral ſorts, as a bill that is ſingle, a bill that is penal, &c. Where there is a bill of 100 l. to be paid on demand, it is a duty preſently, and there needs no actual demand. Cro. Eliz. 548. And a ſingle obligation or bill, upon the ſealing and delivery, is debitum in præſenti, though ſolvendum in futuro. On a collateral promiſe to pay money on demand, there muſt be a ſpecial demand; but between the parties it is a debt, and ſaid to be ſufficiently demanded by the action: it is otherwiſe where the money is to be paid to a third perſon; or where there is a penalty. 3 Keb. 176. If a perſon acknowledge himſelf by bill obligatory to be indebted to another in the ſum of 50 l. and by the ſame bill binds him and his heirs in 100 l. and ſays not to whom he is bound, it ſhall be intended he is bound to the perſon to whom the bill is made. Rol. Abr. 148. A bill obligatory written in a book, with the party's hand and ſeal to it, is good. Cro. Eliz. 613. And if a man makes a bill thus: I do owe and promiſe to pay to A. B. 50*l.* &c. for payment thereof, I bind myſelf to C. D. &c. another perſon; it is good by the words of the firſt part, and the words obligatory to another perſon are void. A man ſays by his deed: Memorandum, That I A. B. have received of C. D. the ſum of 20 l. which I promiſe to pay to E. F. In witneſs whereof I have hereunto ſet my ſeal, &c. Or if the bill be, I ſhall pay to C. D. 20 l. In witneſs, &c. and the ſame be ſealed: or if it runs as follows, I owe to C. D. 20 l. to be paid at, &c. Or, I had of C. D. 20 l. &c. to be repaid him again: Or, I A. B. do bind myſelf to C. D. that he ſhall receive 20 l. &c. All theſe are ſaid to be obligatory. 2 Rol. 146. 22 E. 4. c. 22.

Bill of Exceptions. Vide Bath. Ni. pri. 295. Black. Com. 3 V. 31.

Exception to evidence, &c. At Common law a writ of error lay for an error in law, apparent in the record, or for error in fact, where either party died before judgment; yet it lay not for an error in law not appearing in the record; and therefore, where the plaintiff or demandant, tenant or defendant, alledged any thing ore tenus, which was over-ruled by the judge, this could not be aſſigned for error, not appearing within the record, nor being an error in fact, but in law; and ſo the party grieved was without remedy. 2 Inſt. 426. And therefore,

By the ſtatute of Weſtm 2. "When one impleaded before any of the juſtices, alledges an exception, praying they will allow it, and if they will not, if he that alledges the exception writes the ſame, and requires the juſtices will put to their ſeals, the juſtices ſhall ſo do; and if one will not another ſhall; and if, upon complaint made of the juſtice, the King cauſe the record to come before him, and the exception be not found in the roll, and the plaintiff ſhew the written exception, with the ſeal of the juſtice thereto put, the juſtice ſhall be commanded to appear at a certain day, either to confeſs or deny his ſeal, and if he cannot deny his ſeal, they ſhall proceed to judgment according to the exception, as it ought to be allowed or diſallowed."

This ſtatute extends to the plaintiff as well as defendant, alſo to him who comes in loco tenentis, as one that prays to be received, or the vouchee; and in all actions whether real, perſonal, or mixt. 2 Inſt. 427.

The ſtatute extends not only to all pleas dilatory and peremptory, but to prayers to be received, oyer of records and deeds, &c. alſo to challenges of jurors, and any material evidence offered and over-ruled. 2 Inſt. 427. Dyer 231 pl. 3. Raym. 486.

The exceptions ought to be put in writing ſedente curia, in the preſence of the judge who tried the cauſe, and ſigned by the counſel on each ſide; and then the bill muſt be drawn up and tendered to the judge that tried the cauſe to be ſealed by him; and when ſigned, there goes out a ſcire facias to the ſame judge ad cognoſcendum ſcriptum, and that is made part of the record, and the return of the judge with the bill itſelf, muſt be entered on the iſſue-roll; and if a writ of error be brought, it is to be returned as part of the record. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 373. If a bill of exceptions is drawn up, and tendered to the judge for ſealing, and he refuſes to do it, on petition to the Lord Chancellor, he will grant a writ for that purpoſe.

If one of the juſtices ſets his ſeal to the bill, it is ſufficient; but if they all refuſe, it is a contempt in them all; for which the party grieved may have a writ grounded upon the ſtatute, commanding them to put their ſeals, &c. 2 Inſt. 427. Raym. 182. S. P. 2 Lev. 327. S. P.

Although no time be appointed by this act when the juſtices ſhall put their ſeals, the party muſt pray the ſame before judgment; but if they deny it, then may they be commanded after judgment to put their ſeals, and then the putting of their ſeals after judgment ſhall be ſufficient. 2 Inſt. 427.

When a bill of exceptions is allowed, the court will not ſuffer the party to move any thing in arreſt of judgment on the point on which the bill of exceptions was allowed; for his proper redreſs is by writ of error, and it is preſumed, that the court was ſatisfied in the point when the party tendred his bill of exceptions. 1 Vent. 366, 367. 2 Lev 237. 2 Jones. 117.

Theſe bills of exceptions, are to be brought before a verdict given, and extend only to civil actions, not to criminal. Sid. 85. 1 Salk. 288.

Bill of Exchange, Is in general an order for the payment of money to ſome perſon or to his order, equivalent to the ſum which the drawer hath received. Of theſe there are different kinds, it will be proper therefore to conſider,

I. The nature of bills of exchange and negotiable notes, and what ſhall be ſo deemed.

II. Of the different kinds of bills of exchange, and negotiable notes; wherein 1. Of foreign bills. 2. Of inland bills. 3. Of promiſſory and negotiable notes.

III. Of the acceptance.

IV. Of the proteſt.

V. Of the indorſement.

VI. Who ſhall be liable to payment, and to whom, and therein of ſuing the drawer, indorſer, or acceptor.

VII. Of the action and remedy, and manner of declaring and pleading, and of the evidence requiſite.

VIII. Of bills, loſt, ſtolen or forged.

I. As the cuſtom of merchants hath eſtabliſhed theſe bills and notes, ſo hath it preſcribed their form, and required that the ſame ſhould be in writing, and drawn by the party, or thoſe having legal authority from him; and ſuch drawing raiſes a contract to pay the ſame without any expreſs promiſe. 3 New Abr. 606. Carth. 510. Salk. 128. Starky v. Cheeſman.

As to the form of the bill, it is ſaid, that the ſame ſtrictneſs and nicety are not required in penning of bills current between merchant and merchant, as in deeds, wills, &c. On the other hand it may happen, that a writing may have the form of a bill of exchange, and yet be otherwiſe. 3 New Abr. 606. Lucas 287.

As if A. draw a bill in this form; Sir, pray pay to H. 1945 l. upon demand, out of the money belonging to the proprietors of the Devonſhire mines, being part of the conſideration-money for the purchaſe of the manor of Weſt-Buckland. This is no ſuch bill of exchange as will intitle H. to an action againſt the drawer on the cuſtom of merchants; for it is only a direction or appointment to the caſhier to pay the money, and that out of a particular fund, and doth not anſwer the neceſſity of trade, not being a negotiable note, nor indorſible over; and charging the drawer on ſuch a note, would be liable to this further inconveniency, that hereby every one who gives his ſteward an order or authority to pay money, might be charged for non-payment. Stran. 591. 3 Geo. 1. Jenney v. Herle. L. Raym 1361.

So where a bill drawn by an officer upon his agent, requiring him to pay ſo much out of his growing ſubſiſtence, was held no bill of exchange, nor the drawer liable, though ſuch bill was accepted; for it concerns neither trade nor credit; but is to be paid out of the growing ſubſiſtence of the drawer; ſo that if the party die, or the fund be taken away, the payment is to ceaſe and determine. 3 New Abr. 606.

Alſo it hath been reſolved, that if A give a note, &c. to B. for the payment of a ſum of money when he the ſaid A. ſhould marry ſuch a one, B. cannot bring an action on ſuch note, and declare as on a bill of exchange, ſetting forth the cuſtom of merchants, &c. for that in truth there is no ſuch cuſtom, being only an agreement founded on a marriage brokage, and to pay money on a collateral contingency; which contingency cannot be called trading, ſo as to come within the cuſtom of merchants. 4 Mod. 242. Comb. 227. S. C. Pearſon ver. Garret.

The plaintiff declared upon the cuſtom of merchants againſt the defendants as acceptors of a bill of exchange, and the inſtrument run in theſe words,

Meſſrs. Gilly and Co.

Pray pay Mr. Richard Banbury one month after date two hundred pounds on account of freight of the Veale Galley, Edward Champion; and this order ſhall be your ſufficient diſcharge for the ſame.

J. Gibſon.

Accepted for Leſſet and Gilly at Leghorn, to pay as remitted from thence at uſance.

March 18, 1748. H. Gilly.

This was ruled to be a bill of exchange. Stran. 1211.

Pay to me or my order ſo much, is a bill of exchange if accepted; and this is the way to make a bill of exchange without the intervention of a third perſon. 1 Salk. 130. Trin. 2 Ann. B. R. Butler v. Crips.

It hath been reſolved, that a bill of exchange drawn by a gentleman, who is no trader, ſhall, notwithſtanding, make him reſponſible within the cuſtom of merchants; for otherwiſe perſons of diſtinction travelling abroad would ſuffer in their credit; and it might bring a general inconvenience on trade itſelf, when it came to be known to foreign merchants, that there were ſome who, though they took upon themſelves to draw bills of exchange, yet were not liable to the payment thereof. Carth. 82. 1 Show. 125. Witherly ver. Sarsfield. Comb. 45, 152. S. C. ill reported.

II. As to the different kinds of bills.

It is to be obſerved, 1. That the cuſtom of merchants, in relation to foreign bills of exchange, ſeems to have prevailed time out of mind; and by this cuſtom, if a merchant abroad draw a bill on a merchant here, or vice verſa, requeſting him to pay a certain ſum of money, and the drawer ſets his name to it; this amounts to a promiſe to pay, and ſubjects him, though but a collateral engagement, to an action on the non-payment. 1 Rol. Abr. 6. Cro. Jac. 306. Cro. Car. 301.

And if the drawer, or he on whom the bill is drawn, refuſe to accept it, or having accepted it, refuſe to pay it, the payee, or he in whoſe favour it is drawn, may proteſt it, and ſhall recover againſt the drawer, not only the principal ſum, but likewiſe all intereſt, coſts, and damages, by reaſon of the proteſt or refuſal of acceptance, or payment of the money. Cro. Car. 301.

But though the cuſtom of merchants, in relation to bills of exchange, be eſtabliſhed by the Common law, and ſuch bills, being ſecurities for money, are of great credit among them; yet they are not allowed to be ſecurities of as high a nature as bonds or ſpecialties; and therefore it hath been adjudged, that a bill of exchange is within the ſtatute of limitations, and muſt be ſued for within ſix years after it becomes payable. 3 New Abr. 602. Carth. 3. Renew v. Axton.

Alſo a bill of exchange is to be conſidered as a ſimple contract debt, in a courſe of adminiſtration, which an executor or an adminiſtrator, cannot diſcharge before debts by bond, without being guilty of a devaſtavit. 3 New Abr. 602.

So, if a merchant in London draw a bill of exchange on his correſpondent in Newcaſtle, in favour of J. S. and the bill is refuſed, and J. S. dies inteſtate, his adminiſtrator, on letters of adminiſtration taken out in Durham, cannot bring an action on the cuſtom of merchants, againſt the drawer, and lay the ſame in London; for that a bill of exchange is not equal to a bond, or ſpecialty, (which are the deceaſed's goods where they happen to be at his death), but is a ſimple contract, which follows the perſon of the debtor, and makes bona notabilia where the debtor reſides; and therefore adminiſtration ought to have been taken out in London. 3 New Abr. 603. Carth. 373. Yeoman v. Bradſhaw. Comb. 392. S. C.

Alſo this cuſtom ſhall not prevail againſt the privilege of infants, ſo as to bind them; and accordingly it hath been adjudged, that if an infant draw a bill of exchange, infancy is a good plea in bar to an action brought againſt him. 3 New Abr. 603. Carth. 160. Williams v. Harriſon.

Bills of exchange are uſually drawn payable on ſight, ſo many days after date, or at ſingle, double or treble uſance; and it is frequent to draw two or three, if abroad or to be ſent abroad, for the ſame ſum, and of the ſame date, for fear of loſs or miſcarriage, which carry a condition with them that only one ſhall be paid. 3 New Abr. 603. Molloy, b. 2. cap. 10. ſect. 10.

An uſance is ſaid to be regularly a month. Molloy 277. 1 Show. 317. But yet varies according to the cuſtoms of particular countries, and therefore, where the plaintiff declared on a bill of exchange drawn at Amſterdam, payable at London, at two uſances, and did not ſhew what the two uſances were, judgment was given for the defendant; for the court could not take notice of foreign uſances which vary, being longer in one place than in an another. 1 Salk. 131. Buckley ver. Canbell. If there are three bills for the ſame ſum, and an action is brought on one of them, and the plaintiff declare, that the money in billa prædicta mentionat' is not paid, this is ſufficient without averring that it was not paid on the other bills, becauſe the ſum is the ſame in all the bills. Carth. 510. 1 Salk. 130. adjudged.

2. With regard to inland bills.

Inland bills of exchange are thoſe drawn by one merchant reſiding in one part of the kingdom on another reſiding in another place within the ſame kingdom; and theſe alſo being found uſeful to trade and commerce, have been eſtabliſhed on the ſame foot with foreign bills; but at Common law they differ from them in this, that there was no cuſtom of proteſting them, ſo as to ſubject the drawer to intereſt and damages in caſe of non-payment, as there was on foreign bills. 3 New Abr. 603. 1 Salk. 131. Borough v. Perkins.

To remedy this inconvenience it was enacted by the 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 17. That bills of exchange drawn in England, &c. of 5*l.* or upwards, payable at a certain number of days, &c. after acceptance, three days after it is due may be proteſted, and notice thereof muſt be given in fourteen days after the proteſt. Provided that in caſe of bills loſt or miſlayed, drawer to give another.

But this ſtatute was defective, becauſe it could not operate, unleſs the party, on whom the bill was drawn, accepted it by under-writing the ſame, which few or none cared to do. 3 New Abr. 604.

To remedy which it was provided by 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. that in caſe of a party's refuſing to under-write a bill of exchange, ſuch bill may be proteſted for non-acceptance. And it is thereby further provided that no acceptance of inland bills of exchange ſhall be ſufficient, unleſs the ſame be under-written, nor the drawer thereof liable to coſts, &c. And that no proteſt ſhall be neceſſary for non-payment, unleſs the bill be drawn for 20*l.* or upwards. It is thereby alſo enacted, that if any perſon accept any ſuch bill of exchange in ſatisfaction of any former debt, it ſhall be eſteemed full payment of ſuch debt, if ſuch perſon doth not take his due courſe to obtain payment thereof, by endeavouring to get the ſame accepted and paid, and make his proteſt as aforeſaid. Provided that nothing in the ſaid act contained ſhall extend to diſcharge any remedy, that any perſon may have againſt the drawer, acceptor, or indorſer of ſuch bill.

A writ of error was brought on a judgment by nil dicit, in an action againſt the drawer of an inland bill of exchange, and it was objected that ſince the act of 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 17. no damages ſhall be recovered againſt the drawer upon a bill of exchange, without a proteſt, and therefore the action lies not, there being no proteſt.

But by Holt C. J. the ſtatute never intended to deſtroy the action for want of a proteſt, but only to deprive the party of recovering intereſt and coſts upon an inland bill againſt the drawer, without notice of non-payment by proteſt: for before the ſtatute there was this difference between foreign and inland bills of exchange; if a bill was foreign, one could not reſort to the drawer for non-acceptance or non-payment without a proteſt, and reaſonable notice thereof. But in caſe of an inland bill, there was no occaſion for a proteſt; but if any prejudice happened to the drawer, by the non-payment of the drawee, and that for want of notice of non-payment, which he to whom the bill is made ought to give, the drawer was not liable; and the word damages in the ſtatute, was meant only of damages that the party is at of being longer out of his money by the non-payment of the drawer, than the tenor of the bill purported, and not of damages for the original debt: and the proteſt was ordered for the benefit of the drawer; for if any damages accrue to the drawer for want of a proteſt, they ſhall be borne by him to whom the bill is made; and if no damages accrue to him, then there is no harm done him; and a proteſt is only to give a formal notice, that the bill is not accepted, or is accepted and not paid; and if in ſuch caſe the damage ſuſtained by the drawer, by his delay, amount to the value of the bill, there ſhall be no recovery; but otherwiſe he ought not to loſe his debt; but that ought either to appear by evidence upon non aſſumpſit or by ſpecial pleading; and the act is very obſcurely and doubtfully penned, and we ought not by conſtruction upon ſuch an act to take away a man's right. And the judgment was affirmed per totam curiam. 1 Salk. 131. L. Raym. 993.

The defendant took up ſeveral goods of the plaintiff, who ſent his ſervant with a bill to him for the money: The defendant orders the ſervant to write him a receipt in full of the bill, which he did, and thereupon he gave him a note upon a third perſon, payable in two months: The maſter ſent ſeveral times to the third perſon, to preſent him the note, but could not get ſight of him within the time, the party breaks, and all this appearing in evidence, and that the defendant went to ſea the next day after he gave the note, now this action was brought againſt the defendant for the money.

Holt, chief juſtice: If a man gives a note upon a third perſon in payment, and the other takes it abſolutely as payment; yet if the party giving it knew the third perſon to be breaking, or to be in a failing condition, and the receiver of the note uſes all reaſonable diligence to get payment but cannot, this is a fraud, and therefore no payment; for the party failed before the money was payable. The chief juſtice directed for the plaintiff. Holt's Rep. 122. Popley v. Aſhley.

3. With reſpect to promiſſory and negotiable notes.

The increaſe of trade, and neceſſity of paper credit, put bankers and others upon an expedient of bringing promiſſory notes within the cuſtom of merchants and making them negotiable, as inland bills of exchange; but this the judges would not admit of, promiſſory notes being only conſidered, by the Common law, as evidences of a debt, and not aſſignable or negotiable in their own nature. 1 Salk. 24, 129. 6 Mod. 29. But, it being found neceſſary to make uſe of this kind of credit, it was enacted by the 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. That promiſſory notes, payable to order or bearer, may be aſſigned or indorſed, and action maintained thereon, as on inland bills of exchange.

It hath been adjudged, that a note written by the plaintiff, and ſubſcribed by the defendant, is a note made and ſigned by the defendant within this act; for the ſigning or ſubſcribing is the lien, and the writing or making is only the mechanical part of it. Trin. 6 Ann. Aſh. ver. Baron, in B. R.

Alſo it hath been held, that a note drawn, in theſe words, I promiſe to account with J. S. or his order, for 50l. value received by me, &c. is a good negotiable note, within the ſtatute 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. and that the word account ſhall be conſtrued the ſame as to pay, and not to render an account as factor or bailiff; and the rather, becauſe he is not only accountable to J. S. but likewiſe to his order; which he cannot be as factor or bailiff, and therefore it muſt be to pay the money to the indorſee, or order of J. S. Morris ver. Lea. Stra. 629.

III. Concerning the acceptance.

It is to be obſerved that an acceptance, by the cuſtom of merchants, as effectually binds the acceptor, as if he had been the original drawer; and that, having once accepted it, he cannot afterwards revoke it. Cro. Jac. 308. Hard. 487.

A very ſmall matter will amount to an acceptance; and any words will be ſufficient for that purpoſe, which ſhew the party's aſſent or agreement to pay the bill; as if upon the tender thereof to him, he ſubſcribes, accepted, or accepted by me A. B. or, I accept the bill, &c. theſe clearly amount to an acceptance. Molloy, book. 2. cap. 10. ſect. 15.

If the party under-writes the bill, Preſented ſuch a day, or only the day of the month; this is ſuch an acknowledgment of the bill as amounts to an acceptance. 3 New Abr. 610. Comb. 401.

If the party ſays, Leave your bill with me and I will accept it, or, Call for it to-morrow and it ſhall be accepted; theſe words, according to the cuſtom of merchants, as effectually bind, as if he had actually ſigned or ſubſcribed his name according to the uſual manner.

But if a man ſays, Leave your bill with me; I will look over my accounts and books between the drawer and me, and call to-morrow, and accordingly the bill ſhall be accepted; this does not amount to a compleat acceptance; for the mention of his books and accounts ſhews plainly that he intended only to accept the bill, in caſe he had effects of the drawer's in his hands. And ſo it was ruled by the Lord chief Juſtice Hale at Guildhall. Molloy, book 2. cap. 10. ſect. 20.

A foreign bill was drawn on the defendant, and being returned for want of acceptance, the defendant ſaid, that if the bill came back again he would pay it; this was ruled a good acceptance. 3 New Abr. 610. cites Mich. 6 Geo. 1 B. R. Carr v. Coleman.

The defendant was ſued as acceptor of a bill of exchange. And upon the evidence it appeared to be a parol acceptance only, which the Chief Juſtice ruled to be ſufficient, that being good at Common law, and the Stat. 3 & 4 Anne, cap. 9. which requires it to be in writing in order to charge the drawer with damages and coſts, having a proviſo that it ſhall not extend to diſcharge any remedy that any perſon may have againſt the acceptor. Upon this direction the jury found for the plaintiff. But the Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas having lately ruled it otherwiſe, the court was moved for a new trial. And, in order finally to ſettle this point, it was ordered to be argued: and after argument the court was of opinion, that the direction in the preſent cauſe was right and agreeable to conſtant practice. Stran. 1000. 8 Geo. 2. Lumley v. Palmer.

An acceptance, however, may be qualified, as thus; I accept this bill, half to be paid in money, and half bills. And this is good by the cuſtom of merchants; for he who may refuſe the bill totally may accept it in part; but he to whom the bill is due may refuſe ſuch acceptance, and proteſt it ſo as to charge the drawer. Alſo it is ſaid, that after ſuch an acceptance, and refuſal of payment, he hath the like liberty of charging the drawer, that he had in caſe the bill had been accepted abſolutely, and payment refuſed. 3 New Abr. 611. Cumb. 452. Petit. v. Benſon.

So the drawer may accept the bill to pay it at longer day than that on which it is made payable, and this ſhall bind him, but herein care muſt be taken, that the drawee, by ſuch acceptance or agreement, be not a ſufferer. 1 Molloy 283.

A bill was drawn payable the firſt of January; the perſon upon whom the bill was drawn, accepts it to be paid the firſt of March; the ſervant brings back the bill. The maſter, perceiving this enlarged acceptance, ſtrikes out the firſt of March, and puts in the firſt of January, and then ſends the bill to be paid. The acceptor then refuſes. Whereupon the perſon, to whom the monies were to be paid, ſtrikes out the firſt of January, and puts in the firſt of March again. On an action brought on this bill; the queſtion was, whether theſe alterations did not deſtroy the bill? and ruled they did not. Per L. Ch. Ju. Pemberton, Price and Shute. Molloy, b. 2. c. 10. ſect. 28.

If A. draw a bill payable ſuch a day, and the drawee accept it ſome time after, he is liable; and in an action againſt him the plaintiff may declare, that ſecundum tenorem

& effectam billæ he did not pay, &c. for the effect of the bill is the payment, and not the day of payment. Carth. 459, 460. 1 Salk. 127, 129. 1 Lutw. 233. Jackſon ver. Pigot.

Having ſhewn what ſhall be a good acceptance, it will be proper to conſider by whom the acceptance muſt be made.

A bill drawn on two muſt regularly have a joint acceptance; but by the cuſtom of England, where there are two joint traders, and one accepts a bill drawn on both for him and partner, it binds both, if it concerns the joint trade; otherwiſe if it concerns the acceptor only in a diſtinct intereſt and reſpect. Salk. 126. Pinkney v. Hall. L. Raym. 175.

If a book-keeper, or ſervant, or other perſon have authority, or who uſually tranſacts buſineſs of this nature for the maſter, accept a bill of exchange, this ſhall bind ſuch maſter. 3 New Abr. 611.

But another perſon may accept the bill for the honour of the drawer; and if he pays the money in default of the party, he is to make a proteſt with declaration that he hath paid the ſame for the drawer's honour.

If a bill be accepted, and the perſon who accepted the ſame happens to die before the time of payment, there muſt be a demand made of his executors or adminiſtrators; and on non-payment, a proteſt is to be made, although the money becomes due before there can be adminiſtration, &c. A bill may be accepted for part, the party on whom drawn having no more effects in his hands; and there may be a proteſt for the reſidue.

Forging the acceptance of any bill of exchange, or the number or principal Sum of any accountable receipt, is made felony. Stat. 7 Geo. 2. c. 22.

IV. In regard to proteſt.

A proteſt is only to ſubject the drawer to anſwer in caſe of non-acceptance or non-payment; nor does the ſame diſcharge the party acceptor if once accepted; for the payee, or perſon to whom payable, hath now two remedies, one againſt the drawer, and the other againſt the acceptor. Molloy, book 2. cap. 10. ſect. 17.

A proteſt does not raiſe any debt, but only ſerves to give formal notice that the bill is not accepted, or accepted and not paid; and this by the Common law was, and is ſtill neceſſary on every foreign bill before the drawer can be charged; but it was not required on any inland bill, before the Stat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 17. Nor does the want of it ſince that ſtatute deſtroy the remedy, which the party had before againſt the drawer, for the principal. 3 New Abr. 612.

If he to whom the bill is to be paid, dies, there can be no proteſt before a probate of his will, or adminiſtration granted; for none but his executors or adminiſtrators can give a legal diſcharge or acquittance for the money, and conſequently no other perſon can ſue for or demand the ſame; and though ſecurity be offered to indemnify the drawee againſt the executors, yet he is not obliged to accept thereof; being a matter left entirely to his conſideration, to judge and determine on the ſufficiency of ſuch ſecurity; and in this caſe it is ſaid, that if a public notary proteſt the bill, an action the caſe lies againſt him. 3 New Abr. 612.

If a bill be left with a merchant to accept, which is loſt or miſlaid, he to whom it is payable, is to requeſt the merchant to give him a note for the payment, according to the time limited in the bill; otherwiſe there muſt be two proteſts, the one for non-acceptance, and the other for non-payment; and though ſuch note be given, yet if the merchant happens to fail, there muſt be a proteſt for non-payment in order to charge the drawer. 3 New Abr. 613.

The proteſt is uſually made by ſome notary public, and ſuch proteſt is, prima facie, good evidence that the bill was not accepted, or, if accepted, that it was not paid, and ſufficient to put the proof on the other ſide. 3 New Abr. 613.

As to the time in which the proteſt is to be made, the law hath not determined it, but the ſame is to be left to a jury, who are to govern themſelves according to the cuſtom of merchants in theſe caſes, and the uſage of particular countries.

Merchants generally allow three days after a bill becomes due for the payment, and for non-payment within three days proteſt is made, but is not ſent away till the next poſt after the time of payment is expired, and if Saturday be the third day, no proteſt is made till Monday. Molloy 284. 1 Show. 164.

And it is ſaid, that where any bill is negotiated, if the ſame be to be paid at a certain day and accepted, the proteſt muſt be on the day of payment; but if payable at ſight, it muſt be proteſted the third day of grace: and when ſuch bill of exchange is not paid, the intereſt thereon commences only from the time of demand. 2 Show. 164. 6 Mod. 138.

A proteſt on a foreign bill of exchange is abſolutely neceſſary to intitle the party to recover againſt the drawer, not only intereſt and coſts, but likewiſe the principal ſum; and for this purpoſe the bill muſt be preſented in a reaſonable time; and in caſe of refuſal or acceptance, or in caſe the drawee cannot be found, it muſt be proteſted in a reaſonable time, and notice of ſuch proteſt, as alſo notice of a proteſt after acceptance and non-payment given to the drawer in a reaſonable time; for though the drawer is bound to the party, to whom the bill is payable, till payment be actually made, yet it is with this condition and proviſo that proteſt be made in due time, and a lawful and ingenuous diligence uſed for the obtaining payment of the money; and the reaſon hereof is, that the drawer might have had effects, or other means of his, upon whom he drew, to reimburſe himſelf the bill, which ſince, for want of timely notice he hath remitted or loſt, it were unreaſonable the drawer ſhould ſuffer through his neglect. 3 New Abr. 613.

As to inland bills, though a proteſt was not neceſſary at Common law in order to ſue the drawer, and is only now neceſſary by the Stat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 17. and the 3 & 4 Anne, c. 9. to intitle the party to intereſt and coſts; yet convenient notice muſt be given by the party, to whom the bill is payable, to the drawer, of the drawee's refuſal of payment, and if any damages accrue to the drawer for want of ſuch notice, it muſt be borne by the perſon to whom the bill is payable; but this muſt be left to a jury, who are to determine herein according to the cuſtom of merchants. 3 New Abr. 613.

V. With reſpect to indorſement.

Indorſement is a term known in law, which by the cuſtom of merchants transfers the property of the bill or note to the indorſee; and is uſually made on the back of the bill, and muſt be in writing; but the law hath not appropriated any ſet form of words as neceſſary to this ceremony, and therefore it hath been held, that if a man write on the back of a bill of exchange, This is to be paid to J. S. or, The contents of this is to be paid to J. S. and ſets his hand to it, this is a good indorſement. 3 New Abr. 609.

Clark having a bill of exchange payable to him or order, puts his name upon it, leaving a vacant ſpace above, and ſends it to J. S. his friend, who got it accepted: but the money not being paid, Clark brought an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt the acceptor: and it was objected on evidence, that the property was transferred to J. S.

Et per Holt C. J. J. S. had it in his power to act either as ſervant or aſſignee: if he had filled up the blank ſpace making the bill payable to him, that would have witneſſed his election to have received it as indorſee; but that being omitted, his intention is preſumed to act only as ſervant to Clark, whoſe name he would uſe only in order to write the acquittance over it. 1 Salk. 126. Clark v. Pigot. Plaintiff might not have ſtruck out the indorſement.

A bill payable to a man's order is payable to himſelf, and he may bring an action thereon, averring that he made no order, &c. 1 Salk. 130. Comb. 401.

A bill of exchange was indorſed in this manner: Pay the contents of this bill unto the order of J. S. who brought his action as indorſee, averring he had made no order to any body to receive the money; and on demurrer it was objected, that J. S. could not maintain an action; becauſe the indorſement was not to him, but to his order:

but the court held the action well brought againſt the indorſor; and that, among tradeſmen, this form of indorſement is commonly uſed, although it is intended to be made payable to the perſon, whoſe order is mentioned. 3 New Abr. 609.

Notes payable to J. S. or bearer, are negotiable, per 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9.

Alſo, though an aſſignment of a bill, payable to J. S. or bearer, be no good aſſignment to charge the drawer with an action on the bill, yet it is a good bill between the indorſer and indorſee, and the indorſer is liable to an action for the money; for the indorſement is in nature of a new bill 1 Salk. 125, 133. Skin. 343, 411.

So it hath been adjudged, that an indorſee of a bill, payable to J. S. or bearer, may maintain an action againſt the drawer; on alledging a ſpecial cuſtom, that ſuch bill ſhould bind him, which cuſtom is ſo found, or confeſſed by the defendant. 1 Salk 125. 3 Lev. 299.

Alſo, in caſes of bills purchaſed at a diſcount, there is ſaid to be this difference, that if it be a bill payable to A. or bearer, it is an abſolute purchaſe; but if to A. or order, and it is indorſed blank, and filled up with an aſſignment, the indorſer muſt warrant it as much as if there had been no diſcount. 1 Salk. 128.

A note payable to a feme ſole, or order, who afterwards marries, can only be indorſed by the huſband. Ca. L. and Eq. 246.

If a bill of exchange is made payable to A. or order, who indorſes it to B. who indorſes it to C. which is proteſted for non-payment; B. may bring an action on this bill, notwithſtanding his indorſement. 3 New Abr. 608. 1 Show. 163. Deckers v. Harriat.

The money is to be paid to him in whoſe favour the bill is drawn, or to the indorſee, in caſe it be indorſed over, of which indorſement the drawer and accepter muſt take notice at their peril; alſo if there are ſeveral indorſers and indorſees, the laſt indorſee is intitled to the money. 3 New Abr. 608. Carth. 130.

It has been adjudged, that a bill of exchange cannot be indorſed for part, ſo as to ſubject the party to ſeveral actions. 3 New Abr. 610. Carth. 466. Hawkins v. Cardy. 1 Salk. 65. S. C.

Every indorſer of a bill is liable as the firſt drawer; the indorſer is anſwerable, becauſe the indorſement is in nature of a new bill. 1 Salk. 125.

An indorſer is not diſcharged without actual payment of the bill; unleſs there be ſome neglect or default in the indorſee, as where he doth not endeavour to receive the money in convenient time, and then the firſt drawer becomes inſolvent. Ibid. 132. An indorſer charges himſelf in the ſame manner as if he had originally drawn the bill: and a plaintiff need not prove the drawer's hand, as the indorſer is a new drawer. 1 Salk. 127.

A blank indorſement doth not transfer the property of a bill of exchange; though the perſon to whom indorſed may fill up the indorſement, ſo as to charge the indorſer; for where one indorſes his name on a bill, the indorſee may make what uſe of it he pleaſes, by way of aſſignment, acquittance, &c. 1 Salk. 126.

VI. Who liable, to whom payment to be made, and of ſuing the parties, &c.

With reſpect to this head, it is to be premiſed, that every drawer of a bill is liable to the payment thereof, as is every accepter and indorſer. Alſo if there are ſeveral indorſers of the ſame bill, the laſt indorſee may bring his action againſt the firſt indorſer, or any of them; for the indorſement is, as it were, a new bill, or at leaſt a warranty, as ſome books expreſs it, by the indorſer that the bill ſhall be paid. 3 New Abr. 607.

If a bill be drawn upon A. and he accepts it, and afterwards refuſes payment, upon which the bill is proteſted, the perſon to whom it is payable may bring ſeveral actions againſt the accepter and drawer; for the proteſt is no diſcharge of the accepter. 3 New Abr. 607.

But though the drawer, accepter, and indorſer are all liable, yet the party can have but one ſatisfaction; and until ſuch ſatisfaction is actually had, he may ſue all, or any of them. 3 New Abr. 607.

And not only the drawer, accepter, and indorſer are liable, but alſo, by the cuſtom of merchants, if one merchant draw a bill which is proteſted, and another hearing thereof declare, that he, for the honour of the drawer, will pay the contents, and thereupon ſubſcribes in theſe or like words: I the underwritten do bind myſelf as principal according to the cuſtom of merchants for the ſum mentioned in the bill of exchange, whereupon this proteſt is made, &c. this ſhall as effectually bind him as if he had been the original drawer; and by this the perſon to whom the bill is payable hath his remedy both againſt ſuch perſon as ſurety, and alſo againſt the principal; but the principal or original drawer is liable to him who ſubſcribes for his honour. 3 New Abr. 608.

A. draws a bill upon B. who had effects enough in his hands to anſwer the bill, which ſome time after is proteſted, whereupon the bill is indorſed to A. the drawer, who brings an action as indorſee. Per Parker C. J. at Niſi prius, there being effects, the acceptance was not upon the honour of the drawer, and ſo the action is well brought; for when a merchant draws a bill on his correſpondent who accepts it, this is payment; for it makes him debtor to another perſon, who may bring his action; ſo that this is ſuch a payment as may be ſet off upon a former action, and pleaded in bar of ſuch action: But if there were no effects, the action would not lie; for it would have been an acceptance upon honour only, and the money would be recovered only to be recovered again. Vin. Abr. tit. Bills of Exchange (H. 12.) 12 Mod. Trin. 10 Anne, B. R. Loviere v. Lanbray.

If the indorſee of a bill accepts but two-pence from the acceptor, he can never reſort to the drawer. L. Raym. 743. Taſſel and Lee v. Lewis.

With reſpect to the perſon intitled to receive the money.

It is to be paid to him in whoſe favour the bill is drawn, or to the indorſee, in caſe it be indorſed over; of which indorſement it ſeems the drawer, accepter and drawee muſt take notice at their peril; alſo if there are ſeveral indorſers and indorſees, the laſt indorſee is intitled to the money. Carth. 130.

If A. draws a bill of exchange, payable to B. for the uſe of C. and B. for valuable conſideration indorſes it over to D. D. may bring an action againſt A. the drawer; and he cannot plead, that the money was extended in his hands at the ſuit of the king, for a debt due from C. for C. being only ceſtui que truſt, had only an equitable intereſt, and no legal remedy for the money; and B. is only reſponſible in equity to C. for the breach of truſt. Carth. 5. Skin. 264. 1 Show. 5.

A bill of exchange directed to one to pay ſo much for value received, ſhall be a good diſcharge of the debt, if the bill be not returned back to the drawer in time, although it be not paid; for keeping the bill long, is evidence that he hath agreed to take the merchant as debtor. Ibid. 126.

A perſon gives a bill of exchange, &c. upon a third perſon to another in payment, and he takes it abſolutely, if the party giving the bill, knew the third perſon to be breaking or in a failing condition, and the receiver of the bill uſes all diligence to get payment, but cannot, this is a fraud and no payment; though if a man takes a note or bill, and after it is payable makes no demand, ſo that it might be paid if he had been diligent enough, then if the party on whom the bill is drawn fails, it is at the peril of him that took it. Mod. Caſ. 147. A drawer of a bill of exchange is always anſwerable, by the value received, though there be no tender of the bill for payment, or it be not proteſted, unleſs the perſon on whom drawn break, and then it is otherwiſe, for in that caſe the party who paid the money for the bill loſeth it. 2 Show. 319.

According to the caſe of Banbury v. Liſſet and Gilly, Stra. 1211. the words value received are abſolutely neceſſary in a bill of exchange. So reſolved in that caſe, where it was left to a ſpecial jury of merchants. Vide Stat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9.

VII. With regard to the action, &c.

It ſeems agreed, that againſt the drawer an action of debt, or a general indebitatus aſſumpſit will lie; for he having received the money, the law raiſes a contract, and lays him under an obligation to pay it; but it hath been adjudged that neither an action of debt, nor an indebitatus aſſumpſit will lie againſt the accepter of a bill of exchange, and therefore the remedy againſt him muſt be by a ſpecial action on the caſe founded on the cuſtom of merchants; for the acceptance is only a collateral engagement to pay the debt of another, in the ſame manner as a promiſe by a ſtranger to pay, &c. if the creditor will forbear his debt. 3 New Abr. 614. Hard. 485.

Where a bill is drawn payable to A. B. or bearer, an aſſignee muſt ſue in the name of him to whom it is made payable, and not in his own name; otherwiſe a ſtranger finding the bill, might recover: if it be made payable to A. B. or order, there an aſſignee muſt ſue in his own name, becauſe the order muſt be made by indorſement, &c. 3 Salk. 67.

As to the manner of declaring on a bill of exchange, it ſeems to be now ſettled, that the cuſtom of merchants concerning bills of exchange being part of the Common law, of which the judges will take notice ex officio, it is unneceſſary to ſet forth the cuſtom ſpecially in the declaration: it is ſufficient to ſay, that ſuch a perſon, according to the uſage and cuſtom of merchants, drew the bill. 3 New Abr. 614.

As by the cuſtom of merchants public notaries uſually proteſt bills, it hath been held, that pleading proteſtavit ſeu proteſtari cauſavit, is ſufficient; and that the party may plead proteſtavit, and give in evidence that the notary public did it. 3 New Abr. 613. Cumb. 153.

A perſon may plead the ſtatute of limitations to an action upon a bill of exchange; and it is no good replication, that it was on account between merchants, where it appears to be for value received. Comber. 190, 392.

Indorſee, in action againſt the indorſer, need not prove the drawer's hand, becauſe, though it be a forged bill, the indorſer is bound to pay it. 1 Salk. 127. pl. 9. Paſch. 11 W. 3. coram Holt at Guildhall, Lambert v. Park.

If a man has a bill of exchange, he may authoriſe another to indorſe his name upon it by parol; and when that is done, it is the ſame as if he had done it himſelf. Per Holt Ch. J. 12 Mod. 564. Mich. 13 W. 3. at Niſi prius. Anon'.

An action on a bill of exchange, being by an executor, and upon a debt laid to be due to teſtator, it was held neceſſary to prove that the acceptance was in the teſtator's time; per Holt Ch. For other matter concerning this head, ſee the foregoing diviſions ſparſim.

VIII. Of bills loſt, ſtolen, or forged.

Concerning this head it is to be obſerved, that if a bank bill payable to A. B. or bearer, be loſt, and it is found by a ſtranger, payment to him would indemnify the bank; yet A. B. may have trover againſt the finder, though not againſt his aſſignee for valuable conſideration, which creates a property. 3 Salk. 71.

If a poſſeſſor of a bill by any accident loſes it, he muſt cauſe intimation to be made by a notary public before witneſſes, that the bill is loſt or miſlaid, requiring that payment be not made of the ſame to any perſon without his privity. And if any bill of exchange for five pounds or upwards, drawn in, or dated at and from any place of this kingdom, ſhall be loſt, the drawer of the bill ſhall give another bill of the ſame tenor, ſecurity being given to indemnify him in caſe the bill ſo loſt be found again. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 17.

Stealing of bills of exchange, notes, &c. is felony in the ſame degree, as if the offender had robbed the owner of ſo much money, &c. And the forging bills of exchange, or notes for money, indorſements, &c. is felony, by Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 25. 9 Geo. 2. c. 18. And vide 31 Geo. 2. c. 22. ſ. 78. And by 7 Geo. 2. c. 22. Forging the acceptance of a bill of exchange is felony without benefit of clergy.

There are not only bills of exchange, but bills of credit between merchants, the form whereof are as follow:

Bill of ſale, Is a ſolemn contract under ſeal, whereby a man paſſes the right or intereſt that he hath in goods and chattels; for if a man promiſes or gives any chattels without valuable conſideration, or without delivering poſſeſſion, this doth not alter the property, becauſe it is nudum pactum unde non oritur actio; but if a man ſells goods by deed under ſeal duly executed, this alters the property between the parties, though there be no conſideration, or no delivery of poſſeſſion, becauſe a man is eſtopped to deny his own deed, or affirm any thing contrary to the manifeſt ſolemnity of contracting. Yelv. 196. Cro. Jac. 270. 1 Brown. 111. 6 Co. 18.

But what is chiefly to be conſidered under this head, is the ſtatute of 13 Eliz. cap. 5. by which it is enacted, "That all fraudulent conveyances of lands, &c. goods and chattels, to avoid the debt or duty of another, ſhall (as againſt the party only, whoſe debt or duty is ſo endeavoured to be avoided) be utterly void, except grants made bona fide, and on a good (which is conſtrued a valuable) conſideration. And by the latter clauſe of that ſtatute it is provided, That all parties to ſuch fraudulent conveyance, who, being privy thereunto, ſhall wittingly juſtify the ſame to be done bona fide and on good conſideration, or ſhall alien or aſſign any lands, leaſe or goods ſo to them conveyed as aforeſaid, ſhall forfeit one year's value of the lands, leaſe, rent, common or other profit out of the ſame, and the whole value of the goods; and being thereof convicted ſhall ſuffer half a year's impriſonment without bail; the forfeiture to be divided between the queen and the party grieved.

A. being indebted to B. in 400*l.* and to C. in 20*l.* C. brings debt againſt him, and, pending the writ, A. being poſſeſſed of goods and chattels to the value of 300*l.* makes a ſecret conveyance of them all without exception, to B. in ſatisfaction of his debt; but, notwithſtanding, continues in poſſeſſion of them, and ſells ſome of them, and others of them, baing ſheep, he ſets his mark on: and reſolved that it was a fraudulent gift and ſale within the aforeſaid ſtatute, and ſhall not prevent C. of his execution for his juſt debt; for though ſuch ſale hath one of the qualifications required by the ſtatute, being made to a creditor for his juſt debt, and conſequently on a valuable conſideration; yet it wants the other; for the owners's continuing in poſſeſſion, is a fixed and undoubted character of a fraudulent conveyance, becauſe the poſſeſſion is the only indicium of the property of a chattel, and therefore this ſale is not made bona fide. 5 Co. 80. Mo. 638. 2 Bulſt. 226.

As the owner's continuing in poſſeſſion of goods after his bill of ſale of them, is an undoubted badge of a fraudulent conveyance, becauſe the poſſeſſion is the only indicium of the property of a chattel, which is a thing unfixed and tranſitory; ſo there are other marks and characters of fraud; as a general conveyance of them all without any exception; for it is hardly to be preſumed, that a man will ſtrip himſelf entirely of all his perſonal property, not excepting his bedding and wearing apparel, unleſs there was ſome ſecret correſpondence and good underſtanding ſettled between him and the vendee, for a private occupancy of all, or ſome part of the goods for his ſupport; alſo a ſecret manner of tranſacting ſuch bill of ſale, and unuſual clauſes in it: as that it is made honeſtly, truly, and bona fide; are marks of fraud and colluſion; for ſuch an artful and forced dreſs and appearance give a ſuſpicion and jealouſy of ſome defect varniſhed over with it. 3 Co. 81. Mo. 638.

If goods continue in the poſſeſſion of the vendor after a bill of ſale of them, though there is a clauſe in the bill that he ſhall account annually with the vendee for them, yet it is a fraud; ſince, if ſuch colouring were admitted, it would be the eaſieſt thing in the world to avoid the proviſions and cautions of the aforeſaid act. Mo. 638.

If A. makes a bill of ſale of all his goods, in conſideration of blood and natural affection, to his ſon, or one of his relations, it is a void conveyance in reſpect of creditors; for the conſiderations of blood, &c. which are made the motives of this gift, are eſteemed in their nature inferior to valuable conſiderations, which are neceſſarily required in ſuch ſales, by 13 Eliz. cap. 5.

If A. makes a bill of ſale to B. a creditor, and afterwards to C. another creditor, and delivers poſſeſſion at the time of ſale to neither; afterwards C. gets poſſeſſion of them, and B. takes them out of his poſſeſſion, C. cannot maintain treſpaſs, becauſe the firſt bill of ſale is fraudulent againſt creditors, and ſo is the ſecond, yet they both bind A. and B.'s is the elder title, and the naked poſſeſſion of C. ought not to prevail againſt the title of B. that is prior, where both are equally creditors, and poſſeſſion at the time of the bill of ſale is delivered over to neither. Abr. Eq. 148.

Fraud may be given in evidence, to defeat a fraudulent and covinous conveyance, and the party that offers it need not plead it; for the acts to prevent fraud are to be conſtrued favourably in ſuppreſſion of the miſchief; beſides, it were an hardſhip to force the party to plead a thing that is managed with ſo much ſubtlety, that he cannot attain a competent knowledge of it to plead it in due time. 5 Co. 60.

Bill of Store, A kind of licence granted at the cuſtom-houſe to merchants to carry ſuch ſtores and proviſions as are neceſſary for their voyage, cuſtom free. A bill of ſufferance is a licence granted to a merchant, to ſuffer him to trade from one Engliſh port to another, without paying cuſtom. An. 14 Car. 2. c. 11.

Billets of Gold, (Fr. billet) Are wedges or ingots of gold, mentioned in the ſtatute 27 E. 3. c. 27.

Billet Wood, Is ſmall wood for fuel, which muſt be three foot and four inches long, and ſeven inches and a half in compaſs, &c. Juſtices of peace ſhall inquire by the oaths of ſix men of the aſſiſe of billet, and being under ſize, it is to be forfeited to the poor. Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 14. Vide 9 An. c. 15. 10 An. c. 6. See Fuel.

Billingſgate market to be kept every day, and toll is appointed by ſtatute: all perſons buying fiſh in this market may ſell the ſame in any other market by retail; but none but fiſhmongers ſhall ſell them in ſhops: if any perſon ſhall buy any quantity of fiſh at Billingſgate for others, or any fiſhmonger ſhall ingroſs the market, they incur a penalty of 20 l. And fiſh imported by foreigners ſhall be forfeited, and the veſſel, &c. See 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 24. 1 Geo. 1. Stat. 2. c. 18. ſ. 1. &c. Vide Fiſh and Fiſherman.

Billus, A ſtick or ſtaff, which in former times was the only weapon for ſervants.—Si quis in ſervum tranſeat, in ſignum hujus tranſitionis billum vel ſtrublum, vel deinceps ad hunc modum ſervitutis arma ſuſcipiat, & in manum domini mittat. Leg. H. 1. c. 78.

Binnarium, binna, benna, Stews or water penned up for feeding and preſerving of fiſh.——Expenſæ in piſce ad inſtaurandum binnarium empto xii s. Conſuetud. Dom. de Farrend. MS. f. 29. Vide Stat. 3 Ed. 1.

Biothanetus, One who deſerves to come to an untimely end. Ordericus Vitalis, writing of the death of William Rufus, who was ſhot by Walter Tyrrel, tells us, that the biſhops, conſidering his wicked life and bad exit, adjudged him eccleſiaſtica veluti biothanetum abſolutione indignum. Lib. 10. p. 782.

Birrettum, A thin cap fitted cloſe to the ſhape of the head: and is alſo uſed for the cap or coif of a judge, or ſerjeant at law. Spelm.

Births, Burials, and Marriages, &c. By ſtatute, a duty was granted on births and burials of perſons, from 50 l. a duke, &c. down to 10 s. and 2 s. And the like on marriages; alſo bachelors, above twenty-five years of age, were to pay 1 s. yearly. Stat. 6 & 7 W. 3. c. 6. Exp. as to the duties.

Biſacutus, An iron weapon double edged, ſo as to cut on both ſides. Fecit eidem unam plagam mortalem de quadam biſacuta. Fleta. lib. 1. c. 33.

Biſantium, beſantine, or beſant, An antient coin firſt coined by the Weſtern emperors at Bizantium or Conſtantinople. It was of two ſorts gold and ſilver; both which were current in England. Chaucer repreſents the gold beſantine to have been equivalent to a ducket; and the ſilver beſantine was computed generally at two ſhillings. In ſome old leaſes of land there have been reſerved, by way of rent, unum biſantium, vel duos ſolidos.

Biſcot, At a ſeſſion of ſewers held at Wigenhale in Norfolk, 9 Ed. 3. it was decreed, That if any ſhould not repair his proportion of the banks, ditches and cauſeys by a day aſſign'd, XII*d.* for every perch unrepair'd ſhould be levied upon him, which is called a bilcot: and if he ſhould not, by a ſecond day given him, accompliſh the ſame, then he ſhould pay for every perch 2 s. which is called biſcot. Hiſt. of Imbanking and Draining, f. 254.

Biſhop, (epiſcopus) Is the chief of the clergy in his dioceſe, and the archbiſhop's ſuffragan or aſſiſtant. He is elected by the king's conge d'eſlire, or licence to elect the perſon named by the king, directed to the dean and chapter; and if they fail to make election in twenty days, they incur the penalty of a præmunire, and the king may nominate, &c. by letters patent. Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 20. This was to avoid the power of the ſee of Rome. The dean and chapter having made their election certify it to the king, and the archbiſhop, &c. And then the King gives the royal aſſent under the Great Seal, directed to the archbiſhop, commanding him to confirm and conſecrate the biſhop elect; and, on confirmation, a biſhop hath juriſdiction in his dioceſe; but he hath not a right to his temporalities till conſecration. The conſecration of biſhops, &c. is confirmed by act of parliament.

It is held a biſhop hath three powers; 1ſt, His power of ordination, which is gained on his conſecration, and not before; and thereby he may confer orders, &c. in any place throughout the world. 2. His power of juriſdiction, which is limited and confined to his ſee. 3. His power of adminiſtration and government of the revenues; both which laſt powers he gains by his confirmation: and ſome are of opinion, that the biſhop's juriſdiction, as to miniſterial acts, commences on his election. Palm. Rep. 473, 474, 475.

The king may not ſeize into his hands the temporalities of biſhops but upon juſt cauſe, and not for a contempt, which is only finable. Biſhops are allowed four years for payment of their firſt fruits, by a late ſtatute, and every biſhop may retain four chaplains. Vide 21 Hen. 8. c. 13. ſ. 14. 8 Eliz. c. 1. and Table to Statutes, tit. Biſhops and Chaplains.

A biſhop hath his conſiſtory court, to hear eccleſiaſtical cauſes; and is to viſit the clergy, &c. He conſecrates churches, ordains, admits, and inſtitutes prieſts; confirms, ſuſpends, excommunicates, grants licences for marriage, makes probate of wills, &c. Co. Lit. 96. 2 Rol. Abr. 230. He hath his archdeacon, dean and chapter, chancellor, and vicar-general, to aſſiſt him: may grant leaſes for three lives, or twenty-one years, of land uſually letten, reſerving the accuſtomed yearly rents. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. And vide 1 El. c. 19. ſ. 5. Leaſes otherwiſe made are void. Biſhops may make concurrent leaſes for twenty-one years, upon leaſes for the like term, with confirmation of dean and chapter. Biſhops are barons and lords of parliament.

Biſhopricks, The dioceſe of a biſhop, or that circuit, wherein he hath juriſdiction. With reſpect to the nomination to biſhopricks, vide Black Com. 1 V. 378. 4 V. 107, 408, 423.

Biſſa, (Fr. biche) cerva major, A hind.—Decimam venationis noſtræ, ſcil. de cervis, biſſis, damis, porcis & laiis Mon. Angl. vol. 1. fol. 648.

Biſſextile, (biſſextilis) Leap year, ſo called becauſe the ſixth day before the calends of March is twice reckoned, viz. on the 24th and 25th of February; ſo that the biſſextile year hath one day more than the others, and happens every fourth year. This intercalation of a day was firſt invented by Julius Cæſar, to make the year agree with the courſe of the ſun. And, to prevent all doubt and ambiguity that might ariſe thereupon, it is enacted by the ſtatute de anno biſſextili, 21 H. 3. That the day increaſing in the leap-year, and the day next before, ſhall be accounted but one day. Brit. 209. Dyer 17. The new ſtile to be uſed, by Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 23. See Year, Vide alſo Black. Com. 2 V. 141.

Black Act. By Stat. 9 Geo. 1. cap. 22. ſo called, Perſons hunting armed and diſguiſed, and killing or ſtealing deer, or robbing warrens, or ſtealing fiſh out of any river, &c. or any perſons unlawfully hunting in his majeſty's foreſts, &c. or breaking down the head of any fiſh-pond, or killing, &c. of cattle, or cutting down trees, or ſetting fire to houſe, barn, or wood, or ſhooting at any perſon, or ſending anonymous letters, or ſigned with fictitious name, demanding money, &c. or reſcuing ſuch offenders, are guilty of felony without benefit of clergy. This act is made perpetual by 31 Geo. 2. c. 42. And ſee farther 6 Geo. 2. c. 37. and 27 Geo. 2. c. 15. Vide Black. Com. 4 V. 144, 208, 232, 244.

Black Lead. By 25 Geo. 2. c. 10. Entering mines of black lead, with intent to ſteal, is made felony; and by the ſame act offenders committed or tranſported for entering mines of black lead with intent to ſteal, eſcaping, or breaking priſon, or returning from tranſportation, are excluded from clergy.

Black-Mail, (Fr. maille, a link of mail; or ſmall piece of metal or money) Signifies in the north of England, in the counties of Cumberland, Northumberland, &c. a certain rent of money, corn, or other thing, anciently paid to perſons inhabiting upon or near the borders, being men of name and power, allied with certain robbers within the ſaid counties; to be freed and protected from the devaſtations of thoſe robbers. Anno 43 Eliz. cap. 13. Theſe robbers were called moſs troopers, and ſeveral ſtatutes have been made againſt them. The 9 Ed. 3. c. 4. mentions black money; and black rents are the ſame with black mail; being rents formerly paid in proviſions and fleſh. And by 18 Car. 2. c. 3. Notorious thieves, or ſpoil-takers in Northumberland or Cumberland are excluded clergy, or may be tranſported at diſcretion of the judge. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 43. 4 V. 243.

Black-Rod, The gentleman uſher of the black rod is chief gentleman uſher to the king; he belongs to the garter, and hath his name from the black rod, on the top whereof ſits a lion in gold, which he carrieth in his hand. He is called in the Black Book, fol. 255. Lator virgæ nigræ, & hoſtiarius; and in other places virgæ bajulus. His duty is ad portandum virgam coram domino rege ad feſtum ſancti Georgii infra caſtrum de Windſore: and he hath the keeping of the chapter-houſe door, when a chapter of the order of the garter is ſitting; and in the time of parliament, he attends on the houſe of peers. His habit is like to that of the regiſter of the order, and garter king at arms; but this he wears only at the ſolemn times of the feſtival of St. George, and on the holding of chapters. The black rod he bears, is inſtead of a mace, and hath the ſame authority; and this officer hath anciently been made by letters patent under the great ſeal, he having great power; for to his cuſtody all peers, called in queſtion for any crime, are firſt committed.

Blacks of Waltham, A ſet of deſperate deer ſtealers. See Waltham Blacks.

Blackwell-Hall. The public market of Blackwell-hall is to be kept every Thurſday, Friday, and Saturday, at certain hours appointed; and the hall-keepers not to admit any buying or ſelling of woollen cloth at the ſaid hall upon any other days or hours, on penalty of 100 l. Factors ſelling cloth out of the market, ſhall forfeit 5 l. &c. Regiſters of all the cloths bought and ſold are to be weekly kept: and buyers of cloth otherwiſe than for ready money, ſhall give notes to the ſellers for the money payable; and factors are to tranſmit ſuch notes to the owners in twelve days, or be liable to forfeit double value, &c. Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 9.

Bladarius, A corn-monger, meal-man, or corn-chandler. It is uſed in our records for ſuch a retailer of corn. Pat. 1 Ed. 3. par. 3. m. 13. See title Clothiers.

Blade, (bladum) In the Saxon ſignifies generally fruit, corn, hemp, flax, herbs, &c. Will. de Mohun releaſed to his brother all the manor of T.——Salvo inſtauro ſuo & blado, &c. excepting his ſtock and corn on the ground. Hence bladier is taken for an ingroſſer of corn or grain. ——Sciant quod ego Willielmus Alreton, conſenſu & voluntate Beatricis uxoris meæ, dedi Agathæ Gille pro duabus marcis argenti & una menſura bladi, duas ſolidatus redditus in villa Leominſtr. &c. Ex libro Chartar. Theſe were forbidden to be current in this realm. 2 Hen. 6. c. 9. As to Blanch rent, ſee Black. Com. 2 V. 42. See alſo Alba Firma.

Blandford, An act for rebuilding the town of Blandford in the county of Dorſet, burnt down by fire in the Year 1731, and to determine all differences between proprietors, landlords and tenants of houſes, and concerning ground, &c. Stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 16.

Blanhornum, A little bell, or rather ticinium.—— Pecoris ticinium, & canis oppa & blanhornum, horum trium ſingulum eſt unum ſolidum valen. Leg. Adelſtan. cap. 8.

Blank-Bar, Is uſed for the ſame with what we call a common bar, and is the name of a plea in bar, which in an action of treſpaſs is put in to oblige the plaintiff to aſſign the certain place where the treſpaſs was committed: 2 Cro. Rep. 594.

Blanks, In judicial proceedings, certain void ſpaces ſometimes left by miſtake. A blank (ſuppoſing ſomething material wanting) in a declaration, abates the ſame, 4 Ed. 4, 14. 20 H. 6, 18. And ſuch a blank is a good cauſe of demurrer. Blanks in the imparlance roll aided after verdict for the plaintiff. Hob. 76. Parker v. Parker.

Blaſarius, Is a word uſed to ſignify an incendiary. Blount.

Blaſphemy, (blaſphemia) Is an injury offered to God, by denying that which is due and belonging to him, or attributing to him what is not agreeable to his nature. Lindw. cap. 1. And blaſphemies of God, as denying his being, or providence, and all contumelious reproaches of Jeſus Chriſt, &c. are offences by the Common law, puniſhed by fine, impriſonment, pillory, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 87. And by ſtatute, if any one ſhall by writing, ſpeaking, &c. deny any of the Perſons in the Trinity, to be God; aſſert there are more Gods than one, &c. he ſhall be incapable of any office; and for the ſecond offence, be diſabled to ſue any action, to be executor, &c. and ſuffer three years impriſonment. 9 & 10 W. 3. cap. 32.

Likewiſe by 3 Jac. 1. c. 21. perſons jeſtingly or prophanely uſing the name of God, or of Jeſus Chriſt, or of the Holy Ghoſt, or of the Trinity, in any ſtage play, &c. incurs a penalty of 10*l.*

Ble, Signifies ſight, colour, &c. And blee is taken for corn: As to Boughton under the Blee &c.

Blench, A ſort of tenure of land; as to hold land in blench, is by payment of a ſugar-loaf, a couple of capons, a beaver-hat, &c. if the ſame be demanded in the name of blench, i. e. Nomine albæ firmæ.

Blench-holding, The white-rents, or blanch-farms, reditus albi; this ſmall kind of payment, called in Scotland blench-holding, or reditus albæ firmæ, Black. Com. 2. V. 42. n. See Alba Firma.

Blenheim, A noble and princely houſe erected in honour of the Duke of Marlborough at Woodſtock near Oxford, which with the manor of Woodſtock is ſettled on the Duke and his heirs, in conſideration of the eminent ſervices by him performed for the public; and for building of which houſe the ſum of 500,000*l.* was granted by parliament, &c. Stat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 6. 5 Ann. c. 3. & c. 4. 1 Geo. 1. Stat. 2. c. 12. ſect. 34.

Bleta, (Fr. bleche) Pete or combuſtible earth dug up and dried for burning.——Miniſter & fratres de Knareſborough petunt quod ipſe & eorum tenentes fodiunt turbas & bletas in foreſta de Knareſborough. Rot. Parl. 35 Ed. 1.

Blinks, Boughs broken down from trees, and thrown in a way where deer are likely to paſs.

Bliſſom, Corruptly called bloſſom, is when a ram goes to the ewe, from the Teuton. Blets, the bowels.

Bloated Fiſh or Herring, Are thoſe which are half dried. Anno 18 Car. 2. c. 2.

Bloncus, (Sax. blod) Deep red colour; from whence comes bloat and bloated, viz. ſanguine and high coloured, which in Kent is called a blouſing colour; and a blouſe is there a red-faced wench. The prior of Burceſter, A. D. 1425. gave his liveries of this colour. Paroch. Antiq. 376.

Blood, (ſanguis) Is regarded in diſcents of lands; for a perſon is to be the next and moſt worthy of blood to inherit his anceſtor's eſtate. Co. Lit. 13. See Jenk. Cent. 203.

Bloodwit, or bloudwit, compounded of the Sax. blod, i. e. ſanguis and wyte, an old Engliſh word ſignifying miſericordia, Is often uſed in ancient charters of liberties for an amercement for bloodſhed. Skene writes it bloudweit; and ſays weit in Engliſh is injuring and that bloudweit is an amerciament or unlaw (as the Scotch call it) for wrong or injury, as bloodſhed is: for he that hath bloudweit granted him, hath free liberty to take all amerciaments of courts for effuſion of blood. Fleta ſaith, Quod ſignificat quietantiam miſericordiæ pro effuſione ſanguinis. Lib. 1. cap. 47. And, according to ſome writers, bloodwite was a cuſtomary fine paid as a compoſition and atonement for ſhedding or drawing of blood; for which the place was anſwerable, if the party was not diſcovered: and therefore a privilege or exemption from this fine or penalty, was granted by the King, or ſupreme Lord, as a ſpecial favour. So king Henry II. granted to all tenants within the honour of Willingford, Ut quieti ſint de Hidagiis, & blodewite, &c.——Paroch. Antiq. 114.

Bloody-Hand, Is one of the four kinds of circumſtances by which an offender is ſuppoſed to have killed deer in the King's foreſt: and it is where a treſpaſſer is apprehended in the foreſt, with his hands or other parts bloody, though he be not found chaſing or hunting of the deer. Manwood. In Scotland, in ſuch like crimes, they ſay taken in the fact, or with the red hand. See Backberind.

Blubber, Is whale oil, before it is thoroughly boiled and brought to perfection. It is mentioned Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 18.

Bock-hord, or book-hoard (librorum horreum) A place where books, evidences, or writings are kept.

Bockland, (Sax. quaſi bookland) A poſſeſſion or inheritance held by evidence in writing. Bockland vero eo poſſidendi transferendique lege coercebatur, ut nec dari licuit nec vendi, ſed hæredibus relinquenda erat, in ſcriptis aliter permitteretur; Terra inde hæreditaria nuncupata. LL. Aluredi, cap. 36. Bockland ſignifies deed land; and it commonly carried with it the abſolute property of the land, wherefore it was preſerved in writing, and poſſeſſed by the Thanes or nobler ſort, as Prædium nobile, liberum & immune à ſervitiis vulgaribus & ſervilibus, and was the ſame as allodium, deſcendable unto all the ſons, according to the common courſe of Nations and of Nature, and therefore called gavelkind; deviſable alſo by will, and thereupon termed Terræ Teſtamentales. Spelm. of Feuds. This was one of the titles which the Engliſh Saxons had to their lands, and was always in writing: there was but one more, and that was Folkland, i. e. Terra Popularis, which paſſed from one to another without any writing. See Charter-land. Alſo vide Squire on the Anglo-Saxon Government.

Boia, Chains or fetters, properly what we call bernicles. Quidam a dolore capitis liberatus eſt; adjungens genæ ſuæ boias, quibus S. Briſtanus ligatus fuit. Hiſt. Elien. apud Whartoni Angl. Sac. part 1. p. 618.

Bolhagium, or boldagium, a little houſe or cottage. Blount.

Bolt, A bolt of ſilk or ſtuff, ſeems to have been a long narrow piece; in the accounts of the priory of Burceſter. It is mentioned. Paroch. Antiq. p. 574.

Bolting, A term of art uſed in our Inns of Court, whereby is intended a private arguing of caſes. The manner of it at Gray's Inn is thus: An ancient and two barriſters ſit as judges, three ſtudents bring each a caſe, out of which the judges chuſe one to be argued, which done, the ſtudents firſt argue it, and after them the barriſters. It is inferior to mooting, and may be derived from the Sax. bolt, a houſe, becauſe done privately in the houſe for inſtruction. In Lincoln's Inn, Mondays and Wedneſdays are the bolting days, in vacation time; and Tueſdays and Thurſdays the moot days.

Bona fide. That we ſay is done bona fide, which is done really, with a good faith, without any fraud or deceit. Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5. 12 Car. 2. c. 18, &c.

Bona geſtura, Good abearing, or good behaviour.—Et ſi per furorem vel aliquos manutentores renuerit invenire ſufficientem ſecuritatem de ſua bona geſtura erga balivos & comburgenſes, &c. a prædicto burgo ejiciatur MS. Codex de LL. Statutis & conſuetud. Burgi villæ Montgomer. fol. 15. See Good Behaviour.

Bonaght, or bonaghty, Was an exaction in Ireland, impoſed on the people at the will of the lord, for relief of the knights called bonaghti, who ſerved in the wars. Antiq. Hibern. p. 60.

Bona Notabilia. Where a perſon dies having at the time of his death goods in any other dioceſe, beſides his goods in the dioceſe where he dieth, amounting to the value of 5 l. at leaſt, he is ſaid to have bona notabilia, and then probate of his will, or granting adminiſtration, belongs to the archbiſhop of the province: but this doth not prejudice thoſe dioceſes where, by compoſition or cuſtom, bona notabilia are rated at a greater ſum. Can. 92, 93. Perkins, ſect. 489. And in the city of London bona notabilia are 10 l. by compoſition. 4 Inſt. 335. One that hath a debt upon bond or ſpecialty, &c. in another dioceſe, hath bona notabilia. 1 Rol. Abr. 908. Though if a perſon happens to die in another dioceſe, than that wherein he lives, on a journey, what he hath about him above the value of 5 l. &c. ſhall not be bona notabilia. Can. 93.

There muſt be ſeveral adminiſtrations where a perſon dies leaving bona notabilia in each province of Canterbury and York; for adminiſtration granted in one province doth not extend to goods in the other, becauſe the archbiſhops have diſtinct ſupreme juriſdictions; but then there is to be bona notabilia in ſeveral dioceſes in each province. Dyer 305. 2 Lev. 86. If a man dies in one dioceſe, without any goods, and leaves to the value of 5 l. in another dioceſe, the archbiſhop of that province may grant adminiſtration, as he hath a general juriſdiction there; though ſuch adminiſtration is voidable by ſentence. Cro. Eliz. 457. But where a biſhop grants adminiſtration, and there are bona notabilia, ſuch adminiſtration is merely void, for he hath no juriſdiction out of his dioceſe. 5 Rep. 30. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 381. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 509, 510.

Bona Patria, An aſſiſe of country-men or good neighbours: It is ſometimes called aſſiſa bonæ patriæ, when twelve or more men are choſen out of any part of the country to paſs upon an aſſiſe; otherwiſe called juratores, becauſe they are to ſwear judicially in the preſence of the party, &c. according to the practice of Scotland. Skene. See Aſſiſors.

Bona peritura, Goods that are periſhable. The Stat. 13 E. 1. cap. 4. which enacts, That where any thing eſcapes alive out of a Ship caſt away, the Ship ſhall not be adjudged wreck, but the cargo ſhall be ſaved and kept by the view of the ſheriff, &c. in the hands of thoſe of the town where the ſame was found, ſo that if any one within a year and a day can make proof that the goods are his, they ſhall be reſtored to him, &c. Ordains, that if the goods within the ſhip be bona peritura, ſuch things as will not endure for a year and a day, the ſheriff ſhall ſell them, and deliver the money received to anſwer it. See 26 Geo. 2. c. 19.

Boncha, A bunch, is derived from the old Lat. bonna or bunna, a riſing bank, for the bounds of fields: and hence bown is uſed in Norfolk, for ſwelling or riſing up in a bunch or tumour, &c.

Bond, Is a deed or obligatory inſtrument in writing, whereby one doth bind himſelf to another, to pay a ſum of money, or do ſome other act; as to make a releaſe, ſurrender an eſtate, for quiet enjoyment to ſtand to an award, ſave harmleſs, perform a will, &c. It contains an obligation, with a penalty: and a condition, which expreſsly mentions what money is to be paid, or other thing to be performed, and the limited time for the performance thereof; for which the obligation is peremptorily binding. It may be made upon parchment or paper, though it is uſually on paper; and be either in the firſt or third perſon; and the condition may be either in the ſame deed, or in another, and ſometimes it is included within, and ſometimes indorſed upon the obligation: but it is commonly at the foot of the obligation. Bro. Obl. 67. A memorandum on the back of a bond may reſtrain the ſame by way of exception. Moor 67.

This ſecurity is alſo called a ſpecialty; the debt being therein particularly ſpecified in writing, and the party's ſeal; acknowledging the debt or duty, and confirming the contract; rendering it a ſecurity of a higher nature than thoſe entered into without, the ſolemnity of a ſeal; and therefore bonds or ſpecialties ſhall be preferred to ſimple contracts, in a courſe of adminiſtration; and from its being a higher ſecurity, it is held, that for a breach or non-performance an action of debt only will lie.

A bond is a choſe in action, which cannot be aſſigned over, ſo as to enable the aſſignee to ſue in his own name; yet he has by the aſſignment ſuch a title to the paper and wax, that he may keep or cancel it. Co. Lit. 232.

Alſo in equity a bond is aſſignable for a valuable conſideration paid, and the aſſignee alone becomes intitled to the money; ſo that if the obligor, after notice of the aſſignment, pays the money to the obligee, he will be compelled to pay it over again. 2 Vern. 595. Abr. Eq. 44.

The aſſignee muſt take it, ſubject to the ſame equity that it was ſubject to in the hands of the obligee. 2 Vern. 595. Abr. Eq. 44.

If a man enters into a bond of ſuch a ſum, on condition to be void on payment of a leſſer ſum; or if a man bind himſelf in the penalty of 100 l. that he will pay 50 l. by ſuch a day; after the day of payment is paſt, the penalty or ſum of 100 l. is the legal debt; and for ſo much it hath been reſolved, an executor of an obligor of ſuch forfeited bond, may cover the aſſets of his teſtator. 1 Cro. Car. 490. 1 Vent. 354. 3 Lev. 368. Hill. 9 Geo. 2. in B. R. The Bank of England v. Morris. Annaly's Rep. temp. Hardwicke, 219, &c.

And as the penalty, by the bond's being forfeited, becomes the legal debt; ſo there was no remedy againſt ſuch penalty, but by application to a court of equity, which relieves in thoſe caſes, on payment of principal, intereſt and coſts: alſo tho' at law there can be no remedy beyond the penalty; becauſe in that the obligee ſeems to have taken up his ſecurity; yet as it is on the foundation of doing equal juſtice to both parties that equity proceeds, it will, on any application for a favour from the obligor, compel him to pay the principal, intereſt and coſts, tho' exceeding the penalty. 1 Show. Parl. Ca. 15. Abr. Eq. 91, 92. 1 Salk. 154. 1 Vern. 342, 350. 2 Vern. 509.

And this rule of compelling the party to do equity who ſeeks equity, ſeems to be the reaſon why an obligee ſhall have intereſt after he has entered up judgment; for tho' in ſtrictneſs it may be accounted his own fault why he did not take out execution, and therefore not intitled to intereſt; yet, as by the judgment he is intitled to the penalty, it does not ſeem reaſonable that he ſhould be deprived of it, but upon paying him principal and the intereſt, which incurred as well before as after the entering up of the judgment. Abr. Eq. 92, 288. And ſee farther 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. which will be mentioned hereafter under its proper head.

Having ſhewn the nature of this ſecurity, it may be proper to conſider,

I. Who may be obligors and obligees.

II. What words create ſuch ſecurity.

III. What ceremonies are requiſite to a bond, wherein of ſigning, ſealing and delivery.

IV. Of the condition of a bond, what conditions deemed lawful, &c. and what ſhall be deemed a breach of the ſame.

V. Of bonds void, or voidable; alſo how bonds may be diſcharged, and of the manner of pleading performance, &c.

I. All perſons who are enabled to contract, and whom the law ſuppoſes to have ſufficient freedom and underſtanding for that purpoſe, may bind themſelves in bonds and obligations. 5 Co. 119. 4 Co. 124. 1 Rol. Abr. 340.

But if a perſon is illegally reſtrained of his liberty, by being confined in a common goal or elſewhere, and, during ſuch reſtraint, enters into a bond to the perſon who cauſes the reſtraint, the ſame may be avoided for dureſs of impriſonment. Co. Lit. 253. 2 Inſt. 482. vid. tit. Dureſs.

So in reſpect of that power and authority which a huſband has over his wife, the bond of a feme covert is ipſo facto void, and ſhall neither bind her nor her huſband. See Baron and Feme.

So though an infant ſhall be liable for his neceſſaries, ſuch as meat drink, cloaths, phyſic, ſchooling, &c. yet if he bind himſelf in an obligation, with a penalty for payment of any of thoſe, the obligation is void. Doct. and Stud. 113. Co. Lit. 172. Cro. Jac. 494, 560. 1 Sid. 112. 1 Salk. 279. Cro. Eliz. 920. See Infants.

Alſo though a perſon non compos mentis ſhall not be allowed to avoid his bond, by reaſon of inſanity and diſtraction, as no man can be allowed to ſtultify himſelf, becauſe of the ill conſequences that might attend counterfeit madneſs; yet may a privy in blood, as the heir, and privies in repreſentation, as the executor and adminiſtrator, avoid ſuch bonds; alſo if a lunatick after office found, enters into a bond, it is merely void. 4 Co. 124. Beverley's caſe. See Infants and Lunaticks.

But if an infant, feme covert, monk, &c. who are diſabled by law to contract, and to bind themſelves in bonds, enter together with a ſtranger, who is under none of theſe diſabilities, into an obligation, it ſhall bind the ſtranger, though it be void as to the infant, &c. 1 Rol. Rep. 41.

If a ſervant makes a bill in form, Memorandum, that I have received of Edward Talbot, to the uſe of my maſter Serjeant Gaudy, the ſum of 40*l.* to be paid at Michaelmas following, and thereto ſet his ſeal, this is a good obligation to bind himſelf; for though, in the beginning of the deed, the receipt is ſaid to be to the uſe of his maſter, yet the re-payment is general, and muſt neceſſarily bind him who ſealed; and the rather, becauſe otherwiſe the obligee would loſe his debt; he having no remedy againſt Serjeant Gaudy. Yelv. 137. Talbot ver. Godbolt.

Infants, ideots, as alſo feme coverts may be obligees; and as to this the huſband is ſuppoſed to aſſent, being for his advantage; but if he diſagrees, the obligation hath loſt its force; ſo that after the obligor may plead non eſt factum; but if he neither agrees nor diſagrees, the bond is good, for his conduct ſhall be eſteemed a tacit conſent, ſince it is to his advantage. 5 Co. 119. b. Co. Lit. 3. a.

But a feme covert can neither be obligor nor obligee to her huſband, nor vice verſa, being but one perſon in law; alſo by the better opinion, a bond entered into, to a feme ſole, by the perſon whom ſhe afterwards marries, is, by the marriage, in law extinguiſhed. See Baron and Feme.

An alien may be an obligee, for ſince he is allowed to trade and traffick with us, it is but reaſonable to give him all that ſecurity which is neceſſary in his contracts, and which will the better enable him to carry on his commerce and dealings amongſt us. Co. Lit. 129. b. Moor 431. Cro. Eliz. 142, 683. Cro. Car. 9. 1 Salk. 46. Fareſt. 15. See Alien.

Sole corporations, ſuch as biſhops, prebends, parſons, vicars, &c. cannot be obligees, and therefore a bond made to any of theſe, ſhall enure to them in their natural capacities; for no ſole body politick can take a chattel in ſucceſſion, unleſs it be by cuſtom; but a corporation aggregate may take any chattel, as bonds, leaſes, &c. in its political capacity, which ſhall go in ſucceſſion, becauſe it is always in being. Cro. Eliz. 464. Dyer 48. a. Co. Lit. 9. a. 46. a. Hob. 64. 1 Roll Abr. 515.

If a drunken man gives his bond it binds him; and a bond without conſideration is obligatory, and no relief ſhall be had againſt it, for it is voluntary, and as a gift. Jenk. Cent. 169. A perſon enters voluntarily into a bond, though there was not any conſideration for it, if there be no fraud uſed in obtaining the ſame, the bond ſhall not be relieved againſt in equity: but a voluntary bond may not be paid in a courſe of adminiſtration, ſo as to take place of real debts, even by ſimple contract; yet it ſhall be paid before legacies. 1 Chan. Caſ. 157. An heir is not bound, unleſs he be named expreſsly in the bond; tho' the executors and adminiſtrators are.

It is clearly agreed that two or more may bind themſelves jointly in an obligation, or they may bind themſelves jointly and ſeverally; in which laſt caſe, the obligee may ſue them jointly, or he may ſue any one of them at his election; but if they are jointly and not ſeverally bound, the obligee muſt ſue them jointly; alſo, in ſuch caſe, if one of them dies, his executor is totally diſcharged, and the ſurvivor and ſurvivors only chargeable. 2 Rol. Abr. 148. Dyer 19. 310. 5 Co. 19. Dal. 85. pl. 42. 1 Salk. 393. Carth. 61. 1 Lutw. 696.

If three enter into an obligation, and bind themſelves in the words following, Obligamus nos & utrumque noſtrum per ſe pro toto & in ſolido, theſe make the obligation joint and ſeveral. Dyer 19. b. pl. 114.

In a bond where ſeveral are bound ſeverally, the obligee is at his election to ſue all the obligors together, or all of them apart, and have ſeveral judgments and executions; but he ſhall have ſatisfaction but once, for if it be of one only, that ſhall diſcharge the reſt. Dyer 19, 310. Where two or more are bound in a joint bond, and only one is ſued, he muſt plead in abatement, that two more ſealed the bond, &c. and aver that they are living, and ſo pray judgment de billa, &c. And not demur to the declaration. Sid. 420.

If action be brought upon a bond againſt two joint and ſeveral obligors jointly, and both are taken by capias, here the death or eſcape of one, ſhall not releaſe the other; but the ſame kind of execution muſt be taken forth againſt them: it is otherwiſe when they are ſued ſeverally. Hob. 59.

Alſo, if two or more be jointly bound, though regularly one of them alone cannot be ſued, yet if proceſs be taken out againſt all, and one of them only appears, but the others ſtand out to an outlawry, he who appeared ſhall be charged with the whole debt. 9 Co. 119.

If a bond is made to three, to pay money to one of them, they muſt all join in the action, becauſe they are but as one obligee. Yelv. 177.

So if an obligation be made to three, and two bring their action, they ought to ſhew the third is dead. 1 Sid. 238, 420. 1 Vent. 34.

Though there be ſeveral obligees, yet a perſon cannot be bound to ſeveral perſons ſeverally; and therefore an obligation of 200*l.* to two, ſolvend' the one 100*l.* to the one, and the other to the other is a void ſolvend'. Dyer 350. a. pl. 20. Hob. 172. 2 Brownl. 209. Yelv. 197.

If A. bind himſelf in a ſum to B. ſolvendum to C. who is a ſtranger, a payment to C. is a payment to B. In an action upon it, the count muſt be upon a bond ſolvend' to B. 1 Sid. 295. 2 Keb. 81.

In debt the declaration was, that the defendant became bound in a bond of ——, for the payment of —— to him, his attorney or aſſigns, and on oyer of the bond it appeared, that the ſolvendum was to the plaintiff's attorney or aſſigns, without mention of himſelf; and on demurrer for this variance 'twas ſaid that the declaration muſt not be according to the letter of the obligation, but according to the operation of the law thereupon. 6 Mod. 228. Robert v. Harnage.

So if A. makes a bond to B. ſolvendum to ſuch perſon as he ſhall appoint; if B. does appoint one, payment to him is a payment to B. and if B. appoints none, it ſhall be paid to B. himſelf. 6 Mod. 228.

If A. by his bill obligatory, acknowledges himſelf to be indebted to B. in the ſum of 10*l.* to be paid at a day to come, and binds himſelf and his heirs in the ſame bill in 20*l.* but does not mention to whom he is bound, yet the obligation is good, and he ſhall be intended to be bound to B. to whom he acknowledged before the 10*l.* to be due. 2 Rol. Abr. 148. Franklin verſus Turner.

II. As to the words neceſſary.

A bond may be made by any words, in a writing ſealed and delivered, wherein a man doth declare himſelf to have another man's money, or to be indebted to him; but the beſt form of making it, is that which is moſt uſed, 2 Shep. Abr. 477. If a bond be thus: Know all men by theſe preſents, that I W. R. am bound to A. L. in the ſum, &c. for payment of which, I give full power to him to levy the ſame upon the profits of ſuch lands yearly till it be paid; in this caſe the obligee may ſue upon the obligation, or levy the money according to the ſaid clauſe. 3 Leon. ca. 299.

So a writing in this form; Memorandum, I A. B. have agreed to pay H. L. 20 l. tho' this be in the preter-perfect tenſe, yet if it hath all other ceremonies eſſential, it ſhall amount unto an obligation. 1 Leon 25.

Debt brought upon a bond of 60 l. the bond was in Italian, and the ſum therein expreſſed was in theſe words, viz. in ceſſanta libris, and adjudged to be good. Cro. Jac. 208. Parker v. Rennady.

In debt upon a bill obligatory, demanding thirty-two pounds four ſhillings and ſevenpence; the defendant demanded oyer of the bill, and it was threty-two ponds four ſhillings and 7-pence, ſo threty for thirty, and ponds for pounds; and on demurrer for this cauſe, it was adjudged for the plaintiff. Cro. Jac. 607. Hulbert v. Long.

An obligation made to one, to the uſe of A. L. will be good for him in equity. Bro. Oblig. Where a bond is made obligo me, &c. leaving out the words hæredes, executores & adminiſtratores, this is good; and the executors and adminiſtrators ſhall be bound by it. Dyer 13.

III. As to the ceremonies neceſſary to a bond or obligation.

It is ſaid, that there are only three things eſſentially neceſſary to the making a good obligation, viz writing in paper or parchment, ſealing and delivery; but it hath been adjudged not to be neceſſary, that the obligor ſhould ſign or ſubſcribe his name; and that therefore if in the obligation the obligor be named Erlin, and he ſigns his name Erlwin, that this variation is not material; becauſe ſubſcribing is no eſſential part of the deed, ſealing being ſufficient. 2 Co. 5. a. Godard's caſe. Noy 21, 85. Moor 28. Stil. 97. 2 Salk. 462. 5 Mod 281.

And though the ſeal be neceſſary, and the uſual way of declaring on a bond is, that the defendant per ſcriptum ſuum obligatorium ſigillo ſuo ſigillatum acknowledged, &c. yet if the word ſigillat' be wanting, it is cured by verdict and pleading over; for when he ſaith per ſcriptum ſuum obligatorium, &c all neceſſary circumſtances ſhall be intended; and if it were not ſealed, it could not be his deed or obligation. Dyer 19. a. Cro. Eliz. 571, 737. Cro. Jac. 420. 2 Co. 5. 1 Vent. 70. 3 Lev. 348. 1 Salk. 141. 6 Mod. 306.

Alſo tho' ſealing and delivery be eſſential in an obligation, yet there is no occaſion in the bond to mention that it was ſealed and delivered; becauſe, as my Lord Coke ſays, theſe are things which are done afterwards. 2 Co. 5. a.

The name of the obligor ſubſcribed, 'tis ſaid, is ſufficient, though there is a blank for his chriſtian name in the bond. Cro Jac. 261. Vide Cro. Jac. 558. 1 Mod. 107. In theſe caſes, though there be a verdict, there ſhall not be judgment. Where an obligor's name is omitted to be inſerted in the bond, and yet he ſigns and ſeals it; the court of Chancery may make good ſuch an accident; and in caſe a perſon takes away a bond fraudulently, and cancels it, the obligee ſhall have as much benefit thereby, as if not cancelled. 3 Chan. Rep. 99, 184.

An obligation is good though it wants a date, or hath a falſe or impoſſible date; for the date, as hath been obſerved, is not of the ſubſtance of the deed; but herein we muſt take notice, that the day of the delivery of a deed or obligation is the day of the date, though there is no day ſet forth. 2 Co. 5. Godard's caſe. Noy 21, 85, 86. Hob. 249. Stil. 97. Cro. Jac. 136, 264. Yelv. 193. 1 Salk 76.

If a man declare on a bond, bearing date ſuch a day, but does not ſay when delivered, this is good: for every deed is ſuppoſed to be delivered and made on the day it bears date; and if the plaintiff declare on a date, he cannot afterwards reply, that it was primo deliberat' at another day, for this would be a departure. Cro. Eliz. 773. 3 Lev. 348. 1 Salk. 141. Vide 1 Brownl. 104. 1 Lev. 196.

A plaintiff may ſuggeſt a date in a bond, where there is none, or it is impoſſible, &c. where the parties and ſum are ſufficiently expreſſed. 5 Mod. 282. A bond dated on the ſame day on which a releaſe is made of all things uſque diem datus, &c. is not thereby diſcharged. 2 Rol. Rep. 255.

If the bond was delivered before the date, on iſſue, non eſt factum, joined on ſuch a deed, the jury are not eſtopped to find the truth, viz. that it was delivered before the date, and it is a good deed from the delivery. 2 Co. 4, 6. 3 Keb. 332.

A perſon ſhall not be charged by a bond, though ſigned and ſealed, without delivery, or words, or other thing, amounting to a delivery. 1 Leon. 140. But—

A bond or deed may be delivered by words, without any act of delivery; as where the obligor ſays to the obligee, go and take the ſaid writing, or take it as my deed, &c. So an actual tradition, without ſpeaking any word, is ſufficient; otherwiſe, a man that is mute could not deliver a deed; but where on an iſſue of non eſt factum, the jury found that the defendant ſigned and ſealed the obligation, and laid it on a table, and that the plaintiff came and took it up, this was held not to be the defendant's deed, without other circumſtances found by the jury. Co. Lit. 36. a. Cro. Eliz. 835. Leon. 193. Cro. Eliz. 122. Sed qu. if a very trifling circumſtance will not amount to a delivery. In this caſe, what was the uſe of ſigning and ſealing, and laying it on the table, if not intended for the uſe of the obligee? and might not the jury, with clear conſciences, have found a general verdict for the plaintiff?

IV. With reſpect to the condition, &c.

It is to be obſerved, that the condition of a bond muſt be to do a thing lawful; and bonds not to uſe trades, till or ſow grounds, &c. are unlawful, for they are againſt the good of the public, and the liberty of a freeman; and therefore void: and a condition of a bond to do any act malum in ſe, as to kill a perſon, &c. is void.

Conditions of bonds are to be not only lawful, but poſſible; and when the matter or thing to be done, or not to be done by a condition, is unlawful or impoſſible, or the condition itſelf repugnant, inſenſible or uncertain, the condition is void, and in ſome caſes the obligation alſo. 10 Rep. 120. But ſometimes an obligation may be ſingle, to pay the money, where the condition is impoſſible, repugnant, &c. 2 Mod. 285. If a thing be poſſible at the time of entering into the bond, and afterwards becomes impoſſible by the act of God, the act of the law, or of the obligee, it is become void; as if a man be bound to appear next term, and dies before, the obligation is ſaved.

A condition of a bond was, that A. L. ſhould pay ſuch a ſum upon the 25th of December, or appear in Hillary term after in the court of B. R. He died after the 25th of December, and before Hillary term, and had not paid any thing: in this caſe the condition was not broken for nonpayment, and the other part is become impoſſible by the act of God. 1 Mod. Rep. 265. And when a condition is doubtful, it is always taken moſt favourably for the obligor, and againſt the obligee; but ſo as a reaſonable conſtruction be made as near as can be according to the intention of the parties. Dyer 51.

If no time is limited in a bond for payment of the money, it is due preſently and payable on demand. 1 Brownl. 53. But the judges have ſometimes appointed a convenient time for payment, having regard to the diſtance of place, and the time wherein the thing may be performed. And if a condition be made impoſſible in reſpect to time, as to make payment of money on the 30th of February, &c. it ſhall be paid preſently; and here the obligation ſtands ſingle. Jones 140. Though if a man be bound in a bond with condition to deliver ſo much corn upon the 29th day of February next following, and that month hath then but twenty-eight days; it has been held, that the obligor is not obliged to perform the condition till there comes a leap-year. 1 Leon. 101. Sed qu. if intent of parties can be ſhewn?

A bond made to enfeoff two perſons, if one dies before the time is paſt, wherein it ſhould be done; the obligor muſt enfeoff the ſurvivor of them, or the condition will be broken: and if it be that B. and others ſhall enjoy land, and the obligor and B. the obligee do diſturb the reſt; by this the condition is broken. 4 Hen. 7. 1. Co. Lit. 384. Where one is bound to do an act to the obligee himſelf, the doing it to a ſtranger by appointment of the obligee, will not be a performance of the condition. 2 Bulſt. 149. But in ſuch caſe equity would relieve, and probably a judge, on ſuch action coming before him, would order plaintiff to be non-ſuited. If the act be to be done at a certain place, where the obligor is to go to Rome, &c. and he is to do the ſole act without limitation of time, he hath term during life to perform the ſame: if the concurrence of the obligor and obligee is requiſite, it may be haſtened by the requeſt of the obligee. 6 Rep. 30. 1 Rol. Abr. 437. Where no place is mentioned for performance of a condition, the obligor is obliged to find out the perſon of the obligee, if he be in England, and tender the money, otherwiſe the bond will be forfeited: but when a place is appointed, he need ſeek no further. Co. Lit. 210. Lit. 340. And if, where no place is limited for payment of money due on a bond, the obligor, at or after the day of payment, meets with the obligee, and tenders him the money, but he goes away to prevent it, the obligor ſhall be excuſed. 8 E. 4.

The obligor, or his ſervant, &c. may tender the money to ſave the forfeiture of the bond, and it ſhall be a good performance of the condition, if made to the obligee, though refuſed by him; yet if the obligor be afterwards ſued, he muſt plead that he is ſtill ready to pay it, and tender the money in court. Co. Lit. 208.

In the performance of the condition of an obligation the intention of the parties is chiefly to be regarded; and therefore a performance in ſubſtance is ſufficient, though it differ in words or ſome immaterial circumſtance; as if one be bound to deliver the teſtament of the teſtator, if he plead that he had delivered literas teſtamentarias, it is ſufficient. Bro. Condition, 158. 17 E. 4. 3. 1 Rol. Abr. 426.

If the condition of an obligation be to procure a lawful diſcharge, this muſt be by a releaſe, or ſome diſcharge that is pleadable, and not by acquittance, which is but evidence. 1 Keb. 739.

If the party, who is bound to perform the condition, diſables himſelf, this is a breach; as where the condition is, that the feoffee ſhall reinfeoff, or make a gift in tail, &c. to the feoffor, and the feoffee, before he performs it, make a feoffment or gift in tail, or leaſe for life or years in præſenti or futuro to another perſon, or marry or grant a rent-charge, or be bound in a ſtatute or recogniſance, or become profeſſed; in all theſe caſes the condition is broken; for the feoffee has either diſabled himſelf to make any eſtate, or to make it in the ſame plight or freedom in which he received it; and being once diſabled, he is ever diſabled, though his wife ſhould die, or the rent, &c. ſhould be diſcharged, or he ſhould be deraigned, &c. before the time of the reconveyance. Co. Lit. 221, 222. Poph. 110. 1 Co. 25. a. 1 Rol. Abr. 447. 5 Co. 21. a.

Where the condition is in the conjunctive, regularly both parts muſt be performed; yet, to ſupply the intention of the parties, it is held, that if a condition in the conjunctive be not poſſible to be performed, it ſhall be taken in the disjunctive; as if the condition be, that he and his executors ſhall do ſuch a thing. this ſhall be taken in the disjunctive, becauſe he cannot have an executor in his life-time; ſo if the condition be, that he and his aſſigns ſhall ſell certain goods, this ſhall be taken in the disjunctive, becauſe both cannot do it. 1 Rol. Abr. 444. Owen 52. 1 Leon. 74. Goulſ. 71.

V. Bonds may be either void or voidable.

As if an infant ſeal a bond, and be ſued thereon, he is not to plead non eſt factum, but muſt avoid the bond by ſpecial pleading; for this bond is only voidable, and not in itſelf void. 5 Rep. 119. But if a bond be made by a feme covert, ſhe may plead her coverture, and conclude non eſt factum, &c. her bond being void. 10 Rep. 119. Or plead non eſt factum and give coverture in evidence. If a bond depends upon ſome other deed, and the deed becomes void, the bond is alſo void.

A bond made with condition not to give evidence againſt a felon, &c. is void; but the defendant muſt plead the ſpecial matter. Vide Wilſon, par. 2. p. 341, &c. Condition of a bond to indemnify a perſon from any legal proſecution, is againſt law, and void. 1 Lutw. 667. And if a ſheriff takes a bond as a reward for doing of a thing, it is void. 3 Salk. 75. Interlineation in a bond in a place not material, will not make the bond void; but if it be altered in a part material, it ſhall be void. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 391. And a bond may be void by raſure, &c. As where the date, &c. is raſed after delivery; which goes through the whole. 5 Rep. 23. If the words in a bond at the end of the condition, That then this obligation to be void, are omitted, the condition will be void; but not the obligation.

Bonds may likewiſe be diſcharged by act of the party or by act of law.

The acceptance of a new bond will not diſcharge the old one, as a judgment may. Hob. 68. One bond cannot be given in ſatisfaction of another; but this is where given by the obligor himſelf, for it may by others. 1 Mod. 221. If a bond be to pay money at ſuch at a time, &c. it is no plea for the obligor to ſay he did pay it; he muſt ſhew at what time, or elſe it may be taken that the performance was after the time limited. Noy's Max. 15. If a bond be of twenty years ſtanding, and no demand be proved thereon, or good cauſe of ſo long forbearance ſhewn to the court, upon pleading ſolvit ad diem, it ſhall be intended paid. Mod. Ca. 22.

But by 4 An. c. 16. If an action of debt be brought on ſingle bill, or judgment, after money paid, ſuch payment may be pleaded in bar. So of a bond with a condition, upon payment of principal and intereſt due by the condition, though ſuch payment was not ſtrictly made according to the condition, yet it may be pleaded in bar.

And it is further enacted by the ſaid ſtatute, ſect. 14. "That if at any time, pending an action upon any ſuch bond with a penalty, the defendant ſhall bring into court, where the action is depending, all principal money and intereſt due on ſuch bond, and alſo all ſuch coſts, as have been expended in any ſuit or ſuits in law or equity upon ſuch bond; the ſaid money ſo brought in ſhall be deemed and taken to be in full ſatisfaction and diſcharge of the ſaid bond; and the court ſhall and may give judgment to diſcharge every ſuch defendant of and from the ſame accordingly."

Bonds alſo, as hath been ſaid, may be diſcharged by operation of law.

If ſeveral obligors are bound jointly and ſeverally, and the obligee make one of them his executor, it is a releaſe of the debt, and the executor cannot ſue the other obligor. 8 Co. 136. 1 Salk. 300. And vide 1 Jon. 345.

But though it be a releaſe in law, in regard it is the proper act of the obligee, yet the debt by this is not abſolutely diſcharged, but it remains aſſets in his hands, to pay both debts and legacies. Cro. Car. 373. Yelv. 160.

If a feme ſole obligee take one of the obligors to huſband, this is ſaid to be a releaſe in law of the debt, being her own act. 8 Co. 136. a. March. 128.

If one obligor makes the executor of the obligee his executor, and leaves aſſets, the debt is deemed ſatisfied; for he has power, by way of retainer, to ſatisfy the debt; and neither he nor the adminiſtrator de bonis non, &c. of the obligee can ever ſue the ſurviving obligor. Hob. 10.

But if two are bound jointly and ſeverally to A. and the executor of one of them makes the obligee his executor, yet the obligee may ſue the other obligor. 2 Lev. 73.

If two are jointly and ſeverally bound in an obligation, and the obligee releaſe to one of them, both are diſcharged. Co. Lit. 232. a.

Three were bound jointly and ſeverally in an obligation, and an action was brought againſt one of them, who pleaded, that the ſeal of one of the others was torn off, and the obligation cancelled, and therefore void againſt all. Upon demurrer it was adjudged, that the obligation, by the tearing off the ſeal of one of the obligors, became void againſt all, notwithſtanding the obligors were ſeverally bound. 2 Lev. 220. 2 Show. 289. Sed qu. if it was by accident, and not with intent to diſcharge that obligor, if a court of equity would not give relief? Indeed we ſhould think, that as the courts of law are now very liberal in their conſtruction of the Common law, as founded on reaſon, and the univerſal, immutable principles of juſtice, the tearing off one of the ſeals by accident might be pleaded in reply.

As to the pleading of performance, the defendant muſt ſet forth in what manner he hath performed it. Thus—

In debt on a bond, with condition for performance of ſeveral things, the defendant pleads quod conditio ejuſdem facti nunquam infracta fuit per ſe ipſum, &c. and held an ill plea: becauſe, for ſaving the bond, it is neceſſary for the defendant to ſhew how he hath performed the condition; and this ſort of pleading was never admitted. 2 Vent. 156.

So if he had pleaded performavit omnia, it had been ill; for the particulars being expreſſed in the condition, he ought to plead to each particularly; but if the condition were for performance of covenants in an indenture, performance were generally a good plea. 1 Lev. 302. This muſt be underſtood where the covenants are ſet forth and appear to be all in the affirmative. For if ſome are in the affirmative, ſome in the negative, or any in the disjunctive, the defendant ſhould plead ſpecially.

In debt on an obligation for payment of money, &c. the defendant pleads, that at the time and place paratus fuit to pay the money, but that no-body was there to receive it; and held ill on a general demurrer, for want of an obtulit ſolvere, for the tender only is traverſable, not the paratus. 3 Lev. 104.

In debt on a bond with condition, the defendant pleads a collateral plea, which is inſufficient; the plaintiff demurs, and hath judgment, without aſſigning a breach; for the defendant, by pleading a defective plea, by which he would excuſe his non-performance of the condition, ſaves the plaintiff the trouble of aſſigning a breach, and gives him advantage of putting himſelf on the judgment of the court whether the plea be good or not; but if the plaintiff had admitted the plea, and made a replication which ſhewed no cauſe of action, it had been otherwiſe; but if the replication were idle, and the defendant demurred, yet the plaintiff ſhould have judgment, without aſſigning a breach. 1 Lev. 55, 84. 3 Lev. 17, 24. This muſt mean, if the plea was bad in ſubſtance.

And in all caſes of debt on an obligation with condition, (that of a bond to perform an award only excepted) if the defendants plead a ſpecial matter, that admits and excuſes a non-performance, the plaintiff need only anſwer, and falſify the ſpecial matter alledged; for he that excuſes a non-performance admits it, and the plaintiff need not ſhew that which the defendant hath ſuppoſed and admitted. Salk 138.

But if the defendant pleads a performance of the condition, though it be not well pleaded, the plaintiff in his replication muſt ſhew a breach; for then he has no cauſe of action, unleſs he ſhew it; and this difference will give the true reaſon, and reconcile the following caſes. 1 Salk. 138. 1 Lev. 55, 84, 226. 1 Saund. 102, 159, 317. 3 Lev. 17, 24. 1 Vent. 114. Cro. Eliz. 320. Yelv. 78.

In debt on a bond, the defendant may have ſeveral pleas in bar; as if the plaintiff ſue as executor, the defendant may plead the releaſe of the teſtator for part, and for the reſidue the releaſe of the plaintiff, ſo he may plead payment as to part, and as to the reſt an acquittance. 1 Salk. 180.

In debt on an obligation the defendant cannot plead nihil debet, but muſt deny the deed by pleading non eſt factum; for the ſeal of the party continuing, it muſt be diſſolved eo ligamine quo ligatur. Hard 332. Hob. 218.

In bonds to ſave harmleſs, the defendant being proſecuted, is to plead non damnificatus, &c.

Books. By 25 Hen. 8. c. 15. No perſon ſhall buy any printed books brought from beyond ſea to ſell the ſame again, and no one ſhall buy books by retail brought from beyond ſea by any ſtranger. Likewiſe the prices of books, exceſſively increaſed, ſhall be qualified by the king's great officers.

By Stat. 7 Ann. c. 14. ſect. 10. If any book ſhall be taken, or otherwiſe loſt out of any parochial library, any juſtice may grant his warrant to ſearch for it; and if it ſhall be found, it ſhall, by order of ſuch juſtice, be reſtored to the library.

By 12 Geo. 2. c. 36. No perſon ſhall import or ſell books firſt written and printed in this kingdom, and reprinted abroad, under the penalty of 5 l. and double the value of every book ſo imported or ſold.

From the ſeventh to the eleventh century books were very ſcarce. To that was chiefly owing the univerſal ignorance which prevailed, during that period. After the Saracens conquered Egypt in the ſeventh century, the communication with that country (as to Europe, &c.) was almoſt entirely broken off, and the papyrias no longer in uſe. So that paper was uſed, and as the price of that was high, books became extremely rare, and of great value. Vide Robertſon's Hiſtory of Charles the Fifth, 1 V. 233, 234. And Murat. Ant. Ital. V. 3. p. 833.

In the eleventh century the art of making paper was invented, the number of manuſcripts was thereby increaſed, and the ſtudy of the ſciences greatly facilitated. Booting, or Boting Corn, Rent corn, anciently ſo called. The tenants of the manor of *Haddenham in com. It is thought to be ſo called, as being paid by the tenants by way of bote, or boot, viz. as a compenſation to the lord for his making them leaſes, &c.

Bordagium, The tenure called bordlands. See Ordin. Juſt. Itin. in inſula de Jerſey.

Bordarii, or Bordbanni. Theſe words often occur in Domeſday, and ſome think they mean boors, huſbandmen, or cottagers. In the Domeſday inquiſition they were diſtinct from the villani; and ſeemed to be thoſe of a leſs ſervile condition, who had a bord or cottage, with a ſmall parcel of land allowed to them, on condition they ſhould ſupply the lord with poultry and eggs, and other ſmall proviſions for his board or entertainment. Some derive the word bordarii from the old Gall. bords, the limits or extreme parts of any extent; as the borders of a country, and the borderers inhabitants in thoſe parts.—Dicuntur bordarii, vel quod in tuguriis (quæ cottagia vocant) habitabant; ſeu villarum limitibus, quaſi borderers. Spelm.

Bord-Halfpeny, Signifies a ſmall toll, by cuſtom paid to the lord of the town for ſetting up boards, tables, booths, &c. in fairs and markets: it is derived from three

Saxon words bræd, i. e. board, belve, in behalf of, and penning, a toll; which in the whole makes a toll for, or in behalf of boards.

Bordlands, The demeſnes which lords keep in their hands for the maintenance of their board or table. Et dominicum quod quis habet ad menſam ſuam & proprie, ſicut ſunt bordlands, i. e. dominicum ad menſam. Bract. lib. 4. tract. 3. c. 9.

Bordlode, Was a ſervice required of tenants to carry timber out of the woods of the lord to his houſe: or it is ſaid to be the quantity of food or proviſion, which the bordary, or bordman, paid for their bord-lands. The old Scots had the term of burd, and meet-burd for victuals and proviſions; and burden ſack, for a ſack full of provender: from whence it is probable came our burden.

Bord-Service, A tenure of bord-lands; by which ſome lands in the manor of Fulham in com. Mid. and elſewhere, are held of the biſhop of London, and the tenants do now pay ſix-pence per acre in lieu of finding proviſion, anciently for their lord's board or table. Blount.

Bord-Brigch, borg-bryce, or burg brych, (Sax.) A breach or violation of ſurety-ſhip, pledge-breach, or of mutual fidelity.

Borough, (Fr. burg. Lat. burgus, Sax. borhoe) Signifies a corporate town, which is not a city; and alſo ſuch a town or place as ſends burgeſſes to parliament, the number whereof you may find in Crompt. Juriſd. f. 24. Verſtegan ſaith, that burg, or burgh, whereof we make our borough, metaphorically ſignifies a town having a wall, or ſome kind of incloſure about it: and all places that in old time had among our anceſtors the name of borough, were one way or other fenced or fortified Lit. ſect. 164. But ſometimes it is uſed for villa inſignior, or a country town of more than ordinary note, not walled. Lindewood upon the provincial (ut ſingula de ſenſibus) ſays to this effect, Aliqui interpretantur burgum eſſe caſtrum, vel locum ubi ſunt crebra caſtra, vel dicitur burgus ubi ſunt per limites habitacula plura conſtituta: but he afterwards thus defines it: Burgus dici poteſt villa quæcunque, alia a civitate, in qua eſt univerſitas approbata. A borough is a place of ſafety, protection and privilege, according to Somner; and in the reign of King Hen. 2. burghs had ſo great privileges, that if a bond-man or ſervant remained in a borough a year and a day, he was by that reſidence made a freeman. Glanville. And why theſe were called free burghs, and the tradeſmen in them free burgeſſes, was from a freedom to buy and ſell, without diſturbance, exempt from toll, &c. granted by charter. Parliament boroughs are ſaid to be either by charter, or towns holden of the king in ancient demeſne. Brady. It is conjectured that borhoe, or borough, was alſo formerly taken for thoſe companies conſiſting of ten families, which were to be pledges for one another: and we are told by ſome writers that it is a ſtreet or row of houſes cloſe to one another. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 10. *Lamb. Borough-holders, or Burſholders, quaſi burhoe ealders, Are the ſame officers with borough heads, or head-boroughs; who (according to Lambert) were the head men, or chief pledges of boroughs, choſen by the reſt to ſpeak and act in their names in thoſe things that concerned them. See Headborough. Vide Black. Com. 1 V. 114, 356. 4 V. 406.

Borough-Engliſh, (Sax. Borhoe Engliſe) Is a cuſtomary deſcent of lands, in ſome ancient boroughs, and copyhold manors, that eſtates ſhall deſcend to the youngeſt ſon; or, if the owner hath no iſſue, to his younger brother, as in Edmunton, &c. Kitch. 102. It has been obſerved, that the original of this old cuſtom proceeded from the lords of certain lands having the privilege to lie with their tenants wives the firſt night after marriage; wherefore in time the tenants obtained this cuſtom, on purpoſe that their eldeſt ſons (who might be their lord's baſtards) ſhould be incapable to inherit their eſtates. Præf. 3 Mod. Rep.

But the reaſon of the cuſtom of borough engliſh (Littleton ſays) is becauſe the youngeſt is preſumed in law to be leaſt able to provide for himſelf. Lit. 165. This cuſtom goes with the land, and guides the deſcent to the youngeſt ſon, although there be a deviſe to the contrary. 2 Lev. 138. If a man ſeiſed in fee of lands in borough engliſh, makes a feoffment to the uſe of himſelf and the heirs male of his body, according to the courſe of the Common law; and afterwards die ſeiſed, having iſſue two ſons, the youngeſt ſon ſhall have the lands by virtue of the cuſtom, notwithſtanding the feoffment. Dyer 179.

If a copyhold in borough engliſh be ſurrendered to the uſe of a perſon and his heirs, the right will deſcend to the youngeſt ſon according to the cuſtom. 1 Mod. 102. And a youngeſt ſon ſhall inherit an eſtate in tail in borough engliſh. Noy 106. But an heir at Common law ſhall take advantage of a condition annexed to borough engliſh land; though the youngeſt ſon ſhall be intitled to all actions in right of the land, &c. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 396. And the eldeſt ſon ſhall have tithes ariſing out of land borough engliſh; for tithes of common right are not inheritances deſcendable to an heir, but come in ſucceſſion from one clergyman to another. Ibid. 347.

Borough engliſh land being deſcendable to the youngeſt ſon, if a younger ſon dies without iſſue male leaving a daughter, ſuch daughter ſhall inherit jure repræſentationis. 1 Salk. 243. It hath been adjudged where a man hath ſeveral brothers, the youngeſt may inherit lands in borough engliſh: yet it is ſaid where a cuſtom is, that land ſhall go to the youngeſt ſon, it doth not give it to the youngeſt uncle, for cuſtoms ſhall be taken ſtrictly; and thoſe which fix and order the deſcents of inheritance, can be altered only by parliament. Dyer 179. 4 Leon. 384. Jenk. Cent. 220.

By the cuſtom of borough engliſh, the widow ſhall have the whole of her huſband's lands in dower, which is called her free-bench; and this is given to her the better to provide for the younger children, with the care of whom ſhe is intruſted. *Co. Borough Goods, deviſable, As before the ſtatutes of 32 H. 8. c. 1. & 34 Hen. 8. c. 5. No lands were deviſable at the Common law, but in ancient baronies; ſo at the making of the ſtatute of Acton Burnel, 11 Ed. 1. c. 1. it was doubted whether goods were deviſable but in ancient boroughs: for by the writ de rationabili parte bonorum, anciently the goods of a man were partible between his wife and children. By the Common law, lands could not be deviſed from the heir; and here it ſeems as if goods were alſo not deviſable from the wife and children, before the ſtatute 11 Ed. 1. c. 1.

Borrowing. A man borrows money, corn, or ſuch thing of another; he may not expect the ſame again, but the like, or ſo much: but if one lend me a horſe, &c. he muſt have the ſame reſtored. If a thing lent for uſe be uſed to any other end or purpoſe than that for which it was borrowed, the party may have his action on the caſe for it, though the thing be never the worſe; and if what is borrowed be loſt, although it be not by any negligence of mine, as if I be robbed of it; or where the thing is impaired or deſtroyed by my neglect, admitting that I put it to no more ſervice than that for which borrowed, I muſt make it good: ſo where I borrow a horſe, and put him in an old rotten houſe ready to fall, which falls on and kills him, I muſt anſwer for the horſe. But if ſuch goods borrowed periſh by the act of God in the right uſe of them; as where I put the horſe, &c. in a ſtrong houſe, and it fall and kill him, or it dies by diſeaſe, or by default of the owner, I ſhall not be charged. *Co. Bottomry, or bottomree, (fœnus nauticum) Is when the maſter of a ſhip borrows money upon the keel or bottom of his ſhip, and binds the ſhip itſelf; that if the money be not paid by the day aſſigned, the creditor ſhall have the ſhip. But it is generally where a perſon lends money to a merchant, who wants it to traffick, and is to be paid a greater ſum at the return of the ſhip, ſtanding to the hazard of the voyage; in regard to which, though the intereſt be greater than five per Cent. or what is allowed by law, it is not uſury. For money lent to ſea is allowed a larger intereſt than money advanced on land, by reaſon it is furniſhed at the hazard of the lender, and if the ſhip periſhes, the lender ſhares in the loſs; ſo that there is no real ſecurity, as in caſe of lands, &c. And the greater the danger is, the greater may be the profit reaſonably required for the money advanced. Lex Mercat. 122.

Money lent on bottomree is either on the bare ſhip (the uſual way) or upon the perſon of the borrower, and ſometimes upon both: the firſt is where a man takes up money, and obliges himſelf, that if ſuch a ſhip ſhall arrive at ſuch a port, then to repay perhaps in long voyages near double the ſum lent; but if the ſhip happens to miſcarry, then nothing. But when money is lent at intereſt, it is delivered at the peril of the borrower, and the profit of this is merely the price of the loan; whereas the profit of the other, is a reward for the danger and adventure of the ſea, which the lender takes upon himſelf, and makes the intereſt lawful. Sea laws 206, 207.

Then there is uſura marina, joining the advanced money, and the danger of the ſea together; and this is obligatory ſometimes to the borrower's ſhip, goods and perſon. Where bonds or bills of bottomry are ſealed, and the money is paid, if the ſhip receives injury by ſtorm, fire, &c. before the beginning of the voyage, then the perſon borrowing only runs the hazard, unleſs it be otherwiſe provided; as if the ſhip ſhall not arrive at ſuch a place, at ſuch a time, &c. there the contract has its beginning from the time of the ſealing: but if the condition be, that if ſuch a ſhip ſhall ſail from London to any port abroad, and ſhall not arrive there, &c. then, &c. there the contingency hath not its beginning till the departure.

A maſter of a ſhip may not take up money on bottomry, in places where his owners reſide, except he be a part owner, and then he may only take up ſo much as his part will anſwer in the ſhip; for if he exceeds that, his own eſtate is liable to make ſatisfaction; but when a maſter is in a ſtrange country, where there are no owners, nor any goods of theirs, nor of his own; and for want of money he cannot perform his voyage, there he may take up money upon bottomry, and all the owners are chargeable thereto; but this is underſtood where money cannot be procured by exchange, or any other means; and in the firſt caſe, the owners are liable by their veſſel, though not in their perſons; but they have their remedy againſt the maſter of of the ſhip. Leg. Oleron, l. 4. Vide Molloy, b. 2. c. 11. ſect. 11. Some maſters of ſhips who had inſured or taken up money upon bottomry to a greater value than their adventure having made it a practice to caſt away and deſtroy the ſhips under their charge. By Stat. 10 Car. 2. c. 6. it is made felony; and the offenders ſhall ſuffer death.

By the Stat. 19. Geo. 2. c. 37. every ſum lent on bottomree or at reſpondentia upon any ſubjects ſhips to or from the Eaſt Indies, ſhall be lent only on the ſhip, or the merchandiſe laden on board her, and ſo expreſſed in the condition of the bond, and the benefit of ſalvage ſhall be allowed to the lender, who alone ſhall have right to make aſſurance on the money lent. And no borrower of money, on bottomree or at reſpondentia as aforeſaid, ſhall recover more on any aſſurance than the value of his intereſt, excluſive of the money borrowed. And if the value of his intereſt doth not amount to the money borrowed, he ſhall be reſponſible to the lender for the ſurplus, notwithſtanding the ſhip and merchandiſe be totally loſt.

By 19 Geo. 2. c. 32. obligees in bottomree bonds are admitted to claim, and after the loſs or contingency ſhall have happened, to prove their debts, in caſes of bankruptcy, in like manner as if the loſs or contingency had happened before the time of the iſſuing of the commiſſion of bankruptcy againſt the obligor.

As to the forms of a bill of bottomry, and of a bottomry bond, &c. they are printed and ſold by the Stationers.

Bouche of Court, Commonly called budge of Court, was a certain allowance of proviſion from the King, to his knights and ſervants, that attended him in any military expedition. The French avoir bouche a court, is to have an allowance at court, of meat and drink: from bouche, a mouth. But ſometimes it extended only to bread, beer, and wine. And this was anciently in uſe as well in the houſes of noblemen, as in the King's court, as appears by the following indenture.—Ceſte endenture fait parentre lui nobles hommes Monſieur Tho. Braſium, Signifies malt: in the ancient ſtatutes braſiator is taken for a brewer, from the Fr. braſſeur; and at this day is uſed for a malſter or malt-maker. It was reſolved 18 Ed. 2. Quod vendicio braſii non eſt venditio victualium, nec debet puniri ſicut venditio panis, vini & cerviſiæ, & hujuſmodi, contra formam ſtatuti. To make malt was a ſervice paid by ſome tenants to their lords.——In manerio de Pidington quilibet virgatarius præparabit domino unum quarterium braſii per annum, ſi dominus inveniet boſcum ad ſiccandum. Paroch. Breach of cloſe, Every unwarrantable entry on another's ſoil, the law calls a treſpaſs, by breaking his cloſe, the words of the writ of treſpaſs. Black. Com. 3 V. 209.

Breach of Covenant, The not performing of any covenant, expreſſed or implied in a deed, or the doing an act, which the party covenanted not to do. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 155, 6. Vide poſt, Breach of Promiſe.

Breach of Duty, The not executing any office, employment, or truſt, &c. in a due and legal manner. Vide Black. Com. 3 V. 163, 4.

Breach of Peace, Offences againſt the public peace, are either ſuch as are an actual breach of the peace, or conſtructively ſo, by aiding to make others break it. Vide Black. Com. 4 V. 142, &c.

Breach of the peace ſeverely amerced in former times. Madox's Ex. 1 V. 557.

Breach of Pound, The breaking any pound or place where cattle or goods diſtrained are depoſited, to reſcue ſuch diſtreſs. Vide Black. Com. 3 V. 146.

Breach of Priſon. Breach of priſon, by the offender himſelf, when committed for any cauſe, was felony at the Common law. 1 Hal. P. C. 607. So was conſpiring to break it. Bract. l. 3. c. 9. But this ſeverity is mitigated by the ſtatute de frangentibus priſonam. 1 Ed. 2. which ſee. To break priſon, when lawfully committed for treaſon or felony, remains ſtill felony at the Common law: if on any inferior charge, it is ſtill puniſhable, as an high miſdemeanor, by fine and impriſonment. 2 Hawk. P. C. 128.

Breach of Promiſe, (violatio fidei) A breaking or violating a man's word. And breach ſignifies where a perſon commits any breach of the condition of a bond, or his covenant, &c. entered into, on action upon which the breach muſt be aſſigned. In debt on bond, conditioned to give account of goods, &c. a breach muſt be alledged, or the plaintiff will have no cauſe of action. 1 Saund. 102. And when a breach is aſſigned it muſt not be general, but muſt be particular; as in action of covenant for not repairing of houſes, the breach ought to be aſſigned particularly, what is the want of reparation. Cro. Jac. 369.

369. But on mutual promiſe for one to do an act, and in conſideration thereof another to do ſome act, as to ſell goods, &c. for ſo much money; a general breach that the defendant hath not performed his part; is well aſſigned. 3 Lev. 319.

Where a covenant conſiſts of ſeveral parts in the affirmative, performance generally is a good plea. Sid. 215. In caſe of bond for performance of an award, if the defendant pleads any matter by which he admits a non-performance, and excuſes it, the plaintiff in his replication muſt ſhew the award, and aſſign the breach, that the court may ſee an award was made, and judge whether it was good or not; for if it ſhould be of a void part thereof, it need not be performed. 1 Salk. 138.

Breaches aſſigned ought to be according to the very words of the condition or covenant; when they may be well enough though too general. 1 Lutw. 326. Where a thing is to be done by a perſon or his aſſigns, the breach is to be that it was done neither by the one nor the other. 5 Mod. 133. If a perſon is to tender a conveyance, &c. to another, his heirs or aſſigns, breach aſſigned that the defendant did not tender a conveyance to the plaintiff, without the words his heirs or aſſigns, is good: but if the tender be to be made by another man, his heirs, &c. and not to him, it is otherwiſe. 1 Salk. 139.

Where a leſſee for years is to leave all the timber on the land, which was growing there at the time of the leaſe, and he cut down any trees, though he leaves the timber on the land at the end of his leaſe, this is a breach of covenant: for in contracts the intention of the parties is chiefly to be conſidered. Raym. 464. If ſeveral breaches are aſſigned, and the defendant demurs upon the whole declaration, the plaintiff ſhall have judgment for all that are well aſſigned, for they are as ſeveral actions. Cro. Jac. 557.

Formerly a plaintiff could aſſign but one breach in an action of debt upon a bond for performance of covenants, though ſeveral things were broken; for one breach being proved, was a forfeiture of the bond: but in an action of covenant, as many breaches might be aſſigned as the plaintiff would, becauſe the plaintiff might have a particular damage upon each covenant broken; and a ſeveral iſſue muſt be taken upon every breach. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 406.

Now by ſtatute in an action on bond for performance of covenants, the plaintiff may aſſign as many breaches as he pleaſes, and the jury ſhall aſſeſs damages and coſts for ſuch covenants as are proved to be broken. Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 10. And where judgment ſhall be given for the plaintiff in ſuch action upon a demurrer, Nil dicet, &c. he may ſuggeſt on the roll as many breaches as he thinks fit; upon which a writ of enquiry ſhall go, &c. And if, before execution executed, the defendant brings the coſts and damages into court, execution ſhall be ſtayed; and the plaintiff ſhall acknowledge ſatisfaction, if the execution be executed: but the judgment ſhall ſtill ſtand as a ſecurity to anſwer the future breach of any covenant in the deed; for which the plaintiff or his executors, &c. may have a ſcire facias upon ſuch judgment againſt the defendant. Stat. ibid. And ſee Bond, Condition, and Covenant.

Bread and Beer, The aſſize of bread, beer, and ale, &c. is granted to the Lord Mayor of London and other corporations: bakers, &c. not obſerving the aſſiſe to be ſet in the pillory. Stat. 51 H. 3. St. 1. ord. Piſtor. & 51 H. 3. St. 6. Vide 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 15.

The aſſiſe of bread is regulated, by 8 Ann. c. 18. and 1 Geo. 1. c. 26. The 3 Geo. 2. c. 29. inflicts a penalty on ſelling at a higher price than is ſet by the Lord Mayor. By the 22 Geo. 2. c. 46. bakers marks are to be ſet on their bread. But ſee 31 Geo. 2. c. 29. containing new regulations concerning the aſſiſe of bread, and to prevent adulteration. And ſee farther 32 Geo. 2. c. 18. how penalties not appropriated by 31 Geo. 2. c. 29. ſhall be diſtributed. And laſtly ſee 3 Geo. 3. c. 6. and 11. wherein there are farther regulations concerning the aſſiſe of bread, and for preventing the adulteration thereof.

Bread of Treet, or Trite, (panis tritici) Is bread mentioned in the ſtatute 51 Hen. 3. of aſſiſe of bread and ale; wherein are particulariſed waſtel bread, cocket bread, and bread of treet, which anſwer to the three ſorts of bread now in uſe, called white, wheaten, and houſe-hold bread; In religious houſes they heretofore diſtinguiſhed bread by theſe ſeveral names, panis armigerorum, panis conventualis; panis puerorum, & panis famulorum. Antiq. Breve, Is any writ by which a man is ſummoned or attached to anſwer in action, or whereby any thing is commanded to be done in the King's courts, in order to juſtice, &c. It is called breve from the brevity of it; and is directed either to the chancellor, judges, ſheriffs, or other officers; the various forms of it you may ſee in the regiſter.——Breve, *quia breviter & paucis verbis intentionem proferentis exponit & explanat, &c. Bribery, (from the Fr. briber, to devour or eat greedily) Is a high offence, where a perſon in a judicial place takes any fee, gift, reward or brocage, for doing his office, but of the King only. 3 Inſt. 145. But taken largely it ſignifies the receiving, or offering, any undue reward, to or by any perſon concerned in the adminiſtration of public juſtice, whether judge, officer, &c. to act contrary to his duty; and ſometimes it ſignifies the taking or giving a reward for a public office. 3 Inſt. 9. To take a bribe of money, though ſmall, is a great fault; and judges ſervants may be puniſhed for receiving bribes. If a judge refuſe a bribe offered him, the offerer is puniſhable. Forteſcue, cap. 51.

Bribery in judicial or miniſterial officers is puniſhed by fine and impriſonment. Before the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. Bribery in a judge was looked upon as ſo heinous an offence, that it was ſometimes puniſhed as high treaſon; and it is at this day puniſhable, with forfeiture of office, fine and impriſonment. In the reign of King James I. the Earl of M. lord treaſurer of England, being impeached by the commons for refuſing to hear petitions referred to him by the King, till he had received great bribes, &c. was, by ſentence of the lords, deprived of all his offices, and diſabled to hold any for the future, or to ſit in parliament; alſo he was fined fifty thouſand pounds, and impriſoned during the King's pleaſure. 1 Hawk. P. C. 170. In the eleventh year of King George I. the Lord Chancellor M——— had a milder puniſhment: he was impeached by the commons with great zeal, for bribery, in ſelling the places of Maſters in Chancery for exorbitant ſums, and other corrupt practices, tending to the great loſs and ruin of the ſuitors of that court; and the charge being made good againſt him, being before diveſted of his office, he was ſentenced by the lords to pay a fine of thirty thouſand pounds, and impriſoned 'till it was paid. Vide the Trial. 'Tis ſaid that one of the peers (if not two) who voted againſt him, had been poſſeſſed of the office of Chancellor, and ſold the places of Maſters in Chancery, whenever vacant!

By ſtatute, the chancellor, treaſurer, juſtices of both benches, barons of the exchequer, &c ſhall be ſworn not to ordain or nominate any perſon in any office for any gift, brocage, &c. 12 R. 2. c. 2. And the ſale of offices concerning the adminiſtration of public juſtice, &c. is prohibited on pain of forfeiture and diſability, &c. by 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 16. In the conſtruction of the laſt mentioned ſtatute, it has been reſolved that the offices of the eccleſiaſtical courts are within the meaning of that act, as well as the offices in the courts of Common law; and it hath been adjudged, that one who contracts for an office, contrary to the purport of the ſaid ſtatute 5 & 6 E. 6. c. 16. is ſo diſabled to hold the ſame, that he cannot be reſtored to a capacity of holding it by any grant or diſpenſation whatſoever. Cro. Jac 269, 386. Hawk. P. C. 171.

Officers of the cuſtoms, &c taking any bribe or reward, whereby the crown ſhall be defrauded, ſhall forfeit 100*l.* and be rendered incapable of any office. Stat. 14 Car. 2. c. 11. But there is a ſaving clauſe for the firſt offence, acknowledging it in two months. No perſon ſetting up for member of parliament, ſhall after the teſte of the writ of election, or after any place becomes vacant, give any bribe of money, meat, drink, gift, reward, &c. in order to be elected, on pain of diſability to ſerve in parliament. 7 W. 3. cap. 4. And electors taking bribes, are diſabled to vote, and to hold any office or franchiſe, and as well he that takes as he that offers a bribe, ſhall forfeit 500 l. &c. by Stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 24. And ſee 9 Geo. 2. c. 38. Taking money to excuſe perſons from ſerving on juries, ſubjects the offender to a fine, not exceeding ten pounds, at the diſcretion of the judge. 3 Geo. 2. c. 25. ſect. 6

Bribour, (Fr. bribeur) Seems to ſignify in ſome of our old ſtatutes, one that pilfers other mens goods. 28 Ed. 2. cap. 1.

Bricolls, An engine mentioned in Blount, by which walls were beat down.

Bricks, Are to be made between the 1ſt day of March and 29th of September, and ſhall be burnt either in kilns, or diſtinct clamps, &c. Alſo place-bricks, when burnt, muſt not be leſs than nine inches long, two inches and a half thick, and four and a quarter wide, on pain of forfeiting 20*s.* a thouſand, &c. Searchers of bricks and tiles ſhall be appointed by juſtices of peace in their quarter ſeſſions, who are to make preſentments, and may be fined 10 l. for defaults: combinations to advance the price of bricks, ingroſſing them, &c. incurs a penalty of 20 l. And mixing mould, ſoil or mud with brick earth, is liable to penalties. Stat. 12 Geo. 1. cap. 33. 2 Geo. 2. cap. 15. But bricks may be made of brick earth and ſea-coal aſhes ſifted, not exceeding a certain quantity; and cinders or breeze may be uſed with coal in the burning of bricks, and ſtock-bricks and place-bricks burnt in the ſame clamp, being ſet in diſtant parcels, &c. by 3 Geo. 2. c. 22. and ſee 6 Geo. 1. c. 6. what quantity of bricks may be carried in one load in London, and concerning the carrying of bricks and tiles as ballaſt, ſee Tiles.

Bridge, (pons) A building of ſtone or wood erected a-croſs a river, for the common eaſe and benefit of travellers. Public bridges, which are of general convenience, are of common right to be repaired by the whole inhabitants of that county in which they lie. Hale's P. C. 143. 13 Co. 33. Cro. Car. 365.

But a corporation aggregate, either in reſpect of a ſpecial tenure of certain lands, or in reſpect of a ſpecial preſcription; alſo any other perſon, by reaſon of ſuch a ſpecial tenure, may be compelled to repair them. Hale's P. C. 143. Dalt. c. 14. 6 Mod. 307.

At Common law thoſe who are bound to repair publick bridges, muſt make them of ſuch heighth and ſtrength, as ſhall be anſwerable to the courſe of the water; and they are not treſpaſſers if they enter on any land adjoining to repair them, or lay the materials neceſſary for the repairs thereon. Dalt. cap. 16. If a man erects a bridge for his own uſe, and the people travel over it as a common bridge, he ſhall notwithſtanding repair it: though a perſon ſhall not be bound to repair a bridge, built by himſelf for the common good and public convenience, but the county muſt repair it. 2 Inſt. 701. 1 Salk. 359. Where inhabitants of a county are indicted for not repairing a bridge, they muſt ſet forth who ought to repair the ſame, and traverſe that they ought. 1 Vent. 256. Unleſs perhaps, where the real queſtion is, whether it be a public or a common bridge.

A vill may be indicted for a neglect in not repairing a bridge; and the juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions may impoſe a fine for defaults. And any particular inhabitant of a county, or tenant of land charged to repairs of a bridge, may be made defendants to an indictment for not repairing it, and be liable to pay the fine aſſeſſed by the court for the default of the repairs, who are to have their remedy at law for a contribution from thoſe who are bound to bear a proportionable ſhare of the charge. 6 Mod. 307.

If a manor is held by tenure of repairing a bridge, or highway, which manor afterwards comes into ſeveral hands, in ſuch caſe every tenant of any parcel of the demeſnes and ſervices, is liable to the whole charge, but ſhall have contribution of the reſt; and this though the lord may agree with the purchaſers to diſcharge them of ſuch repairs, which only binds the lord, and doth not alter the remedy which the public hath. 1 Danv. Abr. 744. 1 Salk. 358.

So if a manor, ſubject to ſuch charge, comes into the hands of the crown, yet the duty upon it continues; and any perſon claiming afterwards under the crown, the whole manor, or any part thereof, ſhall be liable to an indictment or information, for want of due repairs. 1 Salk. 358.

If part of a bridge lie within a franchiſe, thoſe of the franchiſe may be charged with the repairs for ſo much: alſo, by a ſpecial tenure, a man may be charged with the repairs of one part of a bridge, and the inhabitants of a county are to repair the reſt. Hawk. P. C. 221. Raym. 384, 385.

Indictments for not repairing of bridges, will not lie but in caſe of common bridges on highways; though it hath been adjudged they will lie for a bridge on a common footway. Mod. Caſ. 256. Not keeping up a ferry, being a common paſſage for all the King's people, is indictable, as well as not keeping up bridges. 1 Salk. 12. All houſholders dwelling in any county or town, whether they occupy lands or not; and all perſons who have land in their own poſſeſſion, whether they dwell in the ſame county or not, are liable to be taxed as inhabitants, towards the repairs of a public bridge, by the Stat. 22 H. 8. cap. 5. Where it cannot be diſcovered who ought to repair a bridge, it muſt be preſented by the grand jury in Quarter-ſeſſions; and after their inquiry, and the order of ſeſſions upon it, the juſtices may ſend for the conſtables of every pariſh, to appear at a fixed time and place, to make a tax upon every inhabitant, &c. But it has been uſual, in the levying of money for repairs of bridges, to charge every hundred with a ſum in groſs, and to ſend ſuch charge to the high conſtables of each hundred, who ſend their warrants to the petty conſtables, to gather it, by virtue whereof they aſſeſs the inhabitants of pariſhes in particular ſums, according to a fixed rate, and collect it; and then they pay the ſame to the high conſtables, who bring it to the ſeſſions.

This method of raiſing money, though it be contrary to the ſtatute 22 H. 8. c. 5. has been obſerved ſome years paſt; but by the 1 Ann. cap. 18. juſtices in ſeſſions, upon preſentment made of want of reparations, are to aſſeſs every town, pariſh, &c. in proportion towards the repairs of a bridge; and the money aſſeſſed is to be levied by the conſtables of ſuch pariſhes, &c. and being demanded, and not paid in ten days, the inhabitants ſhall be diſtrained; and when the tax is levied, the conſtables are to pay it to the high conſtable of the hundred; who is to pay the ſame to ſuch perſons as the juſtices ſhall appoint, to be employed according to the order of the juſtices, towards repairing of the bridge: and the juſtices may allow any perſon concerned in the execution of the act 3 d. per pound out of the money collected. All matters relating to the repairing and amending of bridges, are to be determined in the county where they lie, and no preſentment or indictment ſhall be removed by certiorari. And by this ſtatute, the evidence of the inhabitants of thoſe places where the bridges are in decay, ſhall be admitted at any trial upon an information or indictment, &c.

By 14 Geo. 2. c. 33. the juſtices, at their general ſeſſions, may purchaſe or agree with perſons for any piece of land, not above one acre, near to any county-bridge, in order to enlarge or more conveniently rebuild it; and the ground ſhall be paid for out of the money raiſed by ſtatute of 12 Geo. 2. c. 29. for better aſſeſſing, collecting, and levying of county rates, &c. No perſons are compellable to make a new bridge but by act of parliament: and the inhabitants of the whole county cannot of their own authority change a bridge from one place to another. If a man has toll for men and cattle paſſing over a bridge, he is to repair it; and toll may be paid in theſe caſes, by preſcription, or ſtatute. See County Rates. And vide Black. Com. 1 V. 357. 4 V. 167, 417.

Bridgemaſters. There are bridgemaſters of London-bridge, choſen by the citizens, who have certain fees and profits belonging to their office, and the care of the ſaid bridge, &c. Lex Londin. 283.

Brief, (brevis) An abridgment of the client's caſe, made out for the inſtruction of counſel, on a trial at law; wherein the caſe of the party is to be briefly but fully ſtated, the proofs muſt be placed in due order, and proper anſwers made to whatever may be objected againſt the client's cauſe, by the oppoſite ſide; and herein great care is requiſite, that nothing be omitted to endanger the cauſe. Form of a Brief, ſee *Pract. Briga, (Fr. brigue) Debate or contention.——Et toſuit terram illam in brigam, & intricavit terram, ſcilicet, per diverſa fraudulentia feoffamenta; Ideo committitur Mareſc. Ebor. Hill. 18 Ed. 3. Rot. 28.

Brigandine, (Fr. in Lat. lorica) Is a coat of mail or ancient armour, conſiſting of many jointed and ſcale-like plates, very pliant and eaſy for the body. This word is mentioned in 4 & 5 P. & M. cap. 2. and ſome confound it with haubergeon; and others with brigantine, a long but low-built veſſel, ſwift in ſailing.

Brigbote, or Brug-bote, Signifies to be freed from the reparation of bridges. It is compounded of the Sax. brig, a bridge, and bote, which is a yielding of amends; or ſupplying a defect: but this is more properly bruck-bote, from the Germ. bruck, i. e. a bridge, and bote, a compenſation; and it is uſed for the liberty or exemption of being free from tribute or contribution towards the mending or re-edifying of bridges. Fleta, lib. 1. c. 47. Selden's Titles of Honour, fol. 622.

Briſtol, A great city, famous for trade: the mayor, burgeſſes, and commonalty of the city of Briſtol, are conſervators of the river Avon from above the bridge there to Kings-Road, and ſo down the Severn to the two iſlands called Holmes; and the Mayor and juſtices of the ſaid city, may make rules and orders for preſerving the river, and regulating pilots, maſters of ſhips, &c. Alſo for the government of their markets: and the ſtreets are to be kept clean and paved; and lamps or lights hung out at night. Stat. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 23. No perſon ſhall act as a broker in the city of Briſtol, till admitted and licenſed by the Mayor and Aldermen, &c. on pain of forfeiting 500 l. and thoſe who employ any ſuch, to forfeit 50*l* &c by Stat. 3 Geo. 2. c. 31. By the Stat. 22 Geo. 2. c. 20. the Stat. 11 & 12 W. 3. is rendered more effectual ſo far as it relates to the paving and enlightening the ſtreets; and divers regulations are made in relation to the hackney coachmen, halliers, draymen and carters, and the markets and ſellers of hay and ſtraw, within the ſaid city and liberties thereof. See Brokers.

Brocage, (brocagium) The wages or hire of a broker; which is alſo termed brokerage. 12 R. 2. c. 2. and 11 H. 4.—Ex broccagio, vel alio ſiniſtro pacto. Rot Stat. 31 Ed. 3.

Brocella, This word, as interpreted by Dr. Thoroten, ſignifieth a wood; and it is ſaid to be a thicket or covert of buſhes and bruſh wood, from the obſolete Lat. bruſca, terra bruſcoſa, & brocia, Fr. broce, brocelle: and hence is our brouce of wood, and brouſing of cattle.——Dedi unam brocellam vocat. &c. Reg. de Thurgaton, MS.

Brocha, (from the Fr. broche) An awl, or large packing needle, the uſe whereof is very well known. A ſpit in ſome parts of England is called a broche; and from this word comes to pierce or broach a barrel. That it was an iron inſtrument, you may learn from the following authority.——Henricus de Havering tenet manerium de Norton in Com. Eſſex, per ſerjeantiam inveniendi unum hominem, cum uno equo, &c. & uno ſacco de corio, & una brochia ferrea. Anno 13 Ed. 1.

Brodehalfpeny, or Broadhalfpeny. See Bordhalfpeny.

Brokers, (broccatores, broccarii & auxionarii) Are thoſe that contrive, make and conclude bargains and contracts between merchants and tradeſmen, in matters of money and merchandize, for which they have a fee or reward. Theſe are exchange brokers; and by the ſtatute 10 R. 2. cap. 1. they are called broggers; alſo broggers of corn is uſed in a proclamation of Queen Elizabeth, for badgers, Baker's Chron. fol. 411. The original of the word is from a trader broken, and that from the Sax. broc, which ſignifies misfortune, which is often the true reaſon of a man's breaking; ſo that the broker came from one who was a broken trader by misfortune, and none but ſuch were formerly admitted to that employment; and they were to be freemen of the city of London, and allowed and approved by the Lord Mayor and aldermen, for their ability and honeſty.

By the Stat 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 26. they are to be licenſed in London by the Lord Mayor, who adminiſters an oath, and takes bond for the faithful execution of their offices: if any perſons ſhall act as brokers, without being thus licenſed and admitted, they ſhall forfeit the ſum of 500*l*. And perſons employing them 50*l*. And brokers are to regiſter contracts, &c. under the like penalty: alſo brokers ſhall not deal for themſelves, on pain of forfeiting 200*l*. They are to carry about them a ſilver medal, having the king's arms and the arms of the city, &c. and pay 40*s*. a year to the chamber of the city. Stat. 6 Ann. c. 16. A penalty of 500*l*. is inflicted on lawful brokers ſelling ſhares of ſtock not authoriſed by act of parliament, by Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 18.

Brokers negociating or tranſacting contracts on præmiums to accept or refuſe ſtock, or in the nature of wagers, &c. relating to the value, incur the like penalty of 500*l*. And negotiating agreements knowingly, for the ſale of ſtock, where the ſeller is not actually poſſeſſed of the ſame, &c. ſhall forfeit 100*l*. And brokers ſhall keep a book called the broker's book; in which they ſhall enter all contracts and agreements, with the names of the buyers and ſellers, and day of making contracts, &c. to be produced when required, on pain of 50*l*. Stat. 7 Geo. 2. cap. 8. And ſee farther 3 Geo. 2 c. 31. concerning the admiſſion of brokers in the city of Briſtol.

There are likewiſe pawn-brokers, who commonly keep ſhops, and let out money to poor neceſſitous people upon pawns, for the moſt part on extortion; but theſe are more properly pawn-takers, and are not of that antiquity or credit as the former; nor do the ſtatutes allow them to be brokers, though now commonly ſo called. Theſe brokers often deal in ſtolen goods, as they buy them cheap, and are a great nuſance: notwithſtanding there is a law declaring that wrongful ſale of goods ſtolen, &c. to and by brokers, ſhall not alter the property; and if they do not diſcover ſuch goods at the requeſt of the owner, they are to forfeit double value. 1 Jac. 1. cap. 21. The reaſon of exorbitant intereſt being taken by theſe brokers, is the want of witneſſes to prove the contract, or other proof of the money taken, but the party's own evidence; but they may be puniſhed for their extortion on an action, qui tam, &c. The borrower may be a witneſs, provided he is not intereſted in the event of the ſuit. See Pawn.

Brok, An old ſword or dagger.——Jurati dicunt ſuper ſacramentum, quod Johannes de Monemne miles per Robertum armigerum ſuum, percuſſit Adam Gilbert capellanum de Wilton in gutture quodam gladio, qui dicitur brok, per quod propinquior erat morti, &c. Rot. Parl. 35 Ed. 1.

Broſſus, Bruiſed or injured with blows, wounds, or other caſualty. Cowel.

Brothel-Houſes, Lewd places, being the common habitations of proſtitutes. King Hen. 8. by proclamation, in the 37th year of his reign, ſuppreſſed all the ſtews or brothel-houſes, which had long continued on the bank ſide in Southwark, contrary to the law of God and of the land. 3 Inſt. 205. A brothelman was a looſe idle fellow; and a feme bordelier or brothelier, a common whore. And borelman is a contraction of brothelman. Chaucer. See Bawdy-Houſe.

Bruere. This the Latins call erica, and ſignifies heath ground; and brueria, briars, thorns, or heath, from the Sax. brær, briar.——Humphry duke of Glouceſter grants the foreſter of Shotore and Stowode, tantum de arboribus & brueriis, quantum pro veſtura indiguerit, habebit. Paroch. Antiq. 620.

Bruillus, A wood or grove; Fr. breil, breuil, a thicket or clump of trees in a park or foreſt. Hence the abby of Bruer, in the foreſt of Wichwood in com. Oxon: and Bruel, Brebul, or Brill, a hunting ſeat of our ancient kings in the foreſt of Bernwood in com. Bucks.

Buckwheat, Is the ſame with French wheat, uſed in many counties of this kingdom: in Eſſex it is called brank; and in Worceſterſhire, crap. It is mentioned in the Stat. 15 Car. 2. c. 5.

Bucinus, A military weapon for a footman.——Petrus de Chetwood tenet—per ſerjeantiam inveniend. unum hominem peditem, cum una lancea, & uno bucino ferreo, &c. Tenures, pag. 74.

Buggery, or ſodomy, Comes from the Italian buggerare, to bugger; and it is defined to be a carnal copulation againſt nature, and this is either by the confuſion of ſpecies; that is to ſay, a man or a woman with a brute beaſt; or of ſexes, as a man with a man, or man unnaturally with a woman. 12 Co. Rep. 36. This ſin againſt God, nature, and the law, it is ſaid was brought into England by the Lombards. Rot. Parl. 50 Ed. 3. numb. 58. Stat. 25 H. 8. cap. 6. And in ancient times, according to ſome authors, it was puniſhable with burning, though others ſay with burying alive: but at this day it is felony excluded clergy, and puniſhed as other felonies. 25 H. 8. cap. 6. and 5 Eliz. 17.

By the articles of the navy, (22 Geo. 2. c. 33.) If any perſon in the fleet ſhall commit the unnatural and deteſtible ſin of buggery or ſodomy, with man or beaſt; he ſhall be puniſhed with death by the ſentence of a court martial.

It is felony both in the agent and patient conſenting, except the perſon on whom committed be a boy under the age of diſcretion; when it is felony only in the agent: alſo perſons preſent, aiding and abetting to this crime, are all principals, and the ſtatutes make it felony generally: there may be acceſſaries before and after the fact; but though none of the principal offenders ſhall be admitted to clergy, the acceſſaries are not excluded it. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 670. For many years paſt the crime of buggery has been greatly practiſed in this kingdom, without any exemplary puniſhment of the committers of it; till anno 12 Geo. 1. a great number of theſe wretches were convicted of the moſt abominable practices, and three of them put to death; which ſeaſonable juſtice ſeems to have given a check to the before growing evil.

In every indictment for this offence, there muſt be the words, rem habuit veneriam & carnaliter cognovit, &c. and of conſequence ſome kind of penetration and emiſſion muſt be proved; but any the leaſt degree is ſufficient. 1 Hawk. 6. The general words of theſe indictments are, that A. B. on ſuch a day, at, &c. with force and arms, made an aſſault upon C. D. and then and there wickedly, deviliſhly, feloniouſly, and againſt the order of nature, committed the venerial act with the ſaid C. D. and carnally knew him, and then and there wickedly, &c. did with him that ſodomitical and deteſtable ſin called buggery, (not to be named among Chriſtians) to the great diſpleaſure of God, and diſgrace of all mankind, &c. This crime is excepted out of our acts of general pardon. Vide Black. Com. 4 V. 215.

Buildings. If a houſe new built exceeds the ancient foundation, whereby that is the cauſe of hindering the lights or air of another houſe, action lies againſt the builder. Hob. 131. In London a man may place ladders or poles upon the ground, or againſt houſes adjoining for building his own; but he may not break ground: and builders of houſes ought to have licence from the mayor and aldermen, &c. for a bourd in the ſtreets, which are not to be incumbered. Cit. Lib. 30, 146. In new building of London, it was ordained, that the outſides of the buildings be of brick or ſtone, and the houſes for the principal ſtreets to be four ſtories high, having in the front, balconies, &c. by Stat. 19 Car. 2. c. 3.

The laws for regulating of all buildings in the cities of London and Weſtminſter, and other pariſhes and places in the weekly bills of mortality, the pariſhes of St. Mary le bone, and Paddington, St. Pancraſs and St. Luke at Chelſea, for preventing miſchiefs by fire, are reduced into one act by Stat. 12 Geo. 3. c. 73. The regulations of this law are ſo numerous, we muſt refer the reader to the ſtatute itſelf.

Bull, (bulla) A brief or mandate of the pope or biſhop of Rome, from the lead or ſometimes gold ſeal affixed thereto, which Mat. Paris, anno 1237, thus deſcribes: In bulla domini papæ ſtat imago Pauli a dextris crucis in medio bullæ figurata, & Petri a ſiniſtris. Theſe decrees of the pope are often mentioned in our ſtatutes, as 25 Ed. 3. 28 H. 8. cap. 16. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 8. and 13 Eliz. cap. 2. And have been heretofore uſed, and of force in this land: but by the ſtatute 28 Hen. 8. c. 16. it was enacted, That all bulls, briefs and diſpenſations had or obtained from the biſhop of Rome, ſhould be void. And by 13 Eliz. c. 2. (vide 23 Eliz. c. 1.) If any perſon ſhall obtain from Rome any bull or writing to abſolve or reconcile ſuch as forſake their due allegiance, or ſhall give or receive abſolution by colour of ſuch bull, or uſe or publiſh ſuch bull, &c. it is high treaſon.

Bull and Boar, By the cuſtom of ſome places, a parſon may be obliged to keep a bull and a boar for the uſe of the pariſhioners, in conſideration of his having tithes of calves and pigs, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 559. 4 Mod. 241.

Burg, A ſmall walled town, or place of privilege, &c. See Borough.

Burg-bote, (from burg, caſtellum, and bote, compenſatio) Is a tribute or contribution towards the building or repairing of caſtles, or walls of a borough or city: from which divers had exemption by the ancient charters of the Saxon kings. Raſtal. burg-bote ſignificat quietantiam reparationis murorum civitatis vel burgi. Fleta, lib. 1. c. 47

Burgeſſes, (burgarii & burgenſes) Are properly men of trade, or the inhabitants of a borough or walled town; but we uſually apply this name to the magiſtrates of ſuch a town, as the bailiff and burgeſſes of Leominſter, &c.

In Germany, and other countries, they confound burgeſs and citizen; but we diſtinguiſh them, as appears by the ſtatute 5 R. 2. c. 4. where the claſſes of the commonwealth are thus enumerated, count, baron, banneret, chivaleer de countee; citizein de citee; burgeſs de burgh. See Co. Lit. 80. We now alſo call thoſe burgeſſes, who ſerve in parliament, for any borough or corporation: and no man is qualified to be ſuch a burgeſs, that hath not an eſtate of 300*l.* a year, clear of all incumbrances. Stat. 9 Ann. cap. 7. But ſee Stat. 33 Geo. 2. c. 20. Burgeſſes of our towns are called, in Domeſday, the homines of the king, or of ſome other great man; but this only ſhews whoſe protection they were under, and is not any infringement of their civil liberty. Squire Ang. Burglary, (burglaria, from the Sax. burg, domus, or arx, & laron, furtum) Is where a man breaketh and entereth the houſe of another in the night-time, to the intent to commit ſome felony, whether the intention be executed or not. 4 Co. 49. In the natural ſignification, burglary is nothing but the robbing of a houſe; but our law reſtrains it to robbing a houſe by night, or breaking in with an intent to rob, or do ſome other felony: and the like offence committed by day is called houſe-breaking, to diſtinguiſh it from burglary.

It is an offence excluded the benefit of clergy, and may be committed a great many ways: and if a man hath two houſes, and reſides ſometimes in one of the houſes, and ſometimes in the other, if the houſe he doth not inhabit is broken by any perſon in the night, it is burglary. Poph. 52. 18. Eliz. c. 7.

And when ſeveral come with a deſign to commit burglary, and one does it, while the reſt watch near the houſe, here his act is, by interpretation, the act of all of them. Wood. 377. If thieves pretend buſineſs to get into a houſe by night, and thereupon the owner of the houſe opens his door, and they enter and rob the houſe, this is burglary. Kel. 42. Though in ſuch a caſe, juries generally find guilty of the ſtealing, but not of the burglary. Alſo if a perſon be within the houſe, and ſteal goods, and then open the houſe on the inſide, and go out with the goods, this is burglary, though the thief did not break the houſe. 3 Inſt. 64. If a thief unlocks a door, or draws the latch of a room to rob, &c. or if one comes down a chimney, opens a window, breaks a hole in the wall, &c. all theſe are a breaking: and if the thief ſet his foot over the threſhold of the door of the houſe, or put his hand, piſtol, &c. within the door or window, it is an entry ſufficient to make it burglary. H. P. C. 80, 81.

Every entrance into the houſe by a treſpaſſer is not a breaking in this caſe, but there muſt be an actual breaking. As if the door of a manſion houſe ſtand open, and the thief enters, this is no breaking. So it is if the window of the houſe be open, and a thief with a hook or other engine draweth out ſome of the goods of the owner, this is no burglary, becauſe there is no actual breaking of the houſe. But if the thief breaketh the glaſs of the window, and with a hook or other engine draweth out ſome of the goods of the owner, this is burglary, for there was an actual breaking of the houſe. 3 Inſt. 64. Theſe acts amount to an actual breaking, viz. opening the caſement, or breaking the glaſs window, picking open the lock of a door, or putting back the lock, or the leaf of a window, or unlatching the door that is only latched. 1 Hal. H. P. C. 552.

One of the ſervants of the houſe opened his lady's chamber door, which was faſtened with a braſs bolt, with deſign to commit a rape; and it was ruled to be burglary, and the defendant was convicted and tranſported. Stran. 481. Kel. 67.

Though the houſe is to be a manſion-houſe, and the out-houſes adjoining to the manſion-houſe are part thereof, wherein this crime may be committed; but not a barn, ſtable, &c. at any diſtance from the houſe. 4 Rep. 40. Part of a houſe divided from the reſt, having a door of its own to the ſtreet, this is a manſion-houſe of him who hires it. Kel. 84.

To break and enter a ſhop, not parcel of the manſion-houſe, in which the ſhop-keeper never lodges, but only works or trades there in the day-time, is not burglary, but only larceny; but if he, or his ſervant, uſually or often lodge in the ſhop at night, it is then a manſion-houſe, in which a burglary may be committed. 1 H. H. P. C. 557, 558.

It is not neceſſary to make it burglary, that any perſon be actually in the houſe at the very time of the offence committed. 1 Hawk. 103.

A chamber in an inn of court, where one uſually lodges, is a manſion-houſe; for every one hath a ſeveral property there. But a chamber where any perſon doth lodge as an inmate, cannot be called his manſion; though if a burglary be committed in his lodgings, the indictment may lay the offence to be in the manſion-houſe of him that let them. 3 Inſt. 65. Kel. 83. If the owner of the houſe breaks into the rooms of his lodgers, and ſteals their goods it cannot be burglary to break into his own houſe, but it is felony to ſteal their goods. Wood's Inſt. 378.

A lodger in an inn hath a ſpecial intereſt in his chamber; ſo that if he opens his chamber door, and takes goods in the houſe, and goes away, it ſeems not to be burglary. And where A. enters into the houſe of B. in the night, by the doors open, and breaks open a cheſt, and ſteals goods without breaking an inner door; it is no burglary by the Common law, becauſe the cheſt is no part of the houſe: though it is felony ouſted of clergy by ſtatute; and if one break open a counter or cupboard, fixed to a houſe, it is burglary. 1 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 554. See 3 W. & M. c. 9.

The intention to commit felony to make burglary muſt be of ſuch a fact, as was felony at Common law; and not of a felony newly made by act of parliament: but the offences of burglary and felony may be joined in the ſame indictment; and where a man commits burglary, and at the ſame time ſteals goods out of the houſe, if he be acquitted of the burglary, he may notwithſtanding be indicted of the larceny. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 245. Taking away goods from a dwelling-houſe in the night or day, where any perſon is therein; and breaking any ſhop, ware-houſe, &c. and taking away goods privately to the value of 5 s. though no perſon be therein, is burglary, by Stat. 3 W. & M. c. 9. 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. And A reward of 40 l. is given by the ſtatute for apprehending a burglar, and proſecuting him to conviction. 5 Ann. cap. 31.

See Stat. 12 Ann. cap. 7. by which if any perſon ſhall enter into the manſion-houſe of another, by day or by night, without breaking the ſame, with an intent to commit felony, or being in ſuch houſe ſhall commit any felony, and ſhall in the night-time break the ſaid houſe to get out, he ſhall be guilty of burglary, and ouſted of the benefit of clergy, in the ſame manner as if he had broken and entered the houſe in the night-time, with intent to commit felony.

And ſee 3 Geo. 1. c. 15. & 6 Geo. 1. c. 23. concerning payment of the rewards for apprehending and convicting of burglars. See likewiſe 25 Geo 2. c. 36 which provides, That the charges of proſecuting and convicting a burglar ſhall be paid by the treaſurer of the county where the burglary was committed.

Bye, Words ending in by or bee, ſignify a dwelling place or habitation, from the Sax. bye.

By-Laws, (bilagines, from the Goth. by, pagus, and lagen, lex) Are laws made obiter, or by the by; ſuch as orders and conſtitutions of corporations, for the governing of their members; of courts-leet and court-baron; commoners or inhabitants in vills, &c made by common aſſent, for the good of thoſe that made them, in particular caſes whereunto the public law doth not extend; ſo that they lay reſtrictions on the parties, not impoſed by the common or ſtatute law: guilds and fraternities of trades, by letters patent of incorporation, may likewiſe make by-laws, for the better regulation of trade among themſelves, or with others. Kitch. 45, 72. 6 Rep. 63.

In Scotland thoſe laws are called laws of birlaw, or burlaw; which are made by neighbours elected by common conſent in the birlaw courts, wherein knowledge is taken of complaints betwixt neighbour and neighbour; which men ſo choſen are judges and arbitrators, and ſtiled birlaw-men. And birlaws, according to Skene, are leges ruſticorum, laws made by huſbandmen, or townſhips, concerning neighbourhood amongſt them. Skene, pag. 33.

A power of making by-laws is included in the very act of incorporating, and incident to every corporation aggregate, without expreſs words in the charter; and all by-laws muſt ever be ſubject and ſquared to the rule of the general law of the realm, as ſubordinate to it. Hob. 211.

The inhabitants of a town, without any cuſtom, may make ordinances or by-laws, for repairing of a church, or highway, or any ſuch thing, which is for the general good of the public: and in ſuch caſes, the greater part ſhall bind all: though if it be for their own private profit, as for the well ordering of their common, or the like, they cannot make by-laws without a cuſtom to warrant it; and if there be a cuſtom, the greateſt part ſhall not bind the reſt in theſe caſes, unleſs it be warranted by the cuſtom. 5 Rep. 63.

Every city and town corporate hath power to make by-laws, for the better government of the body politick. Hob. 211. 5 Mod. 429. But a corporation cannot make a by-law to bind ſtrangers which are not of their body, or to extend to places out of the juriſdiction of the makers: nor may by-laws be made in the form of acts of parliament. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 411. Alſo by-laws may not be made to reſtrain a perſon from ſetting up his trade, it being againſt the Common law to reſtrain men from trades: a by-law that no perſon who is not a freeman of a corporation ſhall ſet up a trade, under a penalty, hath been adjudged void and againſt law; as it excludes thoſe who have ſerved apprenticeſhips in the corporations, who by law may uſe trades. 1 Lutw. 562.

By-laws ought to be for the common good and benefit of all thoſe who live in the place where made; and reſtraining men from uſing trades cannot be for common good, ſo that ſuch by-laws have been condemned: but ſuch a by-law warranted by particular cuſtom, as that no ſtrange artificer who is not free of that place ſhall uſe any art within the ſame, hath been held good. Lutw. 175. A cuſtom that no foreign tradeſman ſhall uſe or exerciſe a trade in a town, &c. will warrant that which a grant cannot do; and where cuſtom has reſtrained, a by-law may be made that upon compoſition foreigners may exerciſe a trade. Carter 120.

A by-law by a corporation may inflict a penalty, recoverable by diſtreſs, or action of debt, and be good. 1 Danv. Abr. 738. But 'tis ſaid it cannot be made under a certain penalty, to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of the offender's goods. 2 Vent. 182. For a by-law may not be made on pain of forfeiture of goods: nor may it inflict impriſonment, being contrary to Magna Charta. 2 Inſt. 54. Where by-laws are good, notice of them is not neceſſary, becauſe they are preſumed for the better government and benefit of all perſons living in thoſe particular limits where made, and therefore all perſons therein are bound to take notice of them. 1 Lutw. 404.

The freeholders in a court leet may make by-laws relating to the public good, which ſhall bind every one within the leet. 2 Danv. 457. And a court-baron may make by-laws, by cuſtom, and add a penalty for the non-performance of them. But all by-laws are to be reaſonable; and ought to be for the common benefit, and not private advantage of any particular perſons; and muſt be conſonant to the public laws and ſtatutes, as ſubordinate to them. Godſb. 79. And by Stat. 19 H. 7. c. 7. By-laws made by corporations are to be approved by the Lord Chancellor, or Chief Juſtices, &c. on pain of 40 l. Vide the Statute. Vide alſo Black. Com. 1 V. 475. And as to actions on by-laws, ib. 3 V. 159.

Calendar of Priſoners. A liſt of all the priſoners names, in the cuſtody of each reſpective ſheriff. Where priſoners are capitally convicted at the aſſizes, the judge may command execution to be done, without any writ. And the uſage now is, for the judge to ſign the calendar, which contains all the priſoners names, with their ſeveral judgments in the margin, and this calendar is left with the ſheriff. As, for a capital felony, it is written oppoſite to the priſoner's name, "hanged by the neck." Formerly in the days of Latin and abbreviation, "ſuſ per coll." for "ſuſpendatur per collum." Staundeford, P. C. 182. And this is the only warrant that the ſheriff has, for ſo material an act, as the taking away the life of another. Vide Mr. Juſtice Blackſtone's judicious obſervations thereon, Com. 4 V. 396, 7.

Calends, (calendæ) Among the Romans was the firſt day of every month, being ſpoken of it by itſelf, or the very day of the new moon, which uſually happen together: and if pridie, the day before, be added to it, then it is the laſt day of the foregoing month; as pridie calend. Septemb. is the laſt day of Auguſt. If any number be placed with it, it ſignifies that day in the former month, which comes ſo much before the month named; as the tenth calends of October is the 20th day of September; for if one reckons backwards, beginning at October, the 20th day of September makes the 10th day before October. In March, May, July, and October, the calends begin at the ſixteenth day, but in other months at the fourteenth; which calends muſt ever bear the name of the month following, and be numbered backwards from the firſt day of the ſaid following months. Hopton's Concord, p. 69. In the dates of deeds, the day of the month, by nones, ides, or calends, is ſufficient. 2 Inſt. 675. See Ides.

Calling the Plaintiff. It is uſual for a plaintiff, when he or his counſel perceives that he has not given evidence ſufficient to maintain his iſſue, to be voluntarily nonſuited, or withdraw himſelf: whereupon the crier is ordered to call the plaintiff; and if neither he, nor any one for him, appears, he is nonſuited, the jurors are diſcharged, the action is at an end, and the defendant ſhall recover his coſts. In fact, neither the plaintiff nor any one for him appears, unleſs council, or party, inſiſt on the evidence, ſuch as it is, being ſent to the jury, which is ſeldom done, unleſs council have very good reaſons for it. A nonſuit is not (like a verdict) a bar to the plaintiff's bringing another action, when he can get better proof, &c.

Camera, From the old Germ. Cam. Cammer, crooked; whence comes our Engliſh kembo, arms in kembo. But camera at firſt ſignified any winding or crooked plat of ground; as unam cameram terræ, i. e. a nook of land. Du Freſn. Afterwards the word was applied to any vaulted or arched building; and by degrees more particularly reſtrained to an upper room or chamber: and it is now often uſed in the law, in the buſineſs of a judge, where perſons are to be brought before him apud cameram ſuam ſituat. in Serjeants-Inn, &c. The preſent Iriſh uſe cama for a bed. It is uſed in philoſophy with the word obſcura, ſignifying a dark chamber. Canon, Is a law or ordinance of the church; and the Greek word canon, from whence is derived the canon law, ſignifies a rule, becauſe it leads a man ſtreight, neither drawing him from one ſide nor the other, but rather correcting him. The canon law conſiſts partly of certain rules taken out of the ſcripture; partly of the writings of the ancient fathers of the church; partly of the ordinances of general and provincial councils; and partly of the decrees of the Popes in former ages. And it is contained in two principal parts, the decrees and the decretals: the decrees are eccleſiaſtical conſtitutions made by the Pope and Cardinals, and were firſt gathered by Ivo biſhop of Carnat, who lived about the year 1114, but afterwards perfected by Gratian, a benedictine monk, in the year 1149, and allowed by Pope Eugenius, to be read in ſchools, and alledged for law. They are the moſt ancient, as having their beginning from the time of Conſtantine the Great, the firſt Chriſtian Emperor of Rome.

The decretals are canonical epiſtles written by the Pope, or by the Pope and Cardinals, at the ſuit of one or more perſons for the ordering and determining of ſome matter of controverſy, and have the authority of a law; and of theſe there are three volumes, the firſt whereof was compiled by Raymundus Barcinius, chaplain to Gregory the Ninth, and at his command about the year 1231. The ſecond volume is the work of Boniface the Eighth, collected in the year 1298. And the third volume, called the Clementines, was made by Pope Clement the Fifth, and publiſhed by him in the council of Vienna, about the year 1308. And to theſe may be added ſome novel conſtitutions of John the 22d, and ſome other biſhops of Rome.

As the decrees ſet out the origin of the canon law, and the rights, dignities and decrees of eccleſiaſtical perſons with their manner of election, ordination, &c. So the decretals contain the law to be uſed in the eccleſiaſtical courts; and the firſt title in every of them, is the title of the Bleſſed Trinity, and of the catholick faith, which is followed with conſtitutions and cuſtoms, judgments and determinations in ſuch matters and cauſes as are liable to eccleſiaſtical cognizance, the lives and converſation of the clergy, of matrimony and divorces, inquiſition of criminal matters, purgation, penance, excommunication, &c. But ſome of the titles of the Canon law are now out of uſe, and belong to the Common law: and others are introduced, ſuch as trials of wills, baſtardy, defamation, &c.

Trials of tithes were anciently in all caſes had by the Eccleſiaſtical law; though at this time this law only takes place in ſome particular caſes. Thus much for the Canon law in general; and as to the Canon laws of this kingdom, by the ſtatute 25 Hen. 8. c. 19. it is declared that all Canons not repugnant to the King's prerogative, nor to the laws, ſtatutes and cuſtoms of the realm, ſhall be uſed and executed. By this ſtatute, Canons made in convocation are to be confirmed by the King, and have the royal aſſent: and it has been adjudged that Canons made in convocation, and confirmed by the King, do bind as firmly in all eccleſiaſtical cauſes, as acts of parliament do in other caſes; for, by the common law, every biſhop in his dioceſe, and each archbiſhop in his province, and the convocation may make Canons, which ſhall be binding within their juriſdictions. The convocation for the province of Canterbury was held at London, anno 1603. in the firſt year of the reign of King James I. by the King's writ, and they had a licence under the great ſeal, to conſult and agree to ſuch Canons as they ſhould think fit; whereupon they made ſeveral Canons concerning the government of the church, religion, the clergy, &c. which had the royal aſſent, and were ratified and confirmed by that King, for him, his heirs and ſucceſſors, purſuant to the ſtatute 25 H. 8. c. 19. which Canons, thus warranted by act of parliament, are the laws of the land to this day. See Treatiſe of Laws, p. 402, &c. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 416 The general Canon law is no further in force here than it hath been received, and is conſiſtent with the Common or Statute law.

With reſpect to the effects of the Canon law in Europe, in antient times, it's forms and maxims, which were become univerſally reſpectable from their authority in the ſpiritual courts, contributed not a little towards the improvement of juriſprudence. But, we muſt not conſider it politically, with reſpect to the end for which it was framed, but merely as a code of laws reſpecting the rights and property of individuals, and attend only to the civil effects of its deciſions concerning theſe. Vide Robertſon's Hiſt. Emp. C. V. 1 V. 62, 63.

The plan of eccleſiaſtical juriſprudence was more perfect than that in the civil courts: but this was to diſpoſe the laity to ſuffer the uſurpations of the clergy. Vide id. 63.

Canon Religioſorum, A book wherein the religious of convents had a fair tranſcript of the rules of their order, which were frequently read among them as their local ſtatutes; and this book was therefore called Regula and Canon. The public books of the religious were the four following. 1 Miſſale, which contained all their offices of devotion. 2. Martyrologium, a regiſter of their peculiar ſaints and martyrs, with the place and time of paſſion. 3. Canon or Regula, the inſtitution and rules of their order. 4. Necrologium or Obituarium, in which they entered the deaths of their founders and benefactors, to obſerve the days of commemoration of them. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Cantel, (Cantellum) Seems to ſignify the ſame with what we now call lump, as to buy by meaſure, or by the lump: but according to Blount it is that which is added above meaſure.——Nullum genus bladi vendatur per cumulum ſeu cantellum, præter avenam, braſium & farinam. Stat. de Piſtor. cap. 9. Alſo a piece of any thing, as a cantel of bread, and the like.

Cantred, (Cantredus) A Britiſh word from cant, or cantre, which in the Britiſh tongue ſignifies centum, and tret, a town or village, is in Wales an hundred villages: for the Welſh divide their countries into cantreds, as the Engliſh do into hundreds. This word is uſed 28 H. 8. c. 3.

Capacity, (capacitas) An ability, or fitneſs to receive: and in law it is where a man, or body politick, is able to give or take lands, or other things, or to ſue actions. Our law allows the King two capacities, a natural and a politick: in the firſt, he may purchaſe lands to him and his heirs; in the latter, to him and his ſucceſſors. An alien born hath ſufficient capacity to ſue in any perſonal action, and is capable of perſonal eſtate; but he is not capable of lands of inheritance; and in a real action, it is a good plea of the defendant to ſay the plaintiff is an alien born, and pray if he ſhall be anſwered. Dyer 3. Perſons attainted of treaſon or felony, ideots, lunaticks, infants, feme coverts without their huſbands, &c. are not capable to make any deed of gift, grant or conveyance, unleſs it be in ſome ſpecial caſes. But all other perſons, void of impediments, are capable of making grants and conveyances, and to ſue and be ſued, being twenty-one years of age; and at fourteen, their age of diſcretion, they are capable by law to marry, be a witneſs, &c. Co. Lit. 171, 172.

Cape, (Lat.) Is a writ judicial, touching plea of lands or tenements; ſo termed, as moſt writs are, of that word in it, which carries the chief intention or end thereof: and this writ is divided into cape magnum and cape parvum, both of which take hold of things immoveable.

Cape Magnum, or the grand cape, Is a writ that lies before appearance to ſummon the tenant to anſwer the default, and alſo over to the demandant: and in the Old Nat. Brev. it is defined to be, where a man hath brought a præcipe quod reddat of a thing touching plea of land, and the tenant makes default at the day to him given in the original writ, then this writ ſhall go for the King to take the land into his hands; and if the tenant come not at the day given him thereby, he loſeth his land, &c. See Reg. Jud. fol. 1. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 3. c. 1.

Cape Parvum, or petit cape, Is where the tenant is ſummoned in plea of land, and comes on the ſummons, and his appearance is recorded; if at the day given him he prays the view, and having it granted makes default; then this writ ſhall iſſue for the King, &c. Old Nat. Brev. 162. The difference between the grand cape and petit cape is, that the grand cape is awarded upon the tenant's not appearing or demanding the view in ſuch real actions, where the original writ does not mention the particulars demanded; and the petit cape is after appearance or view granted: and whereas the grand cape ſummons the tenant to anſwer for the default, and likewiſe over to the demandant: petit cape ſummons the tenant to anſwer the default only: and therefore it is called petit cape; though ſome ſay it hath its name, not becauſe it is of ſmall force, but by reaſon it conſiſts of few words. Reg. Jud. fol. 2. Fleta, lib. 2. c. 44.

Cape ad Valentiam. This is a ſpecies of cape magnum, and is where I am impleaded of lands, and vouch to warrant another, againſt whom the ſummons ad warrantizandum hath been awarded, and he comes not at the day given; then if the demandant recover againſt me, I ſhall have this writ againſt the vouchee, and recover ſo much in value of the lands of the vouchee, if he hath ſo much; if not, I ſhall have execution of ſuch lands and tenements as ſhall after deſcend to him in fee; or if he purchaſes afterwards, I ſhall have againſt him a reſummons, &c. And this writ lies before appearance. Old Nat. Br. 161.

Capella. Before the word chapel was reſtrain'd to an oratory or depending place of divine worſhip: it was uſed alſo for any ſort of cheſt, cabinet, or other repoſitory of precious things, eſpecially of religious reliques. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. p. 580.

Capellus, A cap, bonnet, or other covering for the head.——Capite diſcooperto ſine capello, cum una garlanda de latitudine, &c. Tenures, p. 32.——Capellus ferreus, an helmet or iron head-piece, Quicunque laicus habuerit in catallis ad valentiam decem marcarum habeat halbergellum & capellum ferri, & lanceam. Hoveden, pag. 61.——Capellus militis is likewiſe an helmet or military head-piece. Conſuetud. Domus de Farendon, MS. fol. 21.

Capias, Is a writ or proceſs of two ſorts; one whereof is called capias ad reſpondendum, before judgment, where an original is ſued out, &c. to take the defendant and make him anſwer the plaintiff: and the other a writ of execution, after judgment, being of divers kinds, as capias ad ſatisfaciendum, capias utlagatum, &c. The capias ad reſpondendum in C. B. is drawn from the præcipe, which ſerves both for the original and capias, and the return of the original is the teſte of the capias. If a capias be ſpecial, in caſe, covenant, &c. the cauſe of action muſt be recited at large, and you are to ſet forth the ſubſtance of your intended declaration, as you are alſo in your original. The uſual courſe is to take out the capias, and ſue out the original after, although it is ſuppoſed to be ſued out before, becauſe the original cannot be ſo ſpeedily ſued out at all times: and where the cauſe of action is for debt, and requires bail, the beſt way is to make an ac etiam capias, the original to which is only a bare clauſum fregit; and when you come to judgment, you may file a new original to warrant ſuch judgment.

If a capias be ſpecial, by Præcipe quod reddat, &c. and there is any miſtake in the name, alias dictus, or ſum, it may be pleaded in abatement, and a new original afterwards will not cure it; but you are forced to diſcontinue your action, or enter a caſſatur, and to begin de novo. There may be an alias and a pluries capias, bearing teſte from the return of each other, if the defendant be not taken on the firſt writ. See Pract. Solic. p. 290.

The word ſicut alias, and ſicut pluries, diſtinguiſh the alias and pluries from the capias.

Capias ad Satisfaciendum, A judicial writ which iſſues out of the record of a judgment, where there is a recovery in the courts at Weſtminſter, of debt, damages, &c. And by this writ the ſheriff is commanded to take the body of the defendant in execution, and him ſafely to keep, ſo that he have his body in court at the return of the writ, to ſatisfy the plaintiff his debt and damages. Vide 1 Lill. Abr. 249. When the body is taken upon a ca. ſa. and the writ is returned and filed, it is an abſolute and perfect execution againſt the defendant, and no other execution can be againſt his lands or goods. Where a perſon dies in execution, his lands and goods are liable to ſatisfy the judgment, by ſtatute 21 Jac. 1. c. 24. See Rol. Abr. 904. In caſe two perſons are bound jointly and ſeverally, and proſecuted in two courts, whereupon the plaintiff hath judgment and execution by cap. ad ſatisfac. againſt one of them; if he after have an elegit againſt the other, and his lands and goods are delivered upon it, then he that is in priſon ſhall have audita querela. Hob. 2, 57. Where one taken on a cap. ad ſatisfaciendum eſcapes from the ſheriff, and no return is made of the writ, nor any record of the award of the capias; the plaintiff may bring a ſcire fac. againſt him, and on that what execution he will. Rol. 904. And if the defendant reſcue himſelf, the plaintiff ſhall have a new capias, the firſt writ not being returned. Ibid 901.

A defendant being brought into court by virtue of a cap. ad ſatisfaciendum, the plaintiff was aſked, whether he would pray that the priſoner might be committed? who anſwered he would not; becauſe the party was not able to pay, and had eſcaped from the ſheriff, againſt whom he intended to bring his action; therefore the defendant was diſcharged. 1 And. ca. 166. A capias ad ſatisfaciendum lieth not againſt a peer; nor againſt his executors or adminiſtrators, but where a devaſtavit is returned by the ſheriff, &c. 1 Lill. 250. If the defendant cannot be taken upon a capias in the county where the action is laid, there may iſſue a teſtatum ca. ſa. into another county; and ſo of the other writs.

Capias Utlagatum, Is a writ that lies againſt a perſon who is outlawed in any action, by which the ſheriff apprehends the party outlawed, for not appearing upon the exigent, and keeps him in ſafe cuſtody till the day of return, and then preſents him to the court, there to be ordered for his contempt; who, in the Common Pleas, was in former times to be committed to the Fleet, there to remain till he had ſued out the King's pardon, and appeared to the action. And by a ſpecial capias utlagatum in the ſame writ the ſheriff is commanded, to ſeize all the defendant's lands, goods and chattels, for the contempt to the King; and the plaintiff, (after an inquiſition taken thereupon, and returned into the Exchequer) may have the lands extended, and a grant of the goods, &c. whereby to compel the defendant to appear; which when he doth, if he reverſe the outlawry, the ſame ſhall be reſtored to him. Old. Nat. Br. 154. A defendant may appear in perſon, and reverſe an outlawry: and in B. R. one may appear by attorney, &c. Alſo when a perſon is taken upon a capias utlagatum, the ſheriff is to take an attorney's engagement to appear for him, where ſpecial bail is not required; and his bond with ſureties to appear, where it is required. Stat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. This writ is either general, againſt the body; or, as before obſerved, it is ſpecial, againſt the body, lands and goods. See Outlawry.

As to the forms of theſe writs they may be found in the common books of practice.

Capias pro Fine, Is where one, who is fined to the King for ſome offence committed againſt a ſtatute, does not diſcharge the fine according to the judgment; whereupon his body is to be taken by this writ, and committed to priſon until he pay the fine. It is uſed in other caſes, for not making out ſome pleas in civil actions. 3 Rep. 12. By the Stat. 5 W. et M. c. 12. capiatur fines are taken away in ſeveral caſes. See Fines for offences.

Capias in Withernam, A writ lying for cattle in Withernam; which is, where a diſtreſs taken is driven out of the county, ſo that the ſheriff cannot make deliverance in replevin, when this writ iſſues to the ſheriff to take as many beaſts of the diſtrainer, &c. Reg. Orig. 82, 83. Vide Withernam.

Capiatur, (judgment quod) Formerly if final judgment was for the plaintiff, it was alſo conſidered that the defendant ſhould be either amerced, for his wilful delay of juſtice in not immediately obeying the King's writ, by rendering the plaintiff his due, (5 Rep. 49.) or be taken up, (capiatur) to pay a fine to the King, in caſe of any forcible injury. But now by Stat. 5 W. et M. c. 12. capias ſhall not iſſue for this fine, but plaintiff ſhall pay 6*s.* 8*d.* and be allowed it againſt defendant in coſts. Therefore in judgments in Common Pleas, they enter that the fine is remitted: in King's Bench they take no notice of any fine or capias. Salk. 54. Carth. 390.

Capita, (diſtribution by) i. e. To every man an equal ſhare of perſonal eſtate, when all the claimants claim in their own rights, as in equal degree of kindred, and not jure repreſentationis. Black. Com. 2 V. 517.

Capita, (ſucceſſion by) Where the claimants are next in degree to the anceſtor, in their own right, and not by right of repreſentation. Black Com. 2 V. 217, 218.

Capitale, Signifies a thing which is ſtolen, or the value of it. Leg. H. 1. cap. 59.

Capitale vivens, Hath been uſed for live cattle.—Reddam de meo proprio decimas Deo, tam in viventi capitali, quam in mortuis fructibus terræ. Leg. Athelſtan.

Capite, (from caput, i. e. Rex, unde tenere in capite, eſt tenere de rege, omnium terrarum capite) An ancient tenure, whereby a man held lands of the King immediately as of the crown, whether by knight's ſervice, or in ſocage. This tenure was likewiſe called, tenure holding of the perſon of the King: and a perſon might hold of the King, and not in capite; that is, not immediately of the crown, but by means of ſome honour, caſtle, or manor belonging to it. According to Kitchen, one might hold land of the King by knight's ſervice, and not in capite; becauſe it might be held of ſome honour in the King's hands, deſcended to him from his anceſtors, and not immediately of the King, as of his crown. Kitch. 129. Dyer 44. F. N. B. 5.

The very ancient tenure in capite, was of two ſorts; the one principal and general, and the other ſpecial or ſubaltern; the principal and general was of the King as caput regni, et caput generaliſſimum omnium feodorum, the fountain whence all feuds and tenures have their main original: the ſpecial was of a particular ſubject, as caput feudi, ſeu terræ illius, ſo called from his being the firſt that granted the land in ſuch manner of tenure; from whence he was ſtiled capitalis dominus, &c. But tenure in capite is now aboliſhed; and by Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24. All tenures are turned into free and common ſocage: ſo that tenures hereafter to be created by the King are to be in common ſocage only; and not by capite, knight's ſervice, &c. Blount.

Capitilitium, A word uſed to ſignify what we now call poll-money.

Capitium, A covering for the head. It is mentioned in the ſtatute 1 Hen. 4. and other old ſtatutes, which preſcribe what dreſſes ſhall be worn by all degrees of perſons.

Capituli Agri, The head-lands, lands that lie at the head or upper end of the lands or furrows.——Canonici (Burceſter) conceſſerunt hominibus de Wrechwike duas acras prati pro capitibus ſuarum croftarum tenus rivulum verſus molendinum, &c. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. p. 137.

Capitula Ruralia, Aſſemblies or chapters held by rural deans and parochial clergy within the precinct of every diſtinct deanery; which at firſt were every three weeks, afterwards once a month, and more ſolemnly once a quarter. Cowel.

Caption, (captio) Is when a commiſſion is executed, the commiſſioners ſubſcribe their names to a certificate, declaring when and where the commiſſion was executed; which in law is called a caption. And theſe captions relate chiefly to buſineſs of three kinds, i. e. to commiſſions to take fines of lands, to take anſwers in chancery, and depoſitions of witneſſes: on the taking of a fine it is thus: Capt. et cogn. die, &c. anno, &c. apud, &c. And on the back, Executio iſtius comm. patet in quandam ſchedul. eidem comm. annex'. On the taking of an anſwer in Chancery, the caption is at bottom as follows: Capt. fuit hæc reſponſ. ſuper ſerram ſupranominat. def. Willielmi B. die & anno, &c. apud, &c. coram nobis, &c. And on the back of the commiſſion, Executio iſtius com', &c. On the taking depoſitions of witneſſes, only the execution on the back is indorſed, as Executio iſtius comm. in quad. ſchedul. &c. The caption being included in the title of the depoſitions. Sometimes it is uſual to add to the caption, virtut. commiſſion. dom. regis nobis & al. direct', &c. Theſe captions and the executions of the commiſſions muſt be now in Engliſh, by the late ſtatute, 4 Geo. 2. c. 26. And vide 5 Geo. 2. c. 27. and 6 Geo. 2. c. 14.

Captain, (capitaneus) One that leadeth or hath the command of a company of ſoldiers: and is either general, as he that hath the governance of the whole army: or ſpecial, as he that leads but one band.——There is alſo another ſort of captains, Qui urbium præfecti ſunt, &c. Blount.

Captives. An act was made for relief of captives taken by Turkiſh, Mooriſh, and other pirates, and to prevent taking of others in time to come. Stat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 24. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 402.

Capture, (captura) The taking of a prey, an arreſt, or ſeizure: and it particularly relates to prizes taken by privateers, in time of war, which are to be divided between the captors, &c. Stat. 14 Car. 2. c. 14. and 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 25. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 401.

Caputagium. Some think this word ſignifies head or poll money, or the payment of it: but it is rather what we otherwiſe call chevagium.

Caput Anni, New year's day, upon which of old was obſerved the feſtum ſtultorum.

Caput Baroniæ, Is the caſtle or chief ſeat of a nobleman; which deſcends to the eldeſt daughter, if there be no ſon, and muſt not be divided among the daughters like unto lands, &c.

Caput Jejunii, In our records is uſed for Aſh Wedneſday, being the head, or firſt day of the beginning of the Lent-Faſt. Paroch. Antiq. p. 132.

Caput loci, The head or upper end of any place; ad caput villæ, at the end of the town.

Caput lupinum, Anciently an outlawed felon was ſaid to have caput lupinum, and might be knocked on the head like a wolf.—Now the wilful killing of ſuch a one would be murder. 1 Hal. P. C. 497. And vide Bracton, fo. 125.

By the Athenian laws, if a criminal would not ſurrender himſelf to juſtice, he might be capitally condemned, and any one might kill him. See Demoſthenes's third Philippic.

Car and Char, The names of places beginning with car and char ſignify a city, from the Brit. caer, viz. Civitas, as Carliſle, &c.

Caravanna, A caravan, or joint company of travellers in the eaſtern countries, for mutual conduct and defence.——Egreſſa caravanna noſtra de Joppa verſus exercitum veniebat onuſta victualibus & aliis clitellis neceſſariis. Gaufrid. Vineſau Richardi Regis, Iter Hieroſol. lib. 5. cap. 52.

Carcan, Is ſometimes expounded for a pillory: as is carcannum for a priſon. LL. Canuti Regis.

Carcatus, Signifies loaden; a ſhip with her freight.—De corpore cujuſlibet magnæ navis carcatæ cum rebus venalibus 4 denar. Pat. 10 R. 2.

Cards and Dice. A duty of 6 d. per pack on all playing cards, and of 5 s. for every pair of dice, ſhall be paid to the crown for thirty-two years; the cards and dice to be carried to the ſtamp-office and marked, &c. And uſing them unſtamped, is liable to a penalty of 5 l. Stat. 9 & 10 Ann. c. 19.

Limitation of the time of proſecution upon bonds for exporting cards and dice, 5 Geo. 1. c. 19. ſect. 48. Penalty on defacing the ſtamp of cards or new-ſpotting dice, 6 Geo. 1. c. 21. ſect. 55. An additional duty of 6 d. on every pack of cards, and 5 s. on every pair of dice, 19 Geo. 2. c. 13. There are further regulations concerning the making and ſtamping of cards, by 5 Geo. 3. c. 46. ſect. 9 to 17. See Stamps.

Carecta and Carectata, A cart and cartload.——Quinque carectatas clauſtura, ad prædictæ terræ clauſturum ſuſtinendam. Mon. Angl. tom. 2. f. 340.

Carettarius, or Carectarius, A carter. Blount. See Carreta.

Cariſtia, Dearth, ſcarcity, dearneſs.——Rex majori & vic. London, ſalutem. Querela archiepiſcoporum, comitum,——quod de bobus, vaccis, mulionibus, &c. Magna et quaſi intolleralibis eſt cariſtia hiis diebus ſub, &c. Pat. 8 Ed. 1.

Caritas, Ad caritatem, poculum caritatis, A grace cup; or an extraordinary allowance of wine, or other liquor, wherein the religious at feſtivals drank in commemoration of their ſounders and benefactors. Cartular. Abbat. Glaſton. A. S. f. 29.

Cark, A quantity of wool, whereof thirty make a ſarpler. Stat. 27 H. 6. c. 2.

Carnarium, A charnel houſe, or repoſitory for the bones of the dead.——In carnario ſubtus capellam, &c. Oſſa humana, &c. humata de licentia ſacriſtæ qui pro tempore fuerit, qui dicti carnarii clavem & cuſtodiam habebit ſpecialem, ut uſq; ad reſurrectionem generalem honeſtius conſerventur, a carnibus integre denudata reponi volumus & obſervari.——Cartular. fundationis capellæ ſancti Johannis in occid. parte eccl. Norwic. per Joh. Norwic. Epiſc. Dat. 4 Oct. 1316.

Carno. This word hath been uſed for an immunity or privilege, as appears in Cromp. Juriſd fol. 191.

Carpemeals, Cloth made in the Northern parts of England, of a coarſe kind, mentioned in 7 Jac. 1. cap. 16.

Carr, Is a kind of cart with wheels. Vide Caruca.

Carrat, A weight of four grains in diamonds, &c. And this word it is ſaid was formerly uſed for any weight or burden.

Carreta, Hath been taken for a carriage, cart, or wain load; as Carreta fœni is uſed in an old charter for a load of hay. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Carrels, Cloſets, or apartments for privacy and retirement.——Three pews or carrels, where every one of the old monks, after they had dined, did reſort, and there ſtudy.—Davies Mon. of Durham, p. 31.

Carrick, or Carrack, (carrucha) A ſhip of great burden, ſo called of the Italian word carico or carco, which ſignifies a burden or charge: it is mentioned in the ſtatutes 2 R. 2. c. 4. and 1 Jac. c. 33. They were not only uſed in trade, but alſo in war, as Walſingh. in Hen. 5. f. 394. viz. Galli conduxerant claſſem magnarum navium carricarium, &c. qua regnum Angliæ moleſtarent.

Carrier, Is a perſon that carries goods for others for his hire.

A common carrier, having the charge and carriage of goods, is to anſwer for the ſame, or the value to the owner. Co. Lit. 78. And where goods are delivered to a carrier, and he is robbed of them, he ſhall be charged, and anſwer for them, becauſe of the hire. 1 Rol. Abr. 338.

An hoyman who undertakes to carry goods, muſt deliver them ſafe at all events, except damaged by the act of God, or the King's enemies. Dall v. Hall, Wilſ. par. 1. fo. 281.—Vide 1 Salk. 18. 1 Vent. 190, 238.

If a common carrier, who is offered his hire, and who has convenience, refuſes to carry goods, he is liable to an action in the ſame manner as an inn-keeper who refuſes to entertain a gueſt, or a ſmith who refuſes to ſhoe a horſe. 2 Show. Rep. 327.

One brought a box to a carrier, in which there was a large ſum of money, and the carrier demanded of the owner what was in it; he anſwered, it was filled with ſilks, and ſuch like goods; upon which the carrier took it, and was robbed: and adjudged, that the carrier was liable to make it good: but a ſpecial acceptance, as provided there is no charge of money, would have excuſed the carrier. 1 Vent. 238. 4 Rep. 83. A perſon delivered to a carrier's book-keeper two bags of money ſealed up, to be carried from London to Exeter, and told him that it was 200*l.* and took his receipt for the ſame, with promiſe of delivery for 10*s.* per Cent. carriage and riſque: though it be proved that there was 400*l.* in the bags, if the carrier be robbed he ſhall anſwer only for 200*l.* becauſe there was a particular undertaking for the carriage of that ſum and no more, and his reward, which makes him anſwerable, extends no farther. Carthew's Rep. 486.

If a common carrier loſes goods he is intruſted to carry, a ſpecial action on the caſe lies againſt him, on the cuſtom of the realm; and ſo of a common carrier by boat. 1 Rol. Abr. 6. An action will lie againſt a porter, carrier or bargeman, upon his bare receipt of the goods, if they are loſt by negligence. 1 Sid. 36. Alſo a lighterman ſpoiling goods he is to carry, by letting water come to them, action of the caſe lies againſt him on the common cuſtom. Palm. 528.

If A. and ſeveral others take their paſſage in a ferry-boat, and being upon the water a tempeſt ariſes, ſo that they are in danger of being drowned; upon which, to preſerve their lives, ſeveral of the goods are caſt overboard, among which, a pack of goods of A.'s of great value is thrown over; A. ſhall not have an action againſt the bargeman. 2 Bulſt. 280. If one be not a common carrier, and takes hire, he may be charged on a ſpecial aſſumpſit; for where hire is taken, a promiſe is implied. Cro. Jac. 262.

A common carrier may have action of trover or treſpaſs for goods taken out of his poſſeſſion by a ſtranger; he having a ſpecial property in the goods, and being liable to make ſatisfaction for them to the owner: and where goods are ſtolen from a carrier, he may bring an indictment againſt the felon as for his own goods, though he has only the poſſeſſory, and not the abſolute property; and the owner may likewiſe prefer an indictment againſt the felon. Kel. 39.

If a carrier be robbed of goods, either he or the owner may bring an action againſt the hundred, to make it good. 2 Saund. 380.

Where a carrier entruſted with goods, opens the pack, and takes away and diſpoſes of part of the goods, this, ſhewing an intent of ſtealing them, will make him guilty of felony. H. P. C. 61. And it is the ſame if the carrier receives goods to carry them to a certain place, and carrieth them to ſome other place, and not to the place agreed. 3 Inſt. 367. That is, if he do it, with intent to defraud the owner of them. If a carrier, after he hath brought goods to the place appointed, take them away privately, he is guilty of felony; for the poſſeſſion which he received from the owner being determined, his ſecond taking is in all reſpects the ſame as if he were a meer Stranger. 1 Hawk. P. C. 90. See Larceny, &c.

By the 3 Car. 1. c. 1. Carriers are not to travel on the Lord's Day.

By the Stat. 3 W. & M. c. 12. The juſtices are to aſſeſs the price of land carriage of goods to be brought into any place within their juriſdiction, by any common carrier, who is not to take more under the penalty of 5*l.* And by the Stat. 21 Geo. 2. c. 28. A carrier is not to take more, for carrying goods from any place to London, than is ſettled by the juſtices for the carrying goods from London to ſuch a place, under the ſame penalty.

Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 8. ſect. 9. Commiſſioners for regulating navigation of the river Thames to rate the price of water carriage.

Stat. 30 Geo. 2. c. 22. ſect. 3. Juſtices of the city of London to aſſeſs the rates of carrying goods between London and Weſtminſter.

Carriers and waggoners are to write or paint on their waggons or carts their names and places of abode. See Cart, Highways.

Carriages how drawn, &c. Vide Carts, Waggons.

Cart-bote, The Saxon word bote, is of the ſame ſignification with the French word eſtovers, and cart-bote is wood, to be employed in making and repairing inſtruments of huſbandry. Black. Com. 2 V. 35.

Carts, By the Stat. 2 W. & M. Stat. 2. c. 8. ſect. 19 & 18 Geo. 2. c. 33. The wheels of every cart or dray for the carriage of any thing from and to any place where the ſtreets are paved, within the bills of mortality, &c. ſhall contain ſix inches in the felly, not be ſhod with iron; nor be drawn with above two horſes, under the penalty of 40*s.* By the Stat. 18 Geo. 2. c. 33. They may be drawn with three horſes and not more, and the wheels being of ſix inches breadth, when worn may be ſhod with iron, if the iron be of the full breadth of ſix inches, made flat, and not ſet on with roſe-headed nails: and no perſon ſhall drive any cart, &c. within the limits aforeſaid, unleſs the name of the owner and number of ſuch cart, &c. be placed in ſome conſpicuous place of the cart, &c. and his name be entered with the commiſſioners of hackney coaches, under the penalty of 40*s.* and every perſon may ſeize and detain ſuch cart till the penalty be paid. By the Stat. 1 Geo. 1. c. 57. 24 G. 2. c. 43. 27 G. 2. c. 16. The driver of any ſuch cart, &c. riding upon ſuch cart, &c. not having a perſon on foot to guide the ſame, ſhall forfeit 10*s.* Any perſon may apprehend the offender. And by the Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 6. In London, or within ten miles, no perſon ſhall carry in any waggon or cart, having the wheels ſhod with iron, more than twelve ſacks of meal, containing five buſhels each, nor more than twelve quarters of malt, or ſeven hundred and an half of bricks, nor one chaldron of coals, under penalty of forfeiting one of the horſes to any perſon who ſhall ſeize the ſame, in manner as by Stat. 5 Geo. 1. c. 12.

On changing property new owner's name to be affixed, 30 Geo. 2. c. 22. ſect. 5. Carriages travelling with goods for hire to be deemed common ſtage waggons, 30 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſect. 13. See thoſe ſtatutes, and alſo ſee Highways, Waggons.

Caruca, (Fr. charrue) A plough; from the old Gallic carr, which is the preſent Iriſh word for any ſort of wheeled carriage: hence charl and car, a ploughman or ruſtick. Vide Karle.

Carucage, (carucagium) Is a tribute impoſed on every plough, for the public ſervice: and as hidage was a taxation by hides, ſo carucage was by carucates of land. Mon. Angl. tom. 1. f. 294.

Carucate, or Carve of Land, (carucata terræ) A plough-land; which in a deed of Thomas de Arden, 19 Edw. 2. is declared to be one hundred acres, by which the ſubjects have ſometimes been taxed; whereupon the tribute ſo levied was called carvagium, or carucagium. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 26. But Skene ſays, it is as great a portion of land as may be tilled in a year and a day by one plough; which alſo is called bilda, or bida terræ, a word uſed in the old Britiſh laws. And now by ſtatute 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 29. a plough-land, which may contain houſes, mills, paſture, meadow, wood, &c. is 50*l.* per annum.

Littleton, in his chapter of tenure in ſocage, ſaith, that ſoca idem eſt quod carucata, a ſoke or plough-land are all one. Stow ſays, King Hen. 3. took carvage, that is, two marks of ſilver of every knight's fee, towards the marriage of his ſiſter Iſabella to the emperor. Stow's Annals, page 271.

Raſtal, in his expoſition of words, tells us, carvage is to be quit, if the King ſhall tax all the lands by carves; that is, a privilege whereby a man is exempted from carvage. The word carve is mentioned in the Stat. 28 Ed. 1. of wards and reliefs, and in Magna charta, c. 5. And anno 1200. Facta eſt pax inter Johannem regem Angliæ & P. regem Franciæ, &c. Et mutuavit regi Franciæ 30 millia marcarum, pro quibus collectum eſt carvagium in Angliæ, ſcil. 11*s.* pro quolibet aratro. Ex Reg. Priorat. de Dunſtable in Bibl. Cotton. See Co. Lit. 69. and Kennet's Gloſſ.

Carucatarius, He that held lands in carvage, or plough-tenure. Paroch Antiq. p. 354.

Caſe. See Actions on the Caſe. And Black Com. 3 V. 51, 122. 4 V. 435. Com. Dig. 1 V. tit. Action and Actions on the Caſe.

Caſſatum and Caſſata, By the Saxons called hide; by Bede, familia, is a houſe with land ſufficient to maintain one family; Rex Angl. Ethelred, de 310 Caſſatis, unum trierem, &c. Hoveden anno 1008. And Hen. Huntingdon, mentioning the ſame thing, inſtead of caſſata writes bilda.

Caſhliſte, A Saxon word ſignifying a mulct. Blount.

Caſſidile, Is a little ſack, purſe, or pocket.—Protulit in caſſidile toxicum mellitum. Mat. Weſtm.

Caſk, An uncertain quantity of goods; and of ſugar contains from eight to eleven hundred weight. There are alſo caſks for liquors, of divers contents; and none ſhall tranſport any wine caſk, &c. except for victualling ſhips under a certain penalty, by Stat. 35 Eliz. c. 11. ſect. 2.

Caſſock, or Caſſula, A certain garment belonging to the prieſt, quaſi minor caſſa. See Taſſule.

Caſtel, or Caſtle, (caſtellum) Is well known to be a fortreſs in a town; and with us is a principal manſion of a nobleman. In the time of H. 2. there were in England 1115 caſtles; and every caſtle contained a manor: but during the civil wars in this kingdom theſe caſtles were demoliſhed, ſo that generally there is only the ruins or remains of them at this day. 2 Inſt. 31.

Caſtellain, (caſtellanus) The lord, owner, or captain of a caſtle, and ſometimes the conſtable of a fortified houſe. Bract. lib. 5. tract. 2. cap. 16. 3 Ed. 1. cap. 7. It hath likewiſe been taken for him that hath the cuſtody of one of the king's manſion-houſes, called by the Lombards curtes, in Engliſh courts; though they are not caſtles or places of defence. 2 Inſt. 31. And Manwood, in his Foreſt Laws, ſays, there is an officer of the foreſt called caſtellanus.

Caſtellarium, Caſtellarii, The precinct or juriſdiction of a caſtle.—Et unum toſtum juxta caſtellarium. Mon. Angl. tom. 2. f. 402.

Caſtellorum Operatio, Caſtle-work, or ſervice and labour done by inferior tenants, for the building and upholding of caſtles of defence; towards which ſome gave their perſonal aſſiſtance, and others paid their contribution. This was one of the three neceſſary charges, to which all lands among our Saxon anceſtors were expreſly ſubject.—Liberi ab omni ſervitio, excepta trinoda neceſſitate; pontis & arcis conſtructione, & expeditione contra hoſtem.—And after the conqueſt an immunity from this burden was ſometimes granted. As King Hen. II. granted to the tenants within the honour of Wallingford.—Ut ſint quieti de operationibus caſtellorum. Paroch. Antiq. pag. 114. It was unlawful to build any caſtle without leave of the king, which was called caſtellatio: hæc mittant hominem in miſericordia regis, viz. Infractio pacis, infidelitatis & proditio, deſpectus de eo, caſtellatio ſine licentia. Du Freſne.

Caſtigatory for ſcolds. A woman, indicted for being a common ſcold, if convicted, ſhall be ſentenced to be placed on a certain engine of correction, called the trebucket, caſtigatory, or cucking ſtool, which in the Saxon language ſignifies the ſcolding ſtool; though now it is frequently corrupted into ducking ſtool, becauſe the reſidue of the judgment is, that, when ſhe is ſo placed therein, ſhe ſhall be plunged in the water for her puniſhment. 3 Inſt. 219. Black. Com. 4 V. 169. Though this puniſhment is now diſuſed, the editor (J. M.) remembers to have ſeen the remains of one, on the eſtate of a relation of his in Warwickſhire, conſiſting of a long beam, or rafter moving on a fulcrum, and extending to the centre of a large pond, on which end the ſtool uſed to be placed.

Caſtle-ward, (caſtlegardum, vel wardum caſtri) An impoſition laid upon ſuch perſons as dwell within a certain compaſs of any caſtle, towards the maintenance of ſuch as watch and ward the caſtle. Magna charta, cap. 19, 20. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 48. It is ſometimes uſed for the circuit itſelf which is inhabited by thoſe that are ſubject to this ſervice. Caſtle guard rents were paid by perſons dwelling within the liberty of any caſtle, for the maintaining of watch and ward within the ſame. Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 24. ſect. 2.

Caſter, and Cheſter: The names of places ending in theſe words are derived from the Lat. caſtrum; for this termination at the end was given by the Romans to thoſe places where they built caſtles.

Caſtration, The offence of mayhem by caſtration, is, according to all our old writers, felony: and this altho' the mayhem was committed upon the higheſt provocation. Bract. fo. 144. 3 Inſt. 62. Black. Com. 4 V. 206.

Caſual Ejector, In ejectment, a nominal defendant, and who continues ſuch until appearance by or for the tenant in poſſeſſion. Vide Black. Com. 3 V. 202.

Caſu Conſimili, Is a writ of entry granted where tenant by the curteſy, or tenant for life, aliens in fee or in tail, or for another's life; and is brought by him in reverſion againſt the party to whom ſuch tenant ſo aliens to his prejudice, and in the tenant's life-time. It takes its name from this; that the clerks of the Chancery did, by their common aſſent, frame it to the likeneſs of the writ called in caſu proviſo, according to the authority given them by the Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 24. which ſtatute, as often as there happens a new caſe in Chancery ſomething like a former, yet not ſpecially fitted by any writ, authoriſes them to frame a new form anſwerable to the new caſe, and as like the former as they may. 7 Rep. 4. See Fitz. Nat. Br. fo. 206.

Caſu Proviſo, A writ of entry given by the ſtatute of Glouceſter, cap. 7. where a tenant in dower aliens in fee, or for life, &c. and lies for him in reverſion againſt the alienee. Fitz. N. B. 205. This writ, and the writ of caſu conſimili, ſuppoſes the tenant to have aliened in fee, though it be for life only: and a caſu proviſo may be without making any title in it, where a leaſe is made by the demandant himſelf to the tenant that doth alien; but if an anceſtor leaſe for life, and the tenant alien in fee, &c. the heir in reverſion muſt have this writ with the title included therein. F. N. B. 206, 207.

Caſus Omiſſus, Is where any particular thing is omitted out of, and not provided againſt by a ſtatute, &c.

Catals, Catalla, Goods and chattels. See Chattels.

Catallis captis nomine Diſtrictionis, Is a writ that lies where a houſe is within a borough, for rent going out of the ſame; and warrants the taking of doors, windows, &c. by way of diſtreſs for the rent. Old Nat. Br. 66. This writ is obſolete, and qu. if taking doors or windows by virtue of ſuch writ, was it to iſſue, could now be juſtified?

Catallis Reddendis, A writ which lieth where goods being delivered to any man to keep till a certain day, are not upon demand delivered at the day. It may be otherwiſe called a writ of detinue: and is anſwerable to actio depoſiti in the Civil law. See Reg. Orig. 139. and Old. Nat. Br. 63.

Catapulta, A warlike engine to ſhoot darts: but it is rather taken for a croſs bow.——Edmundus Willoughby tenet unum meſſuagium & ſex bovatas terra in Carleton ut de manerio de Shelford per ſervitium unius catapultæ per annum pro omni ſervitio. Lib. Schedul. de Term. Mich. 14 H. 4. Notr. fol. 210.

Cataſcopus. This word ſignifies an archdeacon: Herefordenſis eccleſia cataſcopus. Du Cange.

Catchland. In Norfolk there are ſome grounds which it is not known to what pariſh they certainly belong, ſo that the miniſter who firſt ſeizes the tithes, does by that right of pre-occupation enjoy them for that year: and the land of this dubious nature is there called catchland, from this cuſtom of ſeizing the tithes. Cowel. Qu. if ſuch a cuſtom now exiſts?

Catchpole, (quaſi, one that catches by the poll.) See Cachepollus. Sheriffs officers are commonly ſo called.

Cathedral, (eccleſia cathedralis) Is the church of the biſhop, and head of the dioceſe: wherein the ſervice of the church is performed with great ceremony. Statutes uſed in the government of cathedral and collegiate churches ſince the reſtauration, &c. to be good and valid: but her majeſty might alter, or make new ſtatutes for the ſettling the viſitation of them. Stat. 6 Ann. cap. 21.

Cathedratick, (cathedraticum) Is a ſum of 2 s. paid to the biſhop by the inferior clergy, in argumentum ſubjectionis & ob honorem cathedræ. Hiſt. procurat. & Synodals, p. 82.

Catzurus, A hunting horſe.—Willielmus Fitz Alan dat regi duos bonos catzuros, pro habendis duabus eſriis apud Norton. Tenures, pag. 68. Vide Chacurus.

Cattle, Shall be bought in open fair or market, and not ſold again in the ſame market, on pain of forfeiture. 3 & 4 Ed. 6. c. 19. None may buy any cattle, and ſell them again alive, until he hath fed them five weeks in his own ground, or where he hath common, upon pain to forfeit double the value, by Stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 14. Farmers, graziers, &c. may not have or keep above 2000 ſheep, accounting 120 to the hundred, on pain of 3*s.* 4*d.* for every ſheep: and he that keeps above 120 ſheep, or 20 beaſts upon any paſture ground proper for milch kine, and not commonable, ſhall yearly for every 60 ſheep or 10 cattle keep one milch cow, and bring up one calf, &c. under the penalty of 20*s.* Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 13. 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 3. No cattle may be imported, dead or alive, but ſhall be liable to forfeiture: but horſes, cows, ſwine, &c. may be tranſported, paying the duties. 18 Car. 2. cap. 2. 22 Car. 2. cap. 13. Factors ſhall not buy cattle, other than ſwine or calves, within 80 miles of London, under penalties; and drovers of cattle are to be licenſed by juſtices of peace, &c. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 19. 1 Jac. 2. c. 17. The ſtealing of ſheep, or any other cattle, or wilfully killing them, with intent to ſteal their carcaſes, is felony by 14 Geo. 2. c. 6. See 15 Geo. 2. c. 34.

His majeſty, to make regulations for preventing the ſpreading of the diſtemper among the cattle. 30 Geo. 2. c. 20. &c.

Tanners to give notice to the officer before they bring in raw hides. 22 Geo. 2. c. 46.

His majeſty impowered to prevent the killing of cow-calves, 22 Geo. 2. c. 46.

Regulations for the ſelling and driving cattle, 22 Geo. 2. c. 46. & 30 Geo. 2. c. 20.

Saleſman, broker, or factor, not to buy cattle on his own account, 31 Geo. 2. c. 40.

Allowance of free importation of cattle from Ireland, 32 Geo. 2. c. 11. See Hides.

Regulations to prevent the ſpreading the contagious diſorder among the horned cattle. 10 Geo. 3. c. 45.

See farther on this ſubject, Table to Statutes, tit. Cattle, Sheep, &c.

By Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 7. Maliciouſly, unlawfully, and willingly to kill any horſes, ſheep, or other cattle in the night-time, is felony; but the felon may make his election to be tranſported for ſeven years.

Cauda terræ, A land's end or the bottom of a ridge in arable land. Cartul. Abbat. Glaſton. fol. 117.

Caveat, Is a kind of proceſs in the ſpiritual court to ſtop the inſtitution of a clerk to a benefice, or probate of a will, &c. When a caveat is entered againſt an inſtitution, if the biſhop afterwards inſtitutes a clerk, it is void; the caveat being a ſuperſedeas: but a caveat has been adjudged void when entered in the life-time of the incumbent. A caveat entered againſt a will ſtands in force for three months; and this is for the caution of the ordinary, that he do no wrong: though it is ſaid the temporal courts do not regard theſe ſorts of caveats. 1 Rol. Rep. 191. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 416, 417. Vide Black. Com. 3 V. 98, 246.

Cavers, Offenders relating to the mines in Derbyſhire, who are puniſhable in the berghmote, or miners court.

Caulceis, anno 6 H. 6. cap. 5. Ways pitched with flint, or other ſtones. See Calcetum.

Caurcines, (Caurſini) Were Italians that came into England about the year 1235, terming themſelves the pope's merchants, but driving no other trade than letting out money; and having great banks in England, they differed little from Jews, ſave (as hiſtory ſays) that they were rather more mercileſs to their debtors. Some will have them called Caurſines, quaſi, cauſa urſini, beariſh and cruel in their cauſes; others Courſini, or Corſini, as coming from the iſle of Corſica: but Cowel ſays, they have their name from Caorſium, Caorſi, a town in Lombardy, where they firſt practiſed their arts of uſury and extortion; from whence ſpreading themſelves, they carried their curſed trade through moſt parts of Europe, and were a common plague to every nation where they came. The then biſhop of London excommunicated them: and King Hen. 3. baniſhed them from this kingdom in the year 1240. But being the pope's ſolicitors and money-changers, they were permitted to return in the year 1250; though in a very ſhort time after, they were driven out of the kingdom again for their intolerable exactions. Mat. Pariſ. 403.

Cauſa Matrimonii prælocuti, Is a writ which lies where a woman gives land to a man in fee-ſimple, &c. to the intent he ſhould marry her, and he refuſeth to do it in any reaſonable time, being thereunto required. Reg. Orig. 66. If a woman makes a feoffment to a ſtranger of land in fee, to the intent to infeoff her, and one who ſhall be her huſband; if the marriage ſhall not take effect, ſhe ſhall have the writ of cauſa matrimonii prælocuti, againſt the ſtranger, notwithſtanding the deed of feoffment be abſolute. New Nat. Br. 456. A woman infeoffed a man upon condition that he ſhould take her to wife, and he had a wife at the time of the feoffment; and afterwards the woman, for not performing the condition, entered again into the land, and her entry was adjudged lawful, though upon a ſecond feoffee. Lib. Aſſ. anno 40 Ed. 3. The huſband and wife may ſue the writ cauſa matrimonii prælocuti againſt another who ought to have married her: but if a man give lands to a woman to the intent to marry him, although the woman will not mary him, &c. he ſhall not have his remedy by writ cauſa matrimonii prælocuti. New Nat. Br. 455.

Cauſam nobis ſignifices, A writ directed to a mayor of a town, &c. who was by the king's writ commanded to give ſeiſin of lands to the king's grantee, on his delaying to do it, requiring him to ſhew cauſe why he ſo delays the performance of his duty.

Cauſes and Effects, In moſt caſes the law hath reſpect to the cauſe, or beginning of a thing, as the principal part on which all other things are founded: and herein the next, and not the remote cauſe is moſt looked upon, except it be in covinous and criminal things: and therefore that which is not good at firſt will not be ſo afterwards; for ſuch as is the cauſe, ſuch is the effect. Plowd. 208, 268. If an infant or feme covert make a will, and publiſh it, and after die of full age, or ſole, the will is of no force, by reaſon of the original cauſe of infancy and coverture. Finch 12. A lord diſtrains his tenant for rent before due, the tenant may juſtify to make reſcous, the lord having no juſt cauſe to diſtrain. Co. Lit. 106. And if a man acknowledge a ſtatute by dureſs, &c. he may have an audita querela to avoid it. Fitz. Abr. 104. Where the cauſe ceaſeth, the effect or thing will ceaſe. Co. Lit. 13.

Cautione admittenda, Is a writ that lies againſt a biſhop, who holds an excommunicated perſon in priſon for contempt, notwithſtanding he offers ſufficient caution or ſecurity to obey the orders and commandment of holy church for the future. Reg. Orig. 66. And if a man be excommunicated, and taken by a writ of ſignificavit, and after offers caution to the biſhop to obey the church, and the biſhop refuſeth it; the party may ſue out this writ to the ſheriff to go againſt the biſhop, and to warn him to take caution, &c. But if he ſtand in doubt whether the ſheriff will deliver him by that writ, the biſhop may purchaſe another writ, directed to the ſheriff reciting the caſe, and the end thereof; Tibi præcipimus, quod ipſum A. B. a priſona prædict. niſi in præſentia tua cautionem pignorat. ad minus eidem epiſc. de ſatisfaciend. obtulerit, nullatenus deliberas abſque mandato noſtro, ſeu ipſius epiſcopi in hæc parte ſpeciali, &c. When the biſhop hath taken caution, he is to certify the ſame into the Chancery, and thereupon the party ſhall have a writ unto the ſheriff to deliver him. New Nat. Br. 142. Vide this ſubject fully treated of in Britiſh Liberties.

Ceapgilde, A word derived from the Sax. ceap, ſignifying pecus, cattle; and gild, i. e. ſolutio; and hence it is ſolutio pecudis: from this Saxon word gild, it is very probable we have our Engliſh word yield; as yield, or pay. Cowel.

Celer Lecti, Is the top, head, or teſter of a bed.—Dedit ad cameram prioris unum lectum cum celere & curtenis blodei coloris. Hiſt. Elien. apud Whartoni Angl. Sax. par. 1. p. 673.

Cellerarius, The butler in a monaſtery: in the univerſities they are ſometimes called manciple, and ſometimes caterer, and ſteward.

Cendulæ, Small pieces of wood laid in form of tiles, to cover the roof of a houſe.—Mandatum ad cendulas & lattas noſtras cariandas de parco ad domus reficiendas. Pat. 4 Hen. 3. p. 1. m. 10.

Cenegild, This is an expiatory mulct, paid by one who killed another, to the kindred of the deceaſed. Spelm.

Cenellæ, Acorns, from the oak, in our old writings, peſſona cenellarum, is put for the pannage of hogs, or running of ſwine, to feed on acorns.

Cenninga, Was notice given by the buyer to the ſeller, that the thing ſold was claimed by another, that he might appear and juſtify the ſale: it is mentioned in the laws of Athelſtan apud Brompton, cap. 4.

Cenſaria, A farm, or houſe and land, let ad cenſum at a ſtanding rent: it comes from the Fr. cenſe, which ſignifies a farm.—Henricus Sturmy tenet maneria in com. Wilts, per ſervitium cuſtodiendi ballivam totius foreſtæ de Savernake & cenſariam, quae vocatur la ferme in foreſta praedicta. Temp. Ed. 3. Tenures, p. 88.

Cenſarii, Farmers.——Ibi ſunt nunc 14 cenſarii, habentes ſeptem carucatas. Blount.

Cenſuales, A ſpecies or claſs of the oblati, or voluntary ſlaves of churches or monaſteries, i. e. thoſe who, to procure the protection of the church, bound themſelves to pay an annual tax or quit-rent out of their eſtates to a church or monaſtery. Beſides this, they ſometimes engaged to perform certain ſervices. Robert. Hiſt. Emp. C. V. 1 V. 271, 2. Potgieſſerus de Statu Servorum, lib. 1. cap. 1. ſect. 6, 7.

Cenſure, A cuſtom called by this name (from the Lat. cenſus, which has been expounded to be a kind of perſonal money, paid for every poll) obſerved in divers manors in Cornwall and Devon, where all perſons reſiding therein above the age of ſixteen are cited to ſwear fealty to the lord, and to pay 11*d. per* poll, and 1*d. per ann.* ever after; and theſe thus ſworn are called cenſers.——Item erat quaedam cuſtuma quae vocatur cenſure proveniens de illis qui manent in burgo de Leſtreythiel. Survey of the Dutchy of Cornwall.

Centenarii, Were petty judges under ſheriffs of counties, that had rule of an hundred, and judged ſmaller matters among them. 1 Vent. 211.

There were inferior judges ſo called in France: in the reign of Charles the Bald the highways were ſo much infeſted by banditti, whoſe acts of violence were become ſo common, that by many they were ſcarce conſidered as criminal, for which reaſon theſe inferior judges, called centenarii, were required to take an oath, that they would neither commit any robbery themſelves, nor protect ſuch as were guilty of that crime. Robert. Hiſt. Emp. Charles V. 1 V. 379. Capital. edit. Balur. Vol. 2. p. 63. 68. See alſo Black. Com. 1 V. 115.

Ceola, A large ſhip. The word is mentioned in Malmeſbury. Lib. 1. c. 1.

Cepi Corpus, Is a return made by the ſheriff, upon a capias, or other proceſs to the like purpoſe, that he hath taken the body of the party. F. N. B. 26.

Ceppagium, The ſtumps or roots of trees which remain in the ground after the trees are felled.——Qui foreſtarii ceperint coopertiones, ceppagia & eſchaetas quercuum ſive aliarum arborum, &c. Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 41.

Ceragium, Cerage, a payment to find candles in the church. Mat. Paris. See Waxſcot.

Certainty, Is a plain, clear, and diſtinct ſetting down of things, ſo that they may be underſtood. 5 Rep. 121. A convenient certainty is required in writs, declarations, pleadings, &c. But if a writ abate for want of it, the plaintiff may have another writ: 'tis otherwiſe if a deed become void by incertainty, the party may not have a new deed at his pleaſure. 11 Rep. 25, 121. Dyer 84. That has certainty enough, that may be made certain: but not like what is certain of itſelf. 4 Rep. 97. See Incertainty.

In actions that affirm property in the plaintiff, certainty is more neceſſary than in others, yet after verdict the courts have diſpenſed with the certainty formerly neceſſary. Rep. Temp. Hardwicke, per Annaly, Franklin and Reeves 118, 119.

Certificando de recognitione Stapulæ, Is a writ commanding the mayor of the ſtaple to certify to the lord chancellor a ſtatute ſtaple taken before him, where the party himſelf detains it, and refuſeth to bring in the ſame. Reg. Orig. 152. There is the like writ to certify a ſtatute-merchant; and in divers other caſes. Ibid. 148, 151, &c.

Certificate, Is a writing made in any court to give notice to another court of any thing done therein, which is uſually by way of tranſcript, &c. And ſometimes it is made by an officer of the ſame court, where matters are referred to him, or a rule of court is obtained for it, containing the tenor and effect of what is done. The clerks of the crown, aſſize and peace, are to make certificates into B. R. of the tenor of indictments, convictions, &c. under penalties, by the Stat. 34 & 35 Hen. 8. c. 14. 3 W. & M. c. 9.

A judge of Niſi prius cannot certify for coſts out of court. Ford v. Parr & al'. Wilſ. par. 2. fo. 21. See Tab. to Satutes, tit. Certificate. As to certificate for coſts, vide Black. Com. 3 V. 214. Into Chancery, ibid. 453. Of Bankrupt, id. 2 V. 482. Of Poor, id. 1 V. 364. and Trial by Certificate, id. 3 V. 333.

Certification of Aſſiſe of Novel Diſſeiſin, (certificatio aſſiſæ novæ diſſeiſinæ, &c.) Is a writ granted for the re-examining of a matter paſſed by aſſiſe before juſtices: and this is uſed where a man appearing by his bailiff to an aſſiſe brought by another hath loſt the day; and having ſomething more to plead for himſelf, which the bailiff did not, or might not plead for him, deſires a farther examination of the cauſe, either before the ſame juſtices, or others, and obtains letters patent to them to that effect; whereupon he brings a writ to the ſheriff to call both the party for whom the aſſiſe paſſed, and the jury that was impanelled on the ſame, before the ſaid juſtices at a certain day and place, when the ſame is to be examined: and it is called a certificate, becauſe therein mention is made to the ſheriff, that upon the party's complaint of the defective examination, as to the aſſiſe paſſed, the king hath directed his letters patent to the juſtices for the better certifying of themſelves, whether all points of the ſaid aſſiſe were duly examined. Reg. Orig. 200. F. N. B. 181. Bracton, lib. 4. c. 13. Horn's Mirr. lib. 3.

Certiorari, A writ iſſuing out of the Chancery to an inferior court, to call up the records of a cauſe there depending, that juſtice may be done therein, upon complaint that the party who ſeeks the ſaid writ hath received hard uſage, or is not like to have an indifferent trial in the ſaid court. Fitz. N. B. fol. 242. A certiorari iſſues ſometimes out of Chancery, and ſometimes out of the King's Bench, and lies where the king would be certified of a record, in any court of record; and the king may ſend ſuch writ to any of the ſaid courts, to certify ſuch record before him in Banco, or in the Chancery, or before ſuch other juſtices, where he pleaſes to have the ſame certified. F. N. B. 145. Unleſs in caſes excepted by ſtatute.

This writ is either returnable in the King's Bench, and then hath theſe words, nobis mittatis; or in the Common Bench, and then has juſticiariis noſtris de banco; or in the Chancery, and then hath in Cancellaria noſtra, &c.

Certiorari lies to the courts of Wales; and the cinque ports, counties palatine, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 287. Indictments from inferior courts, and proceedings of the quarter-ſeſſions of the peace, &c. may be removed into B. R. by certiorari: and it is ſaid a certiorari to remove an indictment is good, although it bear date before the taking thereof: but on a certiorari the very record muſt be returned, and not a tranſcript of it; for if ſo, then the record will ſtill remain in the inferior court. 2 Lil. 253. In B. R. the very record itſelf of indictments is removed by certiorari; but uſually in Chancery, if a certiorari be returnable there, it removes only the tenor of the record, and therefore, if it be ſent from thence into the King's Bench, they cannot proceed either to judgment or execution, becauſe they have but ſuch tenor of the record before them. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 215.

And although on a habeas corpus to remove a perſon, the court may bail or diſcharge the priſoner: they can give no judgment upon the record of the indictment againſt him, without a certiorari to remove it, but the ſame ſtands in force as it did, and new proceſs may iſſue upon it: but it is otherwiſe in civil cauſes. Ibid. 211. If an indictment be one, but the offences ſeveral, where four perſons are indicted together; a certiorari to remove this indictment againſt two of them, removes it not as to the others, but as to them the record remains below. 2 Hale's Hiſt. 214.

Where a certiorari is by law grantable for an indictment, at the ſuit of the king, the court is bound to award it, for it is the king's prerogative to ſue in what court he pleaſes: but it is at the diſcretion of the court to grant or not, at the prayer of the defendant; and the court will not grant it for the removal of an indictment before juſtices of goal delivery, without ſome ſpecial cauſe; or where there is ſo much difficulty in the caſe, that the judge deſires it may be determined in B. R. &c. Alſo indictments of perjury, forgery, or for heinous miſdemeanors, the court will not grant a certiorari to remove at the inſtance of the defendant. 2 Hawk. P. C. 287.

Where iſſue is joined in the court below, it is a good objection againſt granting a certiorari: and if a perſon doth not make uſe of this writ till the jury are ſworn, he loſes the benefit of it. Mod. Ca. 16. Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 5. After conviction, a certiorari may not be had to remove an indictment, &c. unleſs there be ſpecial cauſe; as if the judge below is doubtful what judgment is proper to be given, when it may: and after conviction, &c. it lies in ſuch caſes where writ of error will not lie. 1 Salk. 149. The court on motion in an extraordinary caſe will grant a certiorari to remove a judgment given in an inferior court; but this is done where the ordinary way of taking out execution is hindered in the inferior court. 1 Lill. Abr. 253.

In common caſes a certiorari will not lie to remove a cauſe out of an inferior court, after verdict. It is never ſued out after a writ of error, but where diminution is alledged: and when the thing in demand does not exceed 5 l. a certiorari ſhall not be had, but a writ of error or attaint. Stat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 23. A certiorari is to be granted on matter of law only: and in many caſes there muſt be a judge's hand for it. 1 Lill. 252. Certiorari's to remove indictments, &c. are to be ſigned by a judge: and to remove orders, the fiat for making out the writ muſt be ſigned by ſome judge. 1 Salk. 150.

In vacation time a certiorari may be granted by any of the judges of B. R. and ſecurity is to be found before it is allowed. By ſtatute no certiorari is to be granted out of B. R. to remove an indictment before juſtices of peace at the ſeſſions before trial, unleſs motion be made in open court, and the party indicted find ſecurity by two perſons in 20 l. each to plead to the indictment in B. R. &c. And if the defendant proſecuting the certiorari be convicted, the court of B. R. ſhall order coſts to the proſecutor of the indictment. Stat. 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 11. If on a certiorari to remove an indictment the party do not find manucaptors in the ſum of 20 l. to plead to the indictment and try it, according to the ſtatute, it is no ſuperſedeas. Mod. Ca. 33. And a procedendo may be granted where bail is not put in before a judge, on a certiorari.

It has been ruled that a certiorari ought not to be granted to remove any order of juſtices, where an appeal lies to the ſeſſions, before the matter is determined on the appeal. 1 Salk. 147. Yet certiorari lies to juſtices of peace, &c. even in caſes where they are impowered by ſtatute finally to hear and determine. 1 Mod. 44. But things may not be removed from before juſtices of peace, which cannot be proceeded in by the court where removed; as in caſe of refuſing to take the oaths, &c. which is to be certified and inquired into, according to the ſtatute. 1 Salk. 145. And where the court which awards the certiorari cannot hold plea on the record, there but a tenor of the record ſhall be certified; for otherwiſe if the record was removed into B. R. as it cannot be ſent back, there would be a failure of right afterwards. 1 Danv. Abr. 792. But a record ſent by certiorari into B. R. may be ſent after by mittimus into C. B. Ibid. 789. And a record into B. R. may be certified into Chancery, and from thence be ſent by mittimus into an inferior court, where an action of debt is brought in an inferior court, and the defendant pleads that the plaintiff hath recovered in B. R. and the plaintiff replies Nul tiel record, &c. 1 Saund. 97, 99.

If a certiorari be prayed to remove an indictment out of London or Middleſex, three days notice muſt be given the other ſide, or the certiorari ſhall not be granted. Raym. 74. The court of B. R. will grant a new certiorari to affirm a judgment, &c. Though generally one perſon can have but one certiorari. Cro. Jac. 369. Returns of certiorari's are to be under ſeal; and the perſon to whom a certiorari is directed may make what return he pleaſes, and the court will not ſtop the filing of it, on affidavit of its falſity, except where the public good requires it: the remedy for a falſe return is action on the caſe, at the ſuit of the party injured; and information, &c. at the ſuit of the king. 2 Hawk. P. C. 295.

A certiorari being once delivered, makes all ſubſequent proceedings on the record erroneous; whether the proceedings are before or after its return. It is ſaid the Lord Chancellor, or any judge of the courts of record at Weſtminſter, may bring a record to one another, without a certiorari; but not a judge of an inferior court, &c. 1 Nelſ. 417, 418. A certiorari may be had to inferior courts; but not to a court ſuperior, or that has equal juriſdiction, in which caſe day is given to bring in the record, &c. And on a certiorari to remove a record out of an inferior court, the ſtile of their court, and power to hold plea, and before whom, ought to be ſhewn on their certificate. Jenk. Cent. 114, 232. If a cauſe be removed from an inferior court by certiorari, the pledges in the court below are not diſcharged; becauſe a defendant may bring a certiorari, and thereby the plaintiff may loſe his pledges. Skin. Rep. 244, 246.

Certiorari not granted to remove an indictment from the Old Bailey, unleſs on extraordinary occaſions. The King v. Ferguſon, Rep. temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 369.

A certiorari to remove an order of baſtardy ſhould be applied for in ſix months, Rex v. Howlett, Wilſ. par. 1. fo. 35.

Proceedings upon the exciſe laws ſhall not be ſuperſeded by certiorari. 12 Car. 2. c. 23 & 24.

Indictments for the repair of highways, pavements, &c. not removable but in ſpecial caſes, 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 6. 22 Car. 2. c. 12. & 3 W. & M. c. 12. And vide tit. Highways.

A certiorari may be granted to remove an indictment touching the highway, bridges, &c. on a ſuggeſtion, &c. that the right to repair may come in queſtion. 5 W. & M. c. 11.

The ſecurity to be taken on allowance of a certiorari, to remove a conviction of deer-ſtealing. 3 W. & M. c. 10. On the game laws, 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 23. & 5 & 6 Ann. c. 14. On the act to prevent exceſſive gaming, 12 Geo. 2. c. 28.

No judgment or order to be removed by certiorari, without ſureties found. 5 Geo. 2. c. 19.

Certiorari, to remove proceedings of juſtices, to be applied for within ſix calendar months, and upon ſix days notice to the juſtices. 13 Geo. 2. c. 18.

For the ſeveral caſes in which a certiorari is not grantable, ſee the table to the quarto edition of the Statutes at Large.

Form of a certiorari to certify the record of a judgment.

GEORGE the Third, &c. To the mayor and ſheriffs of our city of E. and to every of them, in our court at the Guildhall there greeting: Whereas A. B. hath lately in our ſaid court in the ſaid city, according to the cuſtom of the ſame court, impleaded C. D. late of, &c. in an action of debt upon demand of thirty pounds; and thereupon, in our ſaid court before you, obtained judgment againſt the ſaid C. for the recovery of the ſaid debt: and we, being deſirous for certain reaſons, that the ſaid record ſhould by you be certified to us, do command you, that you ſend under your ſeals the record of the ſaid recovery, with all things touching the ſame, into our court before us at Weſtminſter, on the day, &c. plainly and diſtinctly, and in as full and ample manner as it now remains before you, together with this writ; ſo that we on the part of the ſaid A. may be able to proceed to the execution of the ſaid judgment, and do what ſhall appear to us of right ought to be done. Witneſs, &c.

Cert-Money, (quaſi certain money) Is head-money, paid yearly by the reſiants of ſeveral manors to the lords thereof, for the certain keeping of the leet; and ſometimes to the hundred; as the manor of Hook, in Dorſetſhire, pays cert-money to the hundred of Egerdon. In ancient records this is called certum letæ. See Common Fine.

Cerviſarii. The Saxons had a duty called drinclean, that is, retributio potus, payable by their tenants; and ſuch tenants were in Domeſday called cerviſarii, from cerviſia, ale, their chief drink: though cerviſarius vulgarly ſignifies a beer or ale brewer.

Cerura, A mound, fence, or incloſure.——Willielmus de Lucy miles, dedit Thomæ S. miniſtro domus de Thelesford, licentiam domus & portas levare, ædificare, & cum ceruris & muris includere, &c. Cart. priorat. de Thelesford, MS.

Ceſſat Executio. In treſpaſs againſt two perſons, if it be tried and found againſt one, and the plaintiff takes his execution againſt him, the writ will abate as to the other; for there ought to be a ceſſat executio till it is tried againſt the other defendant. 10 Ed. 4. 11. See Execution, &c.

Ceſſavit, Is a writ that lies in divers caſes, upon this general ground, that he againſt whom it is brought, hath for two years neglected to perform ſuch ſervice, or to pay ſuch a rent, as he is tied to by his tenure, and hath not upon his lands or tenements ſufficient goods or chattels to be diſtrained. F. N. B. 280. And if a tenant for years of land at a certain rent, ſuffers the rent to be behind two years, and there is no ſuch diſtreſs to be had upon the land; then the landlord ſhall recover the land: but if the tenant come into court before judgment given, and tender the arrearages and damages, and find ſecurity that he ſhall ceaſe no more in payment of the rent, then the tenant ſhall not loſe his land. Terms de Ley.

By ſtatute, if a fee-farmer ceaſe to pay his rent two years, the leſſor may have a ceſſavit, and recover the land: and in this caſe, the heir of the demandant may maintain a ceſſavit againſt the heir or aſſignee of the tenant. 6 Ed. 1. cap. 4. But in other caſes, the heir may not bring this writ for ceſſure in the time of his anceſtor: and it lies not but for annual ſervice, rent, and ſuch like; not for homage or fealty. If a man ceaſe to pay his rent and ſervices for two years, and incloſe the land, ſo as the lord cannot diſtrain, if he lay not open the gates or hedges of the land which make the incloſure, the lord ſhall have a ceſſavit, although the tenant hath ſufficient cattle upon the land to be diſtrained for the rent: for the land ought to be open, and likewiſe there ſhould be ſufficient to diſtrain for the rent, &c. And where the tenant ſuffereth the land to lie freſh, not occupied for two years together, it is ſaid this writ will lie. New Nat. Br. 463, 464.

The lord ſhall have a writ of ceſſavit againſt tenant for life, where the remainder is over in fee to another: but the donor of an eſtate-tail ſhall not have a ceſſavit againſt the tenant in tail: though if a man make a gift in tail, the remainder over in fee to another, or to the heirs of the tenant in tail, there the lord of whom the lands are holden immediate, ſhall have a ceſſavit againſt the tenant in tail, becauſe that he is tenant to him, &c. Ibid. If the lord diſtrains pending the writ of ceſſavit againſt his tenant, the writ ſhall abate. The writ ceſſavit is directed to the ſheriff, To command A. B. that, &c. he render to C. D. one meſſuage, which he holds by certain ſervices, and which ought to come to the ſaid C. by force of the ſtatute, &c. becauſe the ſaid A. in doing thoſe ſervices had ceaſed two years, &c.

Ceſſavit de Cantaria, Lies where a man gives land to any houſe of religion or parſon, to ſay divine ſervice, provide alms for the poor, &c. If the ſaid ſervices be not done in two years, the donor or his heirs ſhall have this writ againſt him that holds the land thus given, after ſuch ceſſure. Stat. Weſtm. 2. cap. 41.

Ceſſe, Signifies an aſſeſſment or tax, and is mentioned in the Stat. 22 Hen. 8. cap. 3. Ceſſe or ceaſſe, in Ireland, is an exaction of victuals, at a certain rate, for ſoldiers in garriſon. Antiq. Hiberniæ.

Ceſſion, (Ceſſio) A ceaſing, yielding up, or giving over. And is when an eccleſiaſtical perſon is created biſhop, or a parſon of a parſonage takes another benefice, without diſpenſation or otherwiſe not qualified, &c. In both caſes their firſt benefices are become void, and are in the law ſaid to be void by ceſſion: and to thoſe benefices that the perſon had who was created biſhop, the king ſhall preſent for that time, whoever is patron of them; and in the other caſe the patron may preſent. Cowel. Not only a benefice with cure may be ſaid to be void by ceſſion, when the incumbent thereof accepts of another benefice, but alſo when ſuch incumbent is made a biſhop; for thereby all his eccleſiaſtical preferments which he had before, whether with or without cure, are actually void. Vaugh. 19. But it is not the election of any one to be a biſhop, and confirmation thereof, that doth void his former preferments, until conſecration be alſo had: and by diſpenſation of retainer, a biſhop may retain ſome, or all of thoſe preferments he was intitled to before he was biſhop. Dyer 223. The ceſſion on promotion of a biſhop, not making an avoidance in the common way, and it being by the king's means that the livings are void, whoſe preſentation in ſuch a caſe is only as it were an exchange of one life for another, intitles the king to preſent to thoſe livings, and as he is ſupreme patron. Ceſſion makes a living void, without any reſignation, deprivation, &c. Vide Black. Com. 1 V. 392.

Ceſſor, (Lat.) A loiterer; but more particularly uſed for him who ceaſeth, or neglects ſo long to perform a duty, that he thereby incurs the danger of the law. Old Nat. Br. 136.

Ceſſure, or ceſſer, Is uſed for ceaſing, giving over; or departing from. Stat. Weſtm. 2. c. 1.

Ceſtui que Truſt, Is he to whoſe uſe or benefit, another man is enfeoffed or ſeiſed of lands or tenements. Anno 12 Car. 2. cap. 30. And lands of ceſtui que truſt may be delivered in execution, where any perſon is ſeiſed in truſt for another. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. And ſee 19 H. 7. c. 15. 27 H. 8. c. 10. If the perſon intruſted doth not perform his truſt, he is compellable in the Chancery, &c.

Ceſtui que Uſe, (Fr. ceſtui à l' uſe de qui) Signifies him to whoſe uſe any other man is enfeoffed of lands or tenements. 1 Rep. 133. Feoffees to uſes were formerly deemed owners of the lands; but now the poſſeſſion is adjudged in ceſtui que uſe, and without any entry he may bring aſſiſe, &c. Stat. 27 Hen. 8. c. 10. Cro. Eliz. 46. See Uſe.

Ceſtui que Vie, Is he for whoſe life any lands or tenements are granted. Perk. 97. And if tenant for term of another's life dieth, while ceſtui que vie is living; now, by the Common law, he that firſt entereth, ſhall hold the land as occupant during ſuch other perſon's life. Co. Lit. 41, 388. But this is prevented by making leaſes for the lives of others to the leſſees, their heirs or executors, during the life of ceſtui que vie, &c. And the Stat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. charges ſuch lands for debt. See Occupant.

Chacea, Is a ſtation of game more extended than a park, and leſs than a foreſt: and is ſometimes taken for the liberty of chaſing or hunting within ſuch a diſtrict. And according to Blount it hath another ſignification, i. e. the way through which cattle are drove to paſture, commonly called in ſome places a drove way; Ut ſi quis omnino viam obſtruat vel chaceam per quam ingredi ſolet paſturæ. Bracton, lib. 4. c. 44. Vide Chaſe.

Chaceare ad lepores, vel vulpes: To hunt hare or fox. ——Licet, &c. chaceare ad lepores & vulpes in manerio ſuo de Donham. Cartular. Abbat. Glaſton. MS. 87.

Chacurus, (from the Fr. chaſſeur) A horſe for the chaſe; or rather a hound or dog, a courſer. Rot. 7 Johan.

Chafe, from the Fr. chaufer to heat, whence our chaſing diſh.

Chafewax, An officer in Chancery, that fitteth the wax for ſealing of the writs, and ſuch other inſtruments as are there made to be iſſued out: ſo in France calefactores ceræ ſunt, qui regis literis in Chancellaria ceram imprimunt. Coraſius.

Chaffers, Seem to ſignify wares or merchandiſe; and we yet uſe chaffering for buying and ſelling, though we take it to be generally a kind of bartering of one thing for another. It is mentioned in the Stat. of 3 Ed. 4. c. 4.

Chains, (hanging in). By 25 Geo. 2. c. 37. The judge before whom a murderer is convicted ſhall, in paſſing ſentence, direct him to be executed on the next day but one, (unleſs the ſame ſhall be Sunday, and then on the Monday following), and that his body be delivered to the ſurgeons, to be diſſected and anatomized; and that the judge may direct his body to be afterwaɹds hung in chains, but in no wiſe to be buried without diſſection. A power is allowed to the judge, upon good and ſufficient cauſe, to reſpite the execution, and relax the other reſtraints of this act. Black. Com. 4 V. 202.

Chaldron or Chalder of coals, contains thirty-ſix buſhels heaped up, according to the buſhel ſealed for that purpoſe at Guildhall, London. Stat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 2.

Chalking. The merchants of the ſtaple require to be eaſed of divers new impoſitions, as chalking, ironage, wharfage, &c. Rot. Parl. 50 Ed. 3.

Challenge, Calumnia (from the Fr. chalenger) is uſed in the law for an exception to jurors, who are returned to paſs on a trial. And this challenge to jurors is either made to the array, or to the poll: to the array is, when exception is taken to the whole number impanelled; and to the poll is, when ſome one or more are excepted againſt, as not indifferent.

Challenge to jurors is alſo divided into challenge principal or peremptory; and challenge pur cauſe, i. e. upon cauſe or reaſon: challenge principal or peremptory, is that which the law allows without cauſe alledged, or further examination; as a priſoner at the bar, arraigned for felony, may challenge peremptorily the number allowed him by law, one after another, alledging no cauſe, but his own diſlike, and they ſhall be put off, and new taken in their places: but yet there is a difference between challenge principal, and challenge peremptory; this being uſed only in matters criminal, and barely without cauſe alledged; whereas that is in civil actions for the moſt part, and by aſſigning ſome ſuch cauſe of exception, as being found true the law allows. Staundf. P.C. 124, 157. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 4. cap. 14. In treaſon, and petit treaſon, the number of thirty-five jurors may be peremptorily challenged, without ſhewing any cauſe, in favour of life; and in murder and felony, twenty: and more may be challenged ſhewing cauſe. Co. Lit. 155. 22 H. 8. c. 14. 1 P. & M. cap. 10.

A perſon indicted of treaſon may challenge thirty-five of thoſe returned on the panel of jurors to try him, without cauſe ſhewn; and if two or more are to be tried, they may challenge ſo many each, but then they are to be tried ſingly, or all may challenge that number in the whole, and be tried jointly. 3 Salk. 81. By Stat. 3 Hen. 7. c. 14. In treaſon for compaſſing to kill the King, &c. no challenge ſhall be allowed, but for malice. If a priſoner challenge peremptorily more than allowed he is to be dealt with as one ſtanding mute, &c. And ſome ſtatutes which take away the benefit of clergy from felons, exclude thoſe their clergy who peremptorily challenge more than twenty, whereby they are liable to judgment of death. 2 Hawk. P. C. 414. Vide 22 H. 8. c. 14. 28 H. 8. c. 1. 1 Ed. 6. c. 12. ſect. 11. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9. But if the offender be within the benefit of clergy, the challenge ſhall be over-ruled, and the party put upon his trial.

The King cannot challenge peremptorily in murder, &c. without ſhewing cauſe. Moor 595. And by Stat. 33 Ed. 1. Stat. 4. if thoſe who proſecute for the King challenge a juror, they ſhall aſſign the cauſe; and if they alledge not a good cauſe, the inqueſt ſhall be taken. All peremptory challenges are to be taken by the party himſelf; and where there are divers challenges, they muſt be taken all at once. But there can be no challenge till the jury is full; and then the array is to be challenged before one of them is ſworn. Hob. 235. Where the King is party, if the other ſide challenge a juror above the number allowed by law, he ought to ſhew the cauſe of his challenge immediately. 1 Bulſt. 191. A defendant ſhall ſhew all cauſes of challenge, before the King ſhall ſhew any. 2 Hawk. 413. And the King ought not to ſhew his cauſe of challenge before all the jurors are called over; for if there are enough beſides thoſe challenged, there will be no occaſion to ſhew any cauſe why he challenged the others: but if there are not enough, then he muſt ſhew the cauſe of his challenge. Raym. 473.

There may be a principal cauſe of challenge to the array, and a challenge to the favour: a principal cauſe of challenge is in reſpect of partiality or default of the ſheriff, &c. and not in reſpect of the perſons returned; and this partiality in the ſheriff, may be by reaſon of kindred, or affinity to the plaintiff or defendant; or if one of the jury is returned at the nomination of the plaintiff or defendant; if a knight be not returned, when a peer is party, &c. Co. Lit. 156, 157.

Challenge to the favour is where the plaintiff or defendant is tenant to the ſheriff, or if the ſheriff's ſon hath married the daughter of the party, &c. and is alſo when either party cannot take any principal challenge, but ſheweth cauſe of favour; and cauſes of favour are infinite. But where the King is party, one ſhall not challenge the array for favour, though the King may do it. Wood's Inſt. 592. Where challenge is to the favour, by reaſon of kindred to the ſheriff, you muſt ſhew how kin, and then the challenge is good. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 423. If one of the parties is of affinity to a juror, the juror hath married the plaintiff's daughter, &c. If a juror hath given a verdict before in the cauſe, matter or title; if one labours a juror to give his verdict; if after he is returned, a juror eats and drinks at the charge of either party; if the plaintiff, &c. be his maſter, or the juror hath any intereſt in the thing demanded, &c. theſe are challenges to the favour. 2 Rol. Abr. 636. Hob. 294.

If the juror is convicted and attainted of treaſon, felony, perjury, adjudged to the pillory, or other puniſhment, whereby he becomes infamous, or is outlawed, or excommunicate; theſe are all principal challenges: but in theſe caſes and others, he that challengeth, is to ſhew the record, if he will have it take place as a principal challenge; otherwiſe he muſt conclude to the favour, unleſs it be a record of the ſame court. Co. Lit. 157. A perſon under proſecution for any crime, may, before indicted, challenge any of the grand jury, as being outlawed, &c. or returned at the inſtance of the proſecutor, or not returned by the proper officer, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 215.

As a peer ought not to be ſworn on juries, he may be challenged: but a peer of the realm tried for treaſon or felony, ſhall not challenge any of his peers. Trials per pais 130. A juror may be challenged for defect, as well as for any crime; as defect of birth, where he is an alien born; of age, becauſe a minor; or of eſtate, for want of ten pounds per annum freehold, &c. in the ſame county, or a taleſman five pounds a year, by Stat 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24. In corporation towns, freemen, worth forty pounds in goods, are qualified to be jurors for trying of felonies. Stat. 23 Hen. 8. c. 13. But on trials in London for high treaſon, every juror ought to have ſuch freehold, &c. as is required by 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24. And common jurors there, are to have lands or goods of one hundred pounds value, &c. by Stat. 3 Geo. 2. c. 25. ſect. 19. A principal challenge, being found true, is ſufficient without leaving it to triers: but if ſome of a jury are challenged for favour, they ſhall be tried by the reſt of the jury, whether indifferent. Co. Lit. 158. And where a challenge is made to the array, the court appoint two triers, who are ſworn, and then the cauſe of favour is ſhewed to them, which may be called the iſſue they are to try; and if it is proved, then they give their verdict that they are not indifferently impanelled, and this is entered of record: but if the favour is not proved, then they ſay that the jury was indifferently impanelled, and ſo the trial goes on, without making any entry of the matter. 1 Bulſt. 114.

If one take a principal challenge againſt a juror, he cannot afterwards challenge that juror for favour, and waive his former challenge: but a challenge may be made to the polls, after made to the array. Wood 592. A new jury is to be impanelled by the coroner, where the array is quaſhed for partiality, &c. of the ſheriff. If there be cauſe of challenge againſt the ſheriff, the proceſs is to be directed to the coroners; and if there is cauſe of challenge againſt them, the court will appoint certain eliſors, againſt whoſe return no challenge can be taken to the array, though it may be to the polls. Trials per pais 15.

If a plaintiff or defendant have action of battery, &c. againſt the ſheriff, or the ſheriff againſt them, it is cauſe of challenge: and if either of the parties have action of debt againſt the ſheriff; or if the ſheriff hath any parcel of land depending on the ſame title as the parties; or if he, or his bailiffs who returned the jury, be under the diſtreſs of either party, &c. Theſe are good cauſes of challenge. Ibid. 154. Where one of the jurors hath a ſuit at law depending with the plaintiff, it is good challenge. Stile 129. An action depending betwixt either of the parties and a juror, implying malice, is cauſe of challenge: and a juror may be challenged for holding lands by the ſame title as the defendant. 2 Leon. 40. If a perſon owes ſuit of court, &c. to a lord of a hundred who is plaintiff, it is a principal challenge, as he is within the diſtreſs of the plaintiff. Dyer 176. But it is ſaid to be no challenge that a perſon is in debt to either party. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 426. A juror returned by a wrong name, may be challenged and withdrawn, ſo that the jury ſhall not be taken; yet a tales may be granted. 1 Lil. Abr. 260. And if a juror declares the right of either of the parties, &c. it is cauſe of challenge: though it hath been ruled that it is not ſufficient cauſe of challenge, that a juror delivered his opinion touching the title of the land in queſtion; becauſe his opinion may be altered on hearing the evidence. Paſch. 23 Car. B. R.

If there are two demandants in a real action, or two tenants, and one challenge a juror, and the other will not, the juror (the challenge being allowed) ſhall be drawn againſt the reſt. 11 H. 6. 15. Jenk. Cent. 114. To ſay of a perſon to be tried for any crime, that he is guilty, or will be hanged, &c. is good cauſe of challenge; but the priſoner muſt prove it by witneſſes, and not out of the mouth of the juryman, who may not be examined: and though a juryman may be aſked upon a voire dire whether he hath any intereſt in the caſe, or whether he hath a freehold, &c. yet a juryman or a witneſs, ſhall not be examined, whether he hath been convict of felony, or guilty of any crime, &c. which would make a man diſcover that of himſelf which tends to make him infamous, and the anſwer might charge him with a miſdemeanor. 1 Salk. 153.

Default of hundredors is cauſe of challenge by the Common law; but by ſtatute 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. every venire facias for trial of iſſues in any court of record, ſhall be awarded of the body of the proper county; though this extends only to civil cauſes, and not to appeals of felony, indictments, &c.

In a writ of right, four knights were returned; they muſt appear with their ſwords, or it will be good cauſe of challenge. Moor 67. If one challenge a juror, and the challenge is entered, he may not afterwards have him ſworn on the jury. And if the defendant do not appear at the trial when called, he loſeth his challenge to the jurors, though he afterwards appear. 1 Lil. Abr. 259. When the jury appear at a trial, before the ſecondary calls them to be ſworn, he bids the plaintiff and defendant to attend their challenges, &c. Peremptory challenge taken away in high treaſon, per 33 H. 8. c. 23. But this ſeems to be altered or rather repealed by 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 10. ſect. 7, &c. Vide theſe two ſtatutes in the quarto edition, with the references, in the margin of the ſame.—Alſo vide 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. 24 Geo. 2. c. 18. Challenge to fight, either by word or letter, or to be the bearer of ſuch challenge, puniſhable by fine and impriſonment, on indictment, or information. Vide Black. Com. 4 V. 149, 150.

Chamberdekins, or Chamber-deacons, were certain poor Iriſh ſcholars, cloathed in mean habit, and living under no rule: baniſhed England by Stat. 1 Hen. 5. cap. 7, 8.

Chamberlain, (Camerarius) Is variouſly uſed in our laws, ſtatutes and chronicles: as firſt there is Lord Great Chamberlain of England, to whoſe office belongs the government of the palace at Weſtminſter, and upon all ſolemn occaſions the keys of Weſtminſter-Hall, and the court of Requeſts are delivered to him; he diſpoſes of the ſword of ſtate to be carried before the King when he comes to the parliament, and goes on the right hand of the ſword next to the King's perſon: he has the care of providing all things in the Houſe of Lords in the time of parliament; to him belongs livery and lodgings in the King's court, &c. And the gentleman uſher of the black rod, yeoman uſher, &c. are under his authority.

The Lord Chamberlain of the Houſhold has the overſight and government of all officers belonging to the King's chamber, (except the bed-chamber, which is under the Groom of the Stole), and alſo of the wardrobe; of artificers retained in the King's ſervice, meſſengers, comedians, revels, muſick, &c. The ſerjeants at arms are likewiſe under his inſpection; and the King's chaplains, phyſicians, apothecaries, ſurgeons, barbers, &c. And he hath under him a Vice-Chamberlain, both being always Privy Counſellors.

There were formerly Chamberlains of the King's courts. 7 Ed. 6. cap. 1. And there are Chamberlains of the Exchequer, who keep a controlment of the pells of receipts and exitus, and have in their cuſtody the leagues and treaties with foreign princes, many ancient records, the two famous books of antiquity called Domeſday, and the Black book of the Exchequer; and the ſtandards of money, and weights, and meaſures are kept by them. There are alſo Under-chamberlains of the Exchequer, who make ſearches for all records in the treaſury; and are concerned in making out the tallies, &c The office of Chamberlain of the Exchequer is mentioned in the Stat. 34 & 35 H. 8. cap. 16. Beſides theſe, we read of a Chamberlain of North Wales. Stow. p. 641.

A Chamberlain of Cheſter, to whom it belongs to receive the rents and revenues of that city; and when there is no prince of Wales, and earl of Cheſter, he hath the receiving and returning of all writs coming thither out of any of the King's courts.

The Chamberlain of London, who is commonly the receiver of the city rents payable into the chamber; and hath great authority in making and determining rights of freemen, concerning apprentices, orphans, &c.

Chambers of the King, (Regiæ cameræ) The havens or ports of the kingdom are ſo called in our ancient records. Mare Clauſ. fol. 242.

Champarty, or champerty, campi partitio, (from the Fr. champ, a field, and parti divided, or the Lat campus, and partitio, becauſe the parties in champerty, agree to divide the thing in queſtion) Signifies a bargain with the plaintiff or defendant in any ſuit, to have part of the land, debt, or other thing ſued for, if the party that undertakes it prevails therein. Co. Lit. 368. This ſeems to have been an ancient grievance in our nation; for notwithſtanding the ſeveral ſtatutes of 3 Ed. 1. cap. 25. 13 Ed. 1. c. 49. 28 Ed. 1. c. 11. and 33 Ed. 1. Stat. 2, &c. and a form of a writ framed to them; yet 4 Ed. 3. cap 11. and 32 Hen. 8. c. 9. enacted, That whereas former ſtatutes provided redreſs for this evil in the King's Bench only, from henceforth it ſhould be lawful for juſtices of the Common Pleas, juſtices of aſſiſe, and juſtices of peace in their quarter ſeſſions, to inquire, hear and determine this and ſuch like caſes, as well at the ſuit of the King, as of the party: and this offence is puniſhable by Common law and ſtatute; the Stat. 33 Ed 1. Stat. 2. makes the offenders liable to three years impriſonment, and a fine at the King's pleaſure. By the Stat. 28 Ed. 1. c. 11. it is ordained, that no officer, nor any other, ſhall take upon him any buſineſs in ſuit, to have part of the thing in plea; nor none upon any covenant, ſhall give up his right to another; and if any do, and be convicted thereof, the taker ſhall forfeit to the King ſo much of his lands and goods as amounts to the value of the part purchaſed, &c. for ſuch maintenance.

In the conſtruction of theſe ſtatutes, it hath been adjudged, that under the word covenant, all kinds of promiſes and contracts are included, whether by writing, or parol: that rent granted out of land in variance, is within the ſtatute of champerty: and grants of part of the thing in ſuit made merely in conſideration of the maintenance, are within the meaning of this ſtatute; but not ſuch as are made in conſideration of a precedent honeſt debt, which is agreed to be ſatisfied with the thing in demand when recovered, F. N. B. 172. 2 Inſt. 209. 2 Rol. Abr. 113.

It is ſaid not to be material, whether he who brings a writ of champerty, did in truth ſuffer any damage by it; or whether the plea wherein it is alledged be determined or not. 1 Hawk. 257. A conveyance executed pending a plea, in purſuance of a bargain made before, is not within the ſtatutes againſt champerty: and if a man purchaſe chaſe land of a pa[illegible], pending the writ, if it be bona fide, and not to maintain, it is not champerty. F. N. B. 272. 2 Rol. Abr. 113. But it hath been held, that the purchaſe of land while a ſuit of equity concerning it is depending, is within the purview of the ſtatute 28 E. 1. Stat. 3. c. 11. Moor 665. A leaſe for life, or years, or a voluntary gift of land, is within the ſtatutes of champerty; but not a ſurrender made by a leſſee to his leſſor: or a conveyance relating to lands in ſuit, made by a father to his ſon, &c. 1 Hawk. P. C. 258.

The giving part of the lands in ſuit, after the end of it, to a counſellor for his wages, is not champerty, if there be no precedent bargain relating to ſuch gift; but if it had been agreed between the counſellor and his client before the action brought, that he ſhould have part for his wages, then it would be champerty. Bro. Champert. 3. And it is dangerous to meddle with any ſuch gift, ſince it carries with it a ſtrong preſumption of champerty. 2 Inſt. 564. If any attorney follow a cauſe to be paid in groſs, when the thing in ſuit is recovered, it hath been adjudged, that this is champerty. Hob. 117. Every champerty implies maintenance; but every maintenance is not champerty; for champerty is but a ſpecies of maintenance. Crom. Jur. 39. 2 Inſt. 208. And puniſhed in the ſame manner. Black. Com. 4 V. 134, 5.

Champertors, By ſtatute, are thoſe who move pleas or ſuits, or cauſe them to be moved, either by their own procurement, or by others, and ſue them at their proper coſts, to have part of the land in variance, or part of the gain. 33 Ed. 1. Stat. 2.——Champertores, vel campi participes, ſunt qui per ſe vel per alios placita movent, vel movere faciunt, & ea ſuis ſumptibus proſequuntur ad campi partem, vel pro parte lucri habenda. Stat. 2. Artic. ſuper Chart. 11.

Champion, (campio) Is taken in the law not only for him that fights a combat in his own cauſe, but alſo for him that doth it in the place or quarrel of another. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 21. And in Sir Edward Biſhe's notes on Upton, fol. 36. you will find that Henry de Ferneberg, for 30 marks fee, did by charter covenant to be champion to Roger abbot of Glaſtenbury. An. 42 Hen. 3. Theſe champions, mentioned in our law books and hiſtories, were uſually hired; and any one might hire them, except parricides, and thoſe who were accuſed of the higheſt offences: before they came into the field, they ſhaved their heads, and made oath that they believed the perſons who hired them, were in the right, and that they would defend their cauſe to the utmoſt of their power; which was always done on foot, and with no other weapon than a ſtick or club, and a ſhield: and before they engaged, they always made an offering to the church, that God might aſſiſt them in the battle. When the battle was over, the puniſhment of a champion overcome, and likewiſe of the perſon for whom he fought, was various: If it was the champion of a woman for a capital offence, ſhe was burnt, and the champion hanged: if it was of a man, and not for a capital crime, he not only made ſatisfaction, but had his right hand cut off; and the man was to be cloſe confined in priſon, till the battle was over. Bract. lib. 2. c. 35. See Combat.

Champion of the King, (campio regis) Is an ancient officer, whoſe office it is at the coronation of our Kings, when the King is at dinner, to ride armed cap-a-pee into Weſtminſter-Hall, and by the proclamation of a herald make a challenge, That if any man ſhall deny the King's title to the crown, he is there ready to defend it in ſingle combat, &c. Which being done, the King drinks to him, and ſends him a gilt cup with a cover full of wine, which the champion drinks, and hath the cup for his fee. This office, ever ſince the coronation of King Richard II. when Baldwin Freville exhibited his petition for it, was adjudged from him to Sir John Dymocke his competitor, (both claiming from Marmion), and hath continued ever ſince in the family of the Dymockes; who hold the manor of Scrivelſby in Lincolnſhire, hereditary from the Marmions, by grand ſerjeanty, viz. That the lord thereof ſhall be the King's champion, as aboveſaid. Accordingly Sir Edward Dymocke performed this office at the coronation of King Charles II. And a perſon of the name of Dymocke performed it, at the coronation of his preſent majeſty George the Third.

Champs des Mars, and les champs de Mai, Aſſemblies of the ancient Gauls, to deliberate on whatever related to the general welfare of the nation. Theſe aſſemblies were called champs, becauſe, according to the cuſtom of all the barbarous nations, they were held in the open air, in ſome plain, capable of containing the vaſt number of perſons who had a right to be preſent. They were denominated champs de Mars and de Mai, from the months in which they were held. Every freeman ſeems to have had a right to be preſent in theſe aſſemblies. Robert. Hiſt. Emp. C. v. 1 V. 357.

Chance, Where a man commits an unlawful act, by misfortune, or chance, and not by deſign, it is a deficiency of the will; as here it obſerves a total neutrality, and doth not co-operate with the deed; which therefore wants one main ingredient of a crime. Vide Black. Com. 4 V. 26, 7. See Homicide.

Chancellor, (Cancellarius) Was at firſt only a chief notary or ſcribe under the Emperor, and was called Cancellarius, becauſe he ſate infra Cancellos; to avoid the crowd of the people. This word is by ſome derived from Cancello, and by others from Cancellis, an incloſed or ſeparated place, or chancel, encompaſſed with bars, to defend the judges, and other officers from the preſs of the public. And Cancellarius originally, as Lupanus thinks, ſignified only the regiſter in court; Grapharios, ſcil. qui conſcribendis & excipiendis judicum actis dant operam: but this name and officer is of late times greatly advanced, not only in this, but in other kingdoms; for he is the chief adminiſtrator of juſtice, next to the ſovereign, who anciently heard equitable cauſes himſelf.

All other juſtices in this kingdom are tied to the ſtrict rules of the law, in their judgments; but the Chancellor hath power to moderate the written law, governing his judgment by the law of nature and conſcience, and ordering all things juxta æquum & bonum: and having the King's power in theſe matters, he hath been called the keeper of the King's conſcience. According to a late treatiſe, the Chancellor originally precided over a political college of ſecretaries, for the writing of treaties, grants, and other public buſineſs; and that the court of equity under the old conſtitution was held before the King and his counſel in the palace, where one ſupreme court for buſineſs of every kind was kept: and at firſt the Chancellor became a judge to hear and determine petitions to the King, which were referred to him; and in the end, as buſineſs increaſed, the people intitled their ſuits to the Chancellor, and not the King: and thus the Chancellor's equitable power had by degrees commencement by preſcription. Hiſt. Chan. p. 3, 10, 44, &c.

Staundford ſays, the Chancellor hath two powers; one abſolute, the other ordinary; meaning, that although by his ordinary power, in ſome caſes, he muſt obſerve the form of proceeding as other inferior judges; in his abſolute power he is not limited by the law, but by conſcience and equity, according to the circumſtances of things. And though Polydore Virgil, in his hiſtory of England, makes William the Firſt, called the Conqueror, the founder of our Chancellors; yet our antiquary Mr. Dugdale, has ſhewn that there were many Chancellors of England long before that time, which are mentioned in his Origines Juridiciales, and catalogues of Chancellors; and Sir Edward Coke in his fourth Inſtitute ſaith, it is certain, That both the Britiſh and Saxon Kings had their Chancellors, whoſe great authority under their Kings were in all probability drawn from the reaſonable cuſtom of neighbouring nations and the Civil law.

He that bears this chief magiſtracy, is ſtiled the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, which is the higheſt honour of the long robe; being made ſo per traditionem magni ſigilli ſibi per dominum regem, and by taking his oath: and a Chancellor may be made ſo at will, by patent, but it is ſaid not for life, for being an ancient office, it ought to be granted as hath been accuſtomed. 2 Inſt. 87. But Sir Edward Hide, afterwards Earl of Clarendon, had a patent to be Lord Chancellor for life, though he was diſmiſſed from that office, and the patent declared void. 1 Sid. 338.

By the Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 18. the Lord Chancellor and Keeper have one and the ſame power; and therefore ſince that ſtatute, there cannot be a Lord Chancellor and Lord Keeper at the ſame time; before there might, and hath been. 4 Inſt. 78. King Hen. 5. had a great ſeal of gold, which he delivered to the Biſhop of Durham, and made him Lord Chancellor, and alſo another of ſilver, which he delivered to the Biſhop of London to keep; but at this day there being but one great ſeal, there cannot be a Lord Chancellor and Lord Keeper at once, and becauſe they are but one office, as is declared by 5 Eliz. c. 18. and the taking away the ſeal determines the office. 1 Sid. 338. But the Lord Bridgman was Lord Keeper, and Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, at the ſame time; which offices were held not to be inconſiſtent. Ibid. By 1 W. & M. cap 21. Commiſſioners appointed to execute the office of Lord Chancellor, may exerciſe all the authority, juriſdiction, and execution of laws, which the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper, of right ought to uſe and execute, &c. ſince which ſtatute this high office hath been ſeveral times in commiſſion; though generally on the diſmiſſion of a Chancellor, till another was appointed.

The Lord Chancellor, now there is no Lord High Steward, is accounted the firſt officer of the kingdom; and he not only keeps the King's great ſeal, but all patents, commiſſions, warrants, &c. from the King, are peruſed by him before ſigned: and he has the diſpoſal of all eccleſiaſtical benefices in the gift of the crown under 20*l.* a year in the King's books, which has occaſioned this office to be formerly poſſeſſed by a clergyman. He by his oath ſwears well and truly to ſerve the King, and to do right to all manner of people, &c. In his judicial capacity, he hath divers aſſiſtants and officers, viz. The Maſter of the Rolls, the Maſters in Chancery, &c. And in matters of difficulty, he calls one or more of the chief juſtices, and judges to aſſiſt him in making his decrees; though in ſuch caſes they only give their advice and opinion, and have no ſhare of the judicial authority.

As to the Maſter of the Rolls, he hath judicial power; and is an aſſiſtant to the Lord Chancellor when preſent, and his deputy when abſent, but he has certain cauſes aſſigned him to hear and decree, which he uſually doth on certain days appointed at the chapel of the rolls, being aſſiſted by one or more Maſters in chancery: he is, by virtue of his office, chief of the Maſters of Chancery, and chief clerk of the petty-bag office.

The twelve Maſters in Chancery ſit ſome of them in court, and take notice of ſuch references as are made to them, to be reported to the court, relating to matters of practice, the ſtate of the proceedings, accounts, &c. and they alſo take affidavits, acknowledge deeds and recogniſances, &c.

The ſix clerks in Chancery tranſact and file all proceedings by bill and anſwer; and alſo iſſue out ſome patents that paſs the great ſeal; which buſineſs is done by their under clerks, each of whom has a ſeat there, and whereof every ſix clerk has a certain number in his office, uſually about ten

The curſitors of the court, four and twenty in number, make out all original writs in Chancery, which are returnable in C. B. &c. and among theſe the buſineſs of the ſeveral counties is ſeverally diſtributed.

The Regiſter is a place of great importance in this court, and he hath ſeveral deputies under him, to take cogniſance of all orders and decrees, and enter and draw them up, &c.

The Maſter of the Subpœna Office iſſues out all writs of ſubpœna.

The Examiners are officers in this court, who take the depoſitions of witneſſes, and are to examine them, and make out copies of the depoſitions.

The Clerk of the Affidavits files all affidavits uſed in court, without which they will not be admitted.

The Clerk of the Rolls ſits conſtantly in the rolls to make ſearches for deeds, offices, &c. and to make out copies.

The Clerks of the Petty-Bag Office, in number three, have great variety of buſineſs that goes through their hands, in making out writs of ſumm[illegible]s to parliament; congé d'elires for biſhops, patents for cuſtomers; liberates upon extent of ſtatute-ſtaple, and recovery of recogniſances forfeited, &c. And alſo relating to ſuits for and againſt privileged perſons, &c. And the clerks of this office have ſeveral clerks under them.

The Uſher of the Chancery had formerly the receiving and cuſtody of all money ordered to be depoſited in court, and paid it back again by order: but this buſineſs hath been of late aſſumed by the Maſters in Chancery.

And anno 12 Geo. 1. c. 32. a new officer was appointed by ſtatute, called Accountant-General, to receive the money lodged in court, and convey the ſame to the Bank, to be there kept for the ſuitors of the court.

Then there is a Serjeant at Arms, to whom perſons ſtanding in contempt are brought up by his ſubſtitute as priſoners.

A Warden of the Fleet, who receives ſuch priſoners as ſtand committed by the court, &c.

And beſides theſe officers, there is a Clerk of the Crown in Chancery; Clerk and Controller of the Hanaper; Clerk for inrolling letters patent, &c. not employed in proceedings of equity, but concerned in making out commiſſions, patents, pardons, &c. under the great ſeal, and collecting the fees thereof. A Clerk of the Faculties, for diſpenſations, licences, &c. Clerk of the Preſentations, for benefices of the crown in the Chancellor's gift; Clerk of Appeals, on appeals from the courts of the Archbiſhop to the court of Chancery: and divers other officers, who are conſtituted by the Chancellor's commiſſion.

Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, A great officer, whoſe office is principally to determine controverſies between the King and his tenants of the dutchy land, and otherwiſe to direct all the King's affairs belonging to that court. The Chancellor is the chief judge of the Dutchy Court, who in difficult points of law is uſually aſſiſted by two judges of the Common law, out of one court or other, to decide the matter in queſtion: this court is held in Weſtminſter-Hall, and was formerly much uſed in relation to ſuits between tenants of dutchy lands, and againſt accountants and others for the rents and profits of the ſaid lands. Under the Chancellor of the Dutchy, are an Attorney of the Court, one Chief Clerk or Regiſter, and ſeveral Auditors, &c. This officer is mentioned in the Stat. 3 Ed. 6. c. 1. and 5 id. c. 26.

Chancellor of the Exchequer, Is likewiſe a great officer, who it is thought by many was originally appointed for the qualifying extremities in the exchequer: he ſomtimes ſits in court, and in the exchequer-chamber; and with the judges of the court, orders things to the King's beſt benefit. He hath by the Stat. 33 H. 8. c. 39. power with others, to compound for the forfeitures upon penal ſtatutes, bonds and recognizances entered into to the King: he hath alſo great authority in the management of the royal revenue, &c. which ſeems of late to be his chief buſineſs, being commonly the firſt commiſſioner of the treaſury. And though the court of equity in the Exchequer-chamber, was intended to be holden before the treaſurer, Chancellor, and barons; it is uſually before the barons only. When there is a Lord-treaſurer, the Chancellor of the Exchequer is Under treaſurer.

Chancellor of the Order of the Garter, Stow's Annals, pag. 706. Chancellor of the Univerſities. See 9 Hen. 5. c. 8. Chancellor of the Dioceſe, 32 Hen. 8. c. 15. Chancellor in Cathedral Churches: his office is thus deſcribed in the Monaſticon, and the ſtatute of Litchfield, viz.—— Lictiones legendas in ecclesia per ſe vel per ſuum vicarium auſcultare, male legentes emendare, ſcholas conferre, ſigilla ad cauſas conferre, literas capituli facere & conſignare, libros ſervare, quotieſcunq; voluerit prædicationes in eccleſia vel extra eccleſiam prædicare, & cui voluerit prædicationis officium aſſignare. Mon. Chancemedley, (from the Fr. chance, lapſus, and méler, miſcere) Signifies the caſual killing of a man not without the killer's fault, though without any evil intention; and is where a perſon is doing a lawful act and a perſon is killed by chance thereby: for if the act be unlawful, it is felony. If a perſon caſts (not intending harm) a ſtone, which happens to hit one, whereof he dies: or ſhoots an arrow in a highway, and another that paſſeth by is killed therewith: or if a workman, in throwing down rubbiſh from a houſe, after warning to take care, kills a perſon: or a ſchool-maſter in correcting his ſcholar, a maſter his ſervant, or an officer in whipping a criminal, in a reaſonable manner, happens to occaſion his death: it is chancemedley and miſadventure. 3 Inſt. 56. Dalt. 351.

But if a man throws ſtones in a highway, where perſons uſually paſs: or ſhoots an arrow, &c. in a market place, among a great many people: or if a workman caſt down rubbiſh from a houſe, in cities and towns, where people are continually paſſing: or a ſchool-maſter, &c. correct his ſervant or ſcholar, &c. exceeding the bounds of moderation, it is man-ſlaughter; and if with an improper inſtrument of correction, as with a ſword or iron bar, or by a kicking, ſtamping, &c. in a cruel manner, it is murder. Terms de Ley, H. P. C. 31, 58, &c. Kel. 40, 65, 113. If a man whips his horſe in a ſtreet to make him gallop, and the horſe runs over a child and kills it, it is manſlaughter: but if another whips the horſe, it is manſlaughter in him, and chancemedley in the rider. H. P. C. 48, 59. And if two are fighting, and a third perſon coming to part them is killed by one of them, without any evil intent, yet this is murder in him; and not manſlaughter by chancemedley or miſadventure: and if they were met with prepenſed malice, the one intending to kill the other, then it is murder in both. Terms de Ley. In chancemedley the offender forfeits his goods; but hath a pardon of courſe. Stat. 6 Ed. 1. c. 9. See Homicide.

Chancery, (cancellaria) Is the higheſt court of judicature in this kingdom next to the parliament, and of very ancient inſtitution. The juriſdiction of this court is of two kinds; ordinary, or legal; and extraordinary, or abſolute. The ordinary juriſdiction, is that wherein the Lord Chancellor, in his proceedings and judgments, is bound to obſerve the order and method of the Common law; and in ſuch caſes the proceedings have been uſually in Latin, and filed or inrolled in the petty-bag office: and the extraordinary or unlimited power, is that juriſdiction which this court exerciſes in caſes of equity, wherein relief is to be had by way of Engliſh Bill and anſwer.

The Ordinary Court holds plea of recogniſances acknowledged in the Chancery, writs of ſcire facias for repeal of letters patent, writs of partition, &c. and alſo of all perſonal actions, by or againſt any officer of the court; and by acts of parliament of ſeveral offences and cauſes: all original writs; commiſſions of bankrupt; of charitable uſes; of ideots, and lunacy, &c. iſſue out of this court, for which it is always open; and ſometimes a ſuperſedeas, or writ of privilege, hath been here granted to diſcharge a perſon out of priſon: one from hence may have an habeas corpus, prohibition, &c. in the vacation; and here a ſubpæna may be had to force witneſſes to appear in other courts, when they have no power to call them. 4 Inſt. 79. 1 Danv. Abr. 776.

But in proſecuting cauſes, if the parties deſcend to iſſue, this court cannot try it by jury; but the Lord Chancellor delivers the record into the King's Bench to be tried there; and after trial had, it is to be remanded into the Chancery, and there judgment given: though if there be a demurrer in law, it ſhall be argued and adjudged in this court.

When there is a demurer upon part, and iſſue upon part, the record being in B. R. that court ought to give judgment, becauſe there can be but one execution; and if the record come thither entirely, they cannot ſend it back again. 1 Mod. Rep. 29. But ſee 4 Inſt. 80. Upon a judgment given in this court, a writ of error lies returnable in B. R. 4 Inſt. 80.

The Extraordinary Court, or Court of Equity, proceeds by the rules of equity and conſcience, and moderates the rigour of the Common law, conſidering the intention rather than the words of the law. It gives relief for and againſt infants, notwithſtanding their minority: and for and againſt married women, notwithſtanding their coverture: in ſome caſes a woman may ſue her huſband for maintenance; ſhe may ſue him when he is beyond ſea, &c. and be compelled to anſwer without her huſband: all frauds and deceits; for which there is no redreſs at Common law: all breaches of truſt and confidence; and accidents, as to relieve obligors, mortgagors, &c. againſt penalties and forfeitures, where the intent was to pay the debt, are here remedied: for in Chancery, a forfeiture, &c. ſhall not bind, where a thing may be done after, or compenſation made for it. 1 Danv. 752. 2 Vent. 352. 1 Rol. Abr. 373.

Alſo this court will give relief againſt the extremity of unreaſonable engagements, entered into without conſideration: and make executors, &c. give ſecurity and pay intereſt for money that is to lie long in their hands. Here executors may ſue one another, or one executor alone be ſued without the reſt: order may be made for performance of a will: it may be decreed who ſhall have the tuition a child: this court may confirm title to lands, though one hath loſt his writings; render conveyances, defective thro' miſtake, &c. good and perfect; but not defects in a voluntary conveyance, unleſs where intended as a proviſion for younger children.

In Chancery, copyholders may be relieved againſt the ill uſage of their lords: incloſures of lands that are common be decreed; and this court may decree money or lands given to charitable uſes: things in action upon aſſignment on conſideration: oblige men to account with each other: avoid the bar of actions, by the ſtatute of limitations, &c. for debts thus barred, are ſtill debts in equity, and the duty remains. Where the money may be conſidered as a depoſitum, and that there was a truſt. 2 Vent. 345. Vide 1 Danv. Abr. 749, 750, &c. 1 Salk. 154.

But in all caſes where the plaintiff can have his remedy at law, he ought not to be relieved in Chancery: and a thing which may be tried by a jury, is not triable in this court. Danv. 763. Alſo long leaſes, as for 1000 years; naked promiſes; verbal agreements not executed; eſtates deriv'd under conceal'd titles, &c. have been refuſed relief in this court: and mortgages are not relievable in equity after twenty years, where no demand has been made, or intereſt paid, or there are not other particular circumſtances, &c. 2 Vent. 340. A bond, where neither the principal nor intereſt hath been demanded in 20 years, will be preſumed in equity to be ſatisfied, and be decreed to be cancelled; and a perpetual injunction may be granted to ſtay proceedings thereon. 1 Ch. Rep. 79. Finch. Rep. 78.

A deed appearing to be cancelled, has been decreed to be a good deed, on ſpecial circumſtances: and a defendant having ſuppreſſed a ſettlement, whereby a remainder in tail was limited, &c. upon proof that the deed came to his hands, the plaintiff had a decree in Chancery to hold the eſtate. 1 Ch. Caſ. 249. 2 Vern. Rep. 380. Articles of agreement upon marriage reduced into writing, though not ſigned by either party, being proved to be agreed to, were decreed to be performed. 2 Vern. 200. Alſo an agreement in writing made ſince the ſtatute of frauds, has been decreed to be diſcharged by parol. 1 Vernon's Rep. 240. An underhand agreement may be ſet aſide as fraudulent: and articles, a deed of conveyance executed, and a fine in purſuance thereof, were ſet aſide in Chancery for fraud, where the party was impoſed upon. Ibid. 205. A deed not fraudulent at firſt, may become ſo afterwards; and if one add a ſeal to a note, which is good without it, he will loſe his ſecurity; and a bill of exchange being gained by fraud, equity will relieve againſt it, and decree that the money ſhall be repaid, &c. 2 Vern. 123, 162.

A releaſe ſhall be avoided for fraud, where there is ſuppreſſio veri, or ſuggeſtio falſi; and a releaſe may be ſet aſide in Chancery by reaſon of the miſapprehenſion of the party that gave it. 1 Vern. Rep. 20, 32. A will concerning lands, may be avoided in a court of equity when obtained by fraud: a mortgage made by a man ſubſequent to his will ſhall be revocation pro tanto only in equity, and not of the whole will, &c. 2 Ch. Rep. 97. An heir may be relieved in equity againſt a contingent contract, made during his father's life, to pay a large ſum of money, if he outlives his father, when it is unconſcionable.

ſcionable. 2 Chan. Rep. 397. And a broker who had made it his buſineſs to ſell goods at extravagant rates to young perſons, to be paid five for one upon the deaths of their fathers, was decreed to deliver up ſecurities thus obtained for great ſums, on payment of what he had really paid to the plaintiff, and for his uſe, &c. 1 Vern. 467.

A purchaſer of land, without notice of an incumbrance, ſhall not be hurt thereby in equity; and in pleading a purchaſe, the defendant ought to deny notice of incumbrances, &c. No intereſt will be allowed in Chancery for book-debts; nor ſhall intereſt money be allowed to be made principal on ſecurities, ſo as to make intereſt upon intereſt, unleſs it be where intereſt money is reduced to a ſtated ſum, &c. 3 Ch. Rep. 65. 1 Vern. 169. 2 Ch. Rep. 286.

It has been held, that the court of Chancery cannot aſſeſs damages for a treſpaſs, &c. but it ought to be aſcertained by a jury at law, and not otherwiſe. 1 Ch. Rep. 230. A bill may be brought for diſcovering the contents of a letter, which would diſcharge the plaintiff of an action at law, before verdict. 3 Ch. Rep. 17. Indentures of apprenticeſhip have been decreed to be delivered up, and the money given with the apprentice to be paid back by the maſter, on ill uſage of the apprentice, &c. Finch Rep. 125. Charity lands being let at a great under-value, as was found by inquiſition, on a commiſſion of charitable uſes, the leaſe was avoided in equity, and the leſſee decreed to pay the arrears in rent according to the firſt value, and to yield up the poſſeſſion. 2 Vern. 415.

A grazier's cattle, driving to London, were diſtrained in grounds for the innkeeper's rent, and in replevin the landlord had judgment at law; but the grazier was relieved in equity againſt it. 2 Vern. Rep. 129. Trials and iſſues at law are frequently directed out of the court of Chancery; and ſometimes it is ordered, that, after trial, the parties ſhall reſort to the court on the equity reſerved, &c. This court will not retain a ſuit for any thing under 10*l.* value, except it be in caſes of charity; nor for lands, &c. under 40*s.* per annnm: and refuſes relief in ſuits where the ſubſtance of them tends to the overthrow of an act of parliament; or any fundamental point of the Common law.

If a man loſes his obligation, he ſhall not be relieved for his debt, being againſt a maxim in law. 1 Danv. 754. And an executor in a court of equity ought not to be compelled to pay legacies before bonds, &c. for this is againſt the common law: ſo in many other caſes. Ibid. 756. And where a man by his own act deſtroys his remedy at law, he ſhall not be relieved in equity: but in caſe of an apparent fraud, or in a dubious caſe in law, of which the party could not have conuſance, relief may be had in equity againſt a ſtatute. Ibid. 755, 759. Defendants may not be regularly relieved in Chancery, after judgment at law; though decrees are made in ſuch caſes: but on perſons being committed for non-performance, they have been formerly diſcharged by habeas corpus. Cro. Eliz. 220. 1 Rol. Rep. 252. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 432.

It is common to give relief in Chancery, notwithſtanding there is an agreement between the parties that there ſhall be no relief in law or equity. 1 Mod. 141, 305. And where a party hath both law and equity on his ſide, it will prevail againſt equity only. 1 Danv. Abr. 773. which vide. If a portion be given to a woman, provided ſhe marries not without conſent of a certain perſon, although ſhe marries without ſuch conſent, ſhe ſhall be relieved in Chancery, and have her portion: but if the portion, on ſuch marriage, had been limited over to another, it would be otherwiſe. 1 Danv. 752. 1 Mod. 300. If a father, on the marriage of his ſon, take a bond of the ſon that he ſhall pay him ſo much, &c. this is void in equity, being adjudged by coercion while he is under the awe of his father. 1 Salk. 158. Alſo where a ſon, without privity of the father, treating the match, gives bond, to return any part of the portion, in equity it is void. Ibid. 156. A man is not bound to diſcover the conſideration of a bond generally given, which in itſelf implies a conſideration. Hard. 200. If a factor to a merchant hath money in his hands, it ſhall be accounted his own; for equity cannot follow money; but it may goods to make them the merchant's, which may be known, though money cannot. 1 Salk. 260.

Money articled to be laid out in land, ſhall be taken as land in equity, and deſcend to the heir. Ibid. 154. Perſonal eſtate in the hands of executors, ſhall be applied in diſcharge of the heir, where there are ſufficient aſſets to pay the debts and legacies. 1 Danv. 770. There ſhall be no bill in equity againſt an executor, to diſcover aſſets before a ſuit commenced at law. Hard. 115. Sed qu. Legal aſſets ſhall be applied in a courſe of adminiſtration; but equitable aſſets amongſt all the creditors proportionably, on a bill brought, &c. 2 Vern. Ch. Rep. 62. Where truſtees convert money raiſed out of land for payment of debts, to their own uſe, the heir ſhall have the land diſcharged, which hath borne its burden, and the truſtees are liable to the debts in equity 1 Salk. 153. If leſſee for years, without impeachment of waſte, about the end of his term cuts down timber-trees, the court of Chancery by injunction may ſtop the cutting down of the trees, it being againſt the public good to deſtroy timber. 1 Rol. Abr. 380. And tenant after poſſibility of iſſue extinct, or for life, diſpuniſhable of waſte, may be ſtopped in equity from pulling down houſes, &c. 1 Danv. 761.

The king cannot create a court of equity at this day; but the ſame muſt be done by act of parliament. 4 Inſt. 84. And though the power of the Chancery is very great, and it may reſtrain other courts that exceed their juriſdiction, and remove ſuits to itſelf by certiorari, yet it is no court of record; and therefore 'tis ſaid can bind the perſon only, and not the eſtate of the defendant, &c. And if he will not obey the decree of the court, he muſt be committed to the Fleet till he does. 1 Danv. Abr. 749.

There are ſeveral ſtatutes relating to the court of Chancery. By 28 Ed. 1. c. 5. The court of Chancery is to follow the king. By the 18 Ed. 3. ſtat. 5. The oaths of the clerks in Chancery are appointed. The Chancellor and Treaſurer may correct errors in the Exchequer. Whoſoever ſhall find himſelf grieved with any ſtatute ſhall have his remedy in Chancery. 36 Ed. 3. c. 9. 31 Ed. 3. ſtat. 1. c. 12. No ſubpœna, or other proceſs of appearance, ſhall iſſue out of Chancery, &c. till after a bill is filed, (except bills for injunctions to ſtay waſte, or ſuits at law commenced), and a certificate thereof brought to the ſubpœna office. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. And for preventing vexatious ſuits, it is enacted, that upon the plaintiff's diſmiſſing his own bill, or the defendant's diſmiſſing the ſame for want of proſecution, the plaintiff ſhall pay to the defendant full coſts, &c. Stat. ibid. Perſons in remainder, or reverſion of any eſtate, after the death of another, on making affidavit in the court of Chancery, that they have cauſe to believe ſuch other perſon dead, and his death concealed by the guardian, truſtees or others, may move the Lord Chancellor to order ſuch guardian, truſtees, &c. to produce the perſon ſuſpected to be concealed; and if he be not produced, he ſhall be taken to be dead, and thoſe in reverſion, &c. may enter upon the eſtate: and if ſuch perſon be abroad, a commiſſion may be iſſued for his being viewed by commiſſioners. Stat. 6 Ann. c. 18.

Infants under the age of twenty-one years, ſeiſed of eſtates in truſt, or by way of mortgage, are enabled by ſtatute to make conveyances thereof; or they may be compelled thereto, by order of the court of Chancery, &c. upon petition and hearing of the parties concerned. 7 Ann. c. 9. See the ſtatute of 4 Geo. 2. c. 10. whereby ideots and lunaticks ſeiſed of eſtates in truſt, &c. may make conveyances by order of the Chancery, &c. By the following acts the power of the maſters was abridged, on their miſemploying the ſuitors money, which is now to be paid into the bank of England: and an additional ſtamp-duty, on writs, proceſſes, &c. is granted for relief of the ſuitors, and as a common ſtock of the court of Chancery. 12 Geo. 1. c. 32. & 33. All orders and decrees made and ſigned by the Maſter of the Rolls, ſhall be deemed and taken to be good and valid orders and decrees of the court of Chancery; but not to be inrolled till ſigned by the Lord Chancellor, and ſubject to reverſal, &c. by him. Stat. 3 Geo. 2. c. 30.

A defendant not appearing after ſubpœna iſſued, but keeping out of the way to avoid being ſerved with the proceſs; on affidavit that he is not to be found, and ſuſpected to be gone beyond ſea, or to abſcond, &c. the court of Chancery may make an order for his appearance at a certain day, a copy of which is to be publiſhed in the Gazette, &c. and then, if he do not appear, the plaintiff's bill ſhall be taken pro confeſſo, and defendant's eſtate ſequeſtered, &c. But perſons out of the kingdom, returning in ſeven years, may have a rehearing in ſix months, and be admitted to anſwer; otherwiſe to be barred, by final decree. 5 Geo. 2. c. 25.

By 12 Geo. 2. c. 24. Part of the ſuitor's caſh is to be placed out at intereſt, for defraying the charge of the Accountant General's office. And ſee 23 Geo. 2. c. 25. for making good deficiencies to the clerk of the hanaper, and for augmenting the income of the Maſter of the Rolls.

By 1 Geo 3. c 1. The king is empowered to grant a ſum not exceeding 5000*l.* per annum to the Chancellor.

By 4 Geo. 3. c. 32. Part of the ſuitor's caſh to be placed at intereſt, to be applied to the Accountant General's third clerk, and other purpoſes.

The proceedings in Chancery are, firſt to file the bill of complaint, ſigned by ſome counſel, ſetting forth the fraud or injury done, or wrong ſuſtained, and praying relief. after the bill is filed, proceſs of ſubpœna iſſues to compel the defendant to appear: and when the defendant appears, he puts in his anſwer to the bill of complaint, if there be no cauſe for plea to the juriſdiction of the court, in diſability of the perſon, or in bar, &c. Then the plaintiff brings his replication, unleſs he files exceptions againſt the anſwer as inſufficient, referring it to a Maſter to report, whether it be ſufficient or not; to which report exceptions may be alſo made. The anſwer, replication, and rejoinder, &c. being ſettled, and the parties come to iſſue, witneſſes are to be examined upon interrogatories, either in court, or by commiſſion in the country, wherein the parties uſually join; and when the plaintiff and defendant have examined their witneſſes, publication is to be made of the depoſitions, and the cauſe is to be ſet down for hearing, after which follows the decree.

If the plaintiff diſmiſſeth his own bill, or the defendant diſmiſſeth it by reaſon of want of proſecution, as already obſerved, or if the decree is in behalf of the defendant, the bill is diſmiſſed with coſts to be taxed by a Maſter. If the defendant doth not appear, on being ſerved with the proceſs of ſubpœna, in order to anſwer, upon affidavit of the ſervice of the writ, an attachment will iſſue out againſt him: and if a non eſt inventus is returned, an attachment with proclamation goes forth againſt him; and if he ſtands further out in contempt, then a commiſſion of rebellion may be iſſued, for apprehending him, and bringing him to the Fleet priſon, in the execution whereof the perſons to whom directed may juſtify breaking open doors. If the defendant ſtands further in contempt, a ſerjeant at arms is to be ſent out to take him; and if he cannot be taken, a ſequeſtration of his land may be obtained till he appears. And if a decree, when made, be not obeyed, being ſerved upon the party under the ſeal of the court, all the aforementioned proceſſes of contempt will iſſue out againſt him, for his impriſonment till he yields obedience to it.

If a bill in Chancery be exhibited againſt a peer, the courſe is for the Lord Chancellor to write a letter to him; and if he doth not put in his anſwer, then a ſubpœna iſſues, and then an order to ſhew cauſe why a ſequeſtration ſhould not go forth; and if he ſtill ſtands out, then a ſequeſtration ſhall be had; for there can be no proceſs of contempt againſt his perſon. Where there is any error in a decree in matter of law, there may be a bill of review, which is in nature of a writ of error; or an appeal to the Houſe of Lords. A party grieved with a decree in Chancery, on petition to the king, it hath been adjudged, that the matter might be referred by the king to the judges, who may reverſe the decree, &c. 3 Bulſt. 116.

But it is now uſual to appeal to the Houſe of Lords; which appeals are to be ſigned by two noted counſel, and exhibited by way of petition: the petition or appeal is lodged with the clerk of the houſe of Lords, and read in the houſe, whereon the appellee is ordered to put in his anſwer, and a day fixed for hearing the cauſe; and after counſel heard and evidence given on both ſides, the lords will affirm or reverſe the decree of the Chancery, and finally determine the cauſe by a majority of votes, &c. Though it is obſerved on an appeal to the Lords from a decree in Chancery, no proofs will be permitted to be read as evidence, which were not made uſe of in the Chancery. Preced. Canc. 212. If a bill be brought where the Lord Chancellor is party to the ſuit, it muſt be directed to the King's Majeſty; for no man may be both judge and party in a cauſe. See Chancellor.

And as to the juriſdiction of the court, its modes of proceeding, and the various caſes wherein it relieves, &c. vide Com. Dig. 2 V. tit. Chancery, where thoſe ſubjects are fully and methodically treated of.

Changer. An officer belonging to the king's mint, whoſe office conſiſts chiefly in exchanging coin for bullion, brought in by merchants or others: it is written after the old way, chaunger. Stat. 2 Hen. 6. cap. 12.

Chanter, (cantator) A ſinger in the choir of a cathedral church; and is uſually applied to the chief of the ſingers. This word is mentioned in 13 Eliz. c. 10. At St. David's cathedral in Wales, the chanter is next to the biſhop; for there is no dean. Camb. Britan.

Chantry, or Chauntry. (cantaria) A little church, chapel, or particular altar, in ſome cathedral church, &c. endowed with lands, or other revenues, for the maintenance of one or more prieſts, daily to ſing maſs, and officiate divine ſervice for the ſouls of the donors, and ſuch others as they appointed. Stat. 37 Hen 8. cap. 4. 1 Ed. 6. cap. 14. and 15 Car. 2. cap. 9. Of theſe chantries mention is made of forty-ſeven belonging to St. Paul's church in London, by Dugdale, in his hiſtory of that church. In an ancient MS. there is this record—— Sciant, &c. quod ego Reginaldus Seuard dedi Willielmo Crumpe capellano Cantariæ beatæ Mariæ de Yarpol, unam parcellam paſturæ, &c. Dat apud Leominſtrie die Martis prox. poſt feſtum Sancti Hilarii, An. 7 Hen. 5.

Chapel. (capella, Fr. chapelle) Is either adjoining to a church, for performing divine ſervice; or ſeparate from the mother-church, where the pariſh is wide, which is commonly called a chapel of eaſe And chapels of eaſe are built for the eaſe of thoſe pariſhioners who dwell far from the parochial church, in prayer and preaching only; for the ſacraments and burials ought to be performed in the parochial church. 2 Rol. Abr. 340.——Ad capellam non pertinet baptiſterium neque ſepultura. Selden of Tithes, p. 265.

Theſe chapels are ſerved by inferior curates, provided at the charge of the rector, &c. And the curates are therefore removable at the pleaſure of the rector or vicar: but chapels of eaſe may be parochial, and have a right to ſacraments and burials, and to a diſtinct miniſter, by cuſtom; (though ſubject in ſome reſpects to the mother-church:) and parochial chapels differ only in name from pariſh churches, but they are ſmall, and the inhabitants within the diſtrict are few. In ſome places chapels of eaſe are endowed with lands or tithes, and in other places by voluntary contributions; and in ſome few diſtricts there are chapels which baptize and adminiſter the ſacraments, and have chapel-wardens; but theſe chapels are not exempted from the viſitation of the ordinary, nor the pariſhioners who reſort thither from contributing to the repairs of the mother-church; eſpecially if they bury there; for the chapel generally belongs to, and is as it were a part of the mother-church; and the pariſhioners are obliged to go to the mother-church, but not to the chapel. 2 Rol. Abr. 289. And hence it is ſaid, that the offerings made to any chapel are to be rendered to the mother-church; unleſs there be a cuſtom that the chaplain ſhall have them.

Public chapels, annexed to pariſh churches, ſhall be repaired by the pariſhioners, as the church is; if any other perſons be not bound to do it. 2 Inſt. 489. Beſides the fore-mentioned chapels, there are free chapels, perpetually maintained and provided with a miniſter, without charge to the rector or pariſh; or that are free and exempt from all ordinary juriſdiction; and theſe are where ſome lands or rents are charitably beſtowed on them, Stat. 37 Hen. 8. cap. 4. 1 Ed. 6. c. 14. There are alſo private chapels, built by noblemen, and others, for private worſhip, in or near their own houſes, maintained at the charge of thoſe noble perſons to whom they belong, and provided with chaplains and ſtipends by them; which may be erected without leave of the biſhop, and need not be conſecrated, though they anciently were ſo, nor are they ſubject to the juriſdiction of the ordinary.

There are likewiſe chapels in the Univerſities, belonging to particular colleges, which, though they are conſecrated, and ſacraments are adminiſtered there, yet they are not liable to the viſitation of the biſhop, but of the founder. 2 Inſt. 363.

Chapelry, (capellania) Is the ſame thing to a chapel, as a pariſh to a church; being the precinct and limits thereof: it is mentioned in the ſtatute 14 Car. 2. c. 9.

Chaperon, (Fr.) A hood or bonnet, anciently worn by the knights of the garter, as part of the habit of that noble order: but in heraldry it is a little eſcutcheon fixed in the forehead of the horſes that draw a hearſe at a funeral. See Stat. 1 R. 2. cap. 17.

Chapiters, (Lat. capitula, Fr. chapitres, i. e. chapters of a book) Signify in our Common law a ſummary of ſuch matters as are to be enquired of, or preſented before juſtices in eyre, juſtices of aſſiſe, or of peace, in their ſeſſions. Britton, cap. 3. uſeth the word in this ſignification: and chapiters are now moſt commonly called articles, and delivered by the mouth of the juſtice in his charge to the inqueſt; whereas, in ancient times, (as appears by Bracton and Britton) they were, after an exhortation given by the juſtices for the good obſervation of the laws and the king's peace, firſt read in open court, and then delivered in writing to the grand inqueſt, for their better obſervance; and the grand jury were to anſwer upon their oaths to all the articles thus delivered them, and not put the judges to long and learned charges to little or no purpoſe, for want of remembring the ſame, as they do now, when they think their duty well enough performed, if they only preſent thoſe few of many miſdemeanors which are brought before them by way of indictment.

It is to be wiſhed that this order of delivering written articles to grand juries were ſtill obſerved, whereby crimes would be more effectually puniſhed: in ſome inferior courts, as the court leet, &c. in ſeveral parts of England, it is uſual at this day for ſtewards of thoſe courts to deliver their charges in writing to the juries ſworn to enquire of offences. Horne, in his Mirror of juſtices, expreſſes what thoſe articles were wont to contain. Lib. 3. cap. des Articles in Eyre. And an example of articles of this kind, you may find in the book of aſſiſes. F. 138.

Chaplain, (capellanus) Is moſt commonly taken for one that is depending upon the king, or other noble perſon, to inſtruct him and his family, and ſay divine ſervice in his houſe, where there is uſually a private chapel for that purpoſe. The king, queen, prince, princeſs, &c. may retain as many chaplains as they pleaſe; and the king's chaplains may hold any number of benefices of the king's gift, as the king ſhall think fit to beſtow upon them.

An archbiſhop may retain eight chaplains; a duke, or a biſhop, ſix; marquis or earl, five; viſcount, four; baron, knight of the garter, or lord chancellor, three; a dutcheſs, marchioneſs, counteſs, baroneſs, the treaſurer, and controller of the king's houſe, the king's ſecretary, dean of the chapel, almoner, and maſter of the rolls, each of them two; the chief juſtice of the king's bench, &c. one; all which may purchaſe a licence or diſpenſation, and take two benefices with cure of ſouls. Stat. 22 Hen. 8. cap. 13.

Alſo every judge of the King's Bench and Common Pleas; and chancellor and chief baron of the Exchequer, and the king's attorney and ſolicitor general, may each of them have one chaplain, attendant on his perſon, having one benefice with cure, who may be non-reſident on the ſame, by Stat. 25 Hen. 8. cap. 16.

And the groom of the ſtole, treaſurer of the king's chamber, and chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaſter, may retain each one chaplain. Stat. 33 Hen. 8. cap. 28. If a nobleman hath his full number of chaplains allowed by law, and retains one more, who has diſpenſation to hold plurality of livings, it is not good. Cro. Eliz. 723.

A perſon retaining a chaplain, muſt not only be capable thereof at the time of granting the inſtrument of retainer, but he muſt continue capable of qualifying till his chaplain is advanced: and therefore if a duke, earl, &c. retain a chaplain, and die; or if ſuch a noble perſon be attainted of treaſon; or if an officer, qualified to retain a chaplain, is removed from his office, the retainer is determined: but where a chaplain hath taken a ſecond benefice before his lord dieth, or is attainted, &c. the retainer is in force to qualify him to enjoy the benefices.

And if a woman that is noble by marriage, afterwards marries one under the degree of nobility, her power to retain chaplains will be determined; though it is otherwiſe where a woman is noble by deſcent, if ſhe marry under degree of nobility, for in ſuch caſe her retainer before or after marriage is good. A baroneſs, &c. during the coverture, may not retain chaplains; if ſhe doth, the lord, her huſband, may diſcharge them, as likewiſe her former chaplains, before their advancement. 4 Rep. 118.

A chaplain muſt be retained by letters teſtimonial under hand and ſeal, or he is not a chaplain within the ſtatute; ſo that it is not enough for a ſpiritual perſon to be retained by word only to be a chaplain, by ſuch perſon as may qualify by the ſtatutes to hold livings, &c. although he abide and ſerve as chaplain in the family. And where a nobleman hath retained and thus qualified his number of chaplains, if he diſmiſſes them from their attendance upon any diſpleaſure, after they are preferred, yet they are his chaplains at large, and may hold their livings during their lives; and ſuch nobleman, though he may retain other chaplains in his family, meerly as chaplains, he cannot qualify any others to hold pluralities while the firſt are living: for if a nobleman could diſcharge his chaplain when advanced, to qualify another in his place, and qualify other chaplains, during the lives of chaplains diſcharged, by theſe means he might advance as many chaplains as he would, whereby the ſtatutes would be evaded. 4 Rep. 90.

Chapter, (capitulum) Is a congregation of clergymen under the dean in a cathedral church: congregatio clericorum in eccleſia cathedrali, conventuali, regulari vel collegiata. This collegiate company is metaphorically termed capitulum, ſignifying a little head, it being a kind of head, not only to govern the dioceſe in the vacation of the biſhoprick, but alſo in many things to adviſe and aſſiſt the biſhop when the ſee is full, for which, with the dean, they form a council. Co. Lit. 103. The chapter conſiſts of prebends or canons, which are ſome of the chief men of the church, and therefore are called capita eccleſiæ: they are a ſpiritual corporation aggregate, which they cannot ſurrender without leave of the biſhop, becauſe he hath an intereſt in them; they, with the dean, have power to confirm the biſhop's grants; during the vacancy of an archbiſhoprick, they are guardians of the ſpiritualities, and as ſuch have authority by the Stat. 25 Hen. 8. cap. 21. to grant diſpenſations; likewiſe as a corporation they have power to make leaſes, &c.

When the dean and chapter confirm grants of the biſhop, the dean joins with the chapter, and there muſt be the conſent of the major part; which conſent is to be expreſſed by their fixing of their ſeal to the deed, in one place, and at one time, either in the chapter-houſe, or ſome other place; and this conſent is the will of many joined together. Dyer 233. A chapter is not capable to take by purchaſe or gift, without the dean, who is the head of the body: but there may be a chapter without a dean, as the chapter of the collegiate church of Southwell; and grants by or to them are as effectual as other grants by dean and chapter. Yet where there are chapters without deans, they are not properly chapters: and the chapter in a collegiate church, where there is no epiſcopal ſee, as at Weſtminſter and Windſor, is more properly called a college.

Chapters are ſaid to have their beginning before deans; and formerly the biſhop had the rule and ordering of things without a dean and chapter, which were conſtituted afterwards; and all the miniſters within his dioceſe were as his chapter, to aſſiſt him in ſpiritual matters. 2 Rol.

Rep. 454. 3 Co. 75. The biſhop hath a power of viſiting the dean and chapter: but the dean and chapter have nothing to do with what the biſhop tranſacts as ordinary. 3 Rep. 75. Though the biſhop and chapter are but one body, yet their poſſeſſions are for the moſt part divided; as the biſhop hath his part in right of his biſhoprick; the dean hath a part in right of his deanery; and each prebendary hath a certain part in right of his prebend; and each too is incorporated by himſelf.

Deans and chapters have ſome of them eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction in ſeveral pariſhes, (beſides that authority they have within their own body), executed by their officials; alſo temporal juriſdiction in ſeveral manors belonging to them, in the ſame manner as biſhops, where their ſtewards keep courts, &c. 2 Rol. Abr. 229. It has been obſerved, that though the chapter have diſtinct parcels of the biſhop's eſtate aſſigned for their maintenance, the biſhop hath little more than a power over them in his viſitations, and is ſcarce allowed to nominate half of thoſe to their prebends, who were originally of his family: but of common right it is ſaid he is their patron. Rol. ibid.

Charge of juſtices in ſeſſions, &c. See Chapiters, or Chapitres.

Charge and Diſcharge, A charge is ſaid to be a thing done that bindeth him that doth it, or that which is his, to the performance thereof: and diſcharge is the removal, or taking away of that charge. Terms de Ley. Land may be charged divers ways; as by grant of rent out of it, by ſtatutes, judgments, conditions, warranties, &c. Lands in fee-ſimple may be charged in fee; and where a man may diſpoſe of the land itſelf, he may charge it by a rent, or ſtatute, one way or other. Lit. ſect. 648. Moor Ca. 129. Dyer 10. If one charge land in tail, and land in fee-ſimple, and die; the land in fee only ſhall be chargeble. Bro. Cha. 9.

Lands intailed may be charged in fee, if the eſtate-tail be cut off by recovery: if tenant in tail charge the land, and after levy a fine or ſuffer a recovery of the lands, to his own uſe; this confirms the charge, and it ſhall continue. 1 Co. Rep. 61. A tenant for life charges the land, and then makes a feoffment to a ſtranger, or doth waſte, &c. whereby it is forfeited, he in reverſion ſhall hold it charged during his (the tenant's) life: and if one have a leaſe for life or years of land, and grant a rent out of it; if after he ſurrenders his eſtate, yet the charge ſhall continue ſo long as the eſtate had endured, in caſe it had not been ſurrendered. 1 Rep. 67, 145. Dyer 10.

If one jointenant charge land, and after releaſe to his companion and die, the ſurvivor ſhall hold it charged: but if it had come to him by ſurvivorſhip, it would be otherwiſe. 6 Rep. 76. 1 Shep. Abr. 325. He that hath a remainder or reverſion of land, may charge it; becauſe of the poſſibility that the land will come into poſſeſſion, and then the poſſeſſion ſhall be charged. But where one leaſes land for life, and grants the reverſion or remainder over to A. B. who charges the land, and dies, and the tenant for life is heir to the fee; in this caſe he ſhall hold it diſcharged, for he had the poſſeſſion by purchaſe, though he had the fee by diſcent. Bro. 11, 16. 1 Rep. 62.

If a rent be iſſuing out of a houſe, &c. and it falls down, the charge ſhall remain upon the ſoil. 9 E. 4. 20. But when the eſtate is gone upon which the charge was grounded, there generally the charge is determined. Co. Lit. 349. And in all caſes where any executory thing is created by deed, there by conſent of all the parties it may be by deed defeated and diſcharged. 10 Rep. 49. Vide Diſcharge.

Charitable Corporation. A ſociety of perſons in the late reign obtained a ſtatute to lend-money to induſtrious poor, at 5 l. per cent. intereſt on pawns and pledges, to prevent their falling into the hands of the pawn-brokers, and therefore they were called the Charitable Corporation: but they likewiſe took 5 l. per cent. for the charge of officers, warehouſes, &c. And in the fifth year of King Geo. 2. the chief officers of this corporation, by connivance of the principal directors, abſconded and broke, and defrauded the public proprietors of great ſums; for relief of the ſufferers wherein, as to part of their loſſes, ſeveral ſtatutes were made and enacted. See Stat. 5 Geo. 2. cap. 31, 32. 7 Geo. 2. cap. 11.

Charks, Are pit-coal when charred or charked, ſo called in Worceſterſhire; as ſea-coal thus prepared at Newcaſtle is called coke

Charre of Lead, Is a quantity of lead conſiſting of thirty pigs, each pig containing ſix ſtone wanting two pounds, and every ſtone being twelve pounds.—La charre de plumbo conſtat ex 30 fotinellis, & quælibet fotinella continet 6 petras, exceptis duabus libris, & quælibet petra conſtat ex 12 libris. Aſſiſa de ponderibus. Rob. 3. R. Scot. cap. 22.

Charta, A word made uſe of not only for a charter, for the holding an eſtate; but alſo a ſtatute. See Magna Charta.

Charte, A card, chart, or plan which mariners uſe at ſea, mentioned 14 Car. 2. cap. 33.

Chartel, (Fr. cartel) A letter of defiance, or challenge to a ſingle combat; in uſe heretofore to decide difficult controverſies at law, which could not otherwiſe be determined. Blount.

Charter, (Lat. charta, Fr. chartres, i. e. inſtrumenta) Is taken in our law for written evidence of things done between man and man: whereof Bracton, lib. 2. cap. 26. ſays thus, Fiunt aliquando donationes in ſcriptis, ſicut in chartis, ad perpetuam rei memoriam, propter brevem hominum vitam, &c. And Britton, in his 39th chapter, divides charters into thoſe of the king, and thoſe of private perſons. Charters of the king are thoſe whereby the king paſſeth any grant to any perſon or body politick; as a charter of exemption, of privilege, &c.

Charter of pardon, whereby a man is forgiven a felony, or other offence committed againſt the king's crown and dignity; and of theſe there are ſeveral ſorts, viz. charta pardonationis utlagariæ, charta pardonationis ſe defendendo, &c. and others mentioned in Reg Writs 287, 288, &c. Charter of the foreſt, wherein the laws of the foreſt are compriſed, ſuch as the charter of Canutus, &c. Kitch. 314. Fleta, lib. 3. c. 14.

Charters of private perſons are deeds and inſtruments for the conveyance of lands, &c. And the purchaſer of lands ſhall have all the charters, deeds and evidences as incident to the ſame, and for the maintenance of his title. Co. Lit. 6. Charters belong to a feoffee, although they be not ſold to him, where the feoffor is not bound to a general warranty of the land; for there they ſhall belong to the feoffor, if they be ſealed deeds or wills in writing: but other charters go to the tertenant. Moor Ca. 687. The charters belonging to the feoffor in caſe of warranty the heir ſhall have, though he hath no land by diſcent, for the poſſibility of diſcent after. 1 Rep. 1. See Magna Charta.

Charterer, In Cheſhire, a freeholder is called by this name. Sir P. Ley's Antiq. fol. 356.

Charter-Governments in America. Our colonies, with reſpect to their interior policy, are properly of three ſorts.

1. Provincial eſtabliſhments, the conſtitutions of which depend on the reſpective commiſſions iſſued by the crown to the governors, and the inſtructions which uſually accompany thoſe commiſſions; under the authority of which, provincial aſſemblies are conſtituted, with the power of making local ordinances, not repugnant to the laws of England.

2. Proprietary governments, granted out by the crown to individuals, in the nature of feudatory principalities, with all the inferior regalities, and ſubordinate powers of legiſlation, which formerly belonged to the owners of counties palatine: yet ſtill with theſe expreſs conditions, that the ends for which the grant was made be ſubſtantially purſued, and that nothing be attempted which may derogate from the authority of the mother country.

3. Charter governments, in the nature of civil corporations, with the power of making by-laws, for their own interior regulation, not contrary to the laws of England; and with ſuch rights and authorities as are ſpecially given them in their ſeveral charters of incorporation.

The form of government in moſt of them is borrowed from that of England. They have a governor named by the king (or in ſome proprietary colonies by the proprietor) who is his repreſentative or deputy; they alſo have courts of juſtice of their own, from whoſe deciſions an appeal lies to the king and council here in England.

Their general aſſemblies which are their houſe of commons, together with their council of ſtate, being their upper houſe, with the concurrence of the king, or his repreſentative the governor, make laws ſuited to their own emergency. Such is the account given by Blackſtone in his Com. 1 V. 108.

As to the appeal it may not be improper to obſerve, that we conceive it is only in the nature of a reference, by way of arbitration; the parties entering into bond in America, to abide by the determination of the king in council here, as the editor (J. M.) hath been informed by a gentlemen well acquainted with the ſubject.

Charter-land, (terra per chartam) Is ſuch as a man holds by charter, that is by evidence in writing otherwiſe called freehold. Anno 19 H. 7. cap. 13. This in the time of the Saxons was called bockland, which was held (according to Lambard) with more commodious and eaſy conditions than folkland was, i. e. lands held without writing; becauſe that was hæreditaria, libera atque immunis; whereas, fundus ſine ſcripto cenſum penſitabat annuum, atque officiorum quadam ſervitute eſt obligatus: priorem viri plerumq; (nobiles, atque ingenui; poſteriorem ruſtici fere & pagani poſſidebant: illam nos vulgo freehold & per chartam; hanc ad voluntatem domini appellamus. Lamb. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 90.

Charter-party, (Lat. charta partita, Fr. chartre parti, i. e. a deed or writing divided) Is what among merchants and ſea-faring men we commonly call a pair of indentures, containing the covenants and agreements made between them, touching their merchandize and maritime affairs. 2 Inſt. 673. And charter-parties of affreightment ſettle agreements, as to the cargo of ſhips, and bind the maſter to deliver the goods in good condition at the place of diſcharge, according to agreement; and the maſter ſometimes obliges himſelf, ſhip, tackle and furniture, for performance.

The Common-law conſtrues charter-parties, as near as may be, according to the intention of them, and not according to the literal ſenſe of traders, or thoſe that merchandiſe by ſea, but they muſt be regularly pleaded. In covenant by charter-party, that the ſhip ſhould return to the river of Thames, by a certain time, dangers of the ſea excepted, and after in the voyage, and within the time of the return, the ſhip was taken upon the ſea by pirates, ſo that the maſter could not return at the time mentioned in the agreement; it was adjudged that this impediment was within the exception of the charter-party, which extends as well to any danger upon the ſea by pirates and men of war, as dangers of the ſea by ſhip-wreck, tempeſt, &c. Stile 132. 2 Rol. Abr. 248.

A ſhip is freighted at ſo much per month that ſhe ſhall be out, covenanted to be paid after her arrival at the port of London; the ſhip is caſt away coming up from the Downs, but the lading is all preſerved, the freight ſhall in this caſe be paid; for the money becomes due monthly by the contract, and the place mentioned is only to aſcertain where the money is to be paid, and the ſhip is intitled to wages, like a mariner that ſerves by the month, who if he dies in the voyage, his executors are to be anſwered pro rata. Mólloy de Jur. Maritim. 260. If a part-owner of a ſhip refuſe to join with the other owners in ſetting out of the ſhip, he ſhall not be intitled to his ſhare of the freight; but by the courſe of the admiralty the other owners ought to give ſecurity if the ſhip periſh in the voyage, to make good to the owner ſtanding out his ſhare of the ſhip. Sir Lionel Jenkins, in a caſe of this nature, certified that by the law marine and courſe of the admiralty, the plaintiff was to have no ſhare of the freight; and that it was ſo in all places, for otherwiſe there would be no navigation. Lex Mercat. 100. See Freight.

Chartis Reddendis, Is a writ which lies againſt him that hath charters of feoffment entruſted to his keeping, and refuſeth to deliver them. Reg. Orig. 159.

Chaſe, (Fr. chaſſe) In its general ſignification is a great quantity of woody ground lying open, and privileged for wild beaſts and wild fowl: and the beaſts of chaſe properly extend to the buck, doe, fox, &c. and in common and legal ſenſe to all the beaſts of the foreſt. Co. Lit. 233. But if one have a chaſe within a foreſt, and he kill or hunt any ſtag or red deer, or other beaſts of the foreſt, he is fineable. 1 Jones's Rep. 278.

A chaſe is of a middle nature between a foreſt and a park, being commonly leſs than a foreſt, and not endowed with ſo many liberties, as the courts of attachment, ſwainmote, and juſtice-ſeat; though of a larger compaſs, and ſtored with greater diverſity both of keepers, and wild beaſts or game, than a park.

A chaſe differs from a foreſt in this, becauſe it may be in the hands of a ſubject, which a foreſt in its proper and true nature cannot; and from a park, in that it is not encloſed, and hath a greater compaſs, and more variety of game, and officers likewiſe. Crompt. in his Juriſd. fol. 148. ſays a foreſt cannot be in the hands of a ſubject, but it forthwith loſeth its name, and becomes a chaſe: but fol. 197. he ſays, a ſubject may be lord and owner of a foreſt, which though it ſeems a contradiction, yet both ſayings are in ſome ſort true; for the king may give or alienate a foreſt to a ſubject, ſo as when it is once in the ſubject, it loſeth the true property of a foreſt, becauſe the courts called the juſtice-ſeat, ſwainmote, &c. do forthwith vaniſh, none being able to make a Lord Chief Juſtice in Eyre of the foreſt, but the king, yet it may be granted in ſo large a manner, as there may be attachment, ſwainmote, and a court equivalent to a juſtice-ſeat. Manwood, part 2. c. 3, 4.

A foreſt and a chaſe may have different officers and laws: every foreſt is a chaſe, & quiddam amplius; but any chaſe is not a foreſt. A chaſe is ad communem legem, and not to be guided by the foreſt laws; and it is the ſame of parks. 4 Inſt 314. A man may have a free chaſe as belonging to his manor in his own woods, as well as a warren and a park in his own grounds; for a chaſe, warren and park are collateral inheritances, and not iſſuing out of the ſoil; and therefore if a perſon hath a chaſe in other men's grounds, and after purchaſeth the grounds, the chaſe remaineth. Ibid. 318. If a man have freehold in a free chaſe, he may cut his timber and wood growing upon it, without view or licence of any; though it is not ſo of a foreſt: but if he cut ſo much that there is not ſufficient for covert, and to maintain the game, he ſhall be puniſhed at the ſuit of the king, and ſo if a common perſon hath a chaſe in another's ſoil, the owner of the ſoil cannot deſtroy all the covert, but ought to leave ſufficient thereof, and alſo browſewood, as hath been accuſtomed. 11 Rep. 22. And it has been adjudged, that within ſuch chaſe, the owner of the ſoil by preſcription may have common for his ſheep, and warren for his conies, but he cannot ſurcharge with more than has been uſual, nor make coney-burrows in other places than hath been uſed. Ibid. If a free chaſe be incloſed, it is ſaid to be a good cauſe of ſeizure into the king's hands.

It is not lawful to make a chaſe, park or warren, without licence from the king under the broad ſeal. See Black. Com. 2 V. 38, 416. 4 V. 408.

Chaſor, An hunting horſe.—Dederunt mihi unum chaſorem, &c. Leg. Will. 1. cap. 22. And in another chapter it is written eacorem.

Chaſtellaine, A noble woman: quaſi caſtelli domina.

Chaſtity. The Roman law (Ff. 48, 8. 1.) juſtifies homicide in defence of the chaſtity either of one's ſelf or relations; and ſo alſo, according to Selden, (de Legib. Hebræor. l. 4. c. 3.) ſtood the law in the Jewiſh republick. The Engliſh law likewiſe juſtifies a woman, killing one who attempts to raviſh her. (Bac. Elem. 34. 1 Hawk. P. C. 71.) So the huſband or father may juſtify killing a man, who attempts a rape upon his wife or daughter; but not if he takes them in adultery by conſent, for the one is forcible and felonious, but not the other. 1 Hal. P. C. 485, 6.

And without doubt the forcibly attempting a crime, of a ſtill more deteſtable nature, may be equally reſiſted by the death of the unnatural aggreſſor. For the one uniform principle, that runs through our own and all other laws, ſeems to be this; that where a crime, in itſelf capital, is endeavoured to be committed by force, it is lawful to repel that force by the death of the party attempting. Black. Com. 4 V. 181.

Chattels, or Catals, (catalla) Comprehend all goods moveable and immoveable, except ſuch as are in nature of freehold, or parcel of it. The Normans call moveable goods only, chattels; but this word by the Common law extends to all moveable and immoveable goods: and the Civilians denominate not only what we call chattels, but alſo land, bona. But no eſtate of inheritance or freehold, can be termed in our law goods and chattels; though a leaſe for years may paſs as goods.

Chattels are either perſonal or real: perſonal, as gold, ſilver, plate, jewels, houſhold-ſtuff, goods and wares in a ſhop, corn ſown on the ground, carts, ploughs, coaches, ſaddles, &c. Cattle, &c. as horſes, oxen, kine, bullocks, ſheep, pigs, and all tame fowls and birds, ſwans, turkeys, geeſe, poultry, &c. and theſe are called perſonal in two reſpects, one becauſe they belong immediately to the perſon of a man; and the other, for that being any way injuriouſly with-held from us, we have no means to recover them but by perſonal action.

Chattels real are ſuch as either appertain not immediately to the perſon, but to ſome other thing by way of dependency, as a box with charters of land, &c. or ſuch as are iſſuing out of ſome immoveable thing to a perſon, as a leaſe, or rent for term of years: and chattels real, concern the realty, lands and tenements, leaſes for years, intereſt in advowſons, in ſtatutes merchant, &c. And alſo include corn cut, trees cut, &c. Co. Lit. 118. Noy's Max. 49.

But deeds relating to a freehold, obligation, &c. which are things in action, are not reckoned under goods and chattels; though if writings are pawned, they may be chattels: and money hath not been accounted goods or chattels; nor are hawks or hounds ſuch, being feræ naturæ. 8 Rep. 33. Terms de Ley 103. Kitch. 32.

A collar of SS. garter of gold, buttons, &c. belonging to the dreſs of a knight of the garter, are not jewels to paſs by that name in perſonal eſtate, but enſigns of honour. Dyer 59. The law will not ſuffer the deviſe of a perſonal chattel, with a remainder over; but a deviſe of a chattel real, with remainder over, hath been in ſome caſes adjudged in good equity. 2 And. 185. The uſe of perſonal things, ſuch as plate, jewels, &c. may be given to one, and the remainder to another; and in that caſe the property is veſted in the laſt deviſee. Owen 33. But a deviſe for the uſe of money has been adjudged a deviſe of the money itſelf; and ſo a deviſe of the uſe of books, medals, &c. and limitations over have been declared void. 1 Chan. Rep. 129. 2 Chan. Rep. 167.

Chattels perſonal are, immediately upon the death of the teſtator, in the actual poſſeſſion of the executor, as the law will adjudge, though they are at never ſo great a diſtance from him; chattels real, as leaſes for years of houſes, lands, &c. are not in the poſſeſſion of the executor till he makes an entry, or hath recovered the ſame; except there be a leaſe for years of tithes, where no entry can be made. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 437.

Leaſes for years, though for a thouſand years; leaſes at will, eſtates of tenants by elegit, &c. are chattels, and ſhall go to the executor: all obligations, bills, ſtatutes, recogniſances and judgments, ſhall be as a chattel in the executors, &c. Bro. Obl. 18. F. N. B. 120.

But if one be ſeiſed of land in fee on which trees and graſs grow, the heir ſhall have theſe, and not the executor; for they are not chattels till they are cut and ſevered, but parcel of the inheritance. 4 Rep. 63. Dyer 273. The game of a park with the park, fiſh in the pond, and doves in the houſe with the houſe, go to the heir, &c. and are not chattels: though if pigeons, or deer, are tame, or kept alive in a room; or if fiſh be in a trunk, &c. they go to the executors as chattels. Noy 124. 11 Rep. 50. Keilw. 88.

An owner of chattels is ſaid to be poſſeſſed of them; as of freehold the term is, that a perſon is ſeiſed of the ſame.

Chaud-medley, Is of pretty much the ſame import with chance-medley. The former, in its etymology, ſignifies an affray in the heat of blood, or paſſion; the latter, a caſual affray. The latter is in common ſpeech too often erroneouſly applied to any manner of homicide by miſadventure; whereas it appears by the Stat. 24 H. 8. c. 5. and our ancient books, (Staundf. P. C. 16.) that it is properly applied to ſuch killing, as happens in ſelf-defence, upon ſudden recounter. 3 Inſt. 55, 57. Foſter 275, 6. Black. Com. 4 V. 184.

Chaumpert, A kind of tenure mentioned Pat. 35 Ed. 3. To the hoſpital of Bowes in the iſle of Guernſey. Blount.

Chauntry-rents, Are rents paid to the crown by the ſervants or purchaſers of chauntry-lands. 22 Car. 2. c. 6.

Cheats, Are deceitful practices in defrauding or endeavouring to defraud another of his known right, by means of ſome artful device, contrary to the plain rules of common honeſty; as by playing with falſe dice; or by cauſing an illiterate perſon to execute a deed to his prejudice, by reading it over to him in words different from thoſe in which it was written; or by perſuading a woman to execute writings to another as her truſtee, upon an intended marriage, which in truth contained no ſuch thing, but only a warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment; or by ſuppreſſing a will; and ſuch like. 1 Hawk. 188.

Stat. 33 H. 8. cap. 1. ſect. 2. If any perſon falſly and deceitfully get into his hands or poſſeſſion any money or other things of any other perſons by colour of any falſe token, &c. being convicted ſhall have ſuch puniſhment by impriſonment, ſetting upon the pillory, or by any corporal pain (except pains of death) as ſhall be adjudged by the perſons before whom he ſhall be convict. See the Statute.

Lord Coke obſerves hereupon, that for this offence the offender cannot be fined, but corporal pain only inflicted. 3 Inſt. 133.

But Mr. Serjeant Hawkins (p. 188.) obſerves that a perſon has been fined 500*l.* for this offence.

As there are frauds which may be relieved civilly, and not puniſhed criminally (with the complaints whereof the courts of equity do generally abound); ſo there are other frauds, which in a ſpecial caſe may not be helped civilly, and yet ſhall be puniſhed criminally. Thus, if a minor goes about the town, and pretending to be of age, defrauds many perſons, by taking credit for a conſiderable quantity of goods, and then inſiſting on his nonage; the perſons injured cannot recover the value of their goods, but they may indict and puniſh him for a common cheat. Barl. 100.

By 30 Geo. 2. c. 24. Perſons convicted of obtaining money or goods by falſe pretences, or of ſending threatening letters in order to extort money or goods, may be puniſhed by fine and impriſonment, or by pillory, whipping, or tranſportation. Vide Black. Com. 4 V. 157, 173.

Check-Roll, Is a roll or book containing the names of ſuch as are attendants on, and in pay to the King or other great perſonages, as their houſhold ſervants. Stat. 19 Car. 2. cap. 1. It is otherwiſe called the checquer roll, and ſeems to take its etymology from the Exchequer. 14 Hen. 8. c. 13.

Chelindra, A ſort of ſhip.——Obligavit ſe imperator ad 100 chelindras & 50 galleias ducendas ultra mare. Mat. Paris, anno 1238.

Chelſea, A College erected at Chelſea, and a trench made to convey water from the river Lee to London, to maintain the ſame, by Stat. 7 Jac. 1. c. 9. By late ſtatutes concerning the army, one day's pay in a year is to be deducted out of every officer and ſoldier's pay, for Chelſea Hoſpital. Stat. K. Will. Q. Ann. and K. Geo. 1. and 2.

Cheſt, An uncertain quantity of merchandize, wine, &c.

Cheſter. Where felony, &c. is committed by any inhabitant of the palatine of Cheſter, in another county, proceſs ſhall be made to the exigent where the offence was done, and if the offender then fly into the county of Cheſter, the outlawry ſhall be certified to the officers there. 1 H. 4. c. 18. The ſeſſions for the county palatine of Cheſter, is to be kept twice in the year, at Michaelmas and Eaſter: And juſtices of peace, &c. in Cheſter ſhall be nominated by the Lord Chancellor. Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 5. 32 H. 8. c. 43. Recogniſances of ſtatutes merchant may be acknowledged, and fines levied before the Mayor of Cheſter, &c. for lands lying there. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 31. But no writ of protection ſhall be granted in the county palatine. See County. Palatine. And Black. Com. 1 V. 116. 3 V. 78.

Chevage, (chevagium, from the Fr. chef, i. e. caput) Is a tribute or ſum of money formerly paid by ſuch as held lands in villenage to their lords in acknowledgment, and was a kind of head or poll money. Of which Bracton, lib. 1. cap. 10. ſays thus; Chevagium dicitur recognitio in ſignum ſubjectionis & dominii de capite ſuo. Lambard writes this word chivage; but it is more properly cheiſage: and anciently the Jews, whilſt they were admitted to live in England, paid chevage or poll money to the King, as appears by Pat. 8 Ed. 1. par. 1. It ſeems alſo to be uſed for a ſum of money, yearly given to a man of power for his protection, as a chief head or leader: but the Lord Coke ſays, that in this ſignification, it is a great miſpriſion for a ſubject to take ſums of money, or other gifts yearly of any, in name of chevage, becauſe they take upon them to be their chief heads or leaders. Co. Lit. 140.

Chevantia, A loan or advance of money upon credit; Fr. chavarice, goods, ſtock.——Idem prioratus pene deſtructus, & poſſeſſionis ſuæ ad plurimos terminos pro plurimis chevantiis alienatæ exiſtunt. Mon. Ang. Tom. 1. pag. 629.

Cheveril, (cheverillus) A young cock, or cockling. Pat. 15 H. 3.

Cheviſance, (from the Fr. chevir, i. e. Venir a chief de quelque choſe, to come to the head or end of a buſineſs) Signifies an agreement or compoſition made; an end or order ſet down between a creditor or debtor; or ſometimes an indirect gain in point of uſury, &c. In our ſtatutes it is often mentioned, and moſt commonly uſed for an unlawful bargain or contract. Stat 37 Hen. 8. c. 9 13 Eliz. c. 5 & 8. 21 Jac. 1. c. 17. and 12 Car. 2. c. 13. Chevitiæ, and Cheviſcæ, Are heads of ploughed lands, Novem acras terræ cum cheviſcis ad ipſas pertinentibus. Mon. Angl. Tom. 2. f. 116.

Chief Rents, The rents of freeholders of manors often ſo called, i. e. reditus capitales.—They are alſo denominated quit-rents, quieti reditus; becauſe thereby the tenant goes quit and free of all other ſervices. Black. Com. 2 V. 42.

Chief Pledge, (plegius vel vas capitalis) Mentioned 20 Hen. 6. c. 8. See Borough-head and Borough-holder.

Chief (Tenants in) Tenants in capite, holding immediately under the King, in right of his crown and dignity. Black. Com. 2 V. 60.

Children, Are in law a man's iſſue begotten on his wife. In caſe land be given by will to a man and his children, who has ſuch alive, the deviſee takes only an eſtate for life; but if there be no child living, it is held to be an eſtate-tail. 1 Vent. 214, 225. Sed qu. as to the firſt poſition, for the intent of the teſtator ſhould be conſidered. A deviſe to one's children, prima facie, refers only to ſuch as are alive at the time of making the will; though were the ſame to children living at his death, a child in ventre ſa mere, may be looked upon as living. 1 Peer Williams 244, 342. Alſo a ſon with which a wife is priviment enſient, is adjudged living at the time of the teſtator's death, to prevent an eſtate going over to another, &c. Ibid. 486.

If a ſum of money is given in truſt for the children of another perſon, and he had only one child and ſeveral grand-children, the child only ſhall take; yet it is ſaid if ſuch perſon had not any child living, the grandchildren might have taken by the name of children. 2 Vern. 106. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 202.

A father being about to make his will, and thereby intending to have made proviſions for his younger children; his ſon and heir diſſuaded him from doing it, and promiſed that he would take care his brothers and ſiſters ſhould have the proviſions; upon which the father forbore making them, and they were decreed in Chancery againſt the heir; his promiſe being a fraud. Preced. Canc. 4. Childwit, (Sax.) Is a fine or penalty of a bond-woman unlawfully begotten with child: *Prior habeat gerſumam de nativa ſua impregnata ſine licentia maritandi. Ex. Reg. Chimin, (Fr. chemin i. e. via) In law phraſe is a way; which is of two ſorts; the King's highway, and a private way.

The King's highway, (chiminus regius) is that in which the King's ſubjects and all others under his protection, have free liberty to paſs, though the property of the ſoil where the way lies, belongs to ſome private perſon.

A private way is that in which one man or more have liberty to paſs through the ground of another, by preſcription or charter; and this is divided into chimin in groſs, and chimin appendant.

Chimin in groſs is where a perſon holds a way principally and ſolely in itſelf.

Chimin appendant is that way which a man hath as appurtenant to ſome other thing: as if he rent a cloſe or paſture, with covenant for ingreſs and egreſs through ſome other ground in which otherwiſe he might not paſs. Kitch. 117. Co. Lit. 56.

It is ſaid a way may not be claimed by preſcription as appendant or appurtenant to an houſe, becauſe it is only an eaſement and no intereſt; but a perſon may preſcribe for a way from his houſe through a certain cloſe, &c. to church, though he himſelf hath lands next adjoining to his ſaid houſe, through which of neceſſity he muſt firſt paſs; for the general preſcription ſhall be applied only to the lands of others. Yelv. 159. 1 Danv. Abr. 785. See Appendant, Appurtenant, and Highway.

Moſt undoubtedly a man may preſcribe for a way from his houſe, over the land of another to church, to a river, to a town, &c. and back again, as appertaining, &c. See the form of preſcribing for a way in any of the antient books of Entries.

Chiminage, (chiminagium) Is toll due by cuſtom for having a way through a foreſt; and in ancient records it is ſometimes called pedagium. Cromp. Juriſd. 189. Co. Chirograph, (chirographum, or ſcriptum chirographatum) Any public inſtrument of gift or conveyance, atteſted by the ſubſcription and croſſes of witneſſes, was in the time of the Saxons called chirographum; which being ſomewhat changed in form and manner by the Normans, was by them ſtiled charta: in following times, to prevent frauds and concealments, they made their deeds of mutual covenant in a ſcript and reſcript, or in a part and counter-part, and in the middle, between the two copies, they drew the capital letters of the alphabet, and then tallied or cut aſunder in an indented manner, the ſheet or ſkin of parchment; which being delivered to the two parties concerned, were proved authentick by matching with and anſwering to one another: and when this prudent cuſtom had for ſome time prevailed, then the word chirographum was appropriated to ſuch bipartite writings or indentures.

Anciently when they made a chirograph or deed, which required a counter-part, they ingroſſed it twice upon one piece of parchment contrariwiſe, leaving a ſpace between, in which they wrote in great letters the word Chirograph; and then cut the parchment in two, ſometimes even and ſometimes with indenture, through the midſt of the word: this was afterwards called dividenda, becauſe the parchment was ſo divided or cut; and it is ſaid the firſt uſe of theſe chirographs was in Henry the Third's time.

Chirograph was of old uſed for a fine; the manner of ingroſſing whereof, and cutting the parchment in two pieces, is ſtill obſerved in the chirographer's office: but as to deeds, that was formerly called a chirograph, which was ſubſcribed by the proper hand-writing of the vendor or debtor, and delivered to the vendee or creditor: and it differed from ſyngraphus, which was in this manner, viz. Both parties, as well the creditor as debtor, wrote their names and the ſum of money borrowed, on paper, &c. and the word Syngraphus in capital letters in the middle thereof, which letters were cut in the middle, and one part given to each party, that upon comparing them (if any diſpute ſhould ariſe) they might put an end to the difference. The chirographs of deeds have ſometimes concluded thus:——Et in hujus rei teſtimonium huic ſcripto in modum chirographi confecto viciſſim ſigilla noſtra appoſuimus. The chirographs were called chartæ diviſæ, ſcripta per chirographus diviſa, chartæ per alphabetum diviſæ; as the chirographs of all fines are at this time. Kennet's Antiq. 177. *Mon. Chirographer of Fines, (chirographus finium & concordiarum of the Greek Χειρόγραφον, a compound of Χεὶρ, manus a hand, and γράφω, ſcribo, I write, a writing of a man's hand) Signifies that officer in the Common Pleas who ingroſſeth fines acknowledged in that court into a perpetual record, after they are examined and paſſed in the other offices, and that writes and delivers the indentures of them to the party: and this officer makes out two indentures, one for the buyer, another for the ſeller; and alſo makes one other indented piece, containing the effect of the fine, which he delivers to the cuſtos brevium, which is called the foot of the fine. The chirographer likewiſe, or his deputy, proclaims all the fines in the court every term, according to the ſtatute, and endorſes the proclamations upon the backſide of the foot thereof; and always keeps the writ of covenant, and note of the fine: the chirographer ſhall take but 4 s. fee for a fine, on pain to forfeit his office, *&c. Chivalry, (ſervitium military) Comes from the Fr. chevalier, and in our law, is uſed for a tenure of lands by knights ſervice; whereby the tenant was bound to perform ſervice in war unto the King, or the meſne lord of whom he held by that tenure.

Chivalry was either general or ſpecial; general, where it was only in the feoffment that the tenant held per ſervitium militare, without any ſpecification of ſerjeanty, eſcuage, &c. Special, when it was declared particularly by what kind of knight-ſervice the land was held.

For the better underſtanding of this tenure, it hath been obſerved, that there is no land but it is holden mediately or immediately of the crown by ſome ſervice; and therefore all our freeholds that are to us and our heirs, are called feuda or feoda, fees, as proceeding from the King, for ſome ſmall yearly rent, and the performance of ſuch ſervices as were originally laid upon the land at the donation thereof; for as the King gave to the great nobles, his immediate tenants, large poſſeſſions for ever, to hold of him for this or that ſervice or rent; ſo they in time parcelled out to ſuch others as they liked the ſame lands, for rents and ſervices as they thought good: and theſe ſervices were by Littleton divided into two ſorts,

Chivalry and ſocage; the firſt whereof was martial and military, the other ruſtical; chivalry therefore was a tenure of ſervice, whereby the tenant was obliged to perform ſome noble or military office unto his lord, being of two kinds, either regal, that is held only of the King, or common, where held of a common perſon: that which might be held only of the King was called

Servitium or ſerjeantia, and was again divided into grand and petit ſerjeanty; the grand ſerjeanty was where one held lands of the King by ſervice, which he ought to do in his own perſon, as to bear the King's banner or ſpear, to lead his hoſte, or to find a man at arms to fight, &c. Petit ſerjeanty was when a man held lands of the King to yield him annually ſome ſmall thing towards his wars, as a ſword, dagger, bow, &c.

Chivalry that might be holden of a common perſon, was termed ſcutagium, eſcuage, that is ſervice of the ſhield, which was either uncertain or certain; eſcuage uncertain was likewiſe twofold, firſt, where the tenant was bound to follow his lord, going in perſon to the king's wars, either himſelf or ſending a ſufficient man in his place, there to be maintained at his coſt ſo long as was agreed upon between the lord and his firſt tenant, at the granting of the fee; and the days of ſuch ſervice ſeem to have been rated by the quantity of land ſo holden; as if it extended to a whole knight's fee, then the tenant was to follow his lord forty days; and if but to half a knights fee, then twenty days; if a fourth part, then ten days, &c. and the other kind of this eſcuage was called caſtleward, where the tenant was obliged, by himſelf or ſome other, to defend a caſtle, as often as it ſhould come to his turn; and theſe were called eſcuage uncertain; becauſe it was uncertain how often a man ſhould be called to follow his lord to the wars, or to defend a caſtle, and what his charge would be therein.

Eſcuage certain was where the tenure was ſet at a certain ſum of money to be paid in lieu of ſuch ſervice; as that a man ſhould pay yearly for every knight's fee twenty ſhillings; for half a knight's fee ten ſhillings, or ſome like rate; and this ſervice, becauſe it is drawn to a certain rent, groweth to be of a mixt nature, not merely ſocage, and yet ſocage in effect, being now neither perſonal ſervice nor uncertain. Littleton.

The tenure called chivalry had other conditions annexed to it: but there is a great alteration made in theſe things by the Stat. 12 Car. 2. c. 24. whereby tenures by knights ſervice of the king, or any other perſon, in capite, &c. and the fruits and conſequences thereof are taken away and diſcharged; and all tenures are to be conſtrued and adjudged to be free and common ſocage, &c.

Chop-church, (eccleſiarum permutatio) Is a word mentioned in a ſtatute of King Hen. 6. by the ſenſe of which, it was in thoſe days a kind of trade, and by the judges declared to be lawful: but Brooke in his abridgment ſays, it was only permiſſable by law: it was without a doubt a nick-name given to thoſe that uſed to change benefices; as to chop and change is a common expreſſion. 9 Hen. 6. cap. 65. Vide Litera miſſa omnibus epiſcopis, &c. contra Choppe-Churches, anno 1391. Choſe, (Fr.) A thing; uſed in the Common law with divers epithets; as choſe local, choſe tranſitory, and choſe in action. Choſe local is ſuch a thing as is annexed to a place, as a mill, and the like: and choſe tranſitory is that thing which is moveable, and may be taken away, or carried from place to place: choſe in action is a thing incorporeal, and only a right; as an annuity, obligation for debt, &c. And generally all cauſes of ſuit for any debt, duty, or wrong, are to be accounted choſes in action: and it ſeems choſe in action may be alſo called choſe in ſuſpence, becauſe it hath no real exiſtence or being, nor can properly be ſaid to be in our poſſeſſion. Bro. Tit. Choſe in Action. 1 Lil. Abr. 264.

A perſon diſſeiſes me of land, or takes away my goods; my right or title of entry into the lands, or action and ſuit for it, and ſo for the goods, is a choſe in action: ſo a debt on an obligation, and power and right of action to ſue for the ſame. 1 Brownl. 33. Jac.* 170, 371. Chanc. Rep. 169.

When bonds are aſſigned, it is done with power of attorney to receive and ſue in the aſſignor's name; ſo that though in this caſe a choſe in action is ſaid to be aſſignable over, yet it amounts to little more than a letter of attorney to ſue for the debt. Wood's Inſt. 282. 1 Shep. Abr. 337. Charters, where the owner of the land hath them in poſſeſſion, are grantable: a poſſibility of an intereſt or eſtate in a term for years, is near to a choſe in action, and therefore may not be granted; but a poſſibility, joined with an intereſt, may be a grantable chattel. *Co. Chriſtianitatis Curia, The court chriſtian, or eccleſiaſtical judicature. See Court Chriſtian.

Chriſtianity. As Dr. Robertſon very juſtly obſerves, with reſpect to chriſtianity, when firſt introduced into Europe, it was corrupted. The people did not receive it pure. The preſumption of men, had added to the ſimple and inſtructive doctrines of chriſtianity, the theories of a vain philoſophy, that attempted to penetrate into myſteries, and to decide queſtions which the limited faculties of the human mind are unable to comprehend or to reſolve. Hiſt. Emp. C. V. 1 V. 73, 4. However its influence was very great in freeing mankind from the bondage of the feudal policy. Vide ib. 268, 9. As to offences againſt chriſtianity, ſee Black. Com. 4 V. 44. Chriſtianity is part of the law of England. Black. Com. 4 V. 59.

Chriſtians, (primitive) Were averſe to the principles of toleration. The reaſon, as mentioned by Dr. Robertſon, was, when the chriſtian revelation declared one ſupreme Being to be the ſole object of religious veneration, preſcribed the form of worſhip moſt acceptable to him, whoever admitted the truth of it held, of conſequence, every other mode of religion to be abſurd and impious, (which was not the caſe among the Heathens). Hence the zeal of the firſt converts to the chriſtian faith in propagating its doctrines, and the ardour with which they laboured to overturn every other form of worſhip. Hiſt. Emp. C. V. 3 V. 334.

Church, (eccleſia) Is a temple or building conſecrated to the honour of God and religion, and anciently dedicated to ſome ſaint, whoſe name it aſſumed; or it is an aſſembly of perſons united by the profeſſion of the ſame chriſtian faith, met together for religious worſhip; and if it hath adminiſtration of the ſacraments and ſepulture, it is in law adjudged a church. If the King founds a church, he may exempt it from the ordinary's juriſdiction; but it is otherwiſe in caſe of a ſubject.

The manner of founding churches in ancient times was, after the founders had made their applications to the biſhop of the dioceſe, and had his licence; the biſhop or his commiſſioners ſet up a croſs, and ſet forth the church-yard where the church was to be built; and then the founders might proceed in the building of the church, and when the church was finiſhed, the biſhop was to conſecrate it; and then, and not before, the ſacraments were to be adminiſtred in it. Stillingfleet's Eccleſiaſt. Caſes. But by the Common law and cuſtom of this realm, any perſon who is a good chriſtian, may build a church without licence from the biſhop, ſo as it be not prejudicial to any ancient churches; though the law takes no notice of it as a church, till conſecrated by the biſhop, which is the reaſon why church and no church, &c. is to be tried and certified by the biſhop. And in ſome caſes, though a church has been conſecrated, it muſt be conſecrated again; as in caſe any murder, adultery, or fornication be committed in it, whereby it is defiled; or if the church be deſtroyed by fire, &c.

The ancient ceremonies in conſecrating the ground on which the church was intended to be built, and of the church itſelf after it was built, were thus: when the materials were provided for building, the biſhop came in his robes to the place, &c. and having prayed, he then perfumed the ground with incenſe, and the people ſung a collect in praiſe of that ſaint to whom the church was dedicated; then the corner-ſtone was brought to the biſhop, which he croſſed, and laid for the foundation: and a great feaſt was made on that day, or on the ſaint's day to which it was dedicated; but the form of conſecration was left to the diſcretion of the biſhop, as it is at this day.

Some biſhops, who have conſecrated churches, on entering into them have pronounced the place to be holy, In the name of the Father, &c. then with their retinue of grave divines went round the church, repeating the hundredth pſalm, and a form of prayer, concluding, We conſecrate this church, and ſet it apart to thee, O Lord Chriſt, as holy ground, &c. After which turning to the communion table, and having bowed to it ſeveral times, they pronounced bleſſings on thoſe who ſhould be benefactors, and curſes againſt thoſe who ſhould prophane that place: and then a ſermon hath been preached, and the ſacrament adminiſtred with more than common ceremony of bowing, kneeling, &c.

A church in general conſiſts of three principal parts, that is, the belfrey or ſteeple, the body of the church with the iſles, and the chancel: and not only the freehold of the whole church, but of the church-yard, are in the parſon or rector; and the parſon may have an action of treſpaſs againſt any one that ſhall commit any treſpaſs in the church or church-yard; as in the breaking of ſeats annexed to the church, or the windows, taking away the leads, or any of the materials of the church, cutting the trees in the church-yard, &c.

The property of the bells, books, and other ornaments, and the goods of the church, is in the pariſhioners; but the cuſtody of them is in the church-wardens, who may maintain action of treſpaſs againſt ſuch as ſhall wrongfully take them away. 1 Rol. Rep. 255. If a man erect a pew in a church, or hang up a bell, &c. therein, they thereby become church goods, though not expreſly given to the church; and he may not afterwards remove them. The parſon only is to give licence to bury in the church; but for defacing a monument in a church, &c. the builder or heir of the deceaſed may have an action. Cro. Jac. 367. And a man may be indicted for digging up the graves of perſons buried, and taking away their burial dreſſes, &c. The property whereof remains in the party who was the owner when uſed, and it is ſaid an offender was found guilty of felony in this caſe, but had his clergy. Co. Lit. 113.

Though the parſon hath the freehold of the church, he hath not the fee-ſimple, which is always in obeyance; but in ſome reſpects the parſon hath a fee-ſimple qualified. Lit. 644, 645. The uſe of the body of the church, and the ſeats fixed to the freehold, is common to all the pariſhioners that pay to the repairs thereof. The chancel of the church is to be repaired by the parſon, unleſs there be a cuſtom to the contrary; and for theſe repairs, the parſon may cut down trees in the church-yard, but not otherwiſe. 35 Ed. 1. Stat. 2. viz. Stat. Ne Rector proſternat, &c. The church-wardens are to ſee that the body of the church and ſteeple are in repair; but not any iſle, &c. which any perſon claims by preſcription, to him or his houſe: concerning which repairs the Canons require every perſon who hath authority to hold eccleſiaſtical viſitation to view their churches within their juriſdictions once in three years, either in perſon, or cauſe it to be done; and they are to certify the defects to the ordinary, and the names of thoſe who ought to repair them; and theſe repairs muſt be done by the church-wardens, at the charge of the pariſhioners. Can. 86. 1 Mod. 236.

By the Common law, pariſhioners of every pariſh are bound to repair the church: but by the Canon law, the parſon is obliged to do it; and ſo it is in foreign countries. 1 Salk. 164. In London the pariſhioners repair both the church and the chancel. The Spiritual court may compel the pariſhioners to repair the church, and excommunicate every one of them till it be repaired; but thoſe that are willing to contribute ſhall be abſolved till the greater part agree to a tax, when the excommunication is to be taken off; but the Spiritual Court cannot aſſeſs them towards it. 1 Mod. 194. 1 Vent. 367. For though this court hath power to oblige the pariſhioners to repair by eccleſiaſtical cenſures; yet they cannot appoint in what ſum, or ſet a rate, for that muſt be ſettled by the church-wardens, &c. 2 Mod. 8.

Where a church is ſo much out of repair, that it is neceſſary to pull it down, in ſuch caſe, upon a general warning to the pariſhioners, the major part, meeting, may make a rate for pulling it down, and rebuilding it on the old foundation, and it ſhall be good; and if any pariſhioner refuſe to pay his proportion, they may libel againſt him in the Eccleſiaſtical Court. 2 Mod. 222. And if a church be down, and the pariſh is increaſed, the greater part of the pariſh may raiſe a tax for the neceſſary inlarging it, as well as the repairing thereof, &c. 1 Mod. 237. But in ſome of our books it is ſaid, that if a church falls down the pariſhioners are not obliged to rebuild it; though they ought to keep it in due repair. 1 Ventr. 35.

In a caſe where church-wardens made a rate for repairs of the church, it was adjudged that the pariſhioners ought to aſſeſs the rate, and they are bound to repair the church. 1 Salk. 165. Church rates for repairs, are to be made by the church-wardens and the major part of the pariſhioners, which ſhall bind the others, after a general notice given; and if the pariſhioners refuſe or neglect to meet upon ſuch notice; or, if on meeting they refuſe to make a rate, then the church-wardens and overſeers of the poor may make a rate, and levy it upon the inhabitants, being firſt confirmed by the ordinary or archdeacon. And rates for repairing of churches, &c. are of eccleſiaſtical cogniſance; and to be recovered in the Eccleſiaſtical Court: alſo if a pariſh is unequally rated, thoſe who are grieved muſt plead it in the Spiritual Court, being ſued there. 1 Ventr. 367. 2 Rol. Abr. 291.

Theſe rates muſt be made upon the whole pariſh, and not on particular perſons; and the charge is in reſpect of the land, upon every occupier, &c. If the owner lives in another pariſh, he ſhall be rated for repairs in the pariſh where the lands lie, and not where he liveth; for though the charge is upon the perſon, yet it is in regard of his lands: if he let the ſame by leaſe, then he ſhall be charged in reſpect of the rent reſerved, and the farmer ſhall make up the reſt. 2 Rol. Rep. 270.

For church ornaments, utenſils, &c. the charge is upon the perſonal eſtates of the pariſhioners; and for this reaſon perſons muſt be charged for theſe, where they live: but though generally lands ought not to be taxed for ornaments, yet by ſpecial cuſtom, both lands and houſes may be liable to it. 2 Inſt. 489. Cro. Eliz. 843. Hetley 131. It has been reſolved that no man ſhall be charged for his land to contribute to the church reckonings, if he doth not reſide in the ſame pariſh. Moor 554.

The communion tables are to be kept in repair in churches, and covered in time of divine ſervice with a carpet, &c. And the ten commandments to be ſet up at the eaſt end of every church or chapel, and other choſen ſentences of ſcripture upon the walls. And at the common charge ſhall be provided a ſtrong cheſt with a hole in the upper part thereof, having three keys, of which one ſhall be kept in the cuſtody of the parſon, and the other two by the church-wardens ſeverally; which cheſt is to be fixed in a proper place in the church, to collect the alms for the poor; and the alms ſhall be quarterly diſtributed to the poor, in the preſence of the chief of the pariſh. Can. 82, 83.

By ſtatute, churches not above ſix pounds a year, in the King's books, by aſſent of the ordinary, patron and incumbent, may be united: and in cities and corporations,

&c. churches may be united by the biſhop, patrons, and chief magiſtrates, unleſs the income exceeds 100*l. per ann.* and then the pariſhioners are to conſent, &c. 37 Hen. 8. cap. 21. 17 Car. 2. cap. 3.

For compleating of St. Paul's Church, and repairing Weſtminſter-Abbey, a duty of 2*s. per* chaldron on coals is granted; and the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Biſhop of London, Lord Mayor, &c. are appointed Commiſſioners: and the church-yard is to be incloſed, and no perſons build thereon, except for the uſe of the church. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 14.

1 Ann. cap. 2. Fifty new churches are to be built in or near London and Weſtminſter, for the building whereof a like duty is granted upon coals, and commiſſioners appointed to purchaſe lands, aſcertain bounds, &c. The rectors of which churches ſhall be appointed by the crown, and the firſt church-wardens and veſtrymen, &c, are to be elected by the commiſſioners. 9 Ann. cap. 22. A duty is alſo granted on coals imported into London, to be appropriated for maintaining of miniſters for the fifty new churches. Stat. 1 Geo. 1. cap. 23.

A miniſter, by ordination of prieſthood, receives authority to preach in the church, though he is nevertheleſs to have a licence from the biſhop of the dioceſe, &c. If a layman be admitted and inſtituted to a benefice, and doth adminiſter the ſacraments, marry, &c. theſe acts performed by him during the time he continues parſon in fact, are good. Cro. Eliz. 775.

Miniſters are to declare their aſſent to the thirty-nine articles of religion, &c. and are bound to read morning and evening prayers, on every holyday, on the 5th of November, the 30th of January, and on the 29th of May, as on the Lord's Day. And if any miniſter ſhall uſe any form of church ſervice but ſuch as is in the Book of Common Prayer, &c. he ſhall forfeit a year's profit of his living, and ſuffer ſix months impriſonment for the firſt offence; and for the ſecond offence be deprived, &c. Stat. 1 Eliz. c. 2. And if a parſon, in reading prayers, ſtand or ſit when he is appointed to kneel, or kneel when he ſhould ſtand, &c. he is puniſhable by this ſtatute. Every perſon is to repair to his pariſh church every Sunday, on pain of forfeiting 1*s.* for every offence; and being preſent at any form of prayer uſed contrary to the Book of Common Prayer, is puniſhed with ſix months impriſonment, &c. 1 Eliz. cap. 2. 23 Eliz. cap. 1. Perſons above ſixteen years of age, who abſent from church above a month, are to forfeit 20*l. per* month, &c. But proteſtant diſſenters are exempted from penalties, by 1 W. & M. c. 18. And a perſon is not ſo bound to go to his pariſh church, but upon reaſonable excuſe he may go to another; of which excuſe the ſpiritual courts are judges. 2 Rol. Rep. 438, 455. No man ſhall cover his head in the church in time of divine ſervice, except he have ſome infirmity, and then with a cap; and all perſons are to kneel and ſtand, &c. as directed by the Common Prayer during ſervice. Can. 18.

No ill language is to be uſed, or noiſe made in churches or church-yards; and perſons ſtriking others there, are to be excommunicated, and loſe one of their ears: and a man may not lawfully return blows in his own defence in theſe caſes. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. cap. 4. Diſturbing miniſters officiating divine ſervice, incurs three months impriſonment, and a forfeiture of 20*l.* by Stat. 1 M. cap. 3. and 1 W. & M. c. 18. Any perſon may be indicted for indecent or irreverent behaviour in the church; and thoſe that offend againſt the acts of uniformity, are puniſhable either by indictment upon the ſtatute, or by the ordinary, &c. See likewiſe the following ſtatutes concerning this head, *Mag. Church-wardens, (eccleſiæ guardiani) Are ancient officers choſen yearly in Eaſter week, by the miniſter and pariſhioners of every pariſh, to look to and take care of the church and church-yard, and the things belonging to the ſame.

Under this head it will be proper to conſider,

I. Of the election of church-wardens, and of exemptions from being elected.

II. Of their intereſt in the things belonging to the church.

III. Of their power and duty.

IV. Of their accounts.

I. As to their election.

They are to be choſen by the joint conſent of the pariſhioners and miniſter; and by cuſtom the miniſter may chooſe one, and the pariſhioners another; or by cuſtom the pariſhioners alone may elect both, though it be againſt the canon. 1 Vent. 267. For

By Can. 89. All church-wardens or queſtmen in every pariſh, ſhall be choſen by the joint conſent of the miniſter and the pariſhioners, if it may be; but if they cannot agree upon ſuch a choice, then the miniſter ſhall chooſe one, and the pariſhioners another: and without ſuch a joint or ſeveral choice, none ſhall take upon them to be church-wardens.

But although the greateſt part of the pariſhes in London chooſe the church-wardens by cuſtom; yet in all the new erected pariſhes the canon ſhall take place (unleſs the act of parliament, in virtue of which any church was erected, ſhall have ſpecially provided that the pariſhioners ſhall chooſe both;) inaſmuch as no cuſtom can be pleaded in ſuch new pariſhes. Gibſ. 215.

In ſome caſes the lord of the manor preſcribeth for the appointment of church-wardens: and this ſhall not be tried in the eccleſiaſtical court, although it be a preſcription of what appertains to a ſpiritual thing. God, 153.

They are ſworn into their offices by the archdeacon; and if the archdeacon refuſeth to ſwear a church-warden, a mandamus ſhall iſſue to compel him. Cro. Car. 551. As the pariſhioners chooſe church-wardens, who have a truſt repoſed in them by the pariſh as temporal officers, they are the proper judges of their ability to ſerve, and not the archdeacon who ſwears them. 5 Mod. 325.

With reſpect to exemptions concerning this office.

All peers of the realm, by reaſon of their dignity, are exempt from the office of church-warden. Gibſ. 215. So are all clergymen, by reaſon of their order. Id. In like manner all parliament men, by reaſon of their privilege. Id.

If an attorney be made a church-warden of a pariſh, he ſhall have a writ of privilege, ſhewing his privilege to be diſcharged thereof, by reaſon of his attendance in court.

No perſon living out of the pariſh, although he occupies lands within the pariſh, may be choſen church-warden; becauſe he cannot take notice of abſences from church, nor diſorders in it, for the due preſenting of them. Gibſ. 215.

By the 1 W. & M. c. 18. Diſſenters being choſen church-wardens may act by deputy. Teachers of congregations taking the oaths and ſubſcribing the declaration, are exempted from this office.

By 6 W. 3. c. 4. Apothecaries are likewiſe exempted.

By 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. All perſons who have proſecuted a felon to conviction, are exempted from the office in the pariſh where the offence was committed.

II. As to their intereſt.

Church-wardens are a corporation to ſue and be ſued for the goods of the church; and they may purchaſe goods, but not lands, except it be in London, by cuſtom.

In the city of London, by ſpecial cuſtom, the church-wardens, with the miniſter, make a corporation for lands as well as goods; and may as ſuch, hold, purchaſe and take lands for the uſe of the church, &c. And there is another cuſtom in London, for the pariſhioners to chooſe both church-wardens excluſive of the miniſter; who is alſo there excuſed from repairing the chancel of the church. 2 Cro. 325. Co. Lit. 3. 1 Rol. Abr. 330. They may have appeal of robbery for ſtealing the goods of the church. 1 Rol. Abr. 393. Cro Eliz. 179.

But the churchwardens have no right to, or intereſt in, the freehold and inheritance of the church, which alone belongs to the parſon or incumbent. Comp. Incumb. 381. Alſo

Churchwardens cannot releaſe to the prejudice of the church; nor can they diſpoſe of the church goods, without the conſent of the veſtry. If they waſte the goods of the church, the new churchwardens may have actions againſt them, or call them to account before the ordinary; though the pariſhioners cannot have an action againſt them for waſting the church goods, for they muſt make new churchwardens, who muſt proſecute the former, &c. 1 Danv. Abr. 788. 2 Cro. 145. Bro. Account 1.

They have ſuch a ſpecial property in the organ, bells, pariſh-books, bible, chalice, ſurplice, &c. belonging to the church, that for the taking away, or for any damage done any of theſe, they may bring an action at law, and therefore the parſon cannot ſue for them in the ſpiritual court. 1 New Abr. 372.

III. In regard to their power.

They have, with the conſent of the miniſter, the placing the pariſhioners in the ſeats of the body of the church, appointing gallery-keepers, &c. reſerving to the ordinary a power to correct the ſame: and in London, the churchwardens have this authority in themſelves.

Particular perſons may preſcribe to have a ſeat, as belonging to them by reaſon of their eſtates, as being an ancient meſſuage, &c. and the ſeats having been conſtantly repaired by them: alſo one may preſcribe to any iſle in the church, to ſit and bury there, always repairing the ſame. 3 Inſt. 202. Cro. Jac. 366. If the ordinary diſplaces a perſon claiming a ſeat in a church by preſcription, a prohibition ſhall be granted, &c. 12 Rep. 106. The parſon impropriate has a right to the chief ſeat in the chancel; but by preſcription another pariſhioner may have it. Noy's Rep.

Beſides their ordinary power, the churchwardens have the care of the benefice during its vacancy: and as ſoon as there is any avoidance, they are to apply to the chancellor of the dioceſe for a ſequeſtration; which being granted, they are to manage all the profits and expences of the benefice for him that ſucceeds, plough and ſow his glebes, gather in tithes, thraſh out and ſell corn, repair houſes, &c. and they muſt ſee that the church be duly ſerved by a curate approved by the biſhop, whom they are to pay out of the profits of the benefice. 2 Inſt. 489. They are to join with the overſeers of the poor, in making rates for relief of the poor, ſetting up trades for employing them, placing out poor apprentices, ſettling poor perſons, &c. And in the execution of their whole office, by ſtatutes 43 Eliz. c. 2. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. 3 W. & M. c. 11, &c.

The churchwardens have no power to make any rate themſelves, excluſive of the pariſhioners, their duty being only to ſummon the pariſhioners, who are to meet for that purpoſe, and, when they are aſſembled, a rate made by the majority preſent ſhall bind the whole pariſh, although the churchwardens voted againſt it. See Comp. Incumb. 389.

But if the churchwardens give the pariſhioners due notice, that they intend to meet for that purpoſe, and the pariſhioners refuſe to come, or, being aſſembled, refuſe to make any rate, they may make one without their concurrence; for as they are liable to be puniſhed in the eccleſiaſtical courts for not repairing the church, it would be unreaſonable that they ſhould ſuffer by the wilfulneſs and obſtinacy of others. 1 Vent. 367. 1 Mod. 79, 194.

The churchwardens, in ſummoning the pariſhioners, need not do it from houſe to houſe, but a general publick ſummons at the church is ſufficient, and the major part of them, that appear upon ſuch ſummons, will bind the whole pariſh. 1 Vent. 367. Comp. Incumb. 389.

There may be ſelect veſtries elected in pariſhes to make rates, and take the churchwardens accounts, &c. But thoſe that do not pay to any church-rates have no votes, except the parſon or vicar.

Concerning their duty.

The churchwardens are to take care of the repairs of the church; and if they erect, or add any thing new to the ſame, they muſt have the conſent of the pariſhioners or veſtry; and if in the church, the licence of the ordinary. 2 Inſt. 489. 1 Vent. 367.

The churchwardens ſhall ſuffer no man to preach within their churches, without producing his licence: and they are to keep the keys of the belfrey, and take care that the bells be not rung without good cauſe, to be allowed of by the miniſter and themſelves. Can. 50, 80.

Churchwardens are to ſee that all the pariſhioners duly reſort to their pariſh church, and there continue during the time of divine ſervice; they are not to permit any to ſtand idle, walk, or make any noiſe in the church, or to contend for places, &c. they may apprehend thoſe that diſturb the miniſter, &c. and juſtify the appeaſing any diſorder in the church or church-yard; they are to chaſtiſe diſorderly boys, and take off the hats of thoſe who would irreverently keep them on. 1 Saund. 13.

Further, they muſt ſearch alehouſes on Sundays, that there be no perſons therein, during the divine ſervice; and execute warrants againſt thoſe who profane the Lord's Day, &c. Alſo levy penalties on perſons not coming to church, againſt profaners of the Sabbath in paſtimes, tipling, &c. and for drunkenneſs, curſing and ſwearing, &c. by divers ſtatutes. And they are to preſent to the ordinary all things preſentable by the eccleſiaſtical laws, which relate to the church, the parſon, and pariſhioners: theſe preſentments are made upon oath, and uſually twice a year, eſpecially at the viſitation: and what relates to the church, is chiefly of repairs, and whether there be a box for alms, in the church, a Bible, Common Prayer Book, and Book of Canons, a deſk for the reader, cuſhion for the pulpit, a communion table, table cloth, cups and covers for bread, flagons and font, a regiſter-book, king's arms ſet up, Lord's prayer, creed and commandments in fair letters, &c.

What concerns the parſon is, whether he reads the thirty-nine articles twice a year, and the canons once in the year, preaches every Sunday good doctrine, reads the Common Prayer, celebrates the ſacraments, preaches in his gown, viſits the ſick, catechiſes children, marries according to law, &c.

And what relates to the pariſhioners is, whether they come to church, and duly attend the worſhip of God, if baptiſm be neglected, women not churched, perſons marrying in prohibited degrees, or without banns or licence, alms-houſes or ſchools abuſed, legacies given to pious uſes, &c. They muſt likewiſe preſent crimes and offences, ſuch as drunkenneſs, fornication, adultery, inceſt, blaſphemy, &c. and by ſtatute popiſh recuſants: and if they refuſe to make preſentments, the parſons or vicars, &c. may preſent to the biſhop all crimes committed in their pariſhes. Can. 117. Cro. Car. 291. 1 Vent. 114.

It is their duty to collect the charity-money upon briefs, which are to be read in churches, and the ſums collected, &c. to be indorſed on the briefs in words at length, and ſigned by the miniſter and churchwardens; after which they ſhall be delivered, with the money collected to the perſons undertaking them, in a certain time, under the penalty of 20*l.* A regiſter is to be kept of all money collected, &c. Alſo the undertakers in two months after the receipts of the money, and notice to ſufferers, are to account before a Maſter in Chancery, appointed by the Lord Chancellor. Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 14.

They are to ſign certificates of receiving the ſacrament by perſons, to qualify them to bear offices, &c. And in London, and within the bills of mortality, they muſt fix fire-cocks, keep engines, &c. in their pariſhes, under the penalty of 10*l.* For the maintenance whereof the pariſh is to be aſſeſſed: and the firſt perſon who brings in a pariſh engine, or other large engine with a ſocket, &c. when any fire happens, ſhall be paid as an encouragement 30*s.* the perſon that brings in the ſecond engine 20*s.* and the third 10*s.* &c. Stat. 6 Ann. c. 31. 7 Ann. c. 17.

c. 17. They are likewiſe to levy and receive penalties by particular ſtatutes. 3 C. 1. c. 3. 9 Geo. 2. c. 23. 22 C. 2. c. 8. 16 C. 2. c. 19. 22 C. 2. c. 8. & 6 Ann. c. 31. And ſee 32 Car. 2. c. 2. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 27. 11 Geo. 2. c. 26. 12 Geo. 2. c. 29. & 7 Geo. 3. c. 42.

IV. Concerning their manner of accounting.

At the end of the year the churchwardens are to yield juſt accounts to the miniſter and pariſhioners, and deliver what remains in their hands to the pariſhioners, or to the new churchwardens: in caſe they refuſe, they may be preſented at the next viſitation, or the new officers may by proceſs call them to account before the ordinary, or ſue them by writ of account at Common law. And if all the pariſh have allowed their accounts of the church goods, the ordinary may nevertheleſs call them to account before him too, and puniſh them if he find cauſe; but in laying out their money, they are puniſhable for fraud only, not indiſcretion. If their receipts fall ſhort of their diſburſements, the ſucceeding churchwardens may pay them the balance, and place it to their account. 1 Rol. Abr. 121. Can. 89, 109, &c. Diſputes ariſing about churchwardens accounts are to be decided before the ordinary: and for diſburſements of any ſum not exceeding 40*s.* the churchwardens oath alone is a ſufficient proof; but for all ſums above, receipts are to be produced, &c. If churchwardens through improvidence, indiſcretion or negligence, either waſte the church goods in their cuſtody, or much damnify the pariſh; on proof thereof they may be removed at any time, by the authority of the ordinary. 8 El. 4, 6. 13 Co. 70.

By the Stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 11. In all actions to be brought in the courts of Weſtminſter, or at the aſſiſes, for money miſpent by Churchwardens, the evidence of the pariſhioners, other than ſuch as receive alms, ſhall be taken and admitted.

Churchwardens are comprehended within the purview of the ſtatutes 7 Jac. 1. cap. 5. and 21 Jac. 1. cap. 12. as to pleading the general iſſue to actions brought againſt them, and as to double coſts when they have judgment.

But in action on the caſe againſt a churchwarden for a falſe and malicious preſentment, though there be judgment for him, yet he ſhall not have double coſts; for the ſtatute does not extend to ſpiritual affairs.

The ſpiritual court can only order the churchwardens accounts to be audited, but cannot make a rate to reimburſe them, becauſe they are not obliged to lay out money before they receive it. *Rep. temp. Church-Reeve, Is the ſame with churchwarden, (reve in the Sax. being as much as guardian in the French) the guardian or overſeer of the church: the word is now out of uſe, but is mentioned by Chaucer on the juriſdiction of archdeacons, viz.

Of church-reves, and of teſtaments,
Of contracts and of lack of ſacraments.

Cinque Ports, (quinque portus) Are thoſe havens that lie towards France, and therefore have been thought by our kings to be ſuch as ought to be vigilantly guarded and preſerved againſt invaſion: in which reſpect they have an eſpecial governor, called Lord warden of the cinque ports, and divers privileges granted them, as a peculiar juriſdiction; their warden having not only the authority of an admiral amongſt them, but ſending out writs in his own name, &c. Stat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 48. 4 Inſt. 222.

Cambden tells us, that Kent is accounted the key of England; and that William, called The Conqueror, was the firſt who made a conſtable of Dover caſtle, and warden of the cinque ports, which he did to bring that country under a ſtricter ſubjection to his government; but King John was the firſt who granted the privileges to thoſe ports, which they ſtill enjoy: however, it was upon condition that they ſhould provide a certain number of ſhips at their own charge for forty days, as often as the king ſhould have occaſion for them in the wars, he being then under a neceſſity of having a navy for paſſing into Normondy, to recover that dukedom which he had loſt. And this ſervice the barons of the cinque ports acknowledged and performed, upon the king's ſummons, attending with their ſhips the time limited at their proper coſts, and ſtaying as long after as the king pleaſed at his own charge. Somner of Rom. Ports in Rent.

The cinque ports, as we now account them, are, Dover, Sandwich, Rumney, Winchelſea, and Rye; and to theſe we may add Hythe and Haſtings, which are reckoned as part or members of the cinque ports: though by the firſt inſtitution it is ſaid that Winchelſea and Rye were added as members, and that the others were the cinque ports; there are alſo ſeveral other towns adjoining that have the privileges of the ports. Theſe cinque ports have certain franchiſes to hold pleas, &c. and the king's writs do not run there; but on a judgment in any of the king's courts, if the defendant hath no goods, &c. but in the ports; the plaintiff may get the record certified into Chancery, and from thence ſent by mittimus to the lord warden to make execution. 4 Inſt. 223. 3 Leon. 3.

The conſtable of Dover caſtle is Lord warden of the cinque ports. And there are ſeveral courts within the cinque ports; one before the conſtable, others within the ports themſelves, before the mayors and jurats; another, which is called curia quinque portuum apud Shepway: there is likewiſe a court of Chancery, in the cinque ports, to decide matters of equity; but no original writs iſſue thence. 1 Danv. Abr. 793. The juriſdiction of the cinque ports is general, extending to perſonal, real, and mix'd actions: and if any erroneous judgment is given in the cinque ports before any of the mayors and jurats, writ of error lies not in B. R. but it ſhall be redreſſed, according to the cuſtom, by bill in nature of a writ of error coram domino cuſtode ſeu guardiano quinque portuum apud curiam ſuam, &c. And in theſe caſes the mayor and jurats may be fined, and the mayor removed, &c. 4 Inſt. 334. Crompt. Juriſd. 138.

It has been obſerved that the cinque ports are not jura regalia, like counties palatine, but are parcel of the county of Kent: ſo that if a writ be brought againſt one for land within the cinque ports, and he appears and pleads to it, and judgment is given againſt him in the Common Pleas, this judgment ſhall bind him; for the land is not exempted out of the county, and the tenant may waive the benefit of his privilege. Wood's Inſt. 519.

The cinque ports cannot award proceſs of outlawry. Cro. Eliz. 910. And a quo minus lies to the cinque ports. ibid. 911. If a man is impriſoned at Dover by the lord warden, an habeas corpus may be iſſued; for the privilege that the king's writ lies not there is intended between party and party, and there can be no ſuch privilege againſt the king; and an habeas corpus is a prerogative writ, by which the king demands an account of the liberty of the ſubject. Cro Jac. 543. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 447.

Certiorari lies to the cinque ports, to remove indictments; and the juriſdiction that brev. dom. regis non currit is only in civil cauſes between party and party: but this has been held to extend only to indictments before the mayors, barons, &c. as juſtices of peace, on late ſtatutes, &c. Cro. Car. 252, 253. 2 Hawk. P. C. 286, 287.

Circa, A watch; from which circuitor; quatuor circuitores monaſterii quos alio nomine circas vocant, juxta præceptum ſancti Benedicti certis horis circuire debent monaſterii officinas.

Circuit, or Circuity of Action, (circuitus actionis) Is a longer courſe of proceeding to recover a thing ſued for than is needful: as if a perſon grant a rent-change of 10*l.* per annum out of his manor of B. and after the grantee diſſeiſeth the grantor of the ſame manor, who brings an aſſiſe and recovers the land, and 20*l.* damages, which being paid, the grantee brings his action for 10*l.* of his rent due during the time of the diſſeiſin, which he muſt have had if no diſſeiſin had been: this is called circuity of action becauſe as the grantor was to receive 20*l.* damages, and pay 10*l.* rent, he might have received but 10*l.* only for damages, and the grantee might have kept the other 10*l.* in his hands by way of retainer for his rent, and ſo ſaved his action, which appears to be needleſs. Terms de Ley. This example ſhews that an action may be rightfully brought for a debt or duty, and yet be wrong; for that it might have been as well otherwiſe anſwered and determined.

Circuits, Certain diviſions of the kingdom appointed for the judges to go, twice a year, for adminiſtering of juſtice, in the ſeveral counties. Theſe circuits are made in the reſpective vacations, after Hilary and Trinity terms. See Black. Com. 3 V. 58. and 4 V. 415, 417.

Circumſpecte Agatis, Is the title of a ſtatute made anno 13 Ed. 1. relating to prohibitions, preſcribing certain caſes to the judges, wherein the king's prohibition lies not. 2 Inſt. 187.

Circumſtantial Evidence, or the doctrine of preſumptions, Takes place, next to poſitive proof: for when the fact itſelf cannot be demonſtratively evinced, that which comes neareſt to the proof of the fact is the proof of ſuch circumſtances which either neceſſarily or uſually attend ſuch facts; and theſe are called preſumptions, which are only to be relied upon till the contrary be actually proved. Co. Lit. 373. Black. Com. 3 V. 371.

Circumſtantibus, By-ſtanders; and ſignifies in our law the ſupplying or making up the number of jurors, if any impanelled appear not, or appearing are challenged by either party, by adding to them ſo many of thoſe that are preſent or ſtanding by that are qualified as will ſerve the turn. Stat 35 H. 8. cap. 6. The act of ſupplying is uſually called a tales de circumſtantibus. See Tales.

Citation, (citatio) A ſummons to appear, applied particularly to proceſs in the ſpiritual court. The eccleſiaſtical courts proceed according to the courſe of the civil and canon laws, by citation, libel, &c. A perſon is not generally to be cited to appear out of the dioceſe, or peculiar juriſdiction where he lives; unleſs it be by the archbiſhop, in default of the ordinary; where the ordinary is party to the ſuit, in caſes of appeal, &c. And by law a defendant may be ſued where he lives, though it is for ſubſtracting tithes in another dioceſe, &c. 1 Nelſ. 449. By the Stat. 23 Hen. 8. cap. 9. Every archbiſhop may cite any perſon dwelling in any biſhop's dioceſe within his province for hereſy, &c if the biſhop or other ordinary conſents, or if the biſhop or ordinary, or judge, do not his duty in puniſhing the offence. Where perſons are cited out of their dioceſe, and live out of the juriſdiction of the biſhop, a prohibition or conſultation may be granted: but where perſons live in the dioceſe, if when they are cited they do not appear, they are to be excommunicated, &c. The above ſtatute was made to maintain the juriſdiction of inferior dioceſes; and if any perſon is cited out of the dioceſe, &c. where the Civil or Canon law doth not allow it, the party grieved ſhall have double damages. If one defame another within the peculiar of the archbiſhop, he may be puniſhed there; although he dwell in any remote place out of the archbiſhop's peculiar. Godb. 190.

Citatio ad inſtantiam Partis, Is mentioned in 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 9. for laying impoſitions on proceedings at law.

City, (civitas) By Cowel is a town corporate, which hath a biſhop and cathedral church, which is called civitat, oppidum, and urbs; civitas, in regard it is governed by juſtice and order of magiſtracy; oppidum, for that it contains a great number of inhabitants: and urbs, becauſe it is in due form begirt about with walls. But Crompton, in his Juriſdictions, where he reckons up the cities, leaveth out Ely, although it hath a biſhop and cathedral church; and puts in Weſtminſter, though it hath not at preſent a biſhop: and Sir Edward Coke makes Cambridge a city; yet there is no mention that it ever was an epiſcopal ſee. Indeed it appears by the Stat. 35 H. 8. cap. 10. that there was a biſhop of Weſtminſter; ſince which, by 27 Eliz. cap. 5. it is termed a city, or borough: and notwithſtanding what the Lord Coke obſerves of Cambridge, by the Stat. 11 H. 7. c. 4. Cambridge is called only a town.

Kingdoms have been ſaid to contain as many cities as they have ſeats of archbiſhops and biſhops; but according to Blount, city is a word which hath obtained ſince the conqueſt; for in the time of the Saxons there were no cities, but all great towns were called burghs, and even London was then ſtiled London Burgh; as the capital of Scotland is now called Edinburgh. And long after the conqueſt the word city is uſed promiſcuouſly with the burgh, as in the charter of Leiceſter it is called both civitas and burgus; which ſhews that thoſe writers were miſtaken, that tell us every city was or is a biſhop's ſee. And tho' the word city ſignifies with us ſuch a town corporate as hath uſually a biſhop and cathedral church; yet it is not always ſo. See Black. Com. 1 V. 114.

As to the antient ſtate of cities and villages, whilſt the feudal policy prevailed they held of ſome great lord, on whom they depended for protection, and were ſubject to his arbitrary juriſdiction. The inhabitants were deprived of the natural and moſt unalienable rights of humanity. For various inſtances thereof, ſee Robertſ. Hiſt. Emp. Charles V. 1 V. 31.

The freedom of cities was firſt eſtabliſhed in Italy, principally owing to the introduction of commerce. Ib. 32.

'Twas afterwards gradually introduced into France and other countries of Europe, and in our own country many cauſes contributed, which a work of this kind will not permit us to enumerate.

Another ſenſe may be affixed to to the term city.

Rouſſeau, in his Social Contract, l. 1. c. 6. ſays, "This act of aſſociation (i. e. of the members of a ſtate) converts the ſeveral individual contracting parties into one moral collective body, compoſed of as many members as there are votes in the aſſembly, which receives alſo from the ſame act its unity and exiſtence. This public perſonage, which is thus formed by all its members, uſed formerly to be denominated a city, and at preſent takes the name of a republic or body-politic. It is alſo called, by its ſeveral members, a ſtate, when it is paſſive; the ſovereign, when it is active; and ſimply a power, when it is compared with other bodies of the ſame nature. With regard to the aſſociates themſelves, they take collectively the name of the people; and are ſeparately called citizens, as partaking of the ſovereign authority; and ſubjects, as ſubjected to the authority of the ſtate."

Rouſſeau has ſubjoined a note, on the term city, which I think is worth the attention of every one, who hath not already ſeen it. He ſays, "The true ſenſe of this word is almoſt entirely perverted among the moderns; moſt people take a town for a city, and an houſe-keeper for a citizen. Such are ignorant, however, that tho' houſes may form a town, it is the citizens only that form a city. This ſame error formerly coſt the Carthaginians very dear. I do not remember, in the courſe of my reading, to have ever found the title of cives given to the ſubjects of a prince, not even formerly to the Macedonians, nor, in our times to the Engliſh, though more nearly bordering on liberty than any other nation The French are the only people who familiarly take on themſelves the name of citizens, becauſe they have no juſt idea of its meaning, as may be ſeen in their dictionaries; for, were it otherwiſe, indeed, they would be guilty of high-treaſon, in aſſuming it. This term is with them rather expreſſive of a virtue than of a privilege. Hence, when Bodin ſpoke of the citizens and inhabitants of Geneva, he committed a wretched blunder in miſtaking the one for the other. Mr. D'Alembert indeed has avoided this miſtake in the Encyclopédie, where he has properly diſtinguiſhed the four orders of the people (and even five, reckoning mere ſtrangers) that are found in our city, and of which two only compoſe the republic: no other French author that I know of hath ever comprehended the meaning of the word citizen. Vide alſo Hobbes's Philoſophical Rudiments, l. 1. c. 5. ſect. 12. & c. 6. &c. Alſo Encyclopédie tom. 3. fo. 485. verb. Cité.

Citizens, (civis) Of London, are either freemen, or ſuch as reſide and keep a family in the city, &c. and ſome are citizens and freemen; and ſome are not, who have not ſo great privileges as the others: the citizens of London may preſcribe againſt a ſtatute, becauſe their liberties are reinforced by ſtatute. 1 Rol. Rep. 105.

Civil Law, Is defined to be that law which every particular nation, commonwealth or city, has eſtabliſhed peculiarly for itſelf: jus civile eſt, quod quiſque populus ſibi conſtituit. Juſt. Inſt. But more ſtrictly the civil law is that which the old Romans uſed, compiled from the laws of nature and of nations. The twelve tables were alſo the foundation of this law; which for its great wiſdom is as it were the Common law, or the foundation of it, in all well governed kingdoms, a very few only excepted; and no other laws are eſteemed comparable to it for its equity. The civil law is either written or unwritten; and the written law is public or private: public, which immediately regards the ſtate of the commonwealth, as the enacting and execution of laws, conſultations about war and peace, eſtabliſhment of things relating to religion, &c. Private, that more immediately hath reſpect to the concerns of every particular perſon. The unwritten law is cuſtom introduced by the tacit conſent of the people only, without any particular eſtabliſhment: the authority of it is great, and it is equal with a written law, if it be wholly uninterrupted, and of a long continuance.

The whole civil law is contained in four books or tomes, 1. The code. 2. The pandects or digeſts. 3. The inſtitutes. 4. The novels or authenticks. The code is divided into twelve books, and was the firſt book of the civil law, which the Emperor Juſtinian ordered to be collected: it was publiſhed in the year 534, and contains the conſtitutions, &c. of fifty-ſix Emperors, and their wiſe councils. The firſt book of it treats of religion, prieſts, &c. Other books are upon trade, merchandiſe, the exchequer, &c,

The digeſt or pandects, was collected from the works and commentaries of the ancient lawyers, ſome whereof lived before the coming of our Saviour: this tome is divided into fifty books; and upon a more particular diviſion, the whole digeſt is divided into ſeven parts: the firſt part contains the elements of the law, as what is juſtice, right, &c. The ſecond part treats of judges and judgments: the third part of perſonal action, &c. The fourth part of contracts, pawns and pledges: the fifth part of wills, teſtaments, &c. The ſixth part of the poſſeſſion of goods: the ſeventh part of obligations, crimes, puniſhments, &c. The inſtitutes contain a ſyſtem of the whole body of law, and are an epitome of the digeſt divided into four books; but ſometimes they correct the digeſt: they are called inſtitutes, becauſe they are of inſtruction, and ſhew an eaſy way to the obtaining a knowledge of the Civil law: but they are not ſo diſtinct and comprehenſive as they might be, nor ſo uſeful at this time as they were at firſt. The novels or authenticks were publiſhed at ſeveral times without any method: they are termed novels as they are new laws, and authenticks, being authentically tranſlated from the Greek into the Latin tongue; and the whole volume is divided into nine collations, conſtitutions or ſections, and they again into 168 novels, which alſo are diſtributed into certain chapters: the firſt collation relates to heirs, executors, &c. The ſecond, the ſtate of the church: the third is againſt bawds: the fourth concerns marriages, &c. The fifth forbids the alienation of the poſſeſſions of the church: the ſixth ſhews the legitimacy of children, &c. The ſeventh determines who ſhall be witneſſes: the eighth ordains wills to be good, though imperfect, &c. And the ninth contains matter of ſucceſſion in goods, &c.

To thoſe tomes of the Civil law we may add the book of feuds, which contains the cuſtoms and ſervices that the ſubject or vaſſal oweth to his prince or lord, for ſuch lands or fees as he holdeth of him. The conſtitutions of the Emperor, are either by a reſcript, which is the letter of the Emperor in anſwer to particular perſons who enquire the law of him; or by edict, which the Emperor eſtabliſhes of his own accord, that it may be generally obſerved by every ſubject; or by decree, which the Emperor pronounces between plaintiff and defendant, upon hearing a particular cauſe. The power of iſſuing forth reſcripts, edicts and decrees, was given to the prince by the lex regia, wherein the people of Rome wholly ſubmitted themſelves to the government of one perſon, viz. Julius Cæſar, after the defeat of Pompey, &c. And by this ſubmiſſion the prince could not only make laws, but was eſteemed above all coercive power of them. The matters wherein the whole Civil law is generally exerciſed, relate either to perſons in the Common-wealth; or the things belonging or not belonging to them; or to the actions whereby men claim ſuch things as are due to them by the law, &c.

The Civil law is allowed in this kingdom in the two Univerſities, for the training up of ſtudents, &c. In matters of foreign treaties between princes; marine affairs civil and criminal; in the ordering of martial cauſes; the judgments of enſigns and arms, rights of honour, &c. Vide Treatiſe of Laws, pag. 243, 396. Ferriers Hiſt. of Civ. Law. and Dr. Taylor's Elements.

Civil List, To defray the extraordinary charge of the civil liſt, viz. for paying debts and arrears due to his majeſty's ſervants, tradeſmen, &c. and other uſes of his civil government, 1,000,000 l. was granted by parliament, by Stat. 11 Geo. 1. c. 16. Vide King's Houſhold.

Clack Wool, Is to cut off the ſheep's mark, which makes it weigh lighter; as to force wool, ſignifies to clip off the upper and hairy part thereof; and to bard it, is to cut the head and neck from the reſt of the fleece. Stat. 8 H. 6. cap. 22.

Clades, Clida, cleta, cleia, from the Brit. clie, and the Iriſh clia, A wattle or hurdle; and a hurdle for penning or folding of ſheep, is ſtill in ſome counties of England called a cley. Paroch. Antiq. p. 575.

Clarendon, (conſtitutions of) Certain conſtitutions, made in the reign of Hen. 2. A. D. 1164, in a great council held at Clarendon, whereby the King checked the power of the Pope, and his Clergy, and greatly narrowed the total exemption they claimed from the ſecular juriſdiction. Black. Com. 4 V. 415.

Claretum, A liquor made of wine and honey, clarified or made clear by decoction, &c. which the Germans, French, and Engliſh, called hippocras: and it was from this, the red wines of France were called claret.——Ad hæc etiam in tanta abundantia vinum hic videas, & ſiceram, pigmentum, & claretum muſtum & medonem. Girald. Camb. apud Wharton. Ang. Sax. Par. 2. p. 480.

Claim, (clameum) Is a challenge of intereſt in any thing that is in the poſſeſſion of another, or at leaſt out of a man's own, as claim by charter, by deſcent, &c. And claim is either verbal, where one doth by words claim and challenge the thing that is ſo out of his poſſeſſion; or it is by an action brought, &c. and ſometimes it relates to lands, and ſometimes to goods and chattels. Lit. Sect. 420. Where any thing is wrongfully detained from a perſon, this claim is to be made; and the party making it, may thereby avoid deſcents of lands, diſſeiſins, &c. and preſerve his title, which otherwiſe would be in danger of being loſt. Co. Lit. 250. A man who hath preſent right or title to enter, muſt make a claim; and in caſe of reverſions, &c. one may make a claim where he hath right, but cannot enter on the lands: when a perſon dares not make an entry on land, for fear of being beaten or other injury, he may approach as near as he can to the land, and claim the ſame; and it ſhall be ſufficient to veſt the ſeiſin in him. 1 Inſt. 25.

If nothing doth hinder a man, having right to land, from entering or making his claim; there he muſt do ſo, before he ſhall be ſaid to be in poſſeſſion of it, or can grant it over to another: but where the party who hath right, is in poſſeſſion already, and where an entry or claim cannot be made, it is otherwiſe. 1 Rep. 157. A claim will deveſt an eſtate out of another when the party muſt enter into ſome part of the land; but if it be only to bring him into poſſeſſion, he may do it in view. By claim of lands in moſt caſes is intended a claim with an entry into part of the land, or by a near approach to it. Co. Lit. 252, 254. Poph. 67. One in reverſion after an eſtate for years, or after a ſtatute merchant, ſtaple, or elegit, may enter and make a claim to prevent a deſcent, or avoid a collateral warranty. And claim of a remainder by force of a condition muſt be upon the land, or it will not be ſufficient. Co. Lit. 202.

If a man ſeiſed of lands in right of his wife, make a feoffment in fee on condition, and the huſband dieth, and then the condition is broken, and the heir enters; in this caſe the wife need not claim to get poſſeſſion of her eſtate, for the law doth veſt it in her without any claim. Co. Lit. 202. 8 Rep. 43.

The claim of the particular tenant, ſhall be good for him in reverſion or remainder; and of him in reverſion, &c. for particular tenant: ſo claim of a copyholder, will be good for the lord, &c. But if tenant for years, in a court of record claim the fee of his land, it is a forfeiture of his eſtate. Plowd. 359. Co. Lit. 251. A claim may be made by the party himſelf; and ſometimes by his ſervants or deputy: and a guardian in ſocage, &c. may make a claim or enter in the name of the infant that hath right, without any commandment. Co. Lit. 245.

Claim or entry ſhould be made as ſoon as may be; and by the Common law it is to be within a year and a day after the diſſeiſin, &c. and if the party who hath unjuſtly gained the eſtate, do afterwards occupy the land, in ſome caſes an aſſiſe, treſpaſs, or forcible entry may be had againſt him. Lit. Sect. 426, 430. If a fine is levied of lands, ſtrangers to it are to enter and make a claim within five years, or be barred: infants after their age, feme coverts after the death of their huſbands, &c. have the like time, by Stat. 1 R. 3. cap. 7. If a diſſeiſor levy a fine, and the diſſeiſee enters his claim in the record of the foot of the fine, this is not ſuch a claim as ſhall avoid the ſtatute. 4 Hen. 7. cap. 24. 1 Lil. Abr. 270. See the Stat. 4 Ann. c. 16. ſect. 16. and Continual Claim.

Claim of Liberty, Is a ſuit or petition to the King in the Court of Exchequer, to have liberties and franchiſes confirmed there by the King's Attorney General. Co. Ent. 93.

Clamea admittenda in Itinere per Attornatum, A writ by which the King commands the juſtices in eyre to admit a perſon's claim by attorney who is employed in the King's ſervice, and cannot come in his own perſon. Reg. Orig. 19.

Clap-board, Is a board cut in order to make caſks or veſſels; which ſhall contain three feet and two inches at leaſt in length: and for every ſix ton of beer exported, the ſame caſk, or as good, or 200 of clap-boards ſhall be imported, by ſtatute 35 El. c. 11.

Clarigarius Armorum, An herald at arms. Blount.

Clavigeratus, A treaſurer of a church.——Aliter Willielmus Wallingford clavigeratus. Mon. Angl. tom. 1. p. 184.

Clauſe Rolls, (rotuli clauſi) Contain all ſuch matters of record as were committed to cloſe writs: theſe rolls are preſerved in the Tower.

Clauſtura, Bruſhwood for hedges and fences. King Henry 3. gave to the prior and canons of Chetwood, quinque carucatas clauſturæ ad prædictæ terræ clauſturam ſuſtinendam. Paroch. Antiq. 247.

Clauſum fregit, Signifies in our law as much as an action of treſpaſs; and it is a writ ſo called, becauſe the defendant is ſummoned thereby to anſwer Quare clauſum fregit of the plaintiff, that is why he did ſuch a treſpaſs. It is the courſe of the Common Pleas, to declare in actions (eſpecially upon an aſſumpſit or the like) upon a quare clauſum fregit, as they do on a latitat in the King's Bench. 2 Vent. 192, 259. But by the Lord Clarendon's orders in Chancery, curſitors of that court are not to make writs of clauſum fregit, &c. in London, without ſpecial warrant from the Lord Chancellor, or Maſter of the Rolls, unleſs it appear by affidavit that the ſame is the proper cauſe of action, &c. This order is now, we apprehend, totally diſregarded.

In C. B. a pone in treſpaſs, (and here the proceedings are by præcipe or pone) according to the ancient courſe, is made out thus: Wilts, ſſ. ſi A. B. fec. &c. tunc pone C. D. nuper de, &c. de placito quare vi & armis clauſum & domum ipſius A. fregit & alia enormia ei intulit, ad grave dampn. ipſius A. et contra pacem. This is delivered to the filazer of the county to draw out the capias, &c. And debt may be added to it, viz. pone, &c. C. D. nuper de, &c. in com. tuo clauſum freg. apud, &c. Ac etiam in debito pro 50 l. &c.

Clauſum Paſchæ, Stat. Weſtm. 1. In craſtino clauſi paſchæ, or In craſtino octabis paſchæ, which is all one, that is the morrow of the utas of Eaſter. 2 Inſt. 157. Clauſum paſchæ, i. e. Dominica in albis; ſic dictum, quod paſcha claudat. Blount.

Clawa, A cloſe, or ſmall meaſure of land.——Unam clawam terræ cum pertinentiis. Mon. Angl. tom. 2. pag. 250.

Cleptor, This word is taken for a rogue or thief. Hoveden anno 946.

Clergy, (clerus) Signifies the aſſembly or body of clerks or eccleſiaſticks, being taken for the whole number of thoſe who are de clero Domini, of our Lord's lot or ſhare, as the tribe of Levi was in Judæa; and are ſeparate from the noiſe and buſtle of the world, that they may have leiſure to ſpend their time in heavenly meditation and prayer.

Sometimes clergy is uſed for a plea to an indictment of felony, &c. being an ancient privilege of the church, where a prieſt or one in orders is arraigned of felony, before a ſecular judge, who may pray his clergy; which is as much as if he prayed to be delivered to his ordinary, to purge himſelf of the offence objected againſt him. Staundf. P. C. lib. 2. cap. 41. Anciently the clergy ſtrongly inſiſted that by the law of God their perſons were ſo ſacred, that they could not, without a violation of that law, be convened before, and much leſs be puniſhed by, any ſecular judge; but it hath been obſerved that this is not warranted by ſcripture: though all perſons in holy orders have this privilege from the Canon law. 2 Hawk. P. C. 337.

It is ſaid by Lord Chief Juſtice Hale, that anciently princes converted to Chriſtianity, in favour of the clergy, and for encouraging them in their offices and employments, did grant to them very bountiful privileges; as 1ſt, An exemption of places conſecrated to religious duties from arreſts for crimes, which was the original of ſanctuaries. 2dly, The exemption of their perſons from criminal proceedings, in ſome caſes capital, before ſecular judges; and this was the true original of the privilegium clericale: the clergy increaſing in wealth, power and intereſt, afterwards ſet up for themſelves; and that which they obtained by the favour of princes and ſtates at firſt, they now began to claim as their right, and that of the higheſt nature, jure divino; and by their canons and conſtitutions, procured vaſt extenſions of thoſe exemptions. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P.C. 323.

As to the clergy in general, they are regular or ſecular: thoſe are regular which live under certain rules, being of ſome religious order, and are called men of religion, or the religious: ſuch as all Abbots, Priors, Monks, &c. The ſecular are thoſe that live not under any certain rules of the religious orders; as Biſhops, Deans, Parſons, Vicars, &c.

Although the clergy claimed an exemption from all ſecular juriſdiction, yet Mat. Paris tells us, that ſoon after William the Firſt had conquered Harold, he ſubjected the biſhopricks and abbeys who held per baroniam, that they ſhould be no longer free from military ſervice; and for that purpoſe he in an arbitrary manner regiſtred how many ſoldiers every biſhoprick and abbey ſhould provide, and ſend to him and his ſucceſſors in time of war; and having placed theſe regiſters of eccleſiaſtical ſervitude in his treaſury, thoſe who were aggrieved, departed out of the realm: but the clergy were not, till then, exempted from all ſecular ſervice; becauſe by the laws of King Edgar they were bound to obey the ſecular magiſtrate in three caſes, viz. Upon any expedition to the wars, and to contribute to the building and repairing of bridges, and of caſtles for the defence of the kingdom.

It is probable that by expedition to the wars, it was not at that time intended they ſhould perſonally ſerve, but contribute towards the charge: one they muſt do; as appears by the petition to the King, anno 1267, viz. Ut omnes clerici tenentes per baroniam vel feudum laicum, perſonaliter armati procederent contra regios adverſarios, vel tantum ſervitium in expeditione regis invenirent, quantum pertineret ad tantam terram vel tenementum. But their anſwer was, that they ought not to fight with the military but with the ſpiritual ſword, that is with prayers and tears; that they were to maintain peace and not war, and that their baronies were founded on charity; for which reaſon they ought not to perform any military ſervice. Blount.

That the clergy had greater privileges and exemptions at Common law than the laity is certain; for they are confirmed to them by Magna Charta, and other ancient ſtatutes; but theſe privileges are in a great meaſure loſt, the clergy being included under general words in later ſtatutes; ſo that clergymen are liable to all public charges impoſed by act of parliament, where they are not particularly excepted. Indeed they are not at this day to undergo temporal offices, as the office of ſheriff, conſtable, &c. (though they are ſometimes in the commiſſion of the peace, in which commiſſion they may either act as juſtices, or not act at their pleaſure) nor are they to ſerve on juries, or obliged to appear at turns and leets; or to be preſſed to ſerve in the wars in perſon, although by ſtatutes they are compellable to contribute to the charge of a war, and to muſters of the militia: their bodies are not to be taken upon ſtatutes merchant or ſtaple, &c. for the writ to take the body of the conuſor is ſi laicus ſit; and if the ſheriff or any other officer arreſt a clergyman upon any ſuch proceſs, it is ſaid an action of falſe impriſonment lies againſt him that does it, or the clergyman arreſted may have a ſuperſedeas out of Chancery.

In action of treſpaſs, account, &c. againſt a perſon in holy orders, wherein proceſs of capias lies, if the ſheriff return that the defendant is clericus beneficiatus nullam habens laicum feodum ubi ſummoneri poteſt; in this caſe the plaintiff cannot have a capias to arreſt his body; but the writ ought to iſſue to the biſhop, to compel him to appear, &c. But on execution had againſt ſuch clergyman, a ſequeſtration ſhall be had of the profits of his benefice. Clergymen may not be arreſted in the church, or church-yard, while attending on divine ſervice, &c. on pain of impriſonment, and ranſom at the King's pleaſure, and likewiſe to make agreement with the party: and he that beats a clergyman, may be obliged to do penance in the Spiritual Court

Theſe are all the privileges remaining on civil accounts: though by the Common law, they were to be free from the payment of tolls, in all fairs, and markets, as well for all the goods gotten upon their church livings, as for all goods and merchandiſes by them bought to be ſpent upon their rectories; and they had ſeveral other exemptions, &c. Theſe privileges, for the moſt part, have been allowed the clergy, that they might with the more freedom attend the ſervice of God and religion, and be reſpected as they ought; and therefore they are not to undertake any ſecular buſineſs, by which they may be diverted from their duty, or be brought into contempt.

They are uſed like other men in criminal caſes; except as to burning in the hand for felony, from which upon producing of their orders, or the ordinary's certificate, they ought to be freed: and though they have had the privilege of the clergy for a felony, yet they may again have their clergy, and ſo cannot a layman. But ſee Stat. 28 Hen. 8. c. 1. In ancient times clergymen convicted of crimes, were delivered over to the ordinary, to be puniſhed by the eccleſiaſtical laws; but this privilege is long ſince aboliſhed, nor was it ever allowed in treaſon or ſacrilege. Wood's Inſt. 24. Parſon's Counc. 145, &c. 2 Inſt. 4, 58, &c. Black. Com. 4 V. 358.

Benefit of clergy, we have already ſaid, is an ancient privilege, where one in orders claimed to be delivered to his ordinary to purge himſelf of a felony. And this purgation was to be by his own oath affirming his innocence, and the oaths of twelve compurgators as to their belief of it, before a jury of twelve clerks: if the clerk failed in his purgation, he was deprived of his character, whereby he became a mere layman, or he was to be kept in priſon till a pardon was obtained; but if he purged himſelf, he was ſet at liberty. Sometimes the delivery to the ordinary was without purgation, as upon attainder by confeſſion of the felony, or by verdict, where the felony was notorious, and then the clerk was to be degraded, or kept in priſon by the ordinary, &c. though in theſe caſes the ordinaries would frequently proceed to purgation. But purgation is now taken away by Stat. 18 Eliz. cap. 7. which enacts, that where an offender is admitted to his clergy, after burning in the hand, he ſhall not be delivered to the ordinary, but ſhall be enlarged by the court, &c. And the benefit of clergy, and burning in the hand, comes in the place of purgation at Common law.

In ancient times, in the King's courts, where felonies were determined, the biſhop or his deputy were to attend to inform the court whether the felon could read as a clerk or not; but the court was ſtill to judge of his ſufficiency. Since the Stat. 18 Eliz. c. 7. every man to whom benefit of clergy was granted, hath been put to read at the bar after found guilty, and convicted of felony, and ſo burnt in the hand, and ſet free for the firſt time, if the ordinary's commiſſioner or deputy ſtanding by did ſay,—Legit ut clericus; or otherwiſe he was to be hanged. But reading at laſt, as well as purgation, is wholly laid aſide; for by the 5 Ann. c. 6. if any perſon convicted of ſuch felony, for which he ought to have the benefit of the clergy, doth pray the benefit of this act, he ſhall not be required to read, but ſhall be puniſhed as a clerk convict.

A lord of parliament ſhall have the benefit of his clergy, though he cannot read, and without burning in the hand, for the firſt time only; and the King may pardon the burning of the hand in others, which is not ſo much in nature of a puniſhment, as a mark to notify that the perſon may have his clergy but once.

But he ſhall not be ouſted of his clergy, by the bare mark in his hand, or by a parol averment, without the record teſtifying it, or a tranſcript thereof, according to the following ſtatutes. 2 H. H. 373.

By Stat. 34 & 35 H. 8. cap. 14. The clerk of the crown, or of the peace, or of aſſiſe, ſhall certify a tranſcript briefly of the tenor of the indictment, outlawry, or conviction, and attainder, into the King's Bench in 40 days: And the clerk of the crown, when the judges of aſſiſe, or juſtices of the peace write to him for the names of ſuch perſons, ſhall certify the ſame, with the cauſes of the conviction or attainder.

Another method is given by the Stat. 3 W. & M. c. 9. ſect. 7. which enacts, that the clerk of the crown, clerk of the peace, or clerk of aſſiſe, where a perſon admitted to clergy ſhall be convicted, ſhall at the requeſt of the proſecutor, or any other on the King's behalf, certify a tranſcript briefly and in few words, containing the effect and tenor of the indictment and conviction of his having the benefit of clergy, and the addition of the party, and the certainty of the felony and conviction, to the judges where ſuch perſon ſhall be indicted for any ſubſequent offence.

Alſo it ſeems, that if the party deny that he is the ſame perſon, iſſue muſt be joined upon it, and it muſt be found upon trial that he is the ſame perſon, before he can be ouſted of clergy. 2 H. H. 373.

The privilege of clergy is ſaid to have its beginning from an encroachment of the Pope upon the temporal power, in behalf of the clergy, whom he endeavoured to exempt from the juriſdiction of lay judges in caſe of life and member; which the temporal courts would not yield to, but only in part: and firſt they would indict clerks for felony, as well as others, and proceed thereon till the ordinary did demand them; and if the ordinary would not demand them, the King's courts proceeded to conviction, attainder and execution; and if the ordinary did claim clerks before conviction, then an inquiſition was taken whether the party was guilty or not; and if acquitted, he was diſcharged; but if found guilty, then delivered to the ordinary, &c. The privilege ſo reſtrained was confirmed and eſtabliſhed by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 1. cap. 2. and allowed by divers other acts of parliament; and though originally the clergy never intended that any ſhould have that privilege, but thoſe who were in holy orders; yet afterwards they extended it to thoſe who were not ſtrictly in orders, but were aſſiſtants to them in doing divine offices.

As to laymen being admitted to this privilege, it hath been obſerved that in thoſe days few were bred to literature, but thoſe who were actually in orders, or educated for that purpoſe; and therefore the way of trial whether one was a clerk or no, was by reading, of which the court was judge; for if he could not read, the court would not deliver him as a clerk, though the ordinary did claim him; and if he did read, he ſhould be allowed as a clerk, though the ordinary refuſed him: and reading being the way of trial, whether a man was a clerk or not, without further examination into any other qualification, by an equitable conſtruction of the ſtatutes that eſtabliſhed and extended this privilege, all perſons that ſo approved themſelves by reading, were allowed to be clerks. Linwood 92, 100. Kel. 180.

It appears by our books that laymen that could read had the privilege of clergy ſince the 25 Ed. 3. which allowance never was condemned in parliament, or complained of as a grievance, but rather approved of: and by the 18 Eliz. c. 7. all perſons, as well lay as ſpiritual, have a right to the benefit of that ſtatute, for the firſt offence, in the ſame manner as clergymen.

Though it was anciently the uſual method for the ordinary to demand the criminal as his clerk, before the court allowed him the benefit of his clergy; yet there was no neceſſity for ſuch demand, but the court might without it admit a perſon to the benefit of clergy, on ſufficient evidence of his being a clerk, as upon producing letters of orders, or reading as a clerk, &c. except he appeared to have been guilty of ſacrilege, or of breaking the priſon of the ordinary; in which caſes it is ſaid to have been at the diſcretion of the ordinary, whether he ſhould have his clergy or not: and as there is no neceſſity that the ordinary ſhould demand the benefit of the clergy for a clerk; ſo neither is there any that the priſoner himſelf ſhould demand it, where it ſufficiently appears to the court that he hath a right to it, in reſpect of his being in orders, &c. In which caſe, if the priſoner does not demand it, it is left to the diſcretion of the judge, either to allow, or not allow it him. 2 Hawk. P. C. 359.

Thoſe who demand the benefit of clergy, are to plead, and put themſelves upon trial; but after a clerk hath put himſelf upon trial, and the inqueſt are charged with him, ſome writers tell us, that he may, if he deſire it, be admitted to his clergy before the jury come back; and ſhall not forfeit his goods, unleſs they find him guilty. Ibid. 358.

This claim of clergy might formerly be made on arraignment, or as ſoon as the priſoner was brought to the bar: afterwards it could not be claimed till after conviction, becauſe it is for the advantage of the King as to the forfeiture of the lands and goods of the criminal convict, and for the advantage of the party himſelf to make his challenges to the inqueſt; and perhaps he may be acquitted, and then he will not need this privilege. 2 Inſt. 164, 633. At Common law, if the party had not demanded his clergy before conviction, he loſt it: but in the time of H. 6. an alteration was made in the method of allowing clergy, viz. That the party indicted or appealed, was to anſwer to the felony, and after conviction, upon his demand the judge to allow him his clergy; which courſe has been ever ſince obſerved. Kel. 100. Clergy may be demanded after judgment given againſt a perſon, whether of death, &c. and even under the gallows, if there be a proper judge there, who has power to allow it. 2 Hawk. 357.

Perſons admitted to their clergy, may be continued in priſon as a further puniſhment, not exceeding one year. 18 El. cap. 7.

By Stat. 4 Geo. 1. cap. 11. Perſons convicted of offences within benefit of clergy (except receivers and buyers of ſtolen goods) may, inſtead of being whipped and burnt in the hand, be tranſported for ſeven years.

A perſon admitted to his clergy, forfeits all his goods that he hath at the time of the conviction. 2 H. H. 388.

But preſently, upon burning in the hand, he ought to be reſtored to the poſſeſſion of his lands, and from thenceforth to enjoy the profits thereof. 2 H. H. 388.

Alſo, it reſtores him to his credit; and conſequently enables him to be a good witneſs. 2 Hawk. 364.

And it is holden, that after a man is admitted to his clergy, it is actionable to call him felon; becauſe his offence being pardoned by the ſtatute, all the infamy and other conſequences of it are diſcharged. 2 Hawk. 365.

Clergy is never allowed by the Civil law; ſo that pirates, &c. ſhall not have clergy. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 449. The Common law did not deny clergy but in certain caſes; as in high treaſon, or ſacrilege; where a perſon was convict of hereſy; was a Turk, Jew, or Infidel, &c. Alſo women are not allowed it; but this is altered by Stat. 3 W. & M. c. 9.

By ſtatutes, clergy is denied in a great many felonies; though it is allowed in all caſes where not expreſly taken away. And where clergy is taken away expreſly by any ſtatute, the offence muſt be laid in the indictment to be againſt that very ſtatute, and the words of it, or the offender ſhall have his clergy. Kel. 104. H. P. C. 231.

In what caſes the benefit of clergy is yet allowed, and in what caſes it is taken away by ſeveral ſtatutes, ſee title Felony, &c. and Table to Statutes, ſame title, &c.

Clerico admittendo, Is a writ directed to the biſhop, for admitting a clerk to a benefice, upon a ne admittas tried and found for the party that procures the writ. Reg. Orig. 31. If a parſon recover a benefice, the patron may have this writ to the biſhop, though the ſix months are paſt, if the church is void, &c. And this ancient writ begins thus: Rex venerabili in Chriſto patri, &c. Cum A. B. de, &c. in curia noſtra recuperaſſet verſus nos præſentationem ſuam ad vicariam de, &c. vobis mandamus quod ad preſentat. ipſius A. B. ad vicariam idoneam perſonam admittatis, &c.

Upon a preſentation to a benefice recovered in a quare impedit, or aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, the execution is by this writ; directed not to the ſheriff, but to the biſhop or his metropolitan, requiring them to admit and inſtitute the clerk of the plaintiff. Black. Com. 3 V. 413. Vide Admittendo Clerico.

Clerico infra ſacros Ordines conſtituto, non Eligendo in Officium, Is a writ directed to thoſe who have thruſt a bailiwick, or other office upon one in holy orders, charging them to releaſe him. Reg. Orig. 143.

Clerico capto per Statutum Mercatorum, &c. A writ for the delivery of a clerk out of priſon, who is taken and impriſoned upon the breach of a ſtatute merchant. Reg. Orig. 147.

Clerico convicto commiſſo Gaolæ in defectu Ordinarii deliberando, Is an ancient writ that lay for the delivery of a clerk to his ordinary, that was formerly convicted of felony, by reaſon his ordinary did not challenge him according to the privileges of clerks. Reg. Orig. 69.

Clerk, (clericus) In the moſt general ſignification, is one that belongs to the holy miniſtry of the church; under which, where the Canon law hath full power, are not only comprehended ſacerdotes and diaconi, but alſo ſubdiaconi, lectores, acolyti, exorciſtæ and oſtiarii: but the word has been anciently uſed for a ſecular prieſt; in oppoſition to a religious or regular. Paroch. Antiq. 171. And is ſaid to be properly a miniſter or prieſt, one who is more peculiarly called in ſortem Domini. Blount.

Clerk, In another ſenſe denotes a perſon who practiſes his pen in any court, or otherwiſe; of which clerks there are various kinds, in ſeveral offices, &c. As the Officers of the courts of law were formerly often clergymen; hence it is ſaid they go under the term of clericus, or clerk. And Temp. Ed. 1. Johannes Sawell, clericus domini regis, was ſuppoſed to ſignify ſecretary or clerk of his council. Antiq. Nottinghamſh. 317.

Clerk of the acts, Is an officer in the navy office, whoſe buſineſs is to record all orders, contracts, bills, warrants, &c. tranſacted by the lord high admiral, or lords commiſſioners of the admiralty, and commiſſioners of the navy; and is mentioned in the Stat. 16 Car. 2. c. 5. And 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 11.

Clerk of Affidavits, In the court of Chancery, is an officer that files all affidavits made uſe of in court.

Clerk of the Aſſiſe, Is he that writes all things judicially done by the juſtices of aſſiſe in their circuits. Cromp. Juriſd. 227. This officer is aſſociated to the judge in commiſſion of aſſiſe, to take aſſiſes, &c.

Clerk of the Bails, An officer belonging to the court of King's Bench. He files the bail pieces taken in that court, and attends for that purpoſe.

Clerk of the Check, Is an officer in the King's court, ſo called, becauſe he hath the check and controlment of the yeomen of the guard, and all other ordinary yeomen belonging either to the King, Queen, or prince; giving leave, or allowing their abſence in attendance, or diminiſhing their wages for the ſame: he alſo by himſelf or deputy takes the view of thoſe that are to watch in the court, and hath the ſetting of the watch. 33 H. 8. c. 12. Alſo there is an officer of the ſame name in the King's navy at Plymouth, Deptford, Woolwich, Chatham, &c. 19 Car. 2. c. 1.

Clerk Controller of the King's Houſe, Is an officer in the King's court, that hath authority to allow or diſallow charges and demands of purſivants, meſſengers of the Green Cloth, &c. He hath likewiſe the overſight of all defects and miſcarriages of any of the inferior officers; and hath a right to ſit in the counting-houſe, with the ſuperior officers, viz. the lord ſteward, treaſurer, controller, and cofferer of the houſhold, for correcting any diſorders. 33 H. 8. c. 12.

Clerk of the Crown, (clericus coronæ) An officer in the King's Bench, whoſe function is to frame, read and record all indictments againſt offenders there arraigned or indicted of any public crime. And when divers perſons are jointly indicted, the clerk of the crown ſhall take but one fee, viz. 2 s. for them all. Stat. 2 H. 4. c. 10. He is otherwiſe termed clerk of the crown-office, and exhibits informations, by order of the court, for divers offences: And on informations exhibited in the crown-office, for treſpaſs, battery, &c. Recogniſances are to be entered into, to proſecute with effect, &c. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 22.

Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, Is an officer in that court who continually attends the Lord Chancellor in perſon or by deputy: he writes and prepares for the Great Seal, ſpecial matters of ſtate by commiſſion, or the like, either immediately from his Majeſty's orders, or by order of his council, as well ordinary as extraordinary, viz. commiſſions of lieutenancy, of juſtices of aſſiſe, oyer and terminer, gaol delivery, and of the peace, with their writs of aſſociation, &c. Alſo all general pardons, at the King's coronation; or in parliament, where he ſits in the Lord's houſe in parliament time; and into whoſe office the writs of parliament, with the names of knights and burgeſſes elected thereupon, are to be returned and filed. He hath likewiſe the making out of all ſpecial pardons; and writs of execution upon bonds of ſtatute ſtaple forfeited; which was annexed to his office in the reign of Queen Mary, in conſideration of his chargeable attendance.

Clerk of the Declarations, An officer of the court of King's Bench, that files all declarations in cauſes there depending, after they are ingroſſed, &c.

Clerk of the Deliveries, Is an officer in the Tower of London, who exerciſes his office in taking of indentures for all ſtores, ammunition, &c. iſſued from thence.

Clerk of the Errors, (clericus errorum) In the court of Common Pleas, tranſcribes and certifies into the King's Bench the tenor of the records of the cauſe or action, upon which the writ of error, made by the curſitor, is brought there to be heard and determined. The clerk of the errors in the King's Bench, likewiſe tranſcribes and certifies the records of cauſes in that court into the Exchequer, if the cauſe or action were by bill: if by original, the Lord Chief Juſtice certifies the record into the houſe of peers in parliament, by taking the tranſcript from the clerk of the errors, and delivering it to the Lord Chancellor, there to be determined, according to the ſtatutes 27 Eliz. c. 8. and 31 Eliz. c. 1. The clerk of the errors in the Exchequer alſo tranſcribes the records, certified thither out of the King's Bench, and prepares them for judgment in the court of Exchequer Chamber, to be given by the juſtices of C. B. and Barons there. Stat. 16 Car. 2. c. 2. 20 Car. 2. c. 4.

Clerk of the Eſſoins, Is an officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas, who keeps the eſſoin rolls; and the eſſoin roll is a record of that court: he has the providing of parchment, and cutting it out into rolls, marking the numbers thereon; and the delivery out of all the rolls to every officer of the court; the receiving of them again when they are written, and the binding and making up the whole bundles of every term; which he doth as ſervant of the chief Juſtice. The Chief Juſtice of C. B. is at the charge of the parchment of all the rolls, for which he is allowed; as is alſo the Chief Juſtice of B. R. beſides the penny for the ſeal of every writ of privilege and outlawry, the ſeventh penny taken for the ſeal of every writ in court under the green wax, or petit ſeal; the ſaid Lord Chief Juſtices having annexed to their offices or places, the cuſtody of the ſaid ſeals belonging to each court.

Clerk of the Eſtreats, (clericus extractorum) A clerk or officer belonging to the Exchequer, who every term receives the eſtreats out of the Lord Treaſurer's Remembrancer's office, and writes them out to be levied for the King: and he makes ſchedules of ſuch ſums eſtreated as are to be diſcharged.

Clerk of the Hanaper, or Hamper, Is an officer in the Chancery, whoſe office is to receive all the money due to the King, for the ſeals of charters, patents, commiſſions and writs; as alſo fees due to the officers for inrolling and examining the ſame. He is obliged to attendance on the Lord Chancellor daily in the term time, and at all times of ſealing, having with him leather bags, wherein are put all charters, &c. After they are ſealed, thoſe bags, being ſealed up with the Lord Chancellor's private ſeal, are delivered to the controller of the hanaper, who, upon receipt of them, enters the effect of them in a book, &c. This hanaper repreſents what the Romans termed fiſcum, which contained the Emperor's treaſure; and the Exchequer was anciently ſo called, becauſe in eo reconderentur hanapi & ſcutræ cæteraquæ vaſa quæ in cenſum & tributum perſolvi ſolebant; or it may be for that the yearly tribute which princes received was in hampers or large veſſels full of money. There being an arrear of 10,590 l. 12 s. 11 d of ſeveral ancient fees and ſalaries, &c. payable out of this office; and there being a remainder of 13,698 l. 1 s. 11 d. of the ſix-penny ſtamp duty on writs granted for relief of the ſuitors of the court of Chancery; it was enacted by the Stat. 23 G. 2. c. 25. that thereout the 10,590*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.* ſhould be paid to the creditors of this office. That the ſaid duty ſhould be made perpetual; and thereout 3000*l. per annum* ſhould be paid to the clerk of the hanaper, that the reſidue of the 13,698*l.* 1*s.* 11*d.* ſhould be laid out in government ſecurities, and the intereſt paid to the clerk of the hanaper, who ſhould pay 1,200*l.* to the Maſter of the Rolls. And that in caſe the revenue of this office ſo augmented, ſhould be more than ſufficient to pay all fees, ſalaries, &c. the clerk ſhould account for the ſurplus.

Clerk of the Inrollments, Is an officer of the Common Pleas, that inrolls and exemplifies all fines and recoveries, and returns writs of entry, ſummons and ſeiſin, &c.

Clerk of the Juries, (clericus juratorum) An officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas, who makes out the writs of habeas corpora and diſtringas, for the appearance of juries; either in that court, or at the aſſiſes, after the jury or panel is retured upon the venire facias: he alſo enters into the rolls the awarding of theſe writs; and makes all the continuances from the going out of the habeas corpora until the verdict is given.

Clerk of the Market, (clericus mercati hoſpitii regis) Is an officer of the King's houſe, to whom it belongs to take charge of the King's meaſures, and keep the ſtandards of them, which are examples of all meaſures throughout the land; as of ells, yards, quarts, gallons, &c. And of weights, buſhels, &c. And to ſee that all weights and meaſures in every place be anſwerable to the ſaid ſtandard: of which office you may read in Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 8, 9, 10, &c. Touching this officer's duty, there are alſo divers ſtatutes, as 13 R. 2. cap. 4. and 16 R. 2. c. 3. by which every clerk of the market is to have weights and meaſures with him when he makes eſſay of weights, &c. mark'd according to the ſtandard; and to ſeal weights and meaſures, under penalties. The 16 Car. 1. c. 19. enacts, That clerks of the market of the King's or Prince's houſhold, ſhall only execute their offices within the verge; and head officers are to act in corporations, &c. The clerks of markets have generally power to hold a court, to which end they may iſſue out proceſs to ſheriffs and bailiffs to bring a jury before them; and give a charge, take preſentments of ſuch as keep or uſe falſe weights and meaſures; and may ſet a fine upon the offenders, &c. 4 Inſt. 274. But if they take any other fee or reward than what is allowed by ſtatute, &c. or impoſe any fines without legal trial; or otherwiſe miſdemean themſelves, they ſhall forfeit 5*l.* for the firſt offence, 10*l.* for the ſecond, and 20*l.* for the third offence, on conviction before a juſtice of peace, &c. Stat. 16 Car. 1. c. 19.

Clerk Marſhal of the King's Houſe, An officer that attends the marſhal in his court, and records all his proceedings. 33 H. 8. c. 22.

Clerk of the Nichils, or Nihils (clericus nihilorum) An officer of the court of Exchequer, who makes a roll of all ſuch ſums as are nihiled by the ſheriffs upon their eſtreats of green wax, and delivers the ſame into the remembrancer's office, to have execution done upon it for the king. See Stat. 5 R. 2. c. 13. Nihils are iſſues by way of fine or amercement.

Their office is to record the return of all inquiſitions out of every ſhire; to make out patents of cuſtomers, gaugers, controllers, &c. all conge d'elires for biſhops, the ſummons of the nobility, and burgeſſes to parliament; commiſſions directed to knights and others of every ſhire, for aſſeſſing ſubſidies and taxes; all offices found poſt mortem are brought to the clerks of the petty bag to be filed; and by them are entered all pleadings of the Chancery concerning the validity of patents or other things which paſs the Great Seal; they alſo make forth liberates upon extents of ſtatutes ſtaple, and recovery of recognizances forfeited, and all elegits upon them: and all ſuits for or againſt any privileged perſon are proſecuted in their office, &c.

Clerk of the Pipe, (clericus pipæ) Is an officer in the Exchequer who having the accounts of debts due to the king, delivered and drawn out of the remembrancer's offices, charges them down in the great roll, and is called clerk of the pipe from the ſhape of that roll, which is put together like a pipe: he alſo writes out warrants to the ſheriffs to levy the ſaid debts upon the goods and chattels of the debtors; and if they have no goods, then he draws them down to the Lord Treaſurer's Remembrancer, to write eſtreats againſt their lands. The ancient revenue of the crown ſtands in charge to him, and he ſees the ſame anſwered by the farmers and ſheriffs: he makes a charge to all ſheriffs of their ſummons of the pipe, and green wax, and takes care it be anſwered on their accounts. And he hath the drawing and ingroſſing of all leaſes of the king's lands; having a ſecondary and ſeveral clerks under him. In the reign of King Hen. 6. this officer was called ingroſſator magni rotuli. See Stat. 33 H. 8. c. 22.

Clerk of the Pleas, (clericus placitorum) An officer in the court of Exchequer, in whoſe office all the officers of the court, upon ſpecial privilege belonging unto them, ought to ſue or be ſued in any action, &c. In this office are alſo proſecuted actions at law, by other perſons as well as officers of the court; but the plaintiff ought to be tenant, or debtor to the King, or ſome way accountant to him: now it is only matter of form. The clerk of the pleas has under him a great many clerks, who are attornies in all ſuits commenced or depending in the Exchequer.

Clerk of the Privy Seal, (clericus privati ſigilli.) There are four of the officers which attend the Lord Privy Seal: or if there be no Lord Privy Seal, the Principal Secretary of State; writing and making out all things that are ſent by warrant from the Signet to the Privy Seal, and which are to be paſſed to the Great Seal: alſo they make out privy ſeals, upon a ſpecial occaſion of his Majeſty's affairs, as for loan of money, and the like. He that is now called Lord Privy Seal, ſeems to have been in ancient times called clerk of the privy ſeal; but notwithſtanding to have been reckoned in the number of the great officers of the realm. Stat. 12 R. 2. c. 11. And 27 H. 8. c. 11.

Clerk of the Rolls, An officer of the Chancery, that makes ſearch for, and copies deeds, offices, &c.

Clerk of the Rules, In the court of King's Bench, is he who draws up and enters all the rules and orders made in court: and gives rules of courſe on divers writs: this officer is mentioned in the 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 22.

Clerk of the Sewers, An officer belonging to the commiſſioners of ſewers, who writes and records their proceedings, which they tranſact by virtue of their commiſſions, and the authority given them by Statute 13 Eliz. c. 9.

Clerk of the Signet, (clericus ſigneti) Is an officer continually attendant on his Majeſty's Principal Secretary, who hath the cuſtody of the privy ſignet, as well for ſealing his Majeſty's private letters, as ſuch grants as paſs the King's hand by bill ſigned: and of theſe clerks or officers there are four that attend in their courſe, and have their diet at the Secretary's table. The fees of the clerk of the ſignet, and privy ſeal, are limited particularly by ſtatute, with a penalty annexed for taking any thing more. See 27 H. 8. c. 11.

Clerk of the King's Silver, (clericus argenti regis) Is an officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas, to whom every fine is brought after it hath paſſed the office of the cuſtos brevium, and by whom the effect of the writ of covenant is entered into a paper-book; according to which all the fines of that term are recorded in the rolls of the court. And the entry is in this form: Wilts, ſſ. A. B. dat domino regi dimidiam marcam, &c. pro licentia concordandi cum C. D. pro talibus terris in, &c. & habet per chirographum per pacem admiſſum, &c. After the King's ſilver is entered, it is accounted a fine in law, and not before.

Clerk of the Superſedeas's, An officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas, who makes out writs of ſuperſedeas, upon a defendant's appearing to the exigent on an outlawry, whereby the ſheriff is forbidden to return the exigent.

Clerk of the Treaſury, (clericus theſaurarii) Is an officer of the Common Pleas, who hath the charge of keeping the records of the court, and makes out all the records of Niſi prius; alſo he makes all exemplifications of records being in the Treaſury; and he hath the fees due for all ſearches. He is taken to be the ſervant of the Chief Juſtice, and removeable at pleaſure; whereas all other officers of the court are for life: there is a ſecondary, or under clerk of the Treaſury for aſſiſtance, who hath ſome fees and allowances: and likewiſe an under-keeper, that always keeps one key of the Treaſury door, and the chief clerk of the ſecondary another; ſo that the one cannot come in without the other.

Clerk of the King's Great Wardrobe, An officer of the King's houſhold, that keeps an account or inventory of all things belonging to the royal wardrobe. Stat. 1 E. 4. c. 1.

Clerk of the Warrants, (clericus warrantorum) An officer belonging to the Common Pleas court, who enters all warrants of attorney for plaintiffs and defendants in ſuits; and inrolls deeds of indentures of bargain and ſale, which are acknowledged in the court or before any judges out of the court. And it is his office to eſtreat into the Exchequer all iſſues, fines and amerciaments, which grow due to the King in that court, for which he hath a ſtanding fee or allowance.

Coach, (currus) A convenience well known; and for regulating of hackney coaches in London, there are ſeveral ſtatutes. By 9 Ann. c. 23. Eight hundred hackney coaches and two hundred chairs are allowed in London and Weſtminſter; which are to be licenſed by commiſſioners, and pay a duty to the crown: and if any perſon drive a hackney coach without licence, he ſhall forfeit 5 l. and a chair 40 s. Coachmen and chairmen, giving abuſive language, or demanding more than their fare, &c. a juſtice of peace may order them to pay not exceeding 20 s. to the poor, and not being able to pay it, ſend them to the houſe of correction; and perſons not paying coachmen their fare, or cutting or defacing coaches, &c. a juſtice will order ſatisfaction to be made, and on refuſal, may bind them over to the quarter-ſeſſions.

The 1 Geo. 1. c. 57. ordains, That where coachmen refuſe to go at, or exact more for their hire than is limited by the act, they ſhall forfeit not exceeding 3 l. nor under 10 s. and the commiſſioners have power to determine it. The fare of hackney coachmen in London, or within ten miles thereof, is 10 s. per day, allowing 12 hours to the day; and by the hour not above 1 s. 6 d. for the firſt, and 1 s. for every hour after: and none are obliged to pay above 1 s. for the uſe of any hackney coach for any diſtance not mentioned in the act, which is not above one mile and four furlongs; nor above 1 s. 6 d. for any diſtance not exceeding two miles: the fare of a hackney chair is 1 s. for any diſtance not exceeding a mile, and 1 s. 6 d. for any diſtance not exceeding a mile and four furlongs. There are certain places and diſtances mentioned in the act for the extent of the reſpective fares; and other diſtances meaſured and rated by the commiſſioners, in purſuance of the ſtatutes

Coachmen are to have numbers to their coaches on tin-plates, or ſhall forfeit 5 l. and refuſing any perſon to take the number of their coaches, or giving a wrong number, incurs the forfeiture of a ſum not exceeding 40 s. None but licenſed coaches ſhall ply at funerals for hire, under the penalty of 5 l.

Drivers of hackney coaches are to give way to perſons of quality, and gentlemen's coaches, on the penalty of 10 s. On Sundays there were formerly only one hundred and ſeventy-five coaches to ply, but now we believe there are more. There are ſeveral ſtandings of coaches, at the moſt noted parts of the town, ordered by the commiſſioners to be in the middle of ſtreets, &c. Vide 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 22. 9 Ann. c. 23. 10 Ann. c. 19. ſect. 158. 12 Ann. ſtat. 1. c. 14. 1 Geo. 1. c. 57. And 12 Geo. 1. c. 12. ſect. 13. 16 Geo. 2. c. 26. ſect. 3.

The maſters of ſtage coaches are not liable to an action for things loſt by their coachmen, who have money given them to carry the goods; unleſs where any ſuch maſter takes a certain price for the ſame. See 1 Salk. 282. By the Stat. 20 Geo. 2. c. 10. A yearly tax of 4 l. is laid on every coach, berlin, landau, chariot, calaſh with four wheels, chaiſe marine, chaiſe with four wheels, and caravan kept by any perſon for his own uſe, (except ſuch as are licenſed by the commiſſioners for hackney coaches), and of 40 s. on every calaſh, chaiſe and chair with two wheels, drawn by one or more horſes, kept by any perſon for his own uſe. No perſon to pay for more than five ſuch carriages on which 4 l. a year is laid, except kept to be let out for hire. This duty to be under the management of the commiſſioners of exciſe. Perſons keeping ſuch coaches, &c. yearly to give notice to the exciſe-office, and then pay the duty. Stage coaches and poſt-chaiſes are excepted. Poſt-chaiſes are to be entered at the exciſe-office, and have a figure or mark of diſtinction; and ſo are coaches, &c. let out for hire. Coaches, &c. kept for ſale are not to be taxed. If any perſon, having paid the duty, ſhall die before the end of the year, no perſon claiming title to the coach, &c. ſhall be liable to any tax for the remainder of the year.

Coachmakers. The wares of coachmakers ſhall be ſearched, by perſons appointed by the ſadlers company. Stat. 1 Jac. 1. cap. 22.

For the contents of the coal-buſhel, ſee 12 Ann. ſtat. 2. c. 17.

Contracts between coal owners and maſters of ſhips, &c. for reſtraining the buying of coals are void; and the parties to forfeit 100 l. And ſelling coals for other ſorts than they are, ſhall forfeit 50 l. Not above fifty laden colliers are to continue in the port of Newcaſtle, &c. And work-people in the mines there ſhall not be employed who are hired by others, under the penalty of 5 l

Coal-ſacks ſhall be ſealed and marked at Guildhall, &c. and be four feet and two inches in length, and twenty-ſix inches in breadth, on pain of 20 s. Alſo ſellers of coals are to keep a lawful buſhel, and put three buſhels to each ſack, which buſhel and other meaſures ſhall be edged with iron, and ſealed; and uſing others, or altering them, incurs a forfeiture of 50 l. &c. The penalties above 5 l. recoverable by action of debt, &c. and under that ſum before juſtices of peace. Stat. 3 Geo. 2. c. 26

Owners or maſters of ſhips ſhall not enhance the price of coals in the river of Thames, by keeping of turn in delivering of coals there, under the penalty of 100 l. &c. 4 Geo. 2. c. 30. The price of ſea-coals imported into London and ports adjacent, to be there ſold, may be ſet by the Lord Mayor, &c. for one year; and perſons ſelling coals out of any veſſel, yard, or warehouſe, for a higher price, ſhall forfeit 36 s. per chaldron, to be levied by warrant of two juſtices. Dealers in coals at Billingſgate, &c. refuſing to ſign legal contracts, ſhall forfeit 50 l. And any perſon vending coals at Newcaſtle, that refuſeth to put a loading on ſhipboard, on tender of the price they bear, is liable to the forfeiture of 100 l. to be recovered by action in the courts at Weſtminſter, within ſix months, by Stat. 11 Geo. 2. c. 15,

By the Stat. 19 Geo. 2. c. 35. Two land coal-meters are to be appointed for the city and liberty of Weſtminſter, and that part of the dutchy of Lancaſter adjoining thereto, and the ſeveral pariſhes of St. Giles in the Fields, St. Mary le Bon, and ſuch part of the pariſh of St. Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middleſex, are to appoint labouring coal-meters. No perſon, after coals delivered from any ſhip, is to break bulk, before the time of delivery at the wharf, in the abſence of a meter or the conſumer, under the penalty of 5 l. All contracts for coals to be delivered within the limits aforeſaid (not being leſs than five chaldron) ſhall be for pool meaſure, including the ingrain, and ſhall be ſo underſtood, though the term pool meaſure be omitted in the contract; and ſhall be loaded ſeparately, and delivered without being meaſured, unleſs the buyer deſire it. All coals ſold for wharf meaſure, above eight buſhels, ſhall be meaſured in the preſence of a labouring coal meter. The ſeller to pay 4 d. per chaldron to the principal coal-meter, who is to deliver to the ſeller a ticket of the names of the ſeller and conſumer, quantity of coals, &c. the ſeller is to deliver the ſame to the conſumer, who is to pay for the metage.

Penalty of altering or refuſing a ticket 5 l. Penalty of carrying coals without a ticket 50 l. Penalty on falſe ticket or falſe meaſure 5 l. Conſumer diſſatisfied may have coals re-meaſured. The carman, on notice in writing, that the conſumer is diſſatisfied, ſhall not quit the cart till the coals are re-meaſured. By 23 Geo. 2. c. 26. If either of the principal land coal-meters ſhall neglect to ſtation labouring coal-meters, he ſhall forfeit 10 l. Every labouring coal-meter neglecting to attend forfeits 40 s. For farther regulations of the coal trade, ſee 22 Geo. 2. c. 37. 31 Geo. 2. c. 15. 32 Geo. 2. c. 27. & 33 Geo. 2. c. 15

Coat-armour. Coats of arms were not introduced into ſeals, nor indeed into any other uſe, till about the reign of Richard the Firſt, who brought them from the Croiſade in the Holy Land; where they were firſt invented and painted on the ſhields of the knights, to diſtinguiſh the variety of perſons of every Chriſtian nation who reſorted thither, and who could not, when clad in complete ſteel, be otherwiſe known or aſcertained. Black. Com. 2 V. 306.

It is the buſineſs of the court military, or the court of chivalry, according to Sir Matthew Hale, to adjuſt the right of armorial enſigns, bearings, creſts, ſupporters, pennons, &c. and alſo rights of place or precedence, where the King's patent or act of parliament (which cannot be over-ruled by this court) have not already determined it. Black. Com. 3 V. 105.

Cocherings, An exaction or tribute in Ireland, now reduced to chief rents. See Bonaght.

Cochineal. The importation of cochineal from ports in Spain was declared lawful during the late war, &c. Stat. 6 Ann. c. 33. Any perſons may import cochineal into this kingdom, in ſhips belonging to Great Britain, or other country in amity, from any place whatſoever, by 7 Geo. 2. cap. 18.

Cocket, (cockettum) Is a ſeal belonging to the King's cuſtom-houſe: or rather a ſcroll of parchment ſealed, and delivered by the officers of the cuſtom-houſe to merchants, as a warrant that their merchandiſes are cuſtomed: which parchment is otherwiſe called literæ de coketto, or literæ teſtimoniales de coketto. 11 Hen. 6. Reg. Orig. 179, 192. So it is uſed, 5 & 6 Ed. 6. cap. 14, &c. The word cockettum or cocket, is alſo taken for the cuſtom-houſe or office where goods to be tranſported were firſt entered, and paid their cuſtom, and had a cocket or certificate of diſcharge: and cocketta lana is wool duly entered and cocketted, or authoriſed to be tranſported. Mem. in Scac. 23 Ed. 1.

Cocket is likewiſe uſed for a ſort of meaſure, as we may read in Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 9. Panis vero integer quadrantalis frumenti ponderabit unum cocket & dimidium: and it is made uſe of for a diſtinction of bread, in the ſtatute of bread and ale. 51 H. 3. ſtat. 1. ord. pro piſtor. Where mention is made of waſtel-bread, cocket bread, bread of treet, and bread of common wheat; the waſtel bread being what we now call the fineſt bread, or French bread; the cocket bread the ſecond ſort of white bread; bread of treet, and of common wheat, brown, or houſhold bread, &c.

What we call cocket, (as to the King's ſeal) was called cocket, and a part of the king's ſeal. Madox Exch. 1 V. 783. c. 18. & ibid. c. 1. N. S.

Cockſetus, A boatman, cockſwain or coxon. Cowel.

Cocula, A cogue, or little drinking-cup, in form of a ſmall boat, uſed eſpecially at ſea, and ſtill retained in a cogue of brandy. Theſe drinking cups are alſo uſed in taverns to drink new ſherry, and other white wines which look foul in a glaſs.

Codicil, (codicillus, from codex, a book, a writing) Is a ſchedule or ſupplement to a will, where any thing is omitted which the teſtator would add, or he would explain, alter or retract what he hath done; and it is the ſame with a teſtament, but that it is without an executor: and one may leave behind him only one teſtament, but as many codicils as he pleaſes. Weſt. Symb. p. 636. A codicil is taken as part of the will; and the codicils ought to be annexed to the teſtament, and the executor is to ſee that they are all performed: if the will or codicils are kept from the executor, he may force the party detaining them to deliver them up by the eccleſiaſtical law, and recover them in the ſpiritual court. Swinb. pag. 1. ſect. 1. Some writers, comparing a teſtament and a codicil together, call a teſtament a great will, and a codicil a little one.

Coffee, Tea, and Chocolate. The cuſtom duties on coffee, tea, and chocolate, are taken off by ſtatute, and inland duties granted in their ſtead, payable by druggiſts, and all perſons dealing in coffee, &c. And entries are to be made of all warehouſes, under penalties and forfeiture of the goods. Stat. 10 Geo. 1. c. 10. The duties to be paid are 2*s. per* pound for coffee, for tea 4*s.* and chocolate 1*s.* 6*d.* But ſee poſt. And coffee, &c. not to be ſold but in places entered; and if above ſix pounds weight, to have a permit; dealers in coffee and chocolate, coffee-houſe keepers, &c. ſhall keep an account of goods ſold every day, and deliver their books to the officers on oath, &c. Chocolate ſhall be ſtamped, and chocolate-makers are to make an entry of all chocolate made, under the penalty of 50*l.* And perſons, mixing other drugs with coffee or tea, ſhall forfeit 100*l.* Stat. 11 Geo. 1. c. 30.

See the late ſtatute againſt ſophiſticating tea, and importing cocoa nutſhells or huſks to make chocolate, &c. 4 Geo. 2. c. 14. See 5 Geo. 2. c. 24. The inland duties on tea altered, 18 Geo. 2. c. 26. Drawback on tea taken off, 18 Geo. 2. c. 26. India Company may import tea by licence from European ports, 18 Geo. 2. c. 26. Tea may be imported to Ireland and the plantations without paying inland duty, 21 Geo. 2. c. 14. Tea above 6 lb. in Britiſh ſhips, come from abroad and not employed by the India Company, forfeited. 28 Geo. 2. c. 21. Additional duty on coffee and chocolate, 32 Geo. 2. c. 10.

Cofra, A coffer, cheſt, or trunk.——Cuſtos collegii & miniſtri ejuſdem, &c. capientes certam ſummam pecuniæ de cofris fundatoris. Munimenta Hoſpit. SS. Trinit. de Pontefracto, MS. fol. 50.

Cofferer of the King's Houſhold, Is a principal officer of the King's houſe, next under the controller, who, in the counting-houſe, and elſewhere, hath a ſpecial charge and overſight of other officers of the houſhold, to all which, he pays their wages: this officer paſſes his accounts in the Exchequer, and is mentioned in 39 Eliz. c. 7.

Coggle, A ſmall fiſhing boat, upon the coaſts of Yorkſhire: and cogs, (cogones) are a kind of little ſhips, or veſſels, uſed in the rivers Ouſe and Umber. Stat. 23 H. 8. c. 18.—Præparatis cogonibus, Galleis & aliis Navibus, &c. Mat. Pariſ. anno 1066. And hence the cogmen, boatmen or ſeamen, who after ſhipwreck or loſſes by ſea, travelled and wandered about to defraud the people by begging and ſtealing, till they were reſtrained by divers good laws. Du Freſne.

Cognati, Relations by the mother, as the agnati are relations by the father.

Cognatione, A writ of couſenage. See Coſenage.

Cogniſance, or cognizance, (Fr. connuſance, Lat. cognitio) Is uſed diverſly in our law: ſometimes it is an acknowledgment of a fine, or confeſſion of a thing done; and there is a cogniſance of taking a diſtreſs: ſometimes it is the hearing of a matter judicially; as to take cogniſance of a cauſe: and ſometimes it ſignifies a juriſdiction, as cogniſance of pleas is a power to call a cauſe or plea out of another court; which none can but the King, or by charter. This cogniſance of pleas is a privilege granted by the King to a city or town, to hold plea of all contracts, &c. within the liberty of the franchiſe; and when any man is impleaded for ſuch matters in the courts of Weſtminſter, the mayor, &c, of ſuch franchiſe may aſk cogniſance of the plea, and demand that it ſhall be determined before them: but if the courts at Weſtminſter are poſſeſſed of the plea before cogniſance be demanded, it is then too late. Terms de Ley. See Stat. 9 H. 4. c. 5.

Cogniſance of Pleas extends not to aſſiſes; and when granted, the original ſhall not be removed: it lies not in a quare impedit, for they cannot write to the biſhop, nor of a plea out of the county-court, which cannot award a reſummons, &c. Jenk. Cent. 31, 34. This cogniſance ſhall be demanded the firſt day: and if the demandant in a plea of land counterpleads the franchiſe, and the tenant joins with the claim of the franchiſe, and it is found againſt the franchiſe, the demandant ſhall recover the land; but if it be found againſt the demandant, the writ ſhall abate. Ibid. 18.

There are three ſorts of inferior juriſdictions, one whereof is tenere placita, and this is the loweſt ſort; for it is only a concurrent juriſdiction, and the party may ſue there, or in the King's courts, if he will. The ſecond is conuſance of pleas, and by this a right is veſted in the lord of the franchiſe to hold the plea, and he is the only perſon who can take advantage of it. The third ſort is an exempt juriſdiction, as where the King grants to a great city, that the inhabitants thereof ſhall be ſued within their city, and not elſewhere; this grant may be pleaded to the juriſdiction of this court, if there be a court within that city which can hold plea of the cauſe, and no-body can take advantage of this privilege but a defendant; for if he will bring certiorari, that will remove the cauſe, but he may wave it if he will, ſo that the privilege is only for his benefit. 3 Salk. 79, 80. pl. 4. Hil. 1 Ann. B. R. Croſſe v. Smith.

King Hen. 8. by letters patent of the 14th of his reign, and confirmed by parliament, granted to the univerſity of Oxford conuſance of pleas, in which a ſcholar or ſervant of a college ſhould be party, ita quod juſticiarii de utroque banco ſe non intromittant. An attorney of C. B. ſued a ſcholar in C. B. for battery; per cur. This general grant does not extend to take away the ſpecial privilege of any court without ſpecial words. Lit. Rep. 304. Mich. 5 C. C. B. Oxford (Univerſity's) caſe.

If a ſcholar of Oxford or Cambridge be ſued in Chancery for a ſpecial performance of a contract to leaſe lands in Middleſex, the Univerſity ſhall not have conuſance, becauſe they cannot ſequeſter the lands. Gilb. Hiſt. of C. P. 194. cites 2 Vent. 363.

Conuſance muſt be demanded before an imparlance, and the ſame term the writ is returnable, after the defendant appears, becauſe, till he appears there is no cauſe in court, otherwiſe there would be a delay of juſtice; for if after imparlance, when the defendant has a day already allowed him, he would have two days, ſince when the conuſance is allowed, the franchiſe prefixes a day to both parties to appear before them, and it is the lord's laches if he does not come ſoon enough not to delay the parties. Gilb. Hiſt. of P. C 196.

Conuſance was granted to the Univerſity of Oxford, (no cauſe being ſhewn to the contrary), in Eaſter Term, 9 Geo. 2. in the caſe of Woodcocke and Brooke. Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annally, fol. 241.

Cogniſance alſo ſignifies the badge of a waterman or ſervant, which is uſually the giver's creſt, whereby he is known to belong to this or that nobleman or gentleman. Vide Black. Com 3 V. 300. 4 V. 275.

Cogniſance, or conuſance, is the anſwer given by a deft. in replevin, who hath acted as bailiff, &c. to another in making a diſtreſs, and is tantamount to an avowry.

Cogniſor and Cogniſee, (or cognizor) Cogniſor, is he that paſſeth or acknowledgeth a fine of lands or tenements to another; and cogniſee is he to whom the fine of the ſaid lands, &c. is acknowledged. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 5.

Cognitiones, Enſigns and arms, or a military coat painted with arms——Cum viderunt hoſtes Chriſti armis, vexillis & cognitionibus picturatis, &c. Mat. Pariſ. 1250.

Cognitionibus Mittendis, Is a writ to one of the King's juſtices of the Common Pleas, or other that hath Power to take a fine, who having taken the fine defers to certify it, commanding him to certify it. Reg. Orig. 68.

Cognovit Actionem, Is where a defendant acknowledges or confeſſes the plaintiff's cauſe againſt him to be juſt and true, and, before or after iſſue, ſuffers judgment to be entered againſt him without trial. And here the confeſſion generally extends no farther than to what is contained in the declaration; but if the defendant will confeſs more, he may. 1 Rol. 929. Hob. 178.

Cogware, Is ſaid to be a ſort of coarſe cloths, made in divers parts of England, of which mention is made in the 13 R. 2. cap. 10.

Cohuagium, A tribute paid by thoſe who meet promiſcuouſly in the market or fair; cobua ſignifying a promiſcuous multitude of men in a fair or market.—Quieti ab omni thelonio, paſſagio, pontagio, cohuagio, pallagio, &c. Du Cange.

Coif, (coifa) A title given to ſerjeants at law; who are called ſerjeants of the coif, from the lawn coif they wear on their heads under their caps, when they are created. The uſe of it was anciently to cover tonſuram clericalem, otherwiſe called corona clericalis; becauſe the crown of the head was cloſe ſhaved, and a border of hair left round the lower part, which made it look like a crown. Blount.

Coin, (cuna pecunia) Seems to come from the Fr. coign, i. e. angulus, a corner, whence it has been held, that the ancienteſt ſort of coin was ſquare with corners, and not round as it now is: it is any ſort of money coined. Cromp. Juriſd. 220. Coin is a word collective, which contains in it all manner of the ſeveral ſtamps and ſpecies of money in any kingdom: and this is one of the royal prerogatives belonging to every ſovereign prince, that he alone in his own dominions may order and diſpoſe the quantity, value, and faſhion of his coin. But the coin of one King is not current in the kingdom of another, unleſs it be at great loſs; though our King by his prerogative may make any foreign coin lawful money of England at his pleaſure, by proclamation. Terms de Ley. If a man binds himſelf by bond to pay one hundred pounds of lawful money of Great Britain, and the perſon bound, the obligor, pays the obligee the money in French, Spaniſh, or other coin, made current either by act of parliament, or the King's proclamation, the obligation will be well performed. Co. Lit. 207. But it is ſaid a payment in farthings, is not a good payment. 2 Inſt. 517.

When a perſon has accepted of money in payment from another, and put the ſame into his purſe, it is at his peril after his allowance; and he ſhall not then take exception to it as bad, notwithſtanding he preſently reviews it. Terms de Ley.

By ſtatute any perſon may break or deface pieces of ſilver money ſuſpected to be counterfeit or diminiſhed, otherwiſe than by wearing: but if ſuch pieces on breaking, &c. are found to be good coin, it will be at the breaker's peril, who ſhall ſtand to the loſs of it. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 21. Coins of gold and ſilver are to paſs, notwithſtanding ſome of them are cracked, or worn, but not if they are clipt. 19 H. 7. c. 5. Counterfeiting, impairing, or clipping of the King's coin, is made high treaſon. 25 Ed. 3. c. 14. and 18 Eliz. cap. 7. It is alſo treaſon to make any ſtamp, dye, mould, &c. for coining, except by perſons employed in the mint, &c. Conveying ſuch out of the mint, is the ſame; and ſo is colouring metal reſembling coin of gold or ſilver, marking it on the edges, &c. And if any perſon mix blanched copper with ſilver, to make it heavier, and look like gold, or receive, or pay counterfeit milled money, it is felony. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 26. Counterfeiting broad pieces of gold, &c. is declared to be treaſon. Stat. 6 Geo. 2. cap. 26. Perſons that waſh or gild any ſhilling, or ſix-pence, or alter the impreſſion, ſo as to make them reſemble a guinea, half guinea, &c. are adjudged guilty of high treaſon; and thoſe who tender in payment, any counterfeit coin, knowingly, ſhall be impriſoned ſix months for a firſt offence, two years for the ſecond, and a third ſuffers as felons. 15 Geo. 2. c. 28. The ſtatutes which ordain milled money to be made, give liberty to any perſon to refuſe hammered ſilver coin, as not being the lawful coin of this kingdom. 9 W. 3. c. 2. Counterfeiting of the coin extends only to gold and ſilver coin; for the coining of farthings or half-pence, or pieces to go for ſuch, of copper, incurred a penalty of 5 l. for every pound weight, by Stat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 33. This offence is now puniſhed with two years impriſonment, and ſurety to be given by the offenders for good behaviour two years more. 15 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſect. 6.

By Stat. 11 Geo. 2. c. 40. ſect. 1. the offence is made felony, but no puniſhment being annexed, the court wherein the offender is tried impriſon and fine him, &c But being a felony, it ſubjects the offender to the loſs of his goods and chattels.

Perſons apprehending money-coiners, clippers, &c. are to have 40 l. reward; and a guilty perſon diſcovering two others, to be pardoned, &c. 6 & 7 W. 3. c. 17. ſect. 9. 10 l. is alſo given as a reward, for apprehending and convicting coiners of copper money. In the ſeventh year of King William III. an act was made for calling in all the old coin of the kingdom, and to melt it down and recoin it; the deficiencies whereof were to be made good at the public charge: and in every hundred pound coined, 40 l. was to be ſhillings, and 10 l. ſix-pences, under certain penalties.

Perſons bringing plate to the mint to be coined, were to have the ſame weight of money delivered out, as an encouragement: and receivers general of taxes, &c. were to receive money at a large rate per ounce. Our guineas have been raiſed and fallen, as money has been ſcarce or plenty, ſeveral times by ſtatute: and anno 3 Geo. 1. on a ſcarcity of ſilver coin, for remedy, guineas were ſunk to 21 s. at which they now paſs, by proclamation. See Money, and Black. Com. 4 V. 84, 88, 90, 98, 120.

Coinage, (cunagium) Is the ſtamping and making of money, by the King's authority. And there is a duty of 10 s. per ton on wine, beer, and brandy imported, called the coinage duty, granted for expence of the King's coinage, but not to exceed 3000 l. per ann.. Stat. 18 Car. 2. cap. 5. This duty for coinage hath been continued and advanced, by divers ſtatutes, as 4 & 5 Ann. c. 22. 1 Geo. 1. c. 43. 9 Geo. 1. c. 19, &c The coinage duties are continued for ſeven years, by a late ſtatute; and the commiſſioners of the treaſury, out of the money ariſing by this act, or other public ſupplies, ſhall defray the expence of the mints of England and Scotland, not exceeding 15000 l. a year. Stat. 4 Geo. 2. c. 12. By Stat. 1 Geo. 3. c. 16. The coinage-duty is continued for ſeven years from March 1, 1761. See Oct. Index to Stat. tit. Money.

Coliberts. (coliberti) Were tenants in ſocage; and particularly ſuch villeins as were manumitted or made freemen. Domeſday. But they had not an abſolute freedom; for though they were better than ſervants, yet they had ſuperior lords to whom they paid certain duties, and in that reſpect they might be called ſervants, though they were of middle condition, between freemen and ſervants, ——Libertate carens colibertus dicitur eſſe. Du Cange.

Collateral, (collateralis) from the Lat. laterale, ſideways, or that which hangeth by the ſide, not direct: as collateral aſſurance is that which is made over and above the deed itſelf: collateral ſecurity, is where a deed is made of other land, beſides thoſe granted by the deed of mortgage: and if a man covenants with another, and enters into bond for performance of his covenant, the bond is a collateral aſſurance; becauſe it is external, and without the nature and eſſence of the covenant. If a man hath liberty to pitch booths or ſtandings, for a fair or market, in another perſon's ground, it is collateral to the ground. The private woods of a common perſon, within a foreſt, may not be cut down without the King's licence; it being a prerogative collateral to the ſoil. And to be ſubject to the feeding of the King's deer, is collateral to the ſoil of a foreſt. Cromp. Juriſd. 185. Manwood, p. 66.

Collateral Conſanguinity, or kindred. Collateral relations agree with the lineal in this, that they deſcend from the ſame ſtock or anceſtor; but differ in this, that they do not deſcend from each other. Collateral kinſmen, therefore, are ſuch as lineally ſpring from one and the ſame anceſtor, who is the ſtirps or root, the ſtipes, trunk, or common ſtock, from whence theſe relations are branched out. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 204, &c.

Collateral Diſcent, and Collateral Warranty. See Diſcent and Warranty.

Collateral Iſſue, Is where a criminal convict pleads any matter, allowed by law, in bar of execution, as pregnancy, the King's pardon, an act of grace, or diverſity of perſon, viz. that he or ſhe is not the ſame that was attainted, &c. whereon iſſue is taken, which iſſue is to be tried, by a jury, inſtanter. Vide Black. Com. 4 V. 389.

Collatio Bonorum, Is in law where a portion or money advanced by the father to a ſon or daughter, is brought into hotchpot, in order to have an equal diſtributory ſhare of his perſonal eſtate, at his death, according to the intent of the Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 10. Abr. Caſ. Eq. p. 254. See Hotchpot, and Black. Com. 2 V. 517.

Collation of a Benefice, (collatio beneficii) Signifies the beſtowing of a benefice by the biſhop, when he hath right of patronage. And it differs from inſtitution in this, that inſtitution is performed by the biſhop upon the preſentation of another, and collation is his own act of preſentation; and it differeth from a common preſentation, as it is the giving of the church to the parſon, and preſentation is the giving or offering of the parſon to the church. But collation ſupplies the place of preſentation and inſtitution; and amounts to the ſame as inſtitution, where the biſhop is both patron and ordinary. 1 Lil. Abr. 273. Anciently the right of preſentation to all churches, was in the biſhop; and now if the patron neglects to preſent to a church, then this right returns to the biſhop by collation: and if the biſhop neglects to collate within ſix months after the lapſe of the patron, then the archbiſhop hath a right to do it; and if the archbiſhop neglects, then it devolves to the King; the one as ſuperior, to ſupply the defects of biſhops; the other as ſupreme, to reform all defects of government.

As a biſhop may neglect to collate, ſo it may happen that he may make his collation without title; but ſuch a wrongful collation doth not put the true patron out of poſſeſſion; for after the collatee of the biſhop is inſtituted and inducted, he may preſent his clerk: and collation in this caſe, ſhall be intended only as a proviſional incumbency to perform divine ſervice till preſentment is made by the true patron. 1 Inſt. 344. By collation the church is not full; and a right patron may bring his writ at any time to remove the perſon collated; except his right be likewiſe to collate, when plenarty by collation may be pleaded. Wood's Inſt. 159. Where a biſhop gives a benefice as patron, he collates to it jure pleno; and when by lapſe, he doth it jure devoluto. The collation by lapſe, is in right of the patron, and for his turn: and in aſſiſe of darrein preſentment, &c. it ſhall be laid as his poſſeſſion. 24 Ed. 3. 26. F. N. B. 31.

Collatione facta uni poſt Mortem alterius, Is a writ directed to the juſtices of the Common Pleas, commanding them to iſſue their writ to the biſhop, for the admiſſion of a clerk in the place of another preſented by the King; who died during the ſuit between the King and the biſhop's clerk: for judgment once paſſed for the King's clerk, and he dying before admitance, the King may beſtow his preſentation on another. Reg. Orig. 31.

Collatione Heremitagii, A writ whereby the King conferred the keeping of an bermitage upon a clerk. Reg. Orig. 303, 308.

Collation of Seals. This was when upon the ſame label, one ſeal was ſet on the back or reverſe of the other. ——Ad majorem ſecuritatem præmiſſorum ſigillum diſcreti viri officialis domini Batho Well. Epiſcopi filo medio per modum collationis, ſigillo meo apponi procuravi. Cartular. Abbat. Glaſton. MS. 105.

Collative Advowſons. An advowſon collative is where the biſhop and patron are one and the ſame perſon: in which caſe the biſhop cannot preſent to himſelf; but he does, by the one act of collation, or conferring the benefice, the whole that is done in common caſes, by preſentation and inſtitution. Vide Black. Com. 2 V. 22, 23.

Collectors of money due to the King, not paying the ſame to whom it ought to be paid, ſhall anſwer ſo much per Cent. to his majeſty till payment. Stat. 20 Car. 2. c. 2. See Receivers.

College, (collegium) A particular corporation, company or ſociety of men, having certain privileges founded by the King's licence: and for Colleges in reputation, ſee 4 Rep. 106, 108.

The eſtabliſhment of Colleges or Univerſities is a remarkable æra in literary hiſtory. The ſchools in Cathedrals and Monaſteries confined themſelves chiefly to the teaching of grammar. There were only one or two maſters employed in that office. But in Colleges, profeſſors were appointed to teach all the different parts of ſcience. The firſt obſcure mention of academical degrees in the Univerſity of Paris, (from which the other Univerſities in Europe have borrowed moſt of their cuſtoms and inſtitutions), occurs, A. D. 1215. Vide Robertſ. Hiſt. Emp. C. V. 1 V. 323. Vide Leaſes.

Collegiate Church, Is that which conſiſts of a dean and ſecular canons; or more largely, it is a church built and endowed for a ſociety, or body corporate, of a dean or other preſident, and ſecular prieſts, as canons or prebendaries in the ſaid church. There were many of theſe ſocieties diſtinguiſhed from the religious or regulars, before the reformation: and ſome are eſtabliſhed at this time; as Weſtminſter, Windſor, Wincheſter, Southwell, Mancheſter, &c.

Colligendum bona defuncti, (letters ad.) In defect of repreſentatives and creditors to adminiſter to an inteſtate, &c. the ordinary may commit adminiſtration to ſuch diſcreet perſon as he approves of, or grant him theſe letters, which neither make him executor nor adminiſtrator; his only buſineſs being to keep the goods in his ſafe cuſtody, and to do other acts for the benefit of ſuch as are entitled to the property of the deceaſed. Vide Black. Com 2 V. 505.

Colloquium, (a colloquendo) A talking together, or affirming of a thing, laid in declarations for words in actions of ſlander, &c. Mod. Caſ. 203. Carthew 90.

Colluſion, (colluſio) Is a deceitful agreement or contract between two or more perſons, for the one to bring an action againſt the other, to ſome evil purpoſe, as to defraud a third perſon of his right, &c. This colluſion is either apparent, when it ſhews itſelf in the face of the act; or, which is more common, it is ſecret, where done in the dark, or covered over with a ſhew of honeſty. And it is a thing the law abhors; wherefore, when found, it makes void all things dependant upon the ſame, though otherwiſe in themſelves good. Co. Lit. 109, 360. Plowd. 54. Colluſion may ſometimes be tried in the ſame action wherein the covin is, and ſometimes in another action, as for lands aliened in mortmain by a quale jus: and where it is apparent there needs no proof of it; but when it is ſecret, it muſt be proved by witneſſes, and found by a jury like other matters of fact. 9 Rep. 33. The ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 33. gives the writ quale jus, and inquiry in theſe caſes: and there are ſeveral other ſtatutes relating to deeds, made by colluſion and fraud. The caſes particularly mentioned by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. are of quare impedit, aſſiſe, &c. which one corporation brings againſt another, with intent to recover the land or advowſon, for which the writ is brought, held in mortmain, &c. Vide the ſtatute.

Colonies. See Charter-governments in America. Plantation.

Colonus, An huſbandman or villager, who was bound to pay yearly a certain tribute, or at certain times in the year to plough ſome part of the lord's land; and from hence comes the word clown; who is called by the Dutch boor.

Colour, (color) Signifies a probable plea, but what is in fact falſe; and hath this end, to draw the trial of the cauſe from the jury to the judges: and therefore colour ought to be matter in law, or doubtful to the jury. This colour is uſed in aſſiſes, or action of treſpaſs; and every colour ought to have theſe qualities following: 1. It is to be doubtful to the lay gens, as in caſe of a deed of feoffment pleaded, and it is a doubt whether the land paſſeth by the feoffment, without livery, or not. 2. Colour ought to have continuance, though it wants effect. 3. It ſhould be ſuch colour, that, if it were effectual, would maintain the nature of the action; as in aſſiſe, to give colour of freehold, &c. 10 Rep. 88, 90, a. 91. Colour muſt be ſuch a thing, which is a good colour of title, and yet is not any title. Cro. Jac. 122. If a man juſtifies his entry for ſuch a cauſe as binds the plaintiff or his heirs for ever, he ſhall not give any colour: but if he pleads a deſcent in bar, he muſt give colour, becauſe this binds the poſſeſſion, and not the right; ſo that when the matter of the plea bars the plaintiff of his right, no colour muſt be given. When the defendant entitles himſelf by the plaintiff; where a perſon pleads to the writ, or to the action of the writ; he who juſtifies for tithes, or where the defendant juſtifies as ſervant: in all theſe caſes no colour ought to be given. 10 Rep. 91. Lutw. 1343. Where the defendant doth not make a ſpecial title to himſelf, or any other, he ought to give colour to the plaintiff. Cro. Eliz. 76. In treſpaſs for taking and carrying away twenty loads of wood, &c. the defendant ſays, that A. B. was poſſeſſed of them, ut de bonis propriis, and that the plaintiff claiming them by colour of a deed after made, took them, and the defendant retook them; and adjudged, that the colour given to the plaintiff, makes a good title to him, and confeſſeth the intereſt in him. 1 Lil. Abr. 275. Colour is for this cauſe, viz. Where the defendant juſtifies by title in treſpaſs or aſſiſe, if he do not give the plaintiff colour, his plea amounteth only to Not guilty; for if the defendant hath title, he is Not guilty. And this ſhews the true reaſon of giving colour. 1 Rep. 79, 108. Terms de Ley 140. See Doct. Plac. 72, 73. Black. Com. 3 V. 309.

Colour of Office, (color officii) Is when an act is evilly done by the countenance of an office; and always taken in the worſt ſenſe, being grounded upon corruption, to which the office is as a ſhadow and colour. Plowd. Comment. 64. See Extortion.

Colpices, (colpicium, colpiciis) Young poles, which being cut down, make leavers or lifters; and in Warwickſhire they are called colpices to this day. Blount.

Colpo, A ſmall wax-candle, à copo de cere: we read in Hoveden, that when the King of Scots came to the Engliſh court, as long as he ſtaid there, he had every day, De liberatione triginta ſol. & duodecim vaſſellos dominicos, & quadraginta groſſos longos colpones de dominica candela regis, &c. anno 1194.

Combarones, The fellow barons, or commonalty of the cinque ports: King Hen. 3. grants to the barons, or freemen of the port of Feverſham, quietantiam de omni thelonio, & conſuetudine, ſicut ipſi & anteceſſores ſui, & combarones ſui de quinque portubus eam melius & plenius habuerunt tempore Regis Edwardi. Placit. temp Ed. 1. & Ed. 2. But the title of barons of the cinque ports is now given to their repreſentatives in parliament; and the word combaron is uſed for a fellow member, the baron and his combaron.

Comba terræ, From Sax. cumbe, Brit. kum, Eng. comb. a valley or low piece of ground or place between two hills; which is ſtill ſo called in Devonſhire and Cornwall: hence many villages in other parts of England have their names of comb, as Wickcomb, &c. from their ſituation. Kennet's Gloſſ.

Combat, (Fr.) Is taken with us for a formal trial between two champions, of a doubtful cauſe or quarrel, by the ſword or baſtons. The laſt caſe of the kind in this kingdom was anno 6 Car. 1. between Donald lord Rey, appellant, and David Ramſey, Eſq; defendant, both Scotchmen, before Robert earl of Lindſey, lord high conſtable, Thomas earl of Arundel, earl marſhal, with other lords; when after the court had met ſeveral times in the painted chamber, and other formalities, it was at laſt referred to the King's will and pleaſure, who was inclined to favour Ramſey. Co. Lit. 294. Orig. Juridicial. fol. 65.

The trial by combat was formerly authorized over all Europe; but, as Dr. Robertſon juſtly obſerves, "the prohibition of this form of trial was a conſiderable ſtep towards the introduction of ſuch regular government as ſecured public order and private tranquillity." See Hiſt. Emp. C. V. 1 V. 47, 52, 54, 55, 291, 295, &c. See Battel.

Combinations to do unlawful acts, are puniſhable before the unlawful act is executed; this is to prevent the conſequence of combinations, and conſpiracies, &c. 9 Rep. 57. See Confederacy.

Combuſtio Pecuniæ, The ancient way of trying mixt and corrupt money, by melting it down upon payments into the Exchequer. In the time of King Henry 2. a conſtitution was made called the trial by combuſtion; the practice of which differed little or nothing from the preſent method of aſſaying ſilver. But whether this examination of money by combuſtion, was to reduce an equation of money only of ſterling, viz. a due proportion of allay with copper; or to reduce it to a fine pure ſilver with allay, doth not appear. On making the conſtitution of trial, it was conſidered, that though the money did anſwer numero & pondere, it might be deficient in value; becauſe mixed with copper or braſs, &c. Vide Lowndes's Eſſay upon Coin, p. 5.

Comitatus, A county. Ingulphus tells us, That England was firſt divided into counties by King Alfred; and counties into hundreds, and theſe again into tithings; and Forteſque writes, that regnum Angliæ per comitatus ut regnum Franciæ per ballivatus diſtinguitur. Sometimes it is taken for a territory or juriſdiction of a particular place, as in Mat. Pariſ. anno 1234. Infra metas illas continentur quædam prædia & etiam civitates & caſtra, quas comitatui ſuo aſſignare præſumunt. And in Charta, H. 2. apud Hoveden: Caſtellum de Nottingham cum comitatu, &c. And, De firmis mortuis & debitis, de quibus non eſt ſpes, fiat unus rotulus, & intituletur comitatus, & legatur ſingulis annis ſuper computum vicecomitum. Clauſ. 12 Ed. 1. See County.

According to Lord Littleton, in his hiſtory of Hen. 2. lib. 2. fo. 217. each county was anciently an earldom, ſo that, previous to the reign of K. Stephen, there were not any titular earls, nor more earls than counties, though there might be fewer. As to the diviſions of counties into hundreds and tythings, ſee Ld. Lit. l. 2. fo. 259. Alſo ſee Bract. l. 3. c. 10.

Comitatu Commiſſo, Is a writ or commiſſion whereby a ſheriff is authorized to take upon him the charge of the county. Reg. Orig. 295.

Comitatu & Caſtro Commiſſo, A writ by which the charge of a county, together with the keeping of a caſtle, is committed to the ſheriff. Reg. Orig. Ibid.

Comitiva, A companion or fellow traveller; it is mentioned in Brompton, Regn. H. 2. And ſometimes it ſignifies a troop or company of robbers; as in Walſingham, anno 1366. Interpellaverunt auxillium regis Angliæ contra magnas comitivas, &c.

Commandry, (præceptoria) Was any manor or chief meſſuage, with lands and tenements thereto appertaining, which belonged to the priory of St. John of Jeruſalem in England; and he who had the government of ſuch a manor or houſe was ſtiled the commander, who could not diſpoſe of it but to the uſe of the priory, and only taking thence his own ſuſtenance, according to his degree. New Eagle in Lincolnſhire was and ſtill is called the commandry of Eagle, and did anciently belong to the ſaid priory of St. John: ſo Selbach in Pembrokeſhire, and Shingay in Cambridgeſhire, were commandries in the time of the knights templars, ſays Cambden: and theſe in many places of England are termed Temples, becauſe they formerly belonged to the ſaid templars. Stat. 26 H. 8. c. 2. The manors and lands belonging to the priory of St. John of Jeruſalem, were given to King Hen. 8. by the Stat. 32 Hen. 8. about the time of the diſſolution of Abbies and monaſteries; ſo that the name only of commandries remains, the power being long ſince extinct.

Commandment, (præceptum) Is diverſly taken; as the commandment of the King, when upon his own motion he hath caſt any man into priſon. Commandment of the juſtices, abſolute or ordinary; abſolute, where upon their own authority they commit a perſon for contempt, &c. to priſon, as a puniſhment; ordinary is when they commit one rather for ſafe cuſtody, than for any puniſhment: and a man committed upon ſuch an ordinary commandment is repleviſable. Staundf. P. C. 72, 73. Perſons committed to priſon by the ſpecial command of the King, were not formerly bailable by the court of King's Bench; but at this day the law is otherwiſe declared and ſettled, as appears under bail. 2 Hawk. P. C. 96.

In another ſenſe of this word; magiſtrates may command others to aſſiſt them in the execution of their offices, for the doing of juſtice; and ſo may a juſtice of peace to ſuppreſs riots, apprehend felons; an officer to keep the King's peace, &c. Bro. 3. A maſter may command his ſervant to drive another man's cattle out of his ground, to enter into lands, ſeize goods, diſtrain for rent, or do other things; if the thing be not a treſpaſs to others. Fitz. Abr. The commandment of a thing is good, where he that commands hath power to do it: and a verbal command in moſt caſes is ſufficient; unleſs it be where it is given by a corporation, or when a ſheriff's warrant is to a bailiff to arreſt, &c. Bro. 288. Dyer 202. Commandment is alſo uſed for the offence of him that willeth another man to tranſgreſs the law, or do any thing contrary to it: and in the moſt common ſignification, it is taken where one willeth another to do an unlawful act; as murder, theft, or the like: which the civilians called mandatum. Bract. lib. 3. c. 19.

He that commandeth any one to do an unlawful act, is acceſſary to it and all the conſequences, if it be executed in the ſame manner as commanded: but if the commander revoke the command; or if the execution varies from it, or in the nature of the offence, in ſuch caſe he will not be acceſſary. 2 Inſt. 182. 3 Inſt. 51, 57. If a man command another to commit a felony on a particular perſon, and he doth it on another, as to kill A. and he kills B. or to burn the houſe of A. but he burns the houſe of B. or to ſteal one thing, and he ſteals another; or to commit a felony of one kind, and he commits another: it is ſaid that the commander is not acceſſary, becauſe the act done varies in ſubſtance from that which was commanded. 1 H. C. P. 436, 452. And ſee 2 Hawk. 316. Plowd. 475. But where a perſon commands or adviſes another to kill ſuch a one in the night, and he kills him in the day; or to kill him in the fields, and he kills him in the town; or to poiſon him, and he ſtabs or ſhoots him; theſe acts being the ſame felony in ſubſtance with that which was intended, and varying only in circumſtances, in reſpect to time, place, &c. the commander is as much an acceſſary as if there had been no variance at all between the command and the execution of it. 2 Hawk. 316.

If I command a man to rob another, and he kills him in the attempt, though he doth not rob him, I am guilty of the murder; it being the direct and immediate effect of an act done in execution of my command to commit a felony; and if the command be to beat a perſon, and the perſon commanded beat him in ſuch a manner that he dies thereof, I am an acceſſary before to the felony; becauſe it happened in the execution of a command, which tended to endanger the life of the other. Alſo it is ſaid, that if one command another to burn the houſe of a certain perſon, and he by burning it burn likewiſe the houſe of another, the commander is equally acceſſary to the ſubſequent felony, as to that which was directly commanded. Ibid. 315, 316, To command or counſel any one to commit burglary, is felony without benefit of clergy. Stat. 3 W. & M. c. 9.

In forcible entries, &c. an infant or feme covert may be guilty in reſpect of actual violence done by them in perſon; though not in regard to what ſhall be done by others at their command, becauſe all ſuch commands of theirs are void. Co. Lit. 357. 1 Hawk. 147. In treſpaſs, &c. the maſter ſhall be charged criminally for the act of the ſervant, done by his command; but ſervants ſhall not be excuſed for committing any crime, when they act by command of their maſters; who have no authority over them to give ſuch command. Doct. & Stud. c. 42. H. P. C. 66. Kel. 13. And if a maſter commands his ſervant to diſtrain, and he abuſeth the diſtreſs, the ſervant ſhall anſwer it to the party injured, &c. Kitch. 372.

Commendam, (eccleſia commendata, vel cuſtodia eccleſiæ alicui commiſſa) Is the holding of a benefice or church-living, which being void, is commended to the charge and care of ſome ſufficient clerk, to be ſupplied until it may be conveniently provided of a paſtor: and he to whom the church is commended, hath the profits thereof only for a certain time, and the nature of the church is not changed thereby, but is as a thing depoſited in his hands in truſt, who hath nothing but the cuſtody of it, which may be revoked. When a parſon is made biſhop, there is a ceſſion or voidance of his benefice, by the promotion; but if the King by ſpecial diſpenſation gives him power to retain his benefice, notwithſtanding his promotion; he ſhall countinue parſon, and is ſaid to hold it in Commendam. Hob. 144. Latch. 236. As the King is the means of avoidances on promotions to dignities, and the preſentations thereon belong to him, he often on the creation of biſhops grants them licences to hold their benefices in commendam; but this is uſually where the biſhopricks are ſmall, for the better ſupport of the dignity of the biſhop promoted: and it muſt be always before conſecration; for afterwards it comes too late, becauſe the benefice is then abſolutely void. A commendam, founded on the ſtatute 25 H. 8. c. 21. is a diſpenſation from the ſupreme power, to hold or take an eccleſiaſtical living contra jus poſitivum: and there are ſeveral ſorts of commendams, as a commendam ſemeſtris, which is for the benefit of the church without any regard to the commendatory, being only a proviſional act of the ordinary, for ſupplying the vacation of ſix months, in which time the patron is to preſent his clerk, and is but a ſequeſtration of the cure and fruits until ſuch time as the clerk is preſented: a commendam retinere, which is for a biſhop to retain benefices, on his preferment; and theſe commendams are granted on the King's mandate to the archbiſhop, expreſſing his conſent, which continues the incumbency, ſo that there is no occaſion for inſtitution. A commendam recipere is to take a benefice de novo in the biſhop's own gift, or in the gift of ſome other patron, whoſe conſent muſt be obtained. Dyer 228. 3 Lev. 381. Hob. 143. Danv. 79.

A commendam may be temporary for ſix or twelve months; two or three years, &c. or it may be perpetual, i. e. for life, when it is equal to a preſentation, without inſtitution or induction. But all diſpenſations beyond ſix months were only permiſſive at firſt, and granted to perſons of merit: the commendam retinere is for one or two years, &c. and ſometimes for three or ſix years, and doth not alter the eſtate which the incumbent had before: a commendam retinere, as long as the commendatory ſhould live and continue biſhop, hath been held good. Vaugh. 18.

The commendam recipere muſt be for life, as other parſons and vicars enjoy their benefices; and as a patron cannot preſent to a full church, ſo neither can a commendam reciperi be made to a church that is then full. Show. 414. A benefice cannot be commended by parts, any more than it may be preſented unto by parts; as that one ſhall have the glebe, another the tithes, &c. Nor can a commendatory have a juris utrum, or take to him and his ſucceſſors, ſue or be ſued, in a writ of annuity, &c. But a commenda perpetua may be admitted to do it. 11 H. 4. Compl. Incumb. 360, See 1 Nelſ. Abr. 454.

Commendatory, (commendatarius) Is he that hath a church living or preferment in commendam.

Commendatory Letters, Are ſuch as are written by one biſhop to another in behalf of any of the clergy, or others of his dioceſe, travelling thither, that they may be received among the faithful: or that the clerk may be promoted; or neceſſaries adminiſtred to others, &c. ſeveral forms of theſe letters may be ſeen in our hiſtorians, as in Bede, lib. 2. c. 18.

Commendatus, One that lives under the protection of a great man. Spelm. Commendati homines were perſons who by voluntary homage put themſelves under the protection of any ſuperior lord: for ancient homage was either predial, due for ſome tenure; or perſonal, which was by compulſion, as a ſign of neceſſary ſubjection; or voluntary, with a deſire of protection: and thoſe, who by voluntary homage put themſelves under the protection of any men of power, were ſometimes called homines ejus commendati: and ſometimes only commendati, as often occurs in Domeſday. Commendati dimidii were thoſe who depended on two ſeveral lords, and paid one half of their homage to each: and ſub-commendati were like under-tenants, under the command of perſons that were dependants themſelves on a ſuperior lord: alſo there were dimidii ſub-commendati, who bore a double relation to ſuch depending lords. Domeſday. This phraſe ſeems to be ſtill in uſe, in the uſual complement, Commend me to ſuch a friend, &c. which is to let him know, I am his humble ſervant. Spelm. of Feuds, cap. 20.

Commerce, (commercium) Traffick, trade or merchandiſe in buying and ſelling of goods. See Merchant.

There is a diſtinction between commerce and trade; the former relates to our dealings with foreign nations, or our colonies, &c. abroad; the other to our mutual traffick and dealings among ourſelves at home.

With reſpect to the eſtabliſhment of commerce in Europe, (its firſt origin in Italy about the beginning of the eleventh century) ſee Robertſ. Hiſt. of the Emperor Charles V. 1 V. 32, 33, &c. As to the commerce of the ancients, ſee Monteſquieu L'Eſprit des Loix, L. 21. c. 6. Vide alſo An Eſſay on Maritime Power and Commerce, by Deſlaudes, publiſhed by Vaillant, in 1743.

Commiſſary, (commiſſarius) Is a title in the eccleſiaſtical law, belonging to one that exerciſeth ſpiritual juriſdiction, in places of a dioceſe which are ſo far from the epiſcopal city, that the chancellor cannot call the people to the biſhop's principal conſiſtory court, without their too great inconvenience. This commiſſary was ordained to ſupply the biſhop's juriſdiction and office in the out-places of the dioceſe; or in ſuch places as are peculiar to the biſhop, and exempted from the juriſdiction of the archdeacon: for where, either by preſcription or compoſition, archdeacons have juriſdiction within their archdeaconries, as in moſt places they have, this commiſſary is ſuperfluous and oftentimes vexatious, and ought not to be; yet in ſuch caſes a commiſſary is ſometimes appointed by the biſhop, he taking preſtation money of the archdeacon yearly pro exteriori juriſdictione, as it is ordinarily called. But this is held to be a wrong to archdeacons and the poorer ſort of people. Cowel's Interp. 4 Inſt. 338.

There are alſo commiſſaries in time of war. Perſons ſent abroad to take care of proviſions for the army.—How well they executed the great truſt repoſed in them, during the late war in Germany, is too well known to the preſent age, and it is hoped it will be tranſmitted to poſterity.

Commiſſion, (commiſſio) Is taken for the warrant or letters patent, which all men exerciſing juriſdiction either ordinary or extraordinary, have to authoriſe them to hear or determine any cauſe or action: as the commiſſion of the judges, &c. Commiſſion is with us as much as delegatio with the civilians; and this word is ſometimes extended farther than to matters of judgment; as the commiſſion of purveyance, &c. Commiſſions of inquiry ſhall be made to the juſtices of one bench or the other, &c. and to do lawful things, are grantable in many caſes: alſo moſt of the great officers, judicial and miniſterial, of the realm, are made by commiſſion. And by ſuch commiſſions, treaſons, felonies, and other offences, may be heard and determined; by this means likewiſe, oaths, cogniſance of fines, and anſwers, are taken, witneſſes examined, offices found, &c. Bro. Abr. 12. Rep. 39. Stat. 42 E. 3. c. 4. And moſt of theſe commiſſions are appoined by the King under the Great Seal of England: but a commiſſion granted under the Great Seal may be determined by a Privy Seal; and by granting another new commiſſion to do the ſame thing, the former commiſſion determines; and on the death or demiſe of the King, the commiſſions of judges and officers generally ceaſe. Bro. Commiſ. 2 Dyer 289. There was formerly a high commiſſion court founded on 1 Eliz. c. 1. but it was aboliſhed by act of parliament 17 Car. 1. c. 11. And by Stat. 13 Car. 2. c. 2. Of commiſſions you may ſee divers in the table of the Regiſter of Writs. See 4 Hen. 4. c. 9. 7 Hen. 4. c. 11. And 1 Ann. ſt. 1. c. 8. 6 Ann. c. 7.

Commiſſion of Anticipation, Was a commiſſion under the Great Seal to collect a tax or ſubſidy before the day. 15 H. 8.

Commiſſion of Aſſociation, Is a commiſſion to aſſociate two or more learned perſons with the juſtices in the ſeveral circuits and counties of Wales, &c. 18 Eliz. c. 9.

Commiſſion of Bankrupt, Where any perſon is become a bankrupt within any of the ſtatutes againſt bankrupts, on ſecurity given to prove the party a bankrupt, &c. this commiſſion iſſues from the Lord Chancellor to certain commiſſioners apppointed to take order with the bankrupt's lands and goods, for the ſatisfaction of the creditors. Stat. 34 & 35 Hen. 8. c. 4. 13 Eliz. c. 7. 1 Jac. 1. c. 15, &c. See Bankrupt.

Commiſſion of Charitable Uſes, Goes out of the Chancery to the biſhop and others, where lands given to charitable uſes are miſemployed, or there is any fraud or diſputes concerning them, to enquire of and redreſs the abuſe, &c. 43 Eliz. c. 4.

Commiſſion of Delegates, Is a commiſſion under the Great Seal to certain perſons, uſually two or three temporal lords, as many biſhops, and two judges of the law, to ſit upon an appeal to the King in the court of Chancery, where any ſentence is given in any eccleſiaſtical cauſe by the archbiſhop. Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 19. Now generally three of the Common law judges, and two Civilians, ſit as delegates.

Commiſſion to enquire of Faults againſt the Law, Was an ancient commiſſion ſet forth on extraordinary occaſion and corruptions.

Commiſſion of Lunacy, A commiſſion out of Chancery to enquire whether a perſon repreſented to be a lunatick be ſo or not, that if lunatick, the King may have the care of his eſtate, &c. 17 Ed. 2. c. 10.

Commiſſion of Rebellion, Otherwiſe called a writ of rebellion, iſſues when a man after proclamation made by the ſheriff, upon a proceſs out of the Chancery, on pain of his allegiance, to preſent himſelf to the court by a day aſſigned, makes default in his appearance: and this commiſſion is directed to certain perſons, to the end they, three, two, or one of them apprehend the party, or cauſe him to be apprehended as a rebel and contemner of the King's laws, whereſoever found within the kingdom, and bring or cauſe him to be brought to the court on a day therein aſſigned: this writ or commiſſion goes forth after an attachment returned, non eſt inventus, &c. Terms de Ley.

Commiſſion of Sewers, Is directed to certain perſons to ſee drains and ditches well kept and maintained in the marſhy and fenny parts of England, for the better conveyance of the water into the ſea, and preſerving the graſs upon the land, Stat. 23 H. 8. c. 5. 13 Eliz. c. 9.

Commiſſion of Treaty with foreign Princes, Is where leagues and treaties are made and tranſacted between ſtates and kingdoms, by their ambaſſadors and miniſters, for the mutual advantage of the kingdoms in alliance.

Commiſſion to take up Men for War, Was a commiſſion to preſs or force men into the king's ſervice. This power of impreſſing is much doubted by many; yet, in favour of its legality, much hath been ſaid by a late learned judge. Vide Foſt. Rep. 154. Broadfoot's caſe. And *Black. Commiſſioner, (commiſſionarius) Is he that hath a commiſſion, letters patent, or other lawful warrant to examine any matters, or to execute any public office, &c. And ſome commiſſioners are to hear and determine offences, without any return made of their proceedings; and others to inquire and examine, and certify what is found. 4 Hen. 4. 9. Commiſſioners by the Common law muſt purſue the authority of the commiſſion, and perform the effect thereof; and they are to obſerve the antient rules of the courts whence they come; and if they do any thing for which they have not authority, it will be void. 2 Co. Rep. 25. Co. Lit. 157. The office of commiſſioners is to do what they are commanded; and it is neceſſarily implied, that they may do that alſo, without which what is commanded cannot be done: their authority, when appointed on any ſtatute law, muſt be uſed as the ſtatutes preſcribe. 12 Rep. 32. If a commiſſion is given to commiſſioners to execute a thing againſt law, they are not bound to accept or obey it: commiſſioners not receiving a commiſſion may be diſcharged, upon oath before the Barons of the Exchequer, &c. and the King by ſuperſedeas out of Chancery, may diſcharge commiſſioners. Beſides commiſſioners relating to judicial proceedings; there are Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, of the Cuſtoms, wine-licences, alienations, &c. of which there is an infinite number.

Committee, Are thoſe to whom the conſideration or ordering of any matter is referred, by ſome court, or by conſent of parties to whom it belongs: as in parliament, a bill either conſented to and paſſed, or denied, or neither, but being referred to the conſideration of certain perſons appointed by the houſe farther to examine it, they are thereupon called a committee. And when a parliament is called, and the ſpeaker and members have taken the oaths, and the ſtanding orders of the houſe are read, committees are appointed to ſit on certain days, viz. the committee of privileges and elections, of religion, of grievances, of courts of juſtice, and of trade; which are the ſtanding committees. But though they are appointed by every new parliament, they do not all of them act, only the committee of privileges; and this being not of the whole houſe, is firſt called in the ſpeaker's chamber, from whence it is adjourned into the houſe, every one of the houſe having a vote therein, though not named, which makes the ſame uſually very numerous: and any member may be preſent at any ſelect committee; but is not to vote unleſs he be named. The chairman of the grand committee, who is always ſome leading member, ſits in the clerk's place at the table, and writes the votes for and againſt the matter referred to them; and if the number be equal, he has a caſting voice, otherwiſe he hath no vote in the committee; and after the chairman hath put the queſtion for reporting to the houſe, if that be carried, he leaves the chair, and the ſpeaker being called to his chair, (who quits it in the beginning, and the mace is laid under the table) he is to go down to the bar, and ſo bring up his report to the table. After a bill is read a ſecond time in the Houſe of Commons, the queſtion is put, whether it ſhall be committed to a committee of the whole houſe, or a private committee; and the committees meet in the ſpeaker's chamber, and report their opinion of the bill with the amendments, &c. And if there be any exceptions againſt the amendments reported, the bill may be recommitted: eight perſons make a committee, which may be adjourned by five, &c. Lex Conſtitutionis 147, 150. There is a committee of the King, mentioned in Weſt's Symb. tit. Chancery, ſect. 144. And this hath been uſed, though improperly, for the widow of the King's tenant being dead, who is called the committee of the King, that is, one committed by the ancient law of the land to the King's care and protection. Kitch. fol. 160. See Parliament.

Commitment, Is the ſending of a perſon to priſon by warrant or order, who hath been guilty of any crime: here it is to be conſidered,

I. What kind of offenders may be committed, and by whom, and in what manner.
II. To what priſon they may be committed, and at whoſe charge.
III. How they may be removed and diſcharged.

I. As to the kind of offenders.

There is no doubt but that perſons apprehended for offences which are not bailable, and alſo all perſons who neglect to offer bail for offences which are bailable, muſt be committed.—And it is ſaid, that whereſoever a juſtice of peace is impowered by any ſtatute to bind a perſon over, or to cauſe him to do a certain thing, and ſuch perſon being in his preſence ſhall refuſe to be bound, or to do ſuch thing, the juſtice may commit him to the gaol to remain there till he ſhall comply.

It ſeems agreed by all the old books, that whereſoever a conſtable or private perſon may juſtify the arreſting another for a felony or treaſon, he may alſo juſtify the ſending or bringing him to the common gaol; and that every private perſon hath as much authority in caſes of this kind, as the ſheriff, or any other officer, and may juſtify ſuch impriſonment by his own authority, but not by the command of another. 2 Hawk. P. C. 116, 117.

But inaſmuch as it is certain, that a perſon lawfully making ſuch an arreſt, may juſtify bringing the party to the conſtable, in order to be carried by him before a juſtice of peace; and inaſmuch as the ſtatutes of 1 & 2 P. & M. cap. 13. and 2 & 3 P. & M. cap. 10. which direct in what manner perſons brought before a juſtice of the peace for felony, ſhall be examined by him, in order to their being committed or bailed, ſeem clearly to ſuppoſe, that all ſuch perſons are to be brought before ſuch juſtice for ſuch purpoſe; and inaſmuch as the ſtatute of 31 Car. 2. c. 2. commonly called the habeas corpus act, ſeems to ſuppoſe that all perſons, who are committed to priſon, are there detained by virtue of ſome warrant in writing, which ſeems to be intended of a commitment by ſome magiſtrate, and the conſtant tenor of the late books, practice and opinions, are agreeable hereto; it is certainly moſt adviſeable at this day, for any private perſon who arreſts another for felony, to cauſe him to be brought, as ſoon as conveniently he may, before ſome juſtice of peace, that he may be committed or bailed by him. 2 Hawk. P. C. 117. H. P. C. 91, 112. Dalt. c. 118.

It is certain, that the privy council, or any one or two of them, or ſecretary of ſtate, may lawfully commit perſons for treaſon, and for other offences againſt the ſtate, as in all ages they have done. 2 Hawk. P. C. 117.

As to the manner of commitment, it is enacted by 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 10. That juſtices of peace ſhall examine perſons brought before them for felony, &c. or ſuſpicion thereof, before they commit them to priſon, and ſhall bind their accuſers to give evidence againſt them.

A juſtice of the peace may detain a priſoner a reaſonable time, in order to examine him; and it ſaid, that three days is a reaſonable time for this purpoſe. 2 Hawk. P. C. 119. Dalt. c. 125. 2 Inſt. 52, 591.

Every commitment muſt be in writing, and under the hand and ſeal, and ſhew the authority of him that made it, and the time and place, and muſt be directed to the keeper of the priſon. Hawk. P. C. 119. It may be either in the King's name, and only teſted by the juſtice, or in the juſtice's name. 2 Hawk. P. C. 119.

It may command the gaoler to keep the party in ſafe and cloſe cuſtody; for this being what he is obliged to do by law, it can be no fault to command him ſo to do. 2 Hawk. P. C. 119.

It ought to ſet forth the crime with convenient certainty, whether the commitment be by the privy council, or any other authority, otherwiſe the officer is not puniſhable by reaſon of ſuch mittimus, for ſuffering the party to eſcape; and the court, before whom he is removed by habeas corpus, ought to diſcharge or bail him; and this doth not only hold where no cauſe at all is expreſſed in the commitment, but alſo where it is ſo looſely ſet forth, that the court cannot judge whether it were a reaſonable ground for impriſonment or not. 2 Hawk. P. C. 119.

A commitment for high treaſon or felony in general, without expreſſing the particular ſpecies, has been held good. 2 Hawk. P. C. 119. But now, ſince the habeas corpus act, it ſeems that ſuch a general commitment is not good; and therefore where A. and B. were committed for aiding and abetting Sir James Montgomery to make his eſcape, who was committed by a warrant of a ſecretary of ſtate for high treaſon, on a habeas corpus, they were admitted to bail, becauſe it did not appear of what ſpecies of treaſon Sir James was guilty. Skin. 596. 1 Salk. 347. S. C.

It is ſafe to ſet forth that the party is charged upon oath; but this is not neceſſary, for it hath been reſolved, that a commitment for treaſon, or for ſuſpicion of it, without ſetting forth any particular accuſation or ground of the ſuſpicion, is good. 2 Hawk. P. C. 120.

Every ſuch mittimus ought to have a lawful concluſion, viz. that the party be ſafely kept till he be delivered by law, or by order of law, or by due courſe of law, or that he be kept till further order, (which ſhall be intended of the order of law) or to the like effect; and if the party be committed only for want of bail, it ſeems to be a good concluſion of the commitment, that he be kept till he find bail; but a commitment till the perſon who makes it ſhall take further order, ſeems not to be good; and it ſeems that the party committed by ſuch or any other irregular mittimus may be bailed. 2 Hawk. P. C. 120.

Alſo a commitment grounded on an act of parliament ought to be conformable to the method preſcribed by ſuch ſtatute; as where the churchwardens of Northampton were committed on the 43 Eliz. cap. 2. and the warrant concluded in the common form, viz. Until they be duly diſcharged according to law; but the ſtatute appointing, that the party ſhould there remain until he ſhould account, for want of ſuch concluſion they were diſcharged. Carth. 152, 153.

II. To what priſon, and at whoſe charge.

With regard to this head it is to be obſerved, that all commitments muſt be to ſome priſon within the realm of England. For

By the Stat. 31 Car. 2. cap. 2. it is enacted, " That no ſubject of this realm, being an inhabitant or reſiant of this kingdom of England, dominion of Wales, or town of Berwick upon Tweed, ſhall or may be ſent priſoner into otland, Ireland, Jerſey, Guernſey, Tangier, or into any parts, garriſons, iſlands, or places beyond the ſeas, which then were, or at any time after ſhould be within or without the dominions of his Majeſty."

By 14 Ed. 3. c. 10. Sheriffs ſhall have the cuſtody of the gaols as before this time they were wont to have, and they ſhall put in ſuch under-keepers for whom they will anſwer. And this is confirmed by 19 Hen. 7. cap. 10. Alſo by 5 Hen. 4 cap. 10. it is enacted, "That none be impriſoned by any juſtice of the peace, but only in the common gaol, ſaving to lords, and others who have gaols, their franchiſe in this caſe." And it ſeems that the King's grant, ſince this ſtatute, to private perſons to have the cuſtody of priſoners committed by juſtices of peace, is void. And it is ſaid, that none can claim a priſon as a franchiſe, unleſs he have alſo a gaol delivery.

Alſo it hath been held, that regularly no one can juſtify the detaining a priſoner in cuſtody out of the common gaol unleſs there be ſome particular reaſon for ſo doing; as if the party be ſo dangerouſly ſick, that it would apparently hazard his life to ſend him to the gaol; or there be evident danger of a reſcous from rebels, &c. yet conſtant practiſe ſeems to authorize a commitment to a meſſenger; and it is ſaid that it ſhall be intended to have been made in order for the carrying of the party to gaol. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118.

And it is ſaid, that if a conſtable bring a felon to gaol, and the gaoler refuſe to receive him, the town where he is conſtable ought to keep him till the next gaol delivery. H. P. C. 114.

If a perſon arreſted in one county for a crime done in it, fly into another county, and be retaken there, he may be committed by a juſtice of the firſt county to the gaol of ſuch county. H. P. C. 93. But by the better opinion, if he had before any arreſt fled into ſuch county, he muſt be committed to the gaol thereof by a juſtice of ſuch county. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118. Dalt. c. 118. Alſo it ſeems to be laid down as a rule by ſome books, that any offender may be committed to the gaol next to the place where he was taken, whether it lie in the ſame county or not. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118.

By Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 19. Vagrants and other criminals, offenders, and perſons charged with ſmall offences, may for ſuch offences, or for want of ſureties, be committed either to the common gaol, or houſe of correction, as the juſtices in their judgment ſhall think proper.

By Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 55. If a perſon is apprehended, upon a warrant indorſed, in another county, for an offence not bailable, or if he ſhall not there find bail, he ſhall be carried back into the firſt county, and be committed, or, if bailable, bailed by the juſtices in ſuch firſt county.

As to the charges of commitment, it is enacted by 3 Jac. 1. c. 10. Offenders committed are to bear their own charges, and the charges of thoſe who are appointed to guard them; and if they refuſe to pay, the charges may be levied by ſale of their goods. And by 27 Geo. 2. c. 3. If they have no goods, &c. within the county where they are apprehended, the juſtices are to grant a warrant on the Treaſurer of the county for payment of the charges. But in Middleſex the ſame ſhall be paid by the overſeers of the poor of the pariſh where the perſon was apprehended.

By the 3 Edw. 7. c. 3. The ſheriff ſhall certify the names of all priſoners in his cuſtody to the juſtices of gaol-delivery.

III. How they may be removed and diſcharged.

As priſoners ought to be committed at firſt to the proper priſon, ſo ought they not to be removed thence, except in ſome ſpecial caſes; and to this purpoſe it is enacted by 31 Car. 2. cap. 2. "That if any ſubject of this realm ſhall be committed to any priſon, or in cuſtody of any officer or officers whatſoever, for any criminal, or ſuppoſed criminal matter, that the ſaid perſon ſhall not be removed from the ſaid priſon and cuſtody, into the cuſtody of any other officer or officers, unleſs it be by habeas corpus, or ſome other legal writ, or where the priſoner is delivered to the conſtable or other inferior officer, to carry ſuch priſoner to ſome gaol; or where any perſon is ſent by order of any judge of aſſize, or juſtice of the peace, to any common workhouſe, or houſe of correction; or where the priſoner is removed from one priſon or place to another within the ſame county, in order to a trial or diſcharge by due courſe of law; or in caſe of ſudden fire or infection, or other neceſſity; upon pain that he who makes out, ſigns, or counterſigns, or obeys or executes ſuch warrant, ſhall forfeit to the party grieved 100*l.* for the firſt offence, 200*l.* for the ſecond, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118.

As to the manner of their diſcharge.

A perſon legally committed for a crime, certainly appearing to have been done by ſome one or other, cannot be lawfully diſcharged by any other but by the King, till he be acquitted on his trial, or have an ignoramus found by the grand jury, or none to proſecute him on a proclamation for that purpoſe, by the juſtices of gaol delivery. 2 Hawk. P. C. 121.

But if a perſon be committed on a bare ſuſpicion, without any appeal or indictment, for a ſuppoſed crime, where afterwards it appears that there was none; as for the murder of a perſon thought to be dead, who afterwards is found to be alive; it hath been holden that he may be ſafely diſmiſſed without any farther proceeding; for that he who ſuffers him to eſcape, is properly puniſhable only as an acceſſory, where there can be no principal; and it would be hard to puniſh one for a contempt founded on a ſuſpicion appearing in ſo uncontested a manner to be groundleſs. 2 Hawk. P. C. 121. But the ſafeſt way for the gaoler, is to have the authority of ſome court, or magiſtrate, for diſcharging the priſoner.

If the words of a ſtatute are not purſued in a commitment, the party ſhall be diſcharged by habeas corpus. Ibid. 291. See Bail, Impriſonment.

Commoigne, (Fr.) A word ſignifying a fellow monk, that lives in the ſame convent. 3 Inſt. 15.

Commonalty, (populus, plebs, communitas) In art. ſuper chartas, 28 Ed. 1. c. 1. Toyt le Commune d' Engleterre ſignifies all the people of England. 2 Inſt. 539. But this word is generally uſed for the middle ſort of the King's ſubjects, ſuch of the commons as are raiſed beyond the ordinary ſort, and coming to have the managing of offices, by that means are one degree under burgeſſes, which are ſuperior to them in order and authority; and in companies incorporated they are ſaid to conſiſt of maſters, wardens, and commonalty, the firſt two being the chief, and the others ſuch as are uſually called of the livery. The ordinary people, and freeholders, or at beſt knights and gentlemen, under the degree of baron, having been of late years called communitas regni, or tota terræ communitas; yet antiently, if we credit Brady, the barons and tenants in capite, or military men, were the community of the kingdom; and thoſe only were reputed as ſuch in our moſt ancient hiſtories and records. Brady's Gloſſ. to his Introduct. to Engl. Hiſt.

Common, communia. Common is a right or privilege which one or more perſons claim to take or uſe, in ſome part or portion of that which another man's lands, waters, woods, &c. do naturally produce, without having an abſolute property in ſuch land, waters, wood, &c. It is called an incorporeal right, which lies in grant, as if originally commencing on ſome agreement between lords and tenants, for ſome valuable purpoſes, which by age being formed into a preſcription continues, although there be no deed or inſtrument in writing which proves the original contract or agreement. 4 Co. 37. 2 Inſt. 65. 1 Vent. 387.

Under this title is to be conſidered,

I. The ſeveral kinds of commons.

II. The intereſt of the owner of the ſoil; wherein, of approvement and incloſure.

III. The commoners intereſt in the ſoil; wherein, of apportionment and extinguiſhment.

I. Of the ſeveral kinds of commons.

There is not only common of paſture, but alſo common of piſcary or fiſhing; common of eſtovers; common of turbary, which ſee under their ſeveral heads. The word common however, in its moſt uſeful acceptation, ſignifies common of paſture, which is divided into common in groſs, common appendant, common appurtenant, and common per cauſe de vicinage.

Common in groſs is a liberty to have common alone, without any lands or tenements, in another perſon's land, granted by deed to a man and his heirs, or for life, &c. F. N. B. 31, 37. 4 Rep 30.

Common appendant is a right belonging to a man's arable land, of putting beaſts commonable into another's ground.

And common appurtenant is belonging to an eſtate for all manner of beaſts commonable or not commonable. 4 Rep. 37. Plowd. 161.

Common appendant and appurtenant, are in a manner confounded, as appears by Fitzherbert; and are there defined to be a liberty of common appertaining to or depending on a freehold; which common muſt be taken with beaſts commonable, as horſes, oxen, kine, and ſheep; and not with goats, hogs, and geeſe.

But ſome make this difference, that common appurtenant may be ſevered from the land whereto it pertains; but not common appendant, which, according to Sir Edward Coke, had this beginning: when a lord enfeoffed another of arable land, to hold of him in ſocage, the feoffee, to maintain the ſervice of his plough, had at firſt, by the curteſy or permiſſion of the lord, common in his waſtes for neceſſary beaſts to eat and compoſt his land, and that for two cauſes; one, for that it was tacitly implied in the feoffment, by reaſon the feoffee could not till or compoſt his land without cattle, and cattle could not be ſuſtained without paſture; ſo by conſequence the feoffee had, as a thing neceſſary and incident, common in the waſte and lands of the lord: and this may be collected from the ancient books and ſtatutes: and the ſecond reaſon of this common was, for the maintenance and advantage of tillage, which is much regarded and favoured by the law. F. N. B. 180 4 Rep. 37.

Common pur cauſe de vicinage, common by reaſon of neighbourhood, is a liberty that the tenants of one lord in one town have to common with the tenants of another lord in another town: it is where the tenants of two lords have uſed, time out of mind, to have common promiſcuouſly in both lordſhips lying together and open to one another. 8 Rep. 78. And thoſe that challenge this kind of common, which is uſually called intercommoning, may not put their cattle in the common of the other lord, for then they are diſtrainable; but they may turn them into their own fields, and if they ſtray into the neighbouring common, they muſt be ſuffered. Terms de Ley. The inhabitants of one town or lordſhip may not put in as many beaſts as they will, but with regard to the freehold of the inhabitants of the other: for otherwiſe it were no good neighbourhood, upon which all this depends. Ibid.

If one lord encloſes the common, the other town cannot then common; but though the common of vicinage is gone, common appendant remains. 4 Rep. 38. 7 Rep. 5. Every common pur cauſe de vicinage is a common appendant. 1 Danv. Abr. 799.

Common appendant is only to ancient arable land; not to a houſe, meadow, paſture, &c. It is againſt the nature of common appendant to be appendant to meadow or paſture: but if in the beginning land be arable, and of late a houſe hath been built on ſome part of the land, and ſome acres are employed to meadow and paſture, in ſuch caſe it is appendant; though it muſt be pleaded as appendant to the land, and not to the houſe, paſture, &c. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 457. This may be common appendant, though it belongs to a manor, farm, or ploughland: and common appendant is of common right; but it is not common appendant, unleſs it has been appendant time out of mind. 1 Danv. 746. It may be upon condition; be for all the year, or for a certain time, or for a certain number of beaſts, &c. by uſage: though it ought to be for ſuch cattle as plough and compoſt the land, to which it is appendant. Ibid. 797. Common appendant may be to common in a field after the corn is ſevered, till the ground is reſown: ſo it may be to have common in a meadow after the hay is carried of the ſame till Candlemas, &c. Yelv. 185.

This common, which is in its nature without number, by cuſtom may be limited as to the beaſts: common appurtenant ought always to be for thoſe levant and couchant, and may be ſans number. Plowd. 161. A man may preſcribe to have common appurtenant for all manner of cattle, at every ſeaſon in the year. 25 Aſſ. 8. Common by preſcription for all manner of commonable cattle as belonging to a tenement, &c. muſt be for cattle levant and couchant upon the land, (which is ſo many as the land will maintain) or it will not be good: and if a perſon grants common ſans number, the grantee cannot put in ſo many cattle, but that the grantor may have ſufficient common in the ſame land. 1 Danv. Abr. 798, 799. He who hath common appendant or appurtenant, can keep but a number of cattle proportionable to his land; for he can common with no more than the lands to which his common belongs is able to maintain. 3 Salk. 93. Common appurtenant may be to a houſe, paſture, &c. though common appendant cannot; but it ought to be preſcribed for as againſt common right: and uncommonable cattle, as hogs, goats, &c. are appurtenant: this common may be created by grant at this day; ſo may not common appendant. 1 Inſt. 122. 1 Rol. Abr. 398.

Common appurtenant for a certain number of beaſts may be granted over. 1 Danv. 802.

II. As to the intereſt of the owner of the ſoil.

The property of the ſoil in the common is entirely in the lord; and the uſe of it, jointly in him and the commoners.

Lords of manors may depaſture in commons where their tenants put in cattle; and a preſcription to exclude the lord is againſt law. 1 Inſt. 122.

The lord may agiſt the cattle of a ſtranger in the common by preſcription: and he may licence a ſtranger to put in his cattle, if he leaves ſufficient room for the commoners. 1 Danv 795. 2 Mod. 6. Alſo the lord may ſurcharge, &c. an overplus of the common: and if, where there is not an overplus, the lord ſurcharges the common, the commoners are not to diſtrain his beaſts; but muſt commence an action againſt the lord. F. N. B. 125. But it is ſaid, if the lord of the ſoil put cattle into a cloſe, contrary to cuſtom, when it ought to lie freſh, a commoner may take the cattle damage-feaſant: otherwiſe it is a general rule that he cannot diſtrain the cattle of the lord. 1 Danv. 807.

The lord may diſtrain where the common is ſurcharged; and bring action of treſpaſs for any treſpaſs done in the common. 9 Rep. 113.

A lord may make a pond on the common: though the lord cannot dig pits for gravel or coal; the ſtatutes of approvement being only by incloſure. 3 Inſt. 204. 1 Sid. 106. If the lord makes a warren on the common, the commoners may not kill the conies; but are to bring their action, for they may not be their own judges. 1 Rol. 90. 405.

By ſtatute, lords may approve againſt their tenants, viz. incloſe part of the waſte, &c. and thereby diſcharge it from being common, leaving common ſufficient; and neighbours as well as tenants claiming common of paſture, ſhall be bound by it. 20 H. 3. c. 4 If the lord encloſes on the common, and leaves not common ſufficient, the commoners may not only break down the incloſures; but may put in their cattle, although the lord ploughs and ſows the land. 2 Inſt. 88. 1 Rol. Abr. 406.

A commoner hath only a ſpecial and limited intereſt in the ſoil, but yet he ſhall have ſuch remedies as are commenſurate to his right, and therefore may diſtrain beaſts

Scotland, Ireland, Jerſey, Guernſey, Tangier, or into any parts, garriſons, iſlands, or places beyond the ſeas, which then were, or at any time after ſhould be within or without the dominions of his Majeſty."

By 14 Ed. 3. c. 10. Sheriffs ſhall have the cuſtody of the gaols as before this time they were wont to have, and they ſhall put in ſuch under-keepers for whom they will anſwer. And this is confirmed by 19 Hen. 7. cap. 10. Alſo by 5 Hen. 4 cap. 10. it is enacted, "That none be impriſoned by any juſtice of the peace, but only in the common gaol, ſaving to lords, and others who have gaols, their franchiſe in this caſe." And it ſeems that the King's grant, ſince this ſtatute, to private perſons to have the cuſtody of priſoners committed by juſtices of peace, is void. And it is ſaid, that none can claim a priſon as a franchiſe, unleſs he have alſo a gaol delivery.

Alſo it hath been held, that regularly no one can juſtify the detaining a priſoner in cuſtody out of the common gaol unleſs there be ſome particular reaſon for ſo doing; as if the party be ſo dangerouſly ſick, that it would apparently hazard his life to ſend him to the gaol; or there be evident danger of a reſcous from rebels, &c. yet conſtant practiſe ſeems to authorize a commitment to a meſſenger; and it is ſaid that it ſhall be intended to have been made in order for the carrying of the party to gaol. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118.

And it is ſaid, that if a conſtable bring a felon to gaol, and the gaoler refuſe to receive him, the town where he is conſtable ought to keep him till the next gaol delivery. H. P. C. 114.

If a perſon arreſted in one county for a crime done in it, fly into another county, and be retaken there, he may be committed by a juſtice of the firſt county to the gaol of ſuch county. H. P. C. 93. But by the better opinion, if he had before any arreſt fled into ſuch county, he muſt be committed to the gaol thereof by a juſtice of ſuch county. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118. Dalt. c. 118. Alſo it ſeems to be laid down as a rule by ſome books, that any offender may be committed to the gaol next to the place where he was taken, whether it lie in the ſame county or not. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118.

By Stat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 19. Vagrants and other criminals, offenders, and perſons charged with ſmall offences, may for ſuch offences, or for want of ſureties, be committed either to the common gaol, or houſe of correction, as the juſtices in their judgment ſhall think proper.

By Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 55. If a perſon is apprehended, upon a warrant indorſed, in another county, for an offence not bailable, or if he ſhall not there find bail, he ſhall be carried back into the firſt county, and be committed, or, if bailable, bailed by the juſtices in ſuch firſt county.

As to the charges of commitment, it is enacted by 3 Jac. 1. c. 10. Offenders committed are to bear their own charges, and the charges of thoſe who are appointed to guard them; and if they refuſe to pay, the charges may be levied by ſale of their goods. And by 27 Geo. 2. c. 3. If they have no goods, &c. within the county where they are apprehended, the juſtices are to grant a warrant on the Treaſurer of the county for payment of the charges. But in Middleſex the ſame ſhall be paid by the overſeers of the poor of the pariſh where the perſon was apprehended.

By the 3 Edw. 7. c. 3. The ſheriff ſhall certify the names of all priſoners in his cuſtody to the juſtices of gaol-delivery.

III. How they may be removed and diſcharged.

As priſoners ought to be committed at firſt to the proper priſon, ſo ought they not to be removed thence, except in ſome ſpecial caſes; and to this purpoſe it is enacted by 31 Car. 2. cap. 2. "That if any ſubject of this realm ſhall be committed to any priſon, or in cuſtody of any officer or officers whatſoever, for any criminal, or ſuppoſed criminal matter, that the ſaid perſon ſhall not be removed from the ſaid priſon and cuſtody, into the cuſtody of any other officer or officers, unleſs it be by habeas corpus, or ſome other legal writ, or where the priſoner is delivered to the conſtable or other inferior officer, to carry ſuch priſoner to ſome gaol; or where any perſon is ſent by order of any judge of aſſize, or juſtice of the peace, to any common workhouſe, or houſe of correction; or where the priſoner is removed from one priſon or place to another within the ſame county, in order to a trial or diſcharge by due courſe of law; or in caſe of ſudden fire or infection, or other neceſſity; upon pain that he who makes out, ſigns, or counterſigns, or obeys or executes ſuch warrant, ſhall forfeit to the party grieved 100*l.* for the firſt offence, 200*l.* for the ſecond, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118.

As to the manner of their diſcharge.

A perſon legally committed for a crime, certainly appearing to have been done by ſome one or other, cannot be lawfully diſcharged by any other but by the King, till he be acquitted on his trial, or have an ignoramus found by the grand jury, or none to proſecute him on a proclamation for that purpoſe, by the juſtices of gaol delivery. 2 Hawk. P. C. 121.

But if a perſon be committed on a bare ſuſpicion, without any appeal or indictment, for a ſuppoſed crime, where afterwards it appears that there was none; as for the murder of a perſon thought to be dead, who afterwards is found to be alive; it hath been holden that he may be ſafely diſmiſſed without any farther proceeding; for that he who ſuffers him to eſcape, is properly puniſhable only as an acceſſory, where there can be no principal; and it would be hard to puniſh one for a contempt founded on a ſuſpicion appearing in ſo unconteſted a manner to be groundleſs. 2 Hawk. P. C. 121. But the ſafeſt way for the gaoler, is to have the authority of ſome court, or magiſtrate, for diſcharging the priſoner.

If the words of a ſtatute are not purſued in a commitment, the party ſhall be diſcharged by habeas corpus. Ibid. 291. See Bail, Impriſonment.

Commoigne, (Fr.) A word ſignifying a fellow monk, that lives in the ſame convent. 3 Inſt. 15.

Commonalty, (populus, plebs, communitas) In art. ſuper chartas, 28 Ed. 1. c. 1. Tout le Commune d' Engleterre ſignifies all the people of England. 2 Inſt. 539. But this word is generally uſed for the middle ſort of the King's ſubjects, ſuch of the commons as are raiſed beyond the ordinary ſort, and coming to have the managing of offices, by that means are one degree under burgeſſes, which are ſuperior to them in order and authority; and in companies incorporated they are ſaid to conſiſt of maſters, wardens, and commonalty, the firſt two being the chief, and the others ſuch as are uſually called of the livery. The ordinary people, and freeholders, or at beſt knights and gentlemen, under the degree of baron, having been of late years called communitas regni, or tota terræ communitas; yet antiently, if we credit Brady, the barons and tenants in capite, or military men, were the community of the kingdom; and thoſe only were reputed as ſuch in our moſt ancient hiſtories and records. Brady's Gloſſ. to his Introduct. to Engl. Hiſt.

Common, communia. Common is a right or privilege which one or more perſons claim to take or uſe, in ſome part or portion of that which another man's lands, waters, woods, &c. do naturally produce, without having an abſolute property in ſuch land, waters, wood, &c. It is called an incorporeal right, which lies in grant, as if originally commencing on ſome agreement between lords and tenants, for ſome valuable purpoſes, which by age being formed into a preſcription continues, although there be no deed or inſtrument in writing which proves the original contract or agreement. 4 Co. 37. 2 Inſt. 65. 1 Vent. 387.

Under this title is to be conſidered,

I. The ſeveral kinds of commons.

II. The intereſt of the owner of the ſoil; wherein, of approvement and incloſure.

III. The commoners intereſt in the ſoil; wherein, of apportionment and extinguiſhment.

I. Of the ſeveral kinds of commons.

There is not only common of paſture, but alſo common of piſcary or fiſhing; common of eſtovers; common of turbary, which ſee under their ſeveral heads. The word common however, in its moſt uſeful acceptation, ſignifies common of paſture, which is divided into common in groſs, common appendant, common appurtenant, and common per cauſe de vicinage.

Common in groſs is a liberty to have common alone, without any lands or tenements, in another perſon's land, granted by deed to a man and his heirs, or for life, &c. F. N. B. 31, 37. 4 Rep 30.

Common appendant is a right belonging to a man's arable land, of putting beaſts commonable into another's ground.

And common appurtenant is belonging to an eſtate for all manner of beaſts commonable or not commonable. 4 Rep. 37. Plowd. 161.

Common appendant and appurtenant, are in a manner confounded, as appears by Fitzherbert; and are there defined to be a liberty of common appertaining to or depending on a freehold; which common muſt be taken with beaſts commonable, as horſes, oxen, kine, and ſheep; and not with goats, hogs, and geeſe.

But ſome make this difference, that common appurtenant may be ſevered from the land whereto it pertains; but not common appendant, which, according to Sir Edward Coke, had this beginning: when a lord enfeoffed another of arable land, to hold of him in ſocage, the feoffee, to maintain the ſervice of his plough, had at firſt, by the curteſy or permiſſion of the lord, common in his waſtes for neceſſary beaſts to eat and compoſt his land, and that for two cauſes; one, for that it was tacitly implied in the feoffment, by reaſon the feoffee could not till or compoſt his land without cattle, and cattle could not be ſuſtained without paſture; ſo by conſequence the feoffee had, as a thing neceſſary and incident, common in the waſte and lands of the lord: and this may be collected from the ancient books and ſtatutes: and the ſecond reaſon of this common was, for the maintenance and advantage of tillage, which is much regarded and favoured by the law. F. N. B. 180 4 Rep. 37.

Common pur cauſe de vicinage, common by reaſon of neighbourhood, is a liberty that the tenants of one lord in one town have to common with the tenants of another lord in another town: it is where the tenants of two lords have uſed, time out of mind, to have common promiſcuouſly in both lordſhips lying together and open to one another. 8 Rep. 78. And thoſe that challenge this kind of common, which is uſually called intercommoning, may not put their cattle in the common of the other lord, for then they are diſtrainable; but they may turn them into their own fields, and if they ſtray into the neighbouring common, they muſt be ſuffered. Terms de Ley. The inhabitants of one town or lordſhip may not put in as many beaſts as they will, but with regard to the freehold of the inhabitants of the other: for otherwiſe it were no good neighbourhood, upon which all this depends. Ibid.

If one lord encloſes the common, the other town cannot then common; but though the common of vicinage is gone, common appendant remains. 4 Rep. 38. 7 Rep. 5. Every common pur cauſe de vicinage is a common appendant. 1 Danv. Abr. 799.

Common appendant is only to ancient arable land; not to a houſe, meadow, paſture, &c. It is againſt the nature of common appendant to be appendant to meadow or paſture: but if in the beginning land be arable, and of late a houſe hath been built on ſome part of the land, and ſome acres are employed to meadow and paſture, in ſuch caſe it is appendant; though it muſt be pleaded as appendant to the land, and not to the houſe, paſture, &c. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 457. This may be common appendant, though it belongs to a manor, farm, or ploughland: and common appendant is of common right; but it is not common appendant, unleſs it has been appendant time out of mind. 1 Danv. 746. It may be upon condition; be for all the year, or for a certain time, or for a certain number of beaſts, &c. by uſage: though it ought to be for ſuch cattle as plough and compoſt the land, to which it is appendant. Ibid. 797. Common appendant may be to common in a field after the corn is ſevered, till the ground is reſown: ſo it may be to have common in a meadow after the hay is carried of the ſame till Candlemas, &c. Yelv. 185.

This common, which is in its nature without number, by cuſtom may be limited as to the beaſts: common appurtenant ought always to be for thoſe levant and couchant, and may be ſans number. Plowd. 161. A man may preſcribe to have common appurtenant for all manner of cattle, at every ſeaſon in the year. 25 Aſſ. 8. Common by preſcription for all manner of commonable cattle as belonging to a tenement, &c. muſt be for cattle levant and couchant upon the land, (which is ſo many as the land will maintain) or it will not be good: and if a perſon grants common ſans number, the grantee cannot put in ſo many cattle, but that the grantor may have ſufficient common in the ſame land. 1 Danv. Abr. 798, 799. He who hath common appendant or appurtenant, can keep but a number of cattle proportionable to his land; for he can common with no more than the lands to which his common belongs is able to maintain. 3 Salk. 93. Common appurtenant may be to a houſe, paſture, &c. though common appendant cannot; but it ought to be preſcribed for as againſt common right: and uncommonable cattle, as hogs, goats, &c. are appurtenant: this common may be created by grant at this day; ſo may not common appendant. 1 Inſt. 122. 1 Rol. Abr. 398.

Common appurtenant for a certain number of beaſts may be granted over. 1 Danv. 802.

II. As to the intereſt of the owner of the ſoil.

The property of the ſoil in the common is entirely in the lord; and the uſe of it, jointly in him and the commoners.

Lords of manors may depaſture in commons where their tenants put in cattle; and a preſcription to exclude the lord is againſt law. 1 Inſt. 122.

The lord may agiſt the cattle of a ſtranger in the common by preſcription: and he may licence a ſtranger to put in his cattle, if he leaves ſufficient room for the commoners. 1 Danv 795. 2 Mod. 6. Alſo the lord may ſurcharge, &c. an overplus of the common: and if, where there is not an overplus, the lord ſurcharges the common, the commoners are not to diſtrain his beaſts; but muſt commence an action againſt the lord. F. N. B. 125. But it is ſaid, if the lord of the ſoil put cattle into a cloſe, contrary to cuſtom, when it ought to lie freſh, a commoner may take the cattle damage-feaſant: otherwiſe it is a general rule that he cannot diſtrain the cattle of the lord. 1 Danv. 807.

The lord may diſtrain where the common is ſurcharged; and bring action of treſpaſs for any treſpaſs done in the common. 9 Rep. 113.

A lord may make a pond on the common: though the lord cannot dig pits for gravel or coal; the ſtatutes of approvement being only by incloſure. 3 Inſt. 204. 1 Sid. 106. If the lord makes a warren on the common, the commoners may not kill the conies; but are to bring their action, for they may not be their own judges. 1 Rol. 90. 405.

By ſtatute, lords may approve againſt their tenants, viz. incloſe part of the waſte, &c. and thereby diſcharge it from being common, leaving common ſufficient; and neighbours as well as tenants claiming common of paſture, ſhall be bound by it. 20 H. 3. c. 4. If the lord encloſes on the common, and leaves not common ſufficient, the commoners may not only break down the incloſures; but may put in their cattle, although the lord ploughs and ſows the land. 2 Inſt. 88. 1 Rol. Abr. 406.

A commoner hath only a ſpecial and limited intereſt in the ſoil, but yet he ſhall have ſuch remedies as are commenſurate to his right, and therefore may diſtrain beaſts damage-feaſant, bring an action on the caſe, &c. but not being abſolute owner of the ſoil, he cannot bring a general action of treſpaſs for a treſpaſs done upon the common. See Bridg. 10, 11. Godb. 123, 124. 2 Leon. 201, 202.

A commoner cannot regularly do any thing on the ſoil which tends to the melioration or improvement of the common, as cutting down of buſhes, fern, &c. 1 Sid. 251. 12 Hen. 8. 2. 13 Hen. 8. 15. Yet vide poſt.

Therefore if a common every year in a flood is ſurrounded with water, the commoner cannot make a trench in the ſoil to avoid the water, becauſe he has nothing to do with the ſoil, but only to take the graſs with the mouth of the cattle. 1 Rol. Abr. 405. 2 Bulſt. 116.

Every commoner may break the common if it be incloſed, and although he does not put his cattle in at the time, yet his right of commonage ſhall excuſe him from being a treſpaſſer. Lit. Rep. 38. See 1 Rol. Abr. 406. Suppoſing the incloſure made by the lord, and that there is not ſufficient common; or that the incloſure is made by any other perſon than the lord.

If a tenant of the freehold ploughs it, and ſows it with corn, the commoner may put in his cattle, and therewith eat the corn growing upon the land; ſo if he lets his corn lie in the field beyond the uſual time, the other commoners may, notwithſtanding, put in their beaſts. 2 Leon. 202, 203.

The commoner cannot uſe common but with his own proper cattle: but if he hath not any cattle to manure the land, he may borrow other cattle to manure it, and uſe the common with them; for by the loan, they are in a manner made his own cattle. 1 Danv. 798. Grantee of common appurtenant, for a certain number of cattle, cannot common with the cattle of a ſtranger: he that hath common in groſs, may put in a ſtranger's cattle, and uſe the common with ſuch cattle. Ibid. 803. Common appendant or appurtenant, cannot be made common in groſs: and approvement extends not to common in groſs. 2 Inſt. 86.

A commoner may diſtrain beaſts put into the common by a ſtranger, or every commoner may bring action of the caſe, where damage is received. 9 Rep. 11. But one commoner cannot diſtrain the cattle of another commoner, though he may thoſe of a ſtranger, who hath no right to the common. 2 Lutw. 1238. Unleſs he puts in more than he hath a right for.

Where a commoner ſurcharges the common, the other commoners may have a writ of admeaſurement; and admeaſurement is to be according to the quality and quantity of the freehold, and for all the cattle which are upon the land. It lies only by one commoner againſt another; but not againſt a commoner ſans number; nor againſt the lord, in which caſe there muſt be an aſſiſe. 1 Danv. 809. If a man be diſſeiſed of his common, he ſhall have an aſſiſe. New. Nat. Br. 399.

If any commoner incloſes, or builds on the common, every commoner may have an action for the damage. Where turf is taken away from the common, the lord only is to bring the action: but it is ſaid the commoners may have an action for the injury, by entering on the common, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 89, 398. 2 Leon. 201.

If a commoner who hath a freehold in his common be ouſted of, or hindered therein, that he cannot have it ſo beneficially as he uſed to do; whether the interruption be by the lord or any ſtranger, he may have an aſſiſe againſt him: but if the commoner hath only an eſtate for years, then his remedy is by action on the caſe. And if it be only a ſmall treſpaſs, that is little or no loſs to the commoner, but he hath common enough beſides, the commoner may not bring any action. 4 Rep. 37. 8 Rep. 79. Dyer 316.

A commoner cannot dig clay on the common, which deſtroys the graſs, and carrying it away doth damage to the ground: ſo that the other commoners cannot enjoy the common in tam amplo modo as they ought. Godb. 344. Alſo a commoner may not cut buſhes, dig trenches, &c. in the common, without a cuſtom to do it. 1 Nelſ. 462. If he makes any thing de novo, he is a treſpaſſer: he can do nothing to impair the common; but may reform a thing abuſed, fill up holes, &c. 1 Brownl. 208.

A commoner may abate hedges erected on a common; for though the lord hath an intereſt in the ſoil, by abating the hedges, the commoner doth not meddle with it. 2 Mod. 65. Any man may by preſcription have common and feeding for his cattle in the King's highway, although the ſoil doth belong to another. But the occupation of common by uſurpation, will not give title to him that doth occupy it, unleſs he hath had it time beyond memory.

Upon agreement between two commoners to encloſe a common, a party having intereſt not privy to the agreement, will not be bound; but one or two wilful perſons ſhall not hinder the public good. Chan. Rep. 48. Commons muſt be driven yearly at Michaelmas or within fifteen days after: infected horſes, and ſtone-horſes under ſize, &c. are not to be put into commons, under forfeitures, by Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 13. New erected cottages, though they have four acres of ground laid to them, ought not to have common in the waſte. 2 Inſt. 740. In law proceedings, where there are two diſtinct commons, the two titles muſt be ſhewn: cattle are to be alledged commonable; and common ought to be in lands commonable: and the place is to be ſet forth where the meſſuage and lands lie, &c. to which the common belongs. 1 Nelſ. 462, 463.

Common appendant, becauſe it is of common right, ſhall be apportioned by the commoner's purchaſe of part of the land in which he hath ſuch common; but common appurtenant ſhall be extinct by the commoner's purchaſe of part of the land, in which, &c. Both common appendant and appurtenant ſhall be apportioned by alienation of part of the land to which the common is appendant or appurtenant. Co. Lit. 122. Hob. 235. 8 Co. 78. Owen 122. 4 Co. 37. Cro. Eliz. 594.

A releaſe of common in one acre, is an extinguiſhment of the whole common. See 4 Co. 37.

If A. hath common in the lands of B. as appurtenant to a meſſuage, and after B. enfeoffs A. of the ſaid lands, whereby the common is extinguiſhed; and then A. leaſes to B. the ſaid meſſuage and lands, with all commons, &c. occupat' vel uſitat' cum præd. meſſuagio; this is a good grant of a new common for the time. Cro. Eliz. 570. If ſeveral perſons are ſeized of ſeveral parts of a common, and a commoner purchaſes the inheritance of one part, his entire common is extinct. 1 And. 159. When a man hath common appendant for a certain number of cattle, and to a certain parcel of land, if he ſell part of it, the common is not extinguiſhed; for the purchaſer ſhall have common pro rata: but it is otherwiſe in common appurtenant. 8 Rep. 78. 1 Nelſ. 460. See Fitz. Abr. tit. Comm. per tot.

Common of Eſtovers, Is a right of taking wood out of another man's wood, for houſe-bote, plough-bote, and hay-bote. What botes are neceſſary, tenants may take, notwithſtanding no mention be made thereof in their leaſes; but if a tenant take more houſe-bote than is needful, he may be puniſhed for waſte. Terms de Ley. Tenants for life may take upon the land demiſed reaſonable eſtovers, unleſs reſtrained by ſpecial covenant: and every tenant for years hath three kinds of eſtovers incident to his eſtate. 1 Inſt. 41. When a houſe having eſtovers appendant or appurtenant, is blown down by wind, if the owner rebuilds it in the ſame place and manner as before, his eſtovers ſhall continue: ſo if he alters the rooms and chambers, without making new chimnies; but if he erect any new chimnies he will not be allowed to ſpend any eſtovers in ſuch new chimnies. 4 Rep. 87. 4 Leon. 383. If one have a dwelling-houſe whereunto common of eſtovers doth belong, and the houſe by fire is burnt down, and a new one built near to the place, or in the place in another form, the eſtovers are gone: but if the old houſe be only ſome of it down, it is otherwiſe; and in all caſes where the alterations to a houſe do no prejudice to the tertenant or owner of the land or wood, the eſtovers will remain. F. N. B. 180. Where a man hath eſtovers for life, if the owner cut down all the wood, that there is none left for him, he may bring an aſſiſe of eſtovers; and if the tenant have but an eſtate for years, or at will, he may have an action on the caſe. Moor Ca. 65. 9 Rep. 112. If the tenant who hath common of eſtovers, ſhall uſe them to any other purpoſe than he ought, he that owns the wood may bring treſpaſs againſt him: as where one grants twenty loads of wood to be taken yearly in ſuch a wood, ten loads to burn, and ten to repair pales; here he may cut and take the wood for the pales, though they need no amending, but then he muſt keep it for that uſe. 9 Rep. 113. F. N. B. 58, 159.

Common of Piſcary, Is a liberty of fiſhing in another man's water. Common of piſcary to exclude the owner of the ſoil, is contrary to law: though a perſon by preſcription may have a ſeparate right of fiſhing in ſuch water, and the owner of the ſoil be excluded; for a man may grant the water, without paſſing the ſoil: and if one grant ſeparaliam piſcariam, neither the ſoil nor the water paſs, but only a right of fiſhing. 1 Inſt. 4, 122, 164. 5 Rep. 34. No perſon ſhall fiſh in any river without the owner's conſent, under penalties: and nets, angles, &c. ſhall be ſeized and deſtroyed, by Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 25. See Fiſh and Fiſhing.

Common of Turbary, Is a licence to dig turf upon the ground of another, or in the lord's waſte. This common is appendant or appurtenant to an houſe, and not to lands; for turfs are to be burnt in the houſe: and it may be in groſs; but it does not give any right to the land, trees, or mines. It cannot exclude the owner of the ſoil. 1 Inſt. 4. 4 Rep. 37.

There is a common or liberty of digging coals, and gravel, ſand, &c. as well as turf.

Common Bench, (bancus communis, from the Sax. banc, bank, and thence metaphorically a bench, high ſeat or tribunal) The court of Common Pleas was anciently called Common Bench, becauſe communia placita inter ſubditos ex jure noſtro, quod commune vocant, in hoc diſceptantur. That is, the pleas or controverſies between common perſons are there tried and determined. Camb. Britan. 113. In law books and references the court of Common Pleas is written C. B. from communi Banco, (or C. P.) And the juſtices of that court are ſtiled Juſticiarii de Banco. See Common Pleas.

Common Day of Plea in Land, Signifies an ordinary day in court, as Octabis Hilarii, Quindena Paſchæ, &c. It is mentioned in the Stat. 51 H. 3. Stat. 2 & Stat. 3. concerning general days in bank.

Common Fine, (finis communis) A ſmall ſum of money, which the reſiants within the liberty of ſome leets pay to the lords, called in divers places head ſilver or head pence, in others cert money; and was firſt granted to the lord, towards the charge of his purchaſe of the court-leet, whereby the reſiants have the eaſe to do their ſuit within their own manors, and are not compellable to go to the ſheriff's turn: in the manor of Sheapſhead in the county of Leiceſter, every reſiant pays 1*d.* per poll to the lord at the court held after Michaelmas, which is there called common fine. For this common fine the lord may diſtrain; but he cannot do it without a preſcription. 11 Rep. 44. There is alſo common fine of the county—Quod communes miſericordiæ, vel fines comitatuum amerciatorum in finibus itinerum juſticiariorum, &c. Fleta, lib. 7. c. 48. Commons Houſe of Parliament, Is the lower houſe of parliament, ſo called, becauſe the commons of the realm, that is the knights, citizens, and burgeſſes returned to parliament, repreſenting the whole body of the commons, do ſit there Cromp. Juriſd. See Parliament.

Common Intendment, Is common meaning or underſtanding, according to the ſubject matter, not ſtrained to any extraordinary or foreign ſenſe: bar to common intendment is an ordinary or general bar, which is commonly an anſwer to the plaintiff's declaration. There are ſeveral caſes in the law where common intendment, and intendment take place: and of common intendment a will ſhall not be ſuppoſed to be made by colluſion. Co. Lit. 78. See Co Lit. 303, a, b, &c.

Common Law, (Lex Communis) Is taken for the law of this kingdom ſimply, without any other laws; as it was generally holden before any ſtatute was enacted in parliament to alter the ſame: and the King's courts of juſtice are called the Common Law Courts. The Common Law is grounded upon the general cuſtoms of the realm; and includes in it the law of nature, the law of God, and the principles and maxims of the law: it is founded upon reaſon; and is ſaid to be the perfection of reaſon, acquired by long ſtudy, obſervation and experience, and refined by learned men in all ages. And it is the common birthright, that the ſubject hath for the ſafe-guard and defence, not only of his goods, lands, and revenues; but of his wife and children, body, fame, and life alſo. Co. Lit. 97, 142. Treatiſe of Laws, p. 2.

According to Hale, the Common law of England, is the common rule for adminiſtring juſtice, within this kingdom, and aſſerts the King's royal prerogatives, and likewiſe the rights and liberties of the ſubject: it is generally that law, by which the determinations in the King's ordinary courts are guided; and this directs the courſe of deſcents of lands; the nature, extent and qualification of eſtates; and therein the manner and ceremonies of conveying them from one to another; with the forms, ſolemnities and obligation of contracts; the rules and directions for the expoſition of deeds, and acts of parliament: the proceſs, proceedings, judgments and executions of our courts of juſtice; alſo the limits and bounds of courts, and juriſdictions; the ſeveral kinds of temporal offences and puniſhments, and their application, &c. Hale's Hiſt. of the Common Law, pag. 24, 44, 45.

As to the riſe of the Common law, this account is given by ſome ancient writers: After the decay of the Roman empire, three ſorts of the German people invaded the Britains, viz. the Saxons, the Angles, and the Jutes; from the laſt ſprung the Kentiſh men, and the inhabitants of the Iſle of Wight; from the Saxons came the people called Eaſt, South, and Weſt Saxons; and from the Angles, the Eaſt Angles, Mercians and Northumbrians: Theſe people having different cuſtoms, they inclined to the different laws by which their anceſtors were governed; but the cuſtoms of the Weſt Saxons and Mercians, who dwelt in the midland counties, being preferred before the reſt, were for that reaſon called jus Anglorum; and by theſe laws thoſe people were governed for many ages: but the Eaſt Saxons having afterwards been ſubdued by the Danes, their cuſtoms were introduced, and a third law was ſubſtituted, which was called Dane-lage; as the other was then ſtiled Weſt-Saxon-lage, &c. At length the Danes being overcome by the Normans, William called the Conqueror, upon conſideration of all thoſe laws and cuſtoms, abrogated ſome, and eſtabliſhed others; to which he added ſome of his own country laws, which he judged moſt to conduce to the preſervation of the peace: and this is what we now call the Common Law.

But though we uſually date our Common law from hence, this was not the original of the Common law; for Ethelbert, the firſt Chriſtian King of this nation, made the firſt Saxon laws, which were publiſhed by the advice of ſome wiſe men of his council: and King Alfred who lived 300 years afterwards, collected all the Saxon laws into one book, and commanded them to be obſerved through thewhole kingdom, which before only affected certain parts thereof; and it was therefore properly called the Common law, becauſe it was common to the whole nation; and ſoon after it was called the folc right, i. e. the peoples right.

Alfred was ſtiled Anglicarum legum conditor: and when the Danes had introduced their laws on the conqueſt of the kingdom, they were afterwards deſtroyed; and Edward the Confeſſor out of the former laws compoſed a body of the Common law; wherefore he is called by our hiſtorians Anglicarum legum reſtitutor. Blount. In the reign of Edw. 1. Britton wrote his learned book of the Common law of this realm, which was done by the King's command, and runs in his name, anſwerable to the Inſtitutions of the Civil law, which Juſtinian aſſumes to himſelf, though compoſed by others. Staunf. Prerog. 6, 21. But Juſtinian ought to be intitled to the honour, as the Inſtitutes were compoſed by his direction. This Britton is mentioned by Gwin to be biſhop of Hereford.

Bracton, a great lawyer, in the time of Hen. 3. wrote a very learned treatiſe of the Common law of England, held in great eſtimation; and he was ſaid to be Lord Chief Juſtice of the kingdom. Alſo the famous and learned Glanvil, Lord Chief juſtice in the reign of Hen. 2. wrote a book of the Common law, which is ſaid to be the moſt ancient compoſition extant on that ſubject. Beſides theſe, in the time of Ed. 4. the renowned lawyer Littleton wrote his excellent book of Engliſh Tenures. In the reign of King James the Firſt, the great oracle of the law, Sir Edward Coke, publiſhed his learned and laborious Inſtitutes of our law, and commentary on Littleton. About the ſame time likewiſe Dr. Cowel, a civilian, wrote a ſhort inſtitute of our laws. In the reign of King George the Firſt, Dr. Tho. Wood, a civilian and common lawyer, and at laſt a divine, wrote an inſtitute of the laws of England, which is ſomething after the manner of the inſtitutes of the Civil law.

To conclude the whole of this head, the learned Dr. Blackſtone, (now one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the court of of Common Pleas) in the reign of George the Third, publiſhed Commentaries on the laws of England, in 4 volumes quarto, the beſt analytic and moſt methodic ſyſtem of our laws which ever was publiſhed. It is equally adapted for the uſe of ſtudents, and of thoſe gentlemen who chooſe to acquire that knowledge of our laws, which is, in fact, eſſentially neceſſary for every one. An octavo edition of that excellent work is now publiſhed, with many corrections, and ſome ſmall additions.

Common Pleas, (communia placita) Is one of the King's courts now conſtantly held in Weſtminſter Hall; but in ancient time was moveable, as appears by Magna Charta, cap. 11. Gwyn, in the preface of his reading, ſays, That till Hen. 3. granted the great charter there were but two courts, called the King's courts, viz. the King's Bench and the Exchequer, which were then ſtiled Curia Domini Regis, and Aula Regis, becauſe they followed the court or the King; and that upon the grant of that charter, the court of Common Pleas was erected and ſettled in one certain place, i. e. Weſtminſter-hall; and after that, all the writs ran Quod ſit coram juſticiariis meis apud Weſtm. whereas before, the party was required by them to appear Coram me vel juſticiariis meis, without any addition of place, &c. as he obſerves out of the writings of Glanvil and Bracton. But Sir Edward Coke is of opinion in his preface to the eighth report, that the court of Common Pleas was conſtituted before the conqueſt; and was not created by Magna Charta, at which time there were Juſticiarii de Banco, &c. Though, before this act, Common Pleas might have been held in Banco Regis; and all original writs were returnable there.

Writs returnable in this court, are now coram juſticiariis noſtris apud Weſtm. But original writs, &c. returnable in B. R. are, Coram nobis ubicunque fuerimus in Anglia. The juriſdiction of the court of C. P. is general, and extends itſelf throughout England: it holds plea of all civil cauſes at Common law, between ſubject and ſubject, in actions real, perſonal and mixed; and it ſeems to have been the only court for real cauſes. In perſonal and mixed actions it hath a concurrent juriſdiction with the King's Bench: but it hath no cogniſance of pleas of the crown; and Common Pleas are all pleas that are not ſuch. This court cannot regularly hold plea in any action, real or perſonal, &c. but by writ out of Chancery returnable here, except it be by bill for or againſt an officer, or other privileged perſon of the court: and except as after mentioned. All actions belonging to this court, come hither either by original, as arreſts and outlawries; or by privilege or attachment, for or againſt privileged perſons; or out of inferior courts, not of record, by pone, recordare, accedas ad curiam, writ of falſe judgment, &c. Actions popular, and actions penal, of debt, &c. upon any ſtatute, are cogniſable by this court: and beſides having juriſdiction for puniſhment of its officers and miniſters; the court of Common Pleas may grant prohibitions to keep temporal and eccleſiaſtical courts within due bounds. 4 Inſt. 99, 100, 118. In this court are four judges, created by letters patent; the ſeal of the court is committed to the cuſtody of the chief juſtice.

The other officers of the Common Pleas are the Cuſtos Brevium, three Prothonotaries and their Secondaries, the Clerk of the Warrants, Clerk of the Eſſoins, fourteen Filazers, four Exigenters, a Clerk of the Juries, the Chirographer, Clerk of the King's Silver, the Clerk of the Treaſury, Clerk of the Seal, of Outlawries, and the Clerk of the Inrolment of Fines and Recoveries, Clerk of the Errors, &c. The Cuſtos Brevium is the chief clerk in this court, who receives and keeps all writs returnable therein; and all records of Niſi prius, which are delivered to him by the clerks of the aſſiſe of every circuit, &c. and he files the rolls together, and carries them into the treaſury of records: he alſo makes out exemplifications, and copies of all writs and records, &c. The Prothonotaries enter and inrol all declarations, pleadings, judgments, &c. and they make out all judicial writs, writs of execution, writs of privilege, procedendo's, &c. The Secondaries are aſſiſtants to the Prothonotaries in the execution of their offices; and they take minutes, and draw up all orders and rules of court. The Filazers, who have the ſeveral counties of England divided among them, make out all meſne proceſs, as capias, alias, pluries, &c. between the original writ and the declaration; and they make all writs of view, &c. The Exigenters, appointed for ſeveral counties, make out all exigents and proclamations in order to outlawry. The Clerk of the Warrants, enters all warrants of attorney; inrols deeds of bargain and ſale, and eſtreats all iſſues. The Clerk of the Eſſoins, keeps the roll of the eſſoins, wherein he enters them, and nonſuits, &c. The Clerk of the Juries, makes out all writs of habeas corpora jurator', for juries to appear; and he enters the continuances till the verdict given. The Clerk of the Treaſury keeps the records of the court, and makes exemplifications of records, copies of iſſues, judgments, &c. The Clerk of the Seals, ſeals all writs and meſne proceſs; alſo writs of outlawry and ſuperſedeas, and all patents. The Clerk of the Outlawries, makes out the writs of capias utlagatum. The Clerk of the Errors is for the allowance of writs of error, &c. The Clerk of the Inrolments of fines and recoveries, returns all writs of covenant, writs of entry and ſeiſin, and inrols and exemplifies fines, &c. The Clerk of the King's Silver enters the ſubſtance of the writ of covenant: and the Chirographer ingroſſeth all fines, and delivers the indentures to the parties, &c.

To theſe officers may be added, a Proclamator; a Keeper of the court; Cryer; and Tipſtaffs; beſides the Warden of the Fleet. There are alſo Attornies of this court, whoſe number is unlimited; and none may plead at the bar of the court, or ſign any ſpecial pleadings, but Serjeants at law.

Common Prayer, (Preces Publicæ) Is the liturgy, or prayers uſed in our church. It is the particular duty of clergymen every Sunday, &c. to uſe the public form of prayer, preſcribed by the Book of Common Prayer: and if any incumbent be reſident upon his living, as he ought to be, and keep a curate, he is obliged by the act of uniformity, once every month at leaſt, to read the Common Prayers of the church, according as they are directed by the book of Common Prayer, in his pariſh church, in his own perſon, or he ſhall forfeit 5 l. for every time he fails therein. Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 4. Alſo by that ſtatute the book of Common Prayer is to be provided in every pariſh, under the penalty of 3 l. a month: and the Common Prayer muſt be read before every lecture; the whole appointed for the day, with all the circumſtances, and ceremonies, &c. And by one of the canons of the church; miniſters, before all ſermons, are to move the people to join in a ſhort prayer, for the catholick church; and the whole congregation of Chriſtian people, &c. for the King and Royal Family; the miniſters of God's word, nobility, magiſtrates, and whole commons of the realm, &c. and conclude with the Lord's Prayer. Can. 55. Refuſing to uſe the Common Prayer, or uſing any other open prayers, &c. is puniſhable by Stat. 1 Eliz. c. 2. See Church, Service, and Sacrament.

Common Weal, Is underſtood in our law to be bonum publicum, and is a thing much favoured; and therefore the law doth tolerate many things to be done for common good, which otherwiſe might not be done: and hence it is, that monopolies are void in law; and that bonds and covenants to reſtrain free trade, tillage, or the like, are adjudged void. 11 Co. Rep. 50. Plowd. 25. Shep. Epit. 270.

Commorancy, (commorantia, from commoro) An abiding, dwelling or continuing in any place; as an inhabitant of a houſe in a vill, &c. And commorancy for a certain time, may make a ſettlement in a pariſh. Dalt. See Poor.

Commorth, or Comorth, (comortha) From the Brit. cymmorth, i. e. ſubſidium; a contribution which was gathered at marriages, and when young prieſts ſaid or ſung the firſt maſſes, &c. 4 Hen. 4. c. 27. But the 26 H. 8. c. 6. prohibits the levying any ſuch in Wales, or the Marches, &c.

Commote, In Wales is half a cantred or hundred, containing fifty villages. Stat. Walliæ, 12 Ed. 1. Wales was anciently divided into three provinces; and each of theſe were again ſubdivided into cantreds, and every cantred into commotes. Doderige's Hiſt. Wal. fol. 2. Commote alſo ſignifies a great ſeigniory or lordſhip, and may include one or divers manors. Co. Lit. 5.

Communance. The commoners, or tenants and inhabitants, who had the right of common, or commoning in open fields, &c. were formerly called the communance. Cowel.

Commune Concilium Regni Angliæ, The common council of the King and people aſſembled in parliament.

Communia placita non tenenda in Scaccario, Is an ancient writ directed to the treaſurer and barons of the Exchequer, forbidding them to hold plea between common perſons in that court, where neither of the parties belong to the ſame. Reg Orig. 187. But little obedience would perhaps be now paid to ſuch a writ, was any officer to dare to iſſue it: for the court of exchequer, ſeems by preſcription, to have attained a concurrent juriſdiction in civil ſuits, with the other courts in Weſtminſter-hall.

Communi Cuſtodia, A writ which anciently lay for the lord, whoſe tenant holding by knight's ſervice died, and left his eldeſt ſon under age, againſt a ſtranger that entered the land, and obtained the ward of the body. F. N. B. 89. Reg. Orig. 161. Since the ſtatute 12 Car. 2. c. 24. hath taken away wardſhips, this writ is become of no uſe.

Community of the kingdom. Vide Commonalty.

Companage, (Fr.) Is all kind of food, except bread and drink: and the learned Spelman interprets it to be quicquid cibi cum pane ſumitur. In the manor of Feſkerton in the county of Nottingham, ſome tenants when they performed their boons or work-days to the lords, had three boon loaves with companage allowed them. Reg. de Thurgarton cited in Antiq. Nottingham.

Companion of the Garter, Is one of the knights of that moſt noble order; at the head of which is the King, as ſovereign. 24 H. 8. c. 13.

Compaſs, An inſtrument uſed in navigation, by the direction and aſſiſtance whereof veſſels are ſteered to the moſt diſtant parts of the world. It was invented ſoon after the cloſe of the holy war, and thereby navigation was rendered more ſecure as well as more adventrous, the communication between remote nations was facilitated, and they were brought nearer to each other. See Robertſ. Hiſt. Emp. C. V. 1 V. 78.

Compellativum, An adverſary or accuſer.—Epiſcopus in compellativum adlegiationem docere ne quis alium perperam cogat jurejurando vel in ordalio. Leg. Athelſtan.

Compertorium, A judicial inqueſt in the Civil law, made by delegates, or commiſſioners to find out and relate the truth of a cauſe. Paroch. Antiq. 575.

Compoſition, (compoſitio) An agreement or contract between a parſon, patron and ordinary, &c. for money or other thing in lieu of tithes. Land may be exempted from the payment of tithes, where compoſitions have been made: and real compoſitions for tithes are to be made by the concurrent conſent of the parſon, patron and ordinary. Real compoſitions are diſtinguiſhed from perſonal contracts; for a compoſition called a perſonal contract is only an agreement between the parſon and the pariſhioners, to pay ſo much inſtead of tithes; and though ſuch agreement is confirmed by the ordinary, yet (if the parſon is not a party) that doth not make it a real compoſition, becauſe he ought to be a party to the deed of compoſition. March's Rep. 87. The compoſitions for tithes made by the conſent of the parſon, patron and ordinary, by virtue of 13 Eliz. c. 10. ſhall not bind the ſucceſſor unleſs made for twenty-one years or three lives, as in caſe of leaſes of eccleſiaſtical corporations, &c. Compoſitions were at firſt for a valuable conſideration, ſo that though in proceſs of time, upon the increaſe of the value of the lands ſuch compoſitions do not amount to the value of the tithes, yet cuſtom prevails, and from hence ariſes what we call a modus decimandi. Hob. 29. See Tithes.

The word compoſition hath likewiſe another meaning, i. e. deciſio litis.

Compoſitions were in ancient times allowed for crimes and offences, even for murder.—An expedient employed by the civil magiſtrate, in order to ſet ſome bounds to the violence of private revenge. This cuſtom may be traced back to the antient Germans. Tacit. de Morib. Ger. c. 21. Vide Robertſ. Hiſt. Emp. Charles V. 1 V. 278, 299, &c. But ſee particularly Lord Kaim's Hiſt. Law Tr. 1 V. 41, 42, &c.

Compoſitio Menſuratum, Is the title of an antient ordinance for meaſures, not printed.

Compoſtum, Dung, ſoil or compoſt laid on lands. Regiſtr. Eccl. Cantuar. MS.

Compounding felony, or theft-bote, Is where the party robbed not only knows the felon, but alſo takes his goods again, or other amends upon agreement not to proſecute. It was formerly held to make a man an acceſſary; but is now puniſhed only with fine and impriſonment. 1 Hawk P. C. 125. Unleſs a party is puniſhed, by virtue of the following act. By Stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 36. even to advertiſe a reward for the return of things ſtolen, with no queſtions aſked, or words to the ſame purport, ſubjects the advertiſer and the printer to a forfeiture of 50 l. each.

Comprint, Intends a ſurreptitious printing of another bookſeller's copy, to make gain thereby, which is contrary to the Stat. 14 Car. 2. cap. 33. and 8 Ann. c. 19, &c. and to Common law.

Compromiſe, (compromiſſum) Is defined to be a mutual promiſe of two or more parties at difference, to refer the ending of their controverſy to arbitrators: and Weſt ſays it is the faculty or power of pronouncing ſentence between perſons at variance, given to arbitrators by the parties private conſent. Weſt's Symb. ſect. 1. Matters compromiſed, are alſo matters of law referred, or made an end of.

Compurgator, One that by oath juſtifies another's innocence. Compurgators were introduced as evidence in the juriſprudence of the middle ages.——Their number varied according to the importance of the ſubject in diſpute, or the nature of the crime with which a perſon was charged. Du Cange voc. Juramentum, vol. 3. p. 1599. Robertſ. Hiſt. Emp. Charles V. 1 V. 49. See Oath, and Black. Com. 3 V. 342, 3. 4 V. 361, 407.

Computation, (computatio) Is the true account and conſtruction of time; and to the end neither party to an agreement, &c. may do wrong to the other, nor the determination of time be left at large, it is to be taken according to the juſt judgment of the law. A deed dated the 20th day of Auguſt, to hold from the day of the date, ſhall be conſtrued to begin on the 21ſt day of Auguſt: but if in the habendum it be to hold from the making, or from thenceforth, it ſhall begin on the day delivered. 1 Inſt. 46. 5 Rep. 1. If an indenture of leaſe dated the 4th day of July, made for three years from thenceforth, be delivered at four of the clock in the afternoon of the ſaid 4th day of July, the leaſe ſhall end the 3d day of July in the third year: and the law in this computation rejects all fractions or diviſions of the day. But ſome have held that rent is not due on the day limited to be paid till the middle of the day, and after noon; in caſe a tenant for life dies at ſuch a critical juncture, &c. See Day and Month.

Computation of miles after the Engliſh manner, is allowing 5280 feet, or 1760 yards to each mile; and the ſame ſhall be reckoned not by ſtrait lines, as a bird or arrow may fly, but according to the neareſt and moſt uſual way. Cro. Eliz. 212.

Computo, (Lat.) Is a writ to compel a bailiff, receiver or accountant, to yield up his accounts: it is founded on the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 12. And alſo lies againſt guardians, &c. Reg. Orig. 135.

Concealers, (concelatores, ſo called à concelando, as mons a movendo, by an antiphraſis) Are ſuch as find out concealed lands, i. e. ſuch lands as are privily kept from the King by common perſons, having nothing to ſhew for their title or eſtate therein. 39 Eliz. cap. 22. There were concealers of crimes; and concealing treaſon, &c. when miſpriſion, ſee Miſpriſion.

Conceſſi, A word of frequent uſe in conveyances, creating a covenant in law; as dedi makes a warranty. Co Lit. 384. This word is of a general extent, and ſaid to amount to a grant, feoffment, leaſe and releaſe, &c. 2 Saund. 96.

Concionators, Common-council men, freemen, called to the hall or aſſembly, as moſt worthy.—Quodam tempore cum conveniſſent concionatores apud London, &c. Hiſtor. Elien. edit. Gale, c. 46.

Concluſion, (concluſio) Is when a man by his own act upon record hath charged himſelf with a duty or other thing, or confeſſed any matter whereby he ſhall be concluded: as if a ſheriff returns that he hath taken the body upon a capias, and hath not the body in court at the day of the return of the writ; by the return, the ſheriff is concluded from plea of eſcape, &c. Terms de Ley. In another ſenſe, this word concluſion ſignifies the end of any plea, replication, &c. and a plea to the writ is to conclude to the writ; a plea in bar, to conclude to the action, &c. Concluſion of plea in bar ſhall be, et hoc paratus eſt verificare: of pleas tendering iſſue, et de hoc ponit ſe ſuper patriam. Kitch. 219, 220. See Blac. Com. 3 V. 303. and Co Lit. 303. a. b. &c.

Concord, (concordia) Is an agreement made between two or more, upon a treſpaſs committed; and is divided into concord executory and concord executed. Plowd. 5, 6, 8. Theſe concords and agreements are by way of ſatisfaction for the treſpaſs, &c.

Concord is alſo an agreement between parties, who intend the levying of a fine of lands one to the other, how and in what manner the lands ſhall paſs: it is the foundation and ſubſtance of the fine, taken and acknowledged by the party before one of the judges of C. B. or by commiſſioners in the country, and in Latin begins thus: Et eſt concordia talis ſcilicet quod præd. A. B. recogn. tenementa præd. cum pertin' eſſe jus ipſius C. D. ut ill. quæ idem C. D. habet de dono præd. A. B. Et ill. remiſer. & quiet. clam. de ſe & hæred. ſuis præfat. C. & hæred. ſuis imperpetuum, &c.

Concubeant, Signifies a lying together. Stat. 1 H. 7. cap. 6.

Concubinage, (concubinatus) In common acceptation is the keeping of a whore or concubine: but in a legal ſenſe, it is uſed as an exception againſt her that ſueth for dower, alledging thereby that ſhe was not a wife lawfully married to the party, in whoſe lands ſhe ſeeks to be endowed, but his concubine. Brit. c. 107. Bract. lib. 4. tract. 6. cap. 8. There was a concubinage allowed in Scripture to the patriarchs, ſecundum legem matrimonii, &c. Blount.

Conders, (from the Fr. conduire, to conduct) Are ſuch as ſtand upon high places near the ſea-coaſt, at the time of herring-fiſhing, to make ſigns with boughs, &c. to the fiſhermen at ſea, which way the ſhoals of herrings paſs; for this may be better diſcovered by ſuch as ſtand upon ſome high cliff on the ſhore, by reaſon of a kind of blue colour which the herrings cauſe in the water, than by thoſe that are in the ſhips or boats for fiſhing. Theſe are otherwiſe called buers and balkers, directors and guiders, as appears by the Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 23.

Condition, (conditio) Is a reſtraint annexed to a thing, ſo that by the non-performance, the party to it ſhall receive prejudice and loſs; and by the performance, commodity and advantage: or it is a reſtriction of mens acts, qualifying or ſuſpending the ſame, and making them uncertain whether they ſhall take effect or not; alſo it is defined to be what is referred to an uncertain chance, which may happen or not happen. Weſt's Symb. part. 1. lib. 2. ſect. 156. And of conditions there are divers kinds, viz. conditions in deed and in law; conditions precedent, and ſubſequent; conditions inherent, and collateral, &c.

A condition in deed is that which is joined by expreſs words to a feoffment, leaſe, or other grant; as if a man makes a leaſe of lands to another, reſerving a rent to be paid at ſuch a feaſt, upon condition if the leſſee fail in payment, at the day, then it ſhall be lawful for the leſſor to enter.

Condition in law is when a perſon grants another an office, as that of keeper of a park, ſteward, bailiff, &c. for term of life; here, though there be no condition expreſſed in the grant, yet the law makes one, which is, if the grantee do not juſtly execute all things belonging to the office, it ſhall be lawful for the grantor to enter and diſcharge him of his office. Lit. lib. 3. c. 5. Theſe conditions are alſo called condition expreſſed, and condition implied.

Condition precedent is when a leaſe or eſtate is granted to one for life, upon condition that if the leſſee pay to the leſſor a certain ſum at ſuch a day, then he ſhall have fee ſimple; in this caſe the condition precedes the eſtate in fee, and on performance thereof gains the fee-ſimple.

Condition ſubſequent is when a man grants to another his manor of Dale, &c. in fee, upon condition that the grantee ſhall pay to him at ſuch a day ſuch a certain ſum, or that his eſtate ſhall ceaſe; here the condition is ſubſequent, and following the eſtate, and upon the performance thereof continues and preſerves the ſame: ſo that a condition precedent doth get and gain the thing or eſtate made upon condition by the performance of it; as a condition ſubſequent keeps and continues the eſtate by the performance of the condition. 1 Inſt. 201, 327. Terms de Ley. If one agree with another to do ſuch an act, and for the doing thereof the other ſhall pay ſo much money; here the doing the act is a condition precedent to the payment of the money, and the party ſhall not be compelled to pay till the act is done: but where a day is appointed for the payment of money, which day happens before the thing contracted for can be performed, there the money may be recovered before the thing is done; for here it appears that the party did not intend to make the performance of the thing a condition precedent. 3 Salk. 95.

Inherent conditions are ſuch as deſcend to the heir with the land granted, &c.

A collateral condition is that which is annexed to any collateral act.

Conditions are likewiſe affirmative, which conſiſt of doing; negative, and conſiſt of not doing: ſome are further ſaid to be reſtrictive, for not doing a thing; and ſome compulſory, as that the leſſee ſhall pay the rent, &c.

Alſo ſome conditions are ſingle, to do one thing only; ſome copulative, to do divers things; and others disjunctive, where one thing of ſeveral is required to be done. Co. Lit. 201.

Among theſe ſeveral kinds of conditions, the caſes which moſt frequently occur fall under the diſtinctions of conditions precedent and ſubſequent. We ſhall therefore ſpeak of them more at large under the following diviſions, wherein it is to be conſidered,

I. To what conditions may be annexed: what conditions are good, and by what words they may be created.

II. What ſhall be a good performance of a condition, and in what manner the breach of it muſt be taken advantage of.

III. Of conditions precedent and ſubſequent.

I. To what conditions may be annexed: what are good, and by what words they may be created.

Conditions may be to any eſtate, whether in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life or years: they run with the eſtate, and bind in the hands of whomſoever they come. Lit. Rep. 128. But a condition may not be made but on the part of the leſſor, donor, &c. For no man may annex a condition to an eſtate, but he that doth create the eſtate itſelf. Conditions are good to enlarge or limit eſtates: and there are four incidents, which conditions to create and increaſe an eſtate ought to have. 1. They ſhould have a particular eſtate, as a foundation whereupon the increaſe of the greater eſtate ſhall be built. 2. Such particular eſtate ſhall continue in the leſſee or grantee, until the increaſe happens. 3. It muſt veſt at the time the contingency happens, or it ſhall never veſt. 4. The particular eſtate and increaſe muſt take effect by the ſame deed, or by ſeveral deeds delivered at the ſame time. 8 Rep. 75. Conditions to create eſtates ſhall be favourably conſtrued: but conditions which tend to deſtroy, or reſtrain an eſtate, are to be taken ſtrictly. A feoffment upon condition, that the feoffee ſhall not aliene, is void: but a condition in a feoffment not to aliene for a particular time, or to a particular perſon, may be good. Hob. 13, 261. And if a condition is, that tenant in tail ſhall not aliene in fee, &c. or tenant for life or years not aliene during the term, theſe conditions are good: where the reverſion of an eſtate is in the donor, he may reſtrain an alienation by condition. 10 Rep. 39. 1 Inſt. 222. If one make a gift in tail, on condition that the donee or his heirs ſhall not aliene; this is good to ſome intents, and void to others: for if he make a feoffment in fee, or any other eſtate by which the reverſion is diſcontinued tortiouſly, the donor may enter; but it is otherwiſe if he ſuffer a common recovery. 1 Inſt. 223.

A liberty inſeparable from an eſtate cannot be reſtrained; and therefore a condition that a tenant in tail ſhall not levy a fine, within the Stat. 4 H. 7. c. 24. or ſuffer a recovery; or not make a leaſe within the Stat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 36. is void and repugnant. But if the condition reſtrain levying a fine at Common law, it may be good. 2 Danv. Abr. 22. A gift in tail, or in fee, upon condition that a feme ſhall not be endowed; or baron be tenant by the curteſy, is repugnant and void. So is a condition in a leaſe, &c. that the leſſee ſhall not take the profits: and where a man grants a rent-charge out of land, provided it ſhall not charge the lands. Co. Lit. 146.

Conditions repugnant to the eſtate, impoſſible, &c. are void: and if they go before the eſtate, the eſtate and condition are void; if to follow it, the eſtate is abſolute, and the condition void. 1 Inſt. 206. 9 Rep. 128. But if at the time of entering into a condition, a thing be poſſible to be done, and become afterwards impoſſible by the act of God, the eſtate of a feoffee (created by livery) ſhall not be avoided. 2 Mod. 204.

A feoffment in fee is made upon condition, that the feoffee ſhall within a year go to Rome, &c. if the feoffee dies before the year ended, yet the eſtate of the feoffee is become abſolute; for the eſtate, once veſted by the livery, ſhall not be diveſted without default in the feoffee. Ibid. Where a condition is of two parts, one poſſible, and the other not ſo, it is a good condition for performing that part which is poſſible. Cro. Eliz. 780. Though if a condition is of two parts disjunctive, and one part becomes impoſſible, by the act of God, the perſon bound is not obliged to perform the other. 1 Rol. Abr. 446. l. 45. 2 Mod. 202, 203. If a condition be in the copulative, and is not poſſible to be performed, it is ſaid it may be taken in the disjunctive. 1 Danv. Abr. 73.

Where an eſtate is to be wholly created upon a condition impoſſible to be performed, there the eſtate ſhall never come in eſſe. 1 Leon. c. 311. A woman makes a feoffment to a man that is married, upon condition that he ſhall marry her; this condition is not impoſſible, for the man's wife may die, and then he may marry her. 2 Danv. 25. A reverſion may be granted in tail upon condition, that if the grantee pays ſo much, he ſhall have the fee. 8 Rep. 73. But if a man grants lands, &c. for years, upon condition that if the leſſee pay 20*s.* within one year, that he ſhall have it for life: and that if he after the year pay 20 s. he ſhall have the fee; though both ſums are paid, he ſhall have but an eſtate for life: the eſtate for life, at the time of the grant, being only in contingency, and a poſſibility cannot increaſe upon a poſſibility, nor can the fee increaſe upon the eſtate for years. 8 Rep. 75.

If a leaſe be made to two, with condition to have fee, and one dies, the ſurvivor may perform the condition, and have the fee; but if they make partition, the condition is deſtroyed. 8 Rep. 75, 76. If a feoffee grant the reverſion of part of the land, on a leaſe for years, on which a rent upon condition is reſerved, all the condition is confounded and gone; though if the leſſee aſſign part, the condition remains, for he cannot diſcharge the eſtate of the condition. 2 Danv. Abr. 119. A man makes a feoffment upon condition, and after levies a fine to a ſtranger, the condition is gone. Ibid. 120. If a feoffee, upon condition to infeoff another, infeoff a ſtranger; or if it be to reinfeoff the feoffor, and he grant the land to another perſon, upon condition to perform the condition, the condition is broken, becauſe the feoffee hath diſabled himſelf to do it: ſo where ſuch feoffee, upon condition to reinfeoff, &c. takes a wife, that the land is ſubject to the dower of the wife; and ſo if the land is recovered, and execution ſued out by another, the condition is broken. Co. Lit. 221, 1 Danv. 79.

If one diſſeiſe the feoffee, or any other who hath land by juſt title, and thereof infeoff a ſtranger on condition, and the land is lawfully recovered from him that hath the title; by this the condition is deſtroyed: and if a diſſeiſor make a feoffment in fee upon condition; and after the diſſeiſee doth enter upon the feoffee, this doth extinguiſh the condition. Perk. ſect. 821. If the feoffee makes a feoffment of all or part of the land to the feoffor, before the condition is broken; the condition is gone for ever: and if he make a leaſe for life or years only, then the condition will be ſuſpended for that time. Co. Lit. 218. But it is otherwiſe where the feoffment or leaſe for life or years, are made to any other but the feoffor. Ibid. Where the condition of a feoffment is, that if the feoffor or his heir pay a certain ſum of money to the feoffee ſuch a day, and before that day the feoffor dieth without heir: or if the feoffment be made by a woman on condition to pay her 10 l. or that the feoffee infeoff her by a certain day, and they intermarry before the day, and the marriage doth continue till after it; in theſe caſes the condition is gone. Perk. ſect. 763, 764.

A condition that would take away the whole effect of a grant is void; and ſo it is if it be contrary to the expreſs words of it. Conditions againſt law are void; but what may be prohibited by law may be prohibited by deed. 1 Inſt. 206, 220. He that taketh an eſtate in remainder, is bound by condition in a deed, though he doth not ſeal it.

As to the proper words to create a condition.

The word ſi will not always make a condition; but ſometimes it makes a limitation, as where a leaſe is made for years, if A. B. lives ſo long. And this is contrary to a condition, for a ſtranger may take advantage of an eſtate determined thereby, &c. Co. Lit. 236. Dyer 300. Sub conditione is the moſt proper word to make a condition: proviſo is as good a word, when not dependant upon another ſentence; but in ſome caſes, the word proviſo may make no condition, but be only a qualification or explication of a covenant. 2 Danv. 1, 2. And neither the word proviſo, nor any other, makes a condition, unleſs it is reſtrictive. Plowd. 34. 1 Nelſ. 466.

Regularly the word (pro) does not import a condition, tho' it has the force of a condition when the thing granted is executory, and the conſideration of the grant is a ſervice, or ſome ſuch thing, for which there is no remedy; but the ſtopping the thing granted, as in the caſe of an annuity granted pro conſilio, or for executing the office of a ſteward of a court, or the ſervice of a captain or keeper of a fort, here the failure of giving counſel, or performing the ſervice, is a kind of eviction of that which is to be done for the annuity, the grantor having no means either to exact the counſel, or recompence for it, but by ſtopping the annuity; and in theſe caſes the condition is not precedent, and therefore the performance thereof need not be averred when the annuity is demanded. Per Hobart Ch. J. Hob. 41. Mich. 10 Jac. in the caſe of Cowper v. Andrews.

Of the condition, and the neceſſity of an averment.

As the intent of the teſtator chiefly governs in wills, ſuch conſtruction is always made of the words, as will beſt ſupport his intent, and therefore theſe words ad faciendum, faciendo, ea intentione, ad effectum, &c. in a will create a condition. Co. Lit. 204. a. See Deviſe, Will.

A grant to one to the intent he ſhall do ſo and ſo, is no condition, but a truſt and conſidence. Dyer 138.

Some words in a leaſe do not make a condition but a covenant, upon which the leſſor may bring his action. A leaſe being the deed of leſſor and leſſee, every word is ſpoken by both; and a condition may be therein, though it ſounds in covenant. 1 Nelſ. 464. A covenant not to grant, ſell, &c. may be a condition; and covenant that, paying the rent, the leſſee ſhall enjoy the land, is conditional. 2 Danv. 2, 6. Where words are indefinite, and proper to defeat an eſtate, they ſhall be taken to have the force of a condition. Palm. 503.

II. With regard to the performance of conditions.

A condition may be well performed, when it is done as near to the intent as may be: for if the condition of a feoffment be that the feoffee ſhall make an eſtate back to the feoffor and his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies, remainder to the right heirs of the feoffor; in this caſe, if the feoffor die before, the eſtate ſhall be made to the wife without impeachment of waſte, the remainder to the heirs of the body of the huſband begotten on the wife, &c. Co. Lit. 219. 8 Rep. 69. If a condition be performed in ſubſtance and effect, it is good although it differs in words; as where it is to deliver letters patent, and the party bound having loſt them, delivers an exemplification, &c. 2 Danv. 40. Though payment of the money before the day, is payment at the day, in performance of a condition; yet a feoffor, &c, cannot re-enter, and reveſt his old eſtate by force of the condition, till the day whereon the condition gives him power to re-enter. Ibid. 121. If a man ſeiſed of land in right of his wife, make a feoffment in fee on condition, and dies; if the heir of the feoffor enters for the condition broken, and defeats the feoffment, his eſtate vaniſhes, and preſently it is veſted in the wife. Co. Lit. 202. And if a perſon ſeiſed of land, as heir on the part of his mother, makes a feoffment on condition and dieth; tho' the heir on the part of the father, who is heir at Common law, may enter for the condition broken, the heir of the part of the mother ſhall enter upon him, and enjoy the land. Ibid. 12.

Where there is a condition in a feoffment or leaſe, that if no diſtreſs can be found, the feoffor, &c. ſhall re-enter; if the place is not open to the diſtreſs, as if there be only a cupboard in the houſe, which is locked, &c. it is all one as if there was no diſtreſs there, and the feoffor, &c. may enter. 2 Danv. 46. When a rent is to be paid upon condition at a certain day, the leſſor cannot enter for the condition broken, before demand of the rent. Ibid. 98. And the leſſor ought to demand the rent at the day, or the condition ſhall not be broken by the non-payment of the rent. A re entry may be given on a feoffment, &c. though none be reſerved: if one make a leaſe for life or feoffment upon condition, that if the feoffee or leſſee does ſuch an act, the eſtate ſhall be void: now although the eſtate cannot be void before entry, this is a good condition, and ſhall give an entry to the leſſor, &c. by implication. 1 Rol. Abr. 408. A leaſe for life on condition, being a freehold, cannot ceaſe without entry; but if it be a leaſe for years, the leaſe is void ipſo facto, on breach of the condition without any entry. 1 Inſt. 214. If a leaſe for years is, that, on breach of the condition, the term ſhall ceaſe, the term is ended without entry; but where the words are, that the leaſe ſhall be void, it is otherwiſe. Cro. Car. 511. 3 Rep. 64. Regularly, where one will take advantage of a condition, if he may enter, he muſt do it; and if he cannot enter, he muſt make a claim. Co. Lit. 218. Where on condition broken, leſſor brings an ejectment, entry is not neceſſary; if tenant defends, he is bound by the rule, to confeſs entry.

No one can reſerve the power or benefit of re-entry, on breach of a condition to any other but himſelf, his heirs, executors, &c. parties and privies, in right and repreſentation: privies in law, grantees of reverſions, &c. are to have no advantage by it. But by the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. Grantees of reverſions may take advantage againſt leſſees, &c. by action. 1 Inſt. 214, 215. Plowd. 175. Where one doth enter for a condition broken, it generally makes the eſtate void ab initio, and the party comes in of his firſt eſtate; and he ſhall have the land in the ſame manner it was when he parted with it; and his poſſeſſion at the time of making the condition: therefore he ſhall avoid all ſubſequent charges on the lands. 4 Rep. 120. Plowd. 186. Co. Lit. 233. If one enters on a condition performed, he ſhall avoid all incumbrances upon the land after the condition made: and a condition when broken, or performed, &c. will defeat the whole eſtate. So that if there be a leaſe for life, remainder in fee, on condition that the leſſee for life ſhall pay 20 l. to the leſſor; if he pay not this money, the eſtate in remainder will be avoided alſo. Dyer 127. 8 Rep. 90. But this may be otherwiſe by ſpecial limitation to an uſe: and if tenant for life, and he in remainder join in a feoffment on condition, that if, &c. then the tenant for life ſhall re-enter, this may be good without defeating the whole eſtate; tho' regularly a condition may not avoid part of an eſtate, and leave another part entire, nor can the eſtate be void as to ſome perſons, and good as to others. 8 Rep. 190. 1 Inſt. 214.

Leſſee for life makes a feoffment on condition, and enters for the condition broken; by this he ſhall be reſtored to his eſtate for life, and reduce the reverſion to the leſſor; and the rent due to the leſſor ſhall be revived: but in this caſe the leſſee will not be in the ſame courſe as he was before, for his eſtate is ſubject to a forfeiture, though he be tenant for life ſtill. Roll. 474. Shep. Abr. 405.

Tenants by the curteſy, tenant in tail after poſſibility of iſſue extinct, tenant in dower, for life, or years, &c. hold their eſtates ſubject to a condition in law, not to grant a greater eſtate than they have, nor to commit waſte, &c. 1 Inſt. 233. And eſtates made by deed to infants, and feme coverts, upon condition, ſhall bind them, becauſe the charge is on the land. 2 Danv. 30. A releaſe of all a man's right may be upon condition; a leſſee may ſurrender upon condition; a contract may be upon condition, &c. But a parſon cannot reſign upon condition, any more than be admitted upon condition: and a condition cannot be releaſed on condition. 9 Rep. 85.

No perſon ſhall defeat any eſtate of freehold upon condition without ſhewing the deed wherein the condition is contained: but of chattels real or perſonal, &c. a man may plead that ſuch grants or leaſes were made upon condition without ſhewing the deeds; and in the caſe of a condition to avoid a freehold, though it may not be pleaded without the deed, it may be given in evidence to a jury, and they may find the matter at large. Lit. 374. 5 Rep. 40. A condition may be apportioned by act of law, or of the leſſee. 4 Rep. 120. But a man cannot by his own act divide, or apportion a condition, which goes to the deſtruction of an eſtate. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 474. A condition in a will is a thing odious in law, which ſhall not be created without ſufficient words. 2 Leon. 40. A deviſe to the heir at law, provided he pay to A. B. 20 l. is a void condition, becauſe there is no perſon to take advantage of the non-performance. 1 Lutw. 797. Yet conditional deviſes, as well of lands as of goods, are allowed by our law, and not being performed, the heir or executors ſhall take advantage of them. 1 Nelſ. 467.

Where there are negative and affirmative conditions, the pleader muſt ſhew, not only that he has not broke the negative ones, but alſo that he has performed the affirmative ones. Fletcher v. Richardſon, Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 322.

III. With reſpect to the diſtinction between conditions precedent and ſubſequent

It is to obſerved, that conditions precedent are ſuch as muſt be punctually performed before the eſtate can veſt; but on a condition ſubſequent, the eſtate is immediately executed: yet the continuance of ſuch eſtate dependeth on the breach or performance of the condition. Co. Lit. 218. Eq. Abr. 108. As if I grant, that if A. will go to ſuch a place, about my buſineſs, that he ſhall have ſuch an eſtate, or that he ſhall have 10 l. &c. this is a condition precedent. 1 Rol. Abr. 414. So if I retain a man for 40 s. to go with me to Rome, this is a condition precedent, for the duty commences by going to Rome. 1 Rol. Abr. 914. So if a man, by will deviſes certain legacies, and then deviſes all the reſidue of his eſtate to his executor, after debts, legacies, &c. paid and diſcharged, this is a condition precedent; ſo that the executor cannot have the reſidue of the eſtate before the debts and legacies are diſcharged. 1 Rol. Abr. 415. 1 Jones 327. Cro. Car. 335.

But if a man deviſes a term to A. and that if his wife ſuffers the deviſee to enjoy it for three years, that ſhe ſhall have all his goods as executrix; but if ſhe diſturbs A. then he makes B. executor, and dies, his wife is executrix preſently; for though in grants the eſtate ſhall not veſt till the condition precedent is performed, yet it is otherwiſe in a will, which muſt be guided by the intent of the parties; and this ſhall not be conſtrued as a condition precedent, but only as a condition to abridge the power of being executrix, if ſhe perform it not. Cro. Eliz. 219.

Where the one promiſe is the conſideration of the other, and where the performance and not the promiſe is, muſt be gathered from the words and nature of the agreement, and depends intirely thereupon; for, if there was a poſitive promiſe that one ſhould releaſe his equity of redemption, and on the other ſide that the other would pay 7 l. then the one might bring his action without any averment of performance; but where the agreement is, that the plaintiff ſhould releaſe his equity of redemption, in conſideration whereof the defendant was to pay him 7 l. ſo that the releaſe is the conſideration, and therefore, being executory, it is a condition precedent, which muſt be averred. 12 Mod. 455, 460. Paſch. 13 Will. 3. by Holt Ch. Juſtice, in delivering the opinion of the court in the caſe of Thorp v. Thorp.

If there be a day ſet for the payment of money, or doing the thing which one promiſes, agrees or covenants to do for another thing, and that day happens to incur before the time, the thing for which the promiſe, agreement or covenant is made, is to be performed by the tenor of the agreement, there, though the words be, that the party ſhall pay the money, or do the thing for ſuch a thing, or in conſideration of ſuch a thing; after the day is paſt the other ſhall have action for the money, or other thing, though the thing for which the promiſe, agreement, or covenant was made, be not performed; for it would be repugnant there to make it a condition precedent; and therefore they are in that caſe left to mutual remedies, on which, by the expreſs words of the agreement, they have depended. Per Holt Ch. Juſtice. 12 Mod. 461. Paſch. 13 W. 3. in the caſe of Thorp v. Thorp.

M. agrees to give A. ſo much for the uſe of a coach and horſes for a year, and A. agreed further with M. to keep the coach in repair; it was averred the coach and horſes were delivered to M. but nothing of the repair; and Holt Ch. Juſtice held upon this evidence, that repairing was not a condition precedent, and therefore need not be averred. Per Holt Ch. Juſtice at Guildhall, and judgment pro querente. 12 Mod. 503. Paſch. 13 Will. 3. Atkinſon v. Morris.

But if the agreement had been that A. had agreed to give M. a coach and horſes for a year, and to repair the coach, and that for that M. promiſed ſo much money, then the repairing had been a condition precedent neceſſary to be averred. Per Holt Ch. Juſtice. 12 Mod. 503. Paſch. 13 W. 3. in S. C.

Condition that A. ſhall do, and for the doing B. ſhall pay, is a condition precedent, but time fixed for payment will verify the condition; per Holt Ch. Juſtice. 1 Salk. 171. Paſch. 13 Will. 3. B. R. Thorp v Thorp.

Where an award conſiſts of divers things, and one of them is void, and it be expreſly ſaid, that upon performance of that void thing, the other party ſhall do ſuch a thing, there the doing of the void thing is a condition precedent, and muſt be averred before action againſt the other for not doing his part; but where there be ſeveral things in an award, and ſome are good, and others not; and it is further ſaid, that upon performance præmiſſorum the other ſhall releaſe for the purpoſe, there it ſuffices to make averment of performance of what is well awarded without more; per Powell Juſtice. 12 Mod. 588. Mich. 13 W. 3. in C. B. Lee v. Elkins.

If A. makes a leaſe for five years to B. upon condition, that if B. pays him 10 l. within two years, that then he ſhall have a fee-ſimple in the lands, and make livery and ſeiſin to B. this paſſes the freehold immediately, and B. has a fee conditional; becauſe if the freehold was not to veſt in B. till the condition performed, it would be difficult to determine in whom the freehold lay; for conditions may be inſerted in ſuch deeds as are perfected privately, which might prove greatly prejudicial to ſtrangers. Lit. ſect. 350. Co. Lit. 216, 217.

But in caſe of a leaſe for life, with ſuch a condition, the freehold paſſes not before the condition performed; becauſe the livery may preſently work upon the freehold. But if a man grants an advowſon, &c. (which lie in grant) for years, upon ſuch condition, the grantee ſhall have no fee till the condition performed. Co. Lit. 217.

If A. leaſes to B. for years, upon condition, that if B. pays money to A. or his heirs, at a day, that B. ſhall have the fee, and before the day A. is attainted of treaſon and executed; now though the condition became impoſſible by the act and offence of A. yet B. ſhall not have a fee, becauſe a precedent condition to increaſe an eſtate muſt be performed; and if it becomes impoſſible, no eſtate ſhall riſe. Co. Lit. 210. Alſo in equity, with reſpect to conditions precedent and ſubſequent, the prevailing diſtinction ſeems to be, to relieve againſt the breach or non-performance, whether the condition be precedent or ſubſequent, where a compenſation can be made. 1 Vern. 79, 167. As if A. conveys lands to B. &c. and their heirs, upon truſt that if C. the ſon of A. within ſix months after the death of A. ſhould ſecure to the truſtees 500 l. for the younger children of C. then after ſuch ſecurity given, to convey to C. and his heirs, and until the time for giving ſuch ſecurity, in truſt for the eldeſt ſon of C. and in default of ſuch ſecurity, to convey to ſuch eldeſt ſon and his heirs, if C. dies before any ſuch ſecurity given, yet this condition, though precedent, being only in nature of a penalty, the intent of the truſt ſhall be regarded, which was to ſecure 500 l. for the younger children. 1 Chan. Ca. 89.

If a feme covert, having power by will to deviſe lands, deviſes them to her executors, to pay 500 l. out of them to her ſon; provided, that if the father gives not a ſufficient releaſe of certain goods to her executors, that then the deviſe of the 500 l. ſhould be void, and go to the executors, and after her death a releaſe is tendered to the father, and he refuſes, yet upon making the releaſe after, the money ſhall be paid to the ſon; for it was ſaid to be the ſtanding rule of the court, that a forfeiture ſhould not bind, where a thing may be done after, or a compenſation made for it; as where the condition is to pay money, &c. and though it is generally binding, where there is a deviſe over, yet here, it being to go to the executors, it is no more than the law implies. 2 Vent. 252.

Confederacy, (confœderatio) Is when two or more combine together to do any damage or injury to another, or to do any unlawful act. And falſe confederacy between divers perſons ſhall be puniſhed, though nothing be put in execution: but this confederacy, puniſhable by law before fore it is executed, ought to have theſe incidents; firſt, it muſt be declared by ſome matter of proſecution, as by making of bonds, or promiſes the one to the other; ſecondly, it ſhould be malicious, as for unjuſt revenge; thirdly, it ought to be falſe againſt an innocent perſon; and laſtly, it is to be out of court voluntarily. Terms de Ley. Where a writ of conſpiracy doth not lie, the confederacy is puniſhable: and inquiry ſhall be made of conſpirators and confederators, who bind themſelves together, &c.

Confeſſion, (confeſſio) Is where a priſoner is indicted of treaſon or felony, and brought to the bar to be arraigned; and his indictment being read to him, the court demands what he can ſay thereto; then he either confeſſes the offence, and the indictment to be true, or pleads Not guilty, &c.

Confeſſion may be made in two kinds, and to two ſeveral ends: the one is, that the criminal may confeſs the offence whereof he is indicted openly in the court, before the judge, and ſubmit himſelf to the cenſure and judgment of the law; which confeſſion is the moſt certain anſwer, and beſt ſatisfaction that may be given to the judge to condemn the offender; ſo that it proceeds freely of his own accord, without any threats or extremity uſed; for if the confeſſion ariſe from any of theſe cauſes, it ought not to be recorded: as a woman indicted for the felonious taking of a thing from another, being thereof arraigned, confeſſed the felony, and ſaid that ſhe did it by commandment of her huſband; the judges in pity would not record her confeſſion, but cauſed her to plead Not guilty to the felony; whereupon the jury found that ſhe did the fact by compulſion of her huſband, againſt her will, for which cauſe ſhe was diſcharged. 27 Aſſiſ. pl. 50.

The other kind of confeſſion is, when the priſoner confeſſes the indictment to be true, and that he hath committed the offence whereof he is indicted, and then becomes an approver, or accuſer of others, who are guilty of the ſame offence whereof he is indicted, or other offences with him; and then prays the judge to have a coroner aſſigned him, to whom he may make relation of thoſe offences and the full circumſtances thereof.

There is alſo a third ſort of confeſſion, formerly made by an offender in felony, not in court before the judge, as the other two are, but before the coroner in a church, or other privileged place, upon which the offender, by the ancient law of the land, was to abjure the realm. 3 Inſt. 129.

Confeſſion is likewiſe in civil caſes, where the defendant confeſſes the plaintiff's action to be good: by which confeſſion there may be a mitigation of a fine againſt the penalty of a ſtatute; though not after verdict. Finch 387. 2 Keb. 408. And there is a confeſſion indirectly implied, as well as directly expreſſed in criminal caſes; as if the defendant, in a caſe not capital, doth not directly own himſelf guilty of the crime, but by ſubmitting to a fine owns his guilt; whereupon the judge may accept of his ſubmiſſion to the King's mercy. Lamb. lib. 4. c. 9.

By this indirect confeſſion, the defendant ſhall not be barred to plead Not guilty to an action, &c. for the ſame fact: the entry of it is, that the defendant poſuit ſe in gratiam regis, &c. And of the direct confeſſion, quod cognovit indictamentum, &c. And this laſt confeſſion carries with it ſo ſtrong a preſumption of guilt, that being entered on record, on indictment of treſpaſs, it eſtops the defendant to plead Not guilty to an action brought afterwards againſt him for the ſame matter: but ſuch entry of a confeſſion of an indictment of a capital crime, it is ſaid, will not eſtop a defendant to plead Not Guilty to an appeal, it being in caſe of life. And where a perſon upon his arraignment actually confeſſes himſelf guilty, or unadviſedly diſcloſes the ſpecial manner of the fact, ſuppoſing that it doth not amount to felony, where it doth; the judges, upon probable circumſtances, that ſuch confeſſion may proceed from fear, weakneſs, or ignorance, may refuſe ſuch a confeſſion, and ſuffer the party to plead. 2 Hawk. 333.

A confeſſion may be received, and the plea of Not guilty be withdrawn, though recorded. Kel. 11. The confeſſion of the defendant, whether taken upon an examination before juſtices of peace, in purſuance of the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13. or 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 10. upon a bailment, or commitment for felony; or taken by the Common law, upon an examination before a ſecretary of ſtate, or other magiſtrate, for treaſon or other crimes, is allowed to be given in evidence againſt the party confeſſing; but not againſt others. Alſo two witneſſes of a confeſſion of high treaſon, upon an examination before a juſtice of peace, were ſufficient to convict the perſon ſo confeſſing, within the meaning of 1 Ed. 6. cap. 12. and 5 & 6 Ed. 6. cap. 11. which required two witneſſes in high treaſon; unleſs the offender ſhould willingly confeſs, &c. Bat the 7 W. 3. cap. 3. requires two witneſſes, except the party ſhall willingly without violence confeſs, &c. in open court. 2 Hawk. P. C. 429.

It has been held, that whereever a man's confeſſion is made uſe of againſt him, it muſt all be taken together, and not by parcels. Ibid. And no confeſſion ſhall, before final judgment, deprive the defendant of the privilege of taking exceptions in arreſt of judgment, to faults apparent in the record. Ibid. 333. A demurrer amounts to a confeſſion of the indictment as laid, ſo far, that if the indictment be good, judgment and execution ſhall go againſt the priſoner. Bro. 86. S. P. C. 150. H. P. C. 246. And in criminal caſes, not capital, if the defendant demur to an indictment, &c. whether in abatement, or otherwiſe, the court will not give judgment againſt him to anſwer over, but final judgment. 2 Hawk. 334. Where a priſoner confeſſes the fact, the court has nothing more to do than to proceed to judgment againſt him. And, confeſſus in judicio pro judicato habetur 11 Rep. 30. 4 Inſt. 66.

Confeſſor, (Lat. confeſſor, confeſſionarius) Hath relation to private confeſſion of ſins, in order to abſolution: and the prieſt who received the auricular confeſſion, had the title of confeſſor, though improperly; for he is rather the confeſſee, being the perſon to whom the confeſſion is made. This receiving the confeſſion of a penitent, was in old Engliſh to ſhreve or ſhrive; whence comes the word beſhrieved, or looking like a confeſſed or ſhrieved perſon, on whom was impoſed ſome uneaſy penance. The moſt ſolemn time of confeſſing was the day before Lent, which from thence is ſtill called Shrove-Tueſday. Cowel.

Confirmation, (confirmatio, from the verb confirmare, quod eſt firmum facere) Is a conveyance of an eſtate, or right in eſſe, from one man to another, whereby a voidable eſtate is made ſure and unavoidable; or a particular eſtate is increaſed, or a poſſeſſion made perfect. And it is a ſtrengthening of an eſtate formerly made, which is voidable, though not preſently void: as for example; a biſhop granteth his chancellorſhip by patent, for term of the patentee's life; this is no void grant, but voidable by the biſhop's death, except it be ſtrengthened by the confirmation of the dean and chapter.

Confirmation, aut eſt perficiens, creſcens aut diminuens: Perficiens, as if feoffee upon condition make a feoffment, and the feoffor confirm the eſtate of the ſecond feoffee: Creſcens, that doth always enlarge the eſtate of a tenant; as tenant for years, to hold for life, &c. Diminuens, as when the lord of whom the land is holden, confirms the eſtate of his tenant, to hold by a leſs rent. 9 Rep. 142.

The lord may diminiſh the ſervices of his tenant by confirmation; but not reſerve new ſervices, ſo long as the former eſtate in the tenancy continues: and therefore if he confirm to the tenant, to yield him a hawk, &c. yearly it is void. Lit. ſect. 539. 1 Co. Inſt. 296. Leaſes for years may be confirmed for part of the term, or part of the land, &c. But it is otherwiſe of an eſtate of freehold, which being entire, cannot be confirmed for part of the eſtate. 5 Rep. 81. There may be a confirmation implied by law, as well as expreſs by deed; where the law by conſtruction makes a confirmation of a grant made to another purpoſe: and a confirmation may enlarge an eſtate, from an eſtate held at will to term of years, or a greater eſtate; from an eſtate for years to an eſtate for life; from an eſtate for life, to an eſtate in tail, or in fee; and from an eſtate in tail to an eſtate in fee-ſimple. 1 Inſt. 305. 9 Rep. 142. Dyer 263. But the confirmation be made to leſſee for life or years, of his term or eſtate, and not of the land, this doth not increaſe the eſtate, though if the leſſor confirm the land, to have and to hold the land to the leſſee and his heirs, this will inlarge the eſtate, and ſo of the reſt. Co. Lit. 299. Plowd. 40.

In every good confirmation, there muſt be a precedent rightful or wrongful eſtate in him to whom made, or he muſt have the poſſeſſion of the thing as a foundation for the confirmation to work upon; the confirmor muſt have ſuch an eſtate and property in the land, that he may be thereby enabled to confirm the eſtate of the confirmee; the precedent eſtate muſt continue till the confirmation come, ſo that the eſtate to be increaſed comes into it; and it is required that both theſe eſtates be lawful. Co. Lit. 296. 1 Rep. 146. Dyer 109. 5 Rep. 15. If one have common of paſture in another's land, and he confirms the eſtate of the tenant of the land, nothing paſſes of the common, but it remains as it was before: ſo if a man have a rent out of the land, and he doth confirm the eſtate which the tenant hath in the land, the rent remaineth. Lit. ſect. 537.

Tenant for life makes a leaſe for years to a man, and after leaſes the land to another perſon for years; and he in reverſion confirms the laſt leaſe, and after that the firſt leaſe, this is not good: the ſecond leſſee hath an intereſt before by the confirmation of him in reverſion. But in a like caſe, confirmation of the firſt leaſe, after the ſecond was confirmed, was held good: for the leaſe takes no intereſt by the confirmation, but only to make it durable and effectual. Moor, c. 180. 1 Inſt. 296. Plowd. 10.

If a diſſeiſee confirm the land to the diſſeiſor but for one hour, one week, a year, or for life, &c. it is a good confirmation of the eſtate for ever: and if he confirms the eſtate of the diſſeiſor without any word of heirs, he hath a fee-ſimple; and if a diſſeiſor make a gift in tail, and the diſſeiſee doth confirm the eſtate of the donee, it ſhall enure to the whole eſtate: alſo if the diſſeiſor enfeoffs A. and B. and the heirs of B. and the diſſeiſee confirms the eſtate of B. for his life; this ſhall extend to his companion, and for the whole fee-ſimple. Co. Lit. 291, 297, 299.

But where the eſtate is divided, it is otherwiſe; as if there be an eſtate for life, the remainder over, there the confirmation may be of either of the eſtates: and if the leſſee of a diſſeiſor of a leaſe for twenty years, make a leaſe for ten years; the diſſeiſee may confirm to one of them, and not to the other. 1 Cro. 472. 5 Rep. 81. If a diſſeiſor or any other make a leaſe for years to begin at a day to come, a confirmation to the leſſee before the leaſe begins will not be good; for there is no eſtate in him. Co. Lit. 296.

The tenant in tail of land hath a reverſion in fee expectant; in this caſe, the confirmation of the eſtate-tail will not extend to the reverſion. And if my diſſeiſor make a leaſe for life, the remainder in fee, and I confirm the eſtate of the tenant for life; this ſhall not confirm the eſtate of him in remainder: but if I confirm the remainder eſtate, without any confirmation to tenant for life, it ſhall enure to him alſo. Co. Lit. 297, 298. If lands are given to two men, and the heirs of their two bodies begotten, and the donor confirms their eſtate in the lands, to have and to hold to them two and their heirs; this ſhall be conſtrued a joint eſtate for their lives, and after they ſhall have ſeveral inheritances. Co. Lit. 299. Tenant in tail, or for life, of land, lets it for years, if after he makes a confirmation of the land to the leſſee for years, to hold to him and his heirs for ever, the leſſee hath only an eſtate for the life of the tenant in tail, &c. and therein his leaſe for years is extinct. Lit. ſect. 606.

A freehold for life, and term for years, it is ſaid, cannot ſtand together of the ſame land, in the ſame perſon. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 480. If a feme leſſee for years marries, and the leſſor confirms the eſtate of huſband and wife, to hold for their lives, by ſuch a confirmation the term will be drowned; and the huſband and wife are jointenants for their lives. Co. Lit. 300. But if the feme were leſſee for life, then by the confirmation to huſband and wife for their lives, the huſband holdeth only in right of his wife for her life; but ſhall take a remainder for his life. Ibid. 299. Confirmation to leſſee for life, and a ſtranger to hold for their lives, is void, for there is no privity: but it is otherwiſe, if for years. 2 Danv. Abr. 141. If tenant for life grant a rent-charge, &c. to one and his heirs, he in reverſion is to confirm it, otherwiſe it is good only for the life of tenant for life. Lit. 529. A tenant for life, and remainder-man in fee, join in a leaſe, this ſhall be taken to be the leaſe of tenant for life, during his life, and confirmation of him in remainder: though after the death of tenant for life, it is the leaſe of him in remainder, and confirmation of tenant for life. 6 Rep. 15. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 481.

If leſſee for years, without impeachment for waſte, accepts a confirmation of his eſtate for life; by this he hath loſt the privilege annexed to his eſtate for years. 8 Rep. 76. Acceptance of rent in ſome caſes makes a confirmation of a leaſe: and if a man leaſes for life, reſerving rent upon a condition of re-entry; if after the condition is broken, by non-payment of the rent, the leſſor diſtrains for the ſaid rent, this act ſhall be a confirmation of the leaſe, ſo as he cannot enter. 2 Danv. 128, 129.

What a perſon may defeat by his entry, he may make good by his confirmation. Co. Lit. 300. But none can confirm, unleſs he hath a right at the time of the grant; he that hath but a right in reverſion cannot enlarge the eſtate of a leſſee. 2 Danv. 140, 141. And where a perſon hath but intereſſe termini, he hath no eſtate in him, upon which a confirmation may enure. Co. Lit. 290.

As confirmation is to bind the right of him who makes it; but not alter the nature of the eſtate of him to whom made; it ſhall not diſcharge a condition. Poph. 51. If A. enfeoffs B. upon condition, and after A. confirms the eſtate of B. yet the condition remains: though if B. had enfeoffed C. ſo that the eſtate of C. had been only ſubject to the condition in another deed, and after A. had confirmed the eſtate of C. this would have extinguiſhed the condition, which was annexed to the eſtate of B. 1 Rep. 147. A confirmation will take away a condition annexed by law: and by confirmation, a condition after broken in a deed of feoffment is extinguiſhed. 1 Co. Rep. 146. Confirmations may make a defeaſible eſtate good; but cannot work upon an eſtate that is void in law. Co. Lit. 295.

A confirmation of letters patent, which are void as they are againſt law, is a void confirmation. 1 Lil. Abr. 295. If there be lord and tenant, and the tenant having iſſue is attainted of felony, if the King pardons him, and the lord confirms his eſtate, and the tenant dies, his iſſue ſhall not inherit, but the lord ſhall have it againſt his own confirmation: for that could not enable him to take by deſcent, who by the attainder of his father was diſabled. 9 Rep. 141.

Grants and leaſes of biſhops not warranted by the Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. muſt be confirmed by dean and chapter: and grants and leaſes of parſons, &c. by patron and ordinary. 1 Inſt. 297, 300, 301. Biſhops may grant leaſes of their church-lands for three lives, or twenty-one years, having the qualities required by 32 H. 8. c. 28. and concurrent leaſes for twenty-one years, with confirmation of dean and chapter. See 1 El. c. 4. & c. 19. If a prebend leaſes parcel of his prebendary, and the biſhop, who is patron, confirms it; this ſhall not bind the ſucceeding biſhop, without confirmation of dean and chapter, becauſe the patronage is parcel of the poſſeſſions of the biſhoprick; but it ſhall bind the preſent biſhop, &c. 2 Danv. 139. If a parſon grants a rent, the confirmation of the patron and biſhop, is ſufficient without the dean and chapter, and ſhall be good againſt the ſucceſſor biſhop. Ibid. 140. The dean of Wells may paſs his poſſeſſions, with the aſſent of the chapter, without any confirmation of the biſhop. Ibid. 135. Leaſes of biſhops are affirmed ex aſſenſu & conſenſu decani & totius capituli. A confirmation is in nature of a releaſe, and in ſome things is of greater force: and in this deed, it is good to recite the eſtate of the tenant, as alſo of him that is to confirm it; and to mention the conſideration, the words ratify and confirm, are commonly made uſe of; but words give, grant, demiſe, &c. by implication of law, may enure as a confirmation. 1 Inſt. 295. *Weſt. Confiſcate, From the Lat. confiſcare, and that from fiſcus, which ſignifies metonymically the Emperor's treaſure: and as the Romans ſay, ſuch goods as are forfeited to the Emperor's treaſury for any offence are bona confiſcata, ſo we ſay of thoſe that are forfeited to our King's Exchequer. And the title to have theſe goods is given to the King by the law, when they are not claimed by ſome other: as if a man be indicted for ſtealing the goods of another perſon, when they are in truth his own proper goods, and when the goods are brought in court againſt him, and he is aſked what he ſays to the ſaid goods, if he diſclaims them, he ſhall loſe the goods, although that afterwards he be acquitted of the felony, and the King ſhall have them as confiſcated; but it is otherwiſe if he do not diſclaim them. It is the ſame where goods are found in the poſſeſſion of a felon, if he diſavows them, and afterwards is attainted for other goods, and not for them; for there the goods which he diſavows are confiſcate to the King; but had he been attainted for the ſame goods, they ſhould have been ſaid to be forfeited and not confiſcate. So if an appeal of robbery be brought, and the plaintiff leaves out ſome of his goods, he ſhall not be received to enlarge his appeal; and foraſmuch as there is none to have the goods ſo left out, the King ſhall have them as confiſcate, according to the rule, Quod non capit chriſtus, capit fiſcus. Staund. P. C. lib. 3. cap. 24.

Goods confiſcated are generally ſuch as are arreſted and ſeized for the King's uſe: but confiſcare and foriſfacere are ſaid to be ſynonyma; and bona confiſcata are bona foriſfacta. 3 Inſt. 227. See Black. Com. 1 V. 299. 4 V. 370.

Confuſion, property by—Where goods of two perſons are ſo intermixed, that the ſeveral portions can no longer be diſtinguiſhed, if the intermixture be by conſent, it is ſuppoſed the proprietors have an intereſt in common, in proportion to their reſpective ſhares: but, if one wilfully intermixes his mony, corn, or hay, with that of another man, without his approbation or knowledge, or caſt gold in like manner into another's melting pot or crucible, our law does not allow any remedy in ſuch caſe; but gives the entire property, without any account, to him, whoſe original dominion (or property) is invaded, and endeavoured to be rendered uncertain, without his own conſent. *Black. Congeable, (From the Fr. conge, i. e. leave or permiſſion) Signifies in our law as much as lawful, or lawfully done, or done with permiſſion: as entry congeable, &c. Lit. ſect. 420.

Conge d'Accorder, (Fr.) Leave to accord or agree, mentioned in the ſtatute of fines, 18 Ed. 1. in theſe words. —When the original writ is delivered in the preſence of the parties before juſtices, a pleader ſhall ſay this, Sir juſtice, conge d'accorder; and the juſtice ſhall ſay to him, What ſaith Sir R. and name one of the parties, &c.

Conge d'Eſlire, (Fr. i. e. leave to chooſe) Is the King's licence or permiſſion ſent to a dean and chapter to proceed to the election of a biſhop, when any biſhoprick becomes vacant. According to Gwyn, in his preface to his Readings, the King of England, as ſovereign patron of all biſhopricks, and other eccleſiaſtical benefices, had of ancient time free appointment of all church dignities, when ever they became void, inveſting them firſt per baculum & annulum, and afterwards by his letters patent; and in proceſs of time he made the election over to others, under certain forms and conditions; as, that they ſhould at every vacation, before they chooſe, demand of the King conge d'eſlire; that is leave to proceed to election, and then, after the election, to crave his royal aſſent, &c. And he affirms that King John was the firſt that granted this; which was afterwards confirmed by Stat. Weſt. 1. 3 Ed. 1. cap. 1. And by Articuli Cleri, 25 Ed. 3. cap. 1. All the prelacies in England were conferred at the pleaſure of the King, and the perſons inveſted by the King's delivery of a ſtaff and ring, till Archbiſhop Anſelm denied this royal prerogative; and prevailed with Pope Paſchal to abrogate this cuſtom by a ſolemn canon: after which, the firſt biſhop who came in by a regular election, was Roger biſhop of Saliſbury, anno 3 H. 1.

By ſtatute, no man is to be preſented to the ſee of Rome for the dignity of a biſhop, &c. but election is to be by the King's conge d'eſlire, or licence, to elect the perſon named by the King; which the dean and chapter muſt do in twenty days, or they will incur a præmunire: and if they fail to make election, the King is to nominate, &c. by his letters patent. 25 H. 8. c. 20. The 1 Ed. 6. c. 6. ouſted the writ of conge d'eſlire, and impowered the King to collate to an archbiſhoprick or biſhoprick, abſolutely by letters patent. But this ſtatute was repealed by 1 M. cap. 2. though the election by conge d'eſlire, as now made, ſeems to be little more than form. See 8 El. c. 1. and 39 El. c. 8. and *Black. Conjugal rights. A ſuit for reſtitution of conjugal rights is one of the ſpecies of matrimonial cauſes: and is brought when either the huſband or wife is guilty of the injury of ſubtraction, or lives ſeparate from the other without any ſufficient reaſon; in which caſe the eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction will compel them to come together again, if either party be weak enough to deſire it, contrary to the inclination of the other. Black. Com. 3 V. 94.

Conjuratio, Is an oath; and conjuratus, the ſame with conjurator, viz. one who is bound by the ſame oath. Conjurare is where ſeveral affirm a thing by oath. Mon. Angl. Tom. 1. p. 207.

Conjuration, (conjuratio) Signifies a plot or compact made by perſons combining by oath, to do any public harm: but was more eſpecially uſed for the having (as was ſuppoſed) perſonal conference with the devil, or ſome evil ſpirit, to know any ſecret, or effect any purpoſe. The difference between conjuration and witchcraft was ſaid to be, that a perſon uſing the one endeavoured by prayers and invocations to compel the devil to ſay or do what he commanded him, the other dealt rather by friendly and voluntary conference, or agreement with the devil or familiar, to have his deſires ſerved, in lieu of blood or other gift offered. Both differed from enchantment or ſorcery; becauſe they were ſuppoſed to be perſonal conferences with the devil, and theſe were but medicines and ceremonial forms of words uſually called charms, without apparition, Cowel.

Hawkins, in his Pleas of the Crown, lib. 1. p. 5. ſays, that conjurors are thoſe who, by force of certain magick words, endeavour to raiſe the devil, and oblige him to execute their commands. Witches are ſuch who by way of conference bargain with an evil ſpirit, to do what they deſire of him: and Sorcerers are thoſe, who by the uſe of certain ſuperſtitious words, or by the means of images, &c. are ſaid to produce ſtrange effects, above the ordinary courſe of nature. All which were anciently puniſhed in the ſame manner as hereticks, by the writ de hæretico comburendo, after a ſentence in the eccleſiaſtical court: and they might be condemned to the pillory, &c. upon an indictment at Common law. 3 Inſt. 44. H. P. C. 38.

The Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 12. againſt conjuration and witchcraft is repealed; and no proſecution ſhall be commenced on the ſame: but where perſons pretend to exerciſe any kind of witchcraft or conjuration, &c. Or undertake to tell fortunes, or from their ſkill in any crafty ſcience to diſcover where goods ſtolen or loſt may be found; upon conviction, viction ſhall be impriſoned a year, and ſtand in the pillory once in every quarter, in ſome market-town, and may be ordered to give ſecurity for their good behaviour, by Stat. 9 Geo. 2. c. 5. See 3 Inſt. 45, 46. H. P. C. 6, 7. Black. Com. 4 V. 60, 429.

Conſanguinity, (conſanguinitas) Is a kindred by blood or birth: as affinity is a kindred by marriage: and it is conſiderable in the diſcent of lands, who ſhall take it as next of blood, &c. And alſo in adminiſtrations, which ſhall be granted to the next of kin. Though a man does a lawful thing, yet if any damage do thereby befal another, he ſhall anſwer if he could have avoided it; and this holds in all civil caſes. As if a man lops a tree, and the boughs fall upon another ipſo invito, yet an action lies. So if a man ſhoots at butts, and hurts another unawares. So if I have land thro' which a river runs to your mill, and I lop the ſallows growing on the river ſide which accidently ſtop the water ſo as your mill is hindered. So if I am building my own houſe, and a piece of timber falls on my neighbour's houſe, and breaks part of it. Conſervator, (Lat.) A protector, preſerver, or maintainer; or a ſtanding arbitrator, choſen and appointed as a guarantee to compoſe and adjuſt differences that ſhould ariſe between two parties, &c. Paroch. Antiq. p. 513.

Conſervator of the Peace, (conſervator vel cuſtos pacis) Is he that hath an eſpecial charge to ſee the King's peace kept: and of theſe conſervators Lambard ſaith, That before the reign of Ed. 3. who firſt created juſtices of the peace, there were divers perſons that by the Common law had intereſt in keeping the peace; ſome whereof had that charge by tenure, as holding lands of the King by this ſervice, &c. And others as incident to their offices which they bore, and ſo included in the ſame, that they were nevertheleſs called by the name of their office only: alſo ſome had it ſimply, as of itſelf, and were therefore named cuſtodes pacis, wardens or conſervators of the peace. The chamberlain of Cheſter is a conſervator of the peace in that county, by virtue of his office. 4 Inſt. 212. Sheriffs of counties at Common law are conſervators of the peace; and conſtables, by the Common law were conſervators, but ſome ſay they were only ſubordinate to the conſervators of the peace, as they are now to the juſtice.

The King's majeſty is, by his office and dignity royal, the principal conſervator of the peace within all his dominions; and may give authority to any other to ſee the peace kept, and to puniſh ſuch as break it: hence it is uſually called the King's peace. The Lord Chancellor or Keeper, the Lord Treaſurer, the Lord High Steward of England, the Lord Mareſchal, and Lord High Conſtable of England, (when any ſuch officers are in being) and all the juſtices of the court of King's Bench, (by virtue of their offices), and the Maſter of the Rolls, (by preſcription), are general conſervators of the peace throughout the whole kingdom, and may commit all breakers of it, or bind them in recogniſances to keep it: the other judges are only ſo in their own courts. The Coroner is alſo a conſervator of the peace within his own county; as is alſo the Sheriff, and both of them may take a recognizance or ſecurity for the peace. Conſtables, tythingmen, and the like, are alſo conſervators of the peace within their own juriſdictions; and may apprehend all breakers of the peace, and commit them till they find ſureties for their keeping it. Black. Com. 1 V. 350.

Conſervator of the Truce and Safe Conducts, (conſervator induciarum & ſalvorum regis conductuum) Was an officer appointed by the King's letters patent, whoſe charge was to inquire of all offences done againſt the King's truce and ſafe conducts upon the main ſea, out of the liberties of the cinque ports, as the admirals cuſtom-ably were wont to do, and ſuch other things as are declared 3 Hen. 5. c. 6. Two men learned in the law were joined to conſervators of the truce as aſſociates; and maſters of ſhips ſworn not to attempt any thing againſt the truce, &c. And letters of requeſt and of marque were to be granted when truce was broken at ſea, to make reſtitution. Stat. 4 H. 5. c. 7. See Black. Com. 4 V. 69.

There was anciently a conſervator of the privileges of the Hoſpitallers and Templars. Weſt. 2. c. 43. And the corporation of the great level of the fens conſiſts of a governor, ſix bailiffs, twenty conſervators, and commonalty. Stat. 15 Car. 2. c. 17.

Conſideratio Curiæ, Is often mentioned in law pleadings, and where matters are determined by the court. Ideo conſideratum eſt per curiam, i. e. Therefore it is conſidered and adjudged by the court; for conſideratio curiæ is the judgment of the court. In the entry of a judgment for debt, it concludes thus: Ideo conſideratum eſt per cur. quod præd. A. recuperet verſus præfat. B. debitum ſuum, necnon, &c. pro dampnis ſuis, &c. quam pro miſ. & cuſtag', &c. et præd. B. in mia', &c.

Conſideration, (conſideratio) Is the material cauſe, or quid pro quo, of any contract, without which it will not be effectual or binding. This conſideration is either expreſſed; as when a man bargains to give ſo much, for a thing bought; or to ſell his land for 100 l. or grants it in exchange for other lands; or where I promiſe that if one will marry my daughter, or build me a houſe, &c. I will give him a certain ſum of money; or one agrees for 20*s.* to do a thing. Or it is implied, when the law itſelf enforces a conſideration; as where a perſon comes to an inn, and there ſtaying eats and drinks, and takes lodging for himſelf and horſe, the law preſumes he intends to pay for both, though there be no expreſs contract for it; and therefore if he diſcharge not the houſe, the hoſt may ſtay his horſe: and ſo if a taylor makes a garment for another, and there is no expreſs agreement what he ſhall have for it; he may keep the clothes till he is paid, or ſue the party for the ſame. 5 Rep. 19. Plowd. 308. Dyer 30, 337. Alſo there is a conſideration of nature and blood; and valuable conſideration in deeds and conveyances: but if a man be indebted to divers others, and in conſideration of natural affection, gives all his goods to his ſon, or other relation, this ſhall be conſtrued a fraudulent gift, within the Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5. becauſe that act intends a valuable conſideration. Terms de Ley.

Conſiderations of natural love, affection, marriage, &c. are good to raiſe uſes to a man's family: if the uſes are limited to a ſtranger, then it muſt be for a valuable conſideration, not for love, affection, &c. 1 Inſt. 271. 1 Rep. 176. A ſale can never be without a valuable conſideration: though the law eſtabliſhes free gifts without the ſame. Noy's Max. 87. Hob. 230. A conſideration ought to be matter of profit and benefit to him to whom it is done; by reaſon of the charge or trouble of him who doth it. Cro. Car. 8. If a perſon hath diſburſed ſeveral ſums for another, without his requeſt, and afterwards ſuch other ſays, that in conſideration he hath paid the ſaid ſums for him, he promiſes to pay them: this is no conſideration, becauſe it was executed before. But it will be otherwiſe, if the ſums were paid at the requeſt of the other. Moor 220. Cro. Eliz. 282. A mere voluntary curteſy will not be a good conſideration of a promiſe: but the value and proportion of the conſideration is not material, to maintain an action; for a ſhilling or a penny, is as much binding as 100*l.* Though in theſe caſes, the jury will give damages proportionably to the loſs. Hob. 4. 10 Rep. 76.

A conſideration that is void in part, is void in the whole: and if two conſiderations be alledged, and one of them is found falſe by the jury, the action fails. Hob. 126. Cro. Eliz. 848. But if there be a double conſideration, for the grounding of a promiſe, for the breach whereof an action is brought; though one of the conſiderations be not good, yet if the other be good, and the promiſe broken, the action will lie upon that breach: for one conſideration is enough to ſupport the promiſe. 1 Lill. 297. A conſideration muſt be lawful, to ground an aſſumpſit. 2 Lev. 161. Where conſiderations are valuable, and conſiſt of two or more parts, there the performance of every part ought to be ſhewn. Cro. Eliz. 579. In caſe a deed of feoffment be made of lands; or a fine and recovery be paſſed, and no conſideration is expreſſed in the deed, &c. for the doing thereof, it ſhall be intended by the law, that it was made in truſt, for the uſe of the feoffor or conuſor; for it ſhall be preſumed he would not part with his land without a conſideration, and yet the deed ſhall be conſtrued to operate ſomething, and that which is moſt reaſonable. 1 Lill. Abr. 299.

Conſign, Is a word uſed by merchants, where goods are aſſigned or delivered over to a factor, &c. Lex Mercat.

Conſilium, (dies conſilii) Was a time allowed for one accuſed to make his defence, and anſwer the charge of the accuſer—In aliis quærat accuſatus conſilium, & habeat ab amicis & paribus ſuis, quod nullo jure debet defendi, &c. H. 1. c. 46. It is now uſed for a ſpeedy day appointed to argue a demurrer; which the court grants after the demurrer joined on reading the record of the cauſe, &c. See Black. Com. 4 V. 349.

Conſimili caſu, writ of entry in. A writ of entry. This and the writ in caſu proviſo lay not at Common law, but are given by ſtatute, Gloc. 6 Ed. 1. c. 7. and Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 24. for the reverſioner after alienation; but during the life of the tenant in dower, or other tenant for life, ſee *F. Conſiſtor, A magiſtrate ſo called: teſtibus Rogero de Gant, Willielmo conſiſtore Ceſtriæ, &c. Blount.

Conſiſtory, (conſiſtorium) Signifies as much as prætorium, or tribunal: it is commonly uſed for a council-houſe of eccleſiaſtical perſons, or place of juſtice in the ſpiritual court; a ſeſſion or aſſembly of prelates. And every archbiſhop and biſhop of every dioceſe hath a conſiſtory court, held before his chancellor, or commiſſary in his cathedral church, or other convenient place of his dioceſe, for eccleſiaſtical cauſes. 4 Inſt. 338. The biſhop's chancellor is the judge of this court, ſuppoſed to be ſkilled in the Civil and Canon law: and in places of the dioceſe, far remote from the biſhop's conſiſtory, the biſhop appoints a commiſſary (commiſſarius foraneus) to judge in all cauſes within a certain diſtrict, and a regiſter to enter his decrees, &c. 2 Rol. Abr. 286. Seld. Hiſt. of Tithes, 413, 414.

Conſolidation, (conſolidatio) Is uſed for the uniting of two benefices into one. Stat. 37 H. 8. c. 21. Which union is to be by the aſſent of the ordinary, patron and incumbent, &c. and to be of ſmall churches lying near together. Vide Church. This word is taken from the Civil law, where it ſignifies properly an uniting of the poſſeſſion, occupancy or profit of lands, &c. with the property. See Extinguiſhment.

Conſpiracy, (conſpiratio) Is uſed for an agreement of two or more perſons falſly to indict one, or to procure him to be indicted of felony; who, after acquittal, ſhall have writ of conſpiracy. See 33 Edw. 1. ſtat. 2. 4 Ed. 3. c. 11. 3 Hen. 7. c. 13. 1 Hen. 5. c. 3. & 18 Hen. 6. c. 12. And writ of conſpiracy lies for him that is indicted of a treſpaſs, and acquitted, though it was not felony: alſo upon an indictment for a riot. 2 Mod. 306. 5 Mod. 405. Where a man is falſly indicted of any crime, which may prejudice his fame or reputation; and though it doth not import ſlander, if it endangers his liberty; or if the indictment be injurious to his property, &c. writ of conſpiracy lieth. 3 Salk. 97. But though a conſpiracy to charge falſly be indictable, yet the party ought to ſhew himſelf to be innocent; and the writ of conſpiracy lies not without an acquittal. Mod. Caſ. 137, 185, 186. Not only writ of conſpiracy, which is a civil action at the ſuit of the party; but alſo action on the caſe in the nature of a writ of conſpiracy, doth lie for a falſe and malicious accuſation of any crime, whether capital or not capital, even of high treaſon; and though the bill of indictment is found ignoramus, or it does not go ſo far as an indictment. And the ſame damages may be recovered in ſuch action, as in a writ of conſpiracy, where the party is lawfully acquitted by verdict. 1 Rol. Abr. 111, 112. 9 Rep. 56. See Gilb. Ca. 185. 10 Mod. 148, 214. Salk. 15. An action on the caſe is preferable, as being more in uſe, and the proceedings eaſier, and not attended with ſuch niceties as conſpiracy.

If one falſly and maliciouſly procure another to be arreſted, and brought before a juſtice of peace to be examined concerning a felony, &c. on purpoſe to vex and diſgrace him, and put him to charges and trouble, although he is not indicted for the ſame, yet he may have an action on the caſe; in which he need not aver that he was lawfully acquitted, as he ought to do in a writ of conſpiracy: but he muſt aver that the accuſation was falſe & malitioſe, which words are neceſſary in the declaration; and it muſt appear that there was no ground for it. And as an action on the caſe may be proſecuted againſt one perſon, where the writ of conſpiracy or indictment doth not lie but againſt two, this action is moſt commonly brought. 1 Danv. Abr. 208, 213. 2 Inſt. 562, 638.

Conſpirators may be indicted at the ſuit of the King; and at the Common law, one may prefer an indictment againſt conſpirators, who only conſpire together, and nothing is executed: though the conſpiracy ought to be declared by ſome act, or promiſe to ſtand by one another, &c. But a bare conſpiracy will not maintain a writ of conſpiracy, at the ſuit of the party, becauſe he is not damaged by it; though it is a ground for an indictment. 9 Rep. 56. 2 Rol. Abr. 77. If the defendants can ſhew any foundation or probable cauſe of ſuſpicion, they ſhall be diſcharged: and if a man hath good cauſe of ſuſpicion that a perſon is guilty of felony, and cauſes him to be indicted, in proſecution of juſtice, action of conſpiracy will not lie: but it is otherwiſe if the proſecutor impoſes the crime of felony, where no felony was committed. 1 Rol. Abr. 115. and Rep 438.

An action lies not againſt a juſtice of peace, who ſends out his warrant upon a falſe accuſation; but it lies if he makes it out without any accuſation. 1 Leon. 187. Conſpiracies ought to be out of court; for if a proſecution be ordered in a courſe of juſtice, and witneſſes appear againſt a party, &c. there ſhall be no puniſhment: and if perſons acted only as jurors in a criminal matter, or judges in open court, there is no ground for proſecution. S. P. C. 173. 12 Rep 24. If all the defendants but one are acquitted on indictment for conſpiracy, that one muſt be acquitted alſo; becauſe one perſon alone cannot be indicted for this crime: and huſband and wife, being but one perſon, may not be indicted for a conſpiracy. 2 Rol. Abr. 708. (This muſt mean, without ſome other perſon being joined with them.) The acquittal of one perſon is the acquittal of another upon indictment of conſpiracy. 3 Mod 220. (i. e. where only two are indicted, and it is not laid or proved that they conſpired with others, unknown.) Though where one is found guilty, according to the opinion of the Lord Chief Juſtice Hale; if the other doth not come in upon proceſs, or if he dies pending the ſuit, judgment ſhall be had againſt the other. 1 Vent. 234. Writ of conſpiracy was brought againſt two perſons, and one found Not guilty; the other ſhall not have judgment: but in action on the caſe, it had been good. Cro. Eliz. 701. If the parties are found guilty of the conſpiracy, upon an indictment of felony, at the King's ſuit; the judgment is, that they ſhall loſe their frank law (which diſables them to be put upon any jury, to be ſworn as witneſſes, or to appear in perſon in any of the King's courts) and that their lands, goods and chattels be ſeiſed as forfeited, and their bodies committed to priſon; which is called a villainous judgment. 2 Inſt. 143, 222. Crompt. Juſt. 156.

The matter of the conſpiracy ought to touch a man's life, where this judgment is impoſed. 1 Hawk. P.C. 193. For conſpiring to charge a perſon with poiſoning another, &c. one of the parties was fined 1000*l.* and ſome others had judgment of the pillory, and to be burnt in the cheek with the letters F. and C. to ſignify falſe conſpirators. Moor. 816. Fine and impriſonment is the uſual puniſhment at this day on indictment for conſpiracy: and on writ of conſpiracy, &c. the party ſhall be fined, and render damages. There is a conſpiracy to maintain ſuits and quarrels; and of victuallers, to ſell their victuals at certain prices; of labourers and artificers, &c. puniſhable by ſtatutes 33 Ed. 1. ſt. 2. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 15.

Conſpirators, (conſpiratores) By 33 E. 1. ſt. 2. are defined to be thoſe that do bind themſelves by oath, covenant, or other alliance, that every of them ſhall aid the other falſly and maliciouſly to indict perſons; or falſly to move or maintain pleas, &c. And ſuch as retain men in the country, with liveries, or fees, to maintain their malicious enterpriſes, which extends as well to the takers as the givers; and ſtewards and bailiffs of great lords, who, by their office or power, undertake to bear and maintain quarrels, pleas or debates, that concern other parties than ſuch as relate to the eſtate of their lords or themſelves. 2 Inſt. 384, 562. And againſt conſpirators, falſe informers and imbracers of inqueſt, the King hath provided a writ in the Chancery; and the juſtices of either bench and juſtices of aſſiſe, ſhall, on every plaint, award inqueſt thereupon. Stat. 28 E. 1. c. 10. From the deſcription of conſpirators, in ſeveral of our old law books, conſpiracy is taken generally, and confounded with maintenance and champerty. Beſides theſe, there are conſpirators in treaſon; by plotting againſt the government, &c. See Treaſon.

Conſtable, (conſtabularius) is a Saxon word, compounded of Coning, i. e. king, and ſtaple, which ſignify the ſtay or hold of the king. This word is diverſly uſed in our law; firſt for the lord Conſtable of England, whoſe power was anciently ſo extenſive, that ſome time ſince that office hath been thought too great for any ſubject; unleſs at the King's coronation to compleat the grandeur of that ceremony, and for the antient trials by combat, &c. In the reign of Henry the Fourth, the Lord North was made Lord conſtable for life: and this office being formerly of inheritance, by tenure of certain manors, the line of the Bohuns, Earls of Hereford and Eſſex, enjoyed it in right of the manors of Harlefield, Newman, and Witenhurſt, and afterwards it came to the Staffords, and Dukes of Buckingham as heirs general of them; but Edward Duke of Buckingham being attainted of high treaſon, anno 13 H. 8. this office became forfeited to the crown, and ſince that time it was never granted but pro hac vice, to be exerciſed at a coronation, &c.

The power and juriſdiction of the lord high conſtable, was the ſame with the earl marſhal, and he ſat as judge, having precedence of the earl marſhal in the marſhal's court: but the conſtable of England is by ſome of our books alſo called marſhal; who takes cogniſance of all matters of war and arms, and had originally ſeveral courts under him; but has now only the Marſhalſea; and his office is in force both in time of peace and war, ſo that though the lord conſtable had the precedency, yet the court held before them was called the marſhal's court. See Lex Conſtitutionis, p. 175, 176. Of this officer or magiſtrate, Gwin ſaith to this effect: The court of the conſtable and marſhal determineth contracts touching deeds of arms out of the realm upon land, and handleth things concerning war within the realm, as combats, blazons of armory, &c. which cannot be determined by the Common law; and in theſe matters is commonly guided by the Civil law.

By ſtatute, the conſtable of England hath cogniſance of things concerning arms and wars, which cannot be diſcuſſed by the Common law: and when a plea is commenced before the conſtable and marſhal, which may be tried at the Common law, the party grieved ſhall have a privy ſeal to cauſe the conſtable and marſhal to ceaſe, until it be decided by the King's counſel whether it may be tried there or at the Common law. 13 R. 2. c. 2. The conſtable and marſhal ſhall not have cogniſance of pleas or ſuits that ought to be tried at Common law. Stat. 8 R. 2. c. 5. Appeals of things done out of the realm, are to be tried by the conſtable and marſhal of England. 1 H. 4. c. 14. And if a man be wounded on the high ſea, and die of the ſame wound in a foreign country, though this be done in the ſeas belonging to England, yet it cannot be inquired of by the Common law, becauſe it is not within any of the counties of this realm: neither can the admiral hear and determine this murder; for though the ſtroke was within his juriſdiction, the death was infra corpus comitatus, whereof he cannot inquire: nor is it within the Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 4. becauſe the murder was not committed on the ſea. But by Stat. 13 R. 2. ſt. 1. c. 5. The conſtable and marſhal may hear and determine the ſame. And vide the 2 Geo. 2. c. 21. Juſtices of goal delivery and oyer and terminer may try the offender.

The office of conſtable of England is ſaid to conſiſt in the care of the common peace of the land, in deeds of arms and matters of war: and there is a conſtable of the Tower; a conſtable of Dover caſtle and of divers other caſtles; but theſe are more properly called caſtellanes. Out of the high magiſtracy of the conſtable of England (ſays Lambard) were drawn thoſe inferior conſtables, which we call conſtables of hundreds and franchiſes; and the ſtatute of Wincheſter, 13 E. 1. appoints for conſervation of the peace, and view of armour, two conſtables in every hundred and franchiſe, who in Latin are called conſtabularii capitales, high conſtables; becauſe continuance of time, and increaſe of people and offences, have under theſe made others neceſſary in every town, called petty conſtables, in Latin ſub-conſtabularii, which are of like nature, but of inferior authority to the other. And there are other officers, whoſe duty is much the ſame with conſtables, as headboroughs, tithingmen, &c. of which the petty conſtable ſeems to be the principal officer, but in his abſence, or where there is no petty conſtable, their duty is the ſame.

It has been held, that both high conſtables and petty conſtables were officers at Common law, before the ſtatute of Winton, 13 Ed. 1. cap. 6. And that by the Common law they might arreſt perſons for a breach of the peace, and carry them before a juſtice to find ſureties for their good behaviour, &c. But my Lord Coke ſays, That they were created by 13 Ed. 1. ſt. 2. c. 6. and their duty was thereby limited, though ſubſequent ſtatutes have enlarged their power; but being created by act of parliament, they have no more authority than the act that created them or ſome other acts have given them, and cannot preſcribe as officers at the Common law may. 4 Inſt. 267. 2 Danv. Abr. 148.

Under this head is to be conſidered,

I. Their election.
II. Their power and duty.

I. Of their election.

Anciently high and petty conſtables were appointed by the ſheriff in his tourn, and ſworn there as well as in the leet: and by the Common law, they ought to be choſen in the tourn or leet. Dalt. cap. 21. Of common right, a conſtable is to be choſen by the jury in the leet; and if he be preſent, and refuſe to be ſworn, the ſteward may fine him; if he be abſent, he ſhall be ſworn before juſtices of peace; and if ſuch conſtable refuſes to be ſworn, the jury muſt preſent his refuſal at the next court, and then he ſhall be amerced, for the ſteward of the leet may not fine him if he is abſent. 1 Salk 175. 5 Mod. 130.

A high conſtable may be choſen at a court-leet by the ſteward, on preſentment of the jury, when cuſtom warrants it; but where ſuch courts are not kept, or there is a neglect in chooſing him, the juſtices at their quarter-ſeſſions may chuſe and ſwear a high conſtable; and this is the uſual way obſerved at this time. Mich. 21 Car. 1. Mod Juſt. 133. And he may be ſworn out of ſeſſions, by warrant from thence; and be elected out of the ſeſſions, by the greater number of juſtices in the diviſion. Ibid. If one that is elected to the office of conſtable refuſe to take the oath to ſerve in that office, a writ of mandamus may be had to compel him to do it. 1 Lil. Abr. 303. Or he may be indicted. The juſtices of peace may appoint a conſtable in ſuch place where there was never any before. 1 Mod. 13.

If conſtables, headboroughs, &c. die or go out of the pariſh, two juſtices of peace are to ſwear new ones till the lord of the manor hold a court-leet, or till the next quarter-ſeſſions, who ſhall approve of them or appoint others: and if any of them continue above a year, the juſtices of peace may diſcharge them, and put in others till the lord of the manor holds a court. By Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 12. a conſtable's oath runs thus; 'You ſhall well and truly ſerve our ſovereign lord the King, 'and the lord of this leet (if ſworn in a court leet) in the 'office of conſtable, in and for the hundred of, &c. or 'pariſh of, &c. for the year enſuing, or until you ſhall 'be thereof diſcharged according to due courſe of law: 'you ſhall well and truly do and execute all things be'longing to the ſaid office, according to the beſt of your 'knowledge. So help you God.'

Formerly the oath of a conſtable was very long, he being ſworn to ſeveral articles which included his particular duty. High conſtables are generally choſen and ſworn by the juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions: and petty conſtables, who are their aſſiſtants, in each town, pariſh or vill, the choice of them properly belongs to the court-leet; but at this day they are uſually elected by the pariſhioners, and ſworn by a juſtice of peace, who on juſt cauſe may remove them. 4 Inſt. 267.

Theſe conſtables are appointed yearly; and are to be men of honeſty, knowledge and ability, not infants, lunaticks, &c. And if they refuſe to ſerve, they may be bound over to the ſeſſions, and indicted, and fined and impriſoned. 8 Rep. 41. 5 Mod. 96. But phyſicians, apothecaries, ſurgeons, &c. are excuſed by ſtatute from bearing the office of conſtable, or other pariſh office. See 5 H. 6. c. 6. 3 H. 8. c. 43. 5 H. 8. c. 6. & 6 W. & M. c. 4. Alſo attornies and officers of the courts at Weſtminſter, barriſters at law, aldermen of London, &c. are privileged from ſerving the office of conſtable: and if a gentleman of quality be choſen conſtable, where there are ſufficient perſons beſide, and no ſpecial cuſtom concerning it; it is ſaid ſuch perſons may be relieved in B. R. 2 Hawk. P. C. 63, 64.

A conſtable may make a deputy; but the conſtable is anſwerable, and his deputy muſt be ſworn. Sid. 355. Diſſenters choſen to the office of conſtables, &c. ſcrupling to take the oaths, may execute the office by deputy, who ſhall comply with the law in this behalf. 1 W. & M. c. 18. Conſtables may appoint a deputy, or perſon to execute a warrant, when by reaſon of ſickneſs, &c. they cannot do it themſelves. A woman made conſtable, by virtue of a cuſtom, that the inhabitants of a town ſhall ſerve by turns, on account of their eſtates or houſes, may procure another to ſerve for her, and the cuſtom is good. 2 Hawk. P. C. 63.

II. Of their power and duty.

The high conſtable has the direction of the petty conſtables, headboroughs, and tithing-men, within his hundred: his duty is to keep the peace, and apprehend felons, rioters, etc. to make hue and cry after felons; and take care that the watch be duly kept in his hundred; and that the ſtatutes for puniſhing rogues and vagrants be put in execution. He ought to preſent unlawful games, tippling, and drunkenneſs; bloodſhed, affrays, etc. He is to execute precepts and warrants, directed to him by juſtices of the peace, and make returns to the ſeſſions of the peace to all the articles contained in his oath, or that concern his office: and ſhall alſo cauſe the petty conſtables to make their returns. He is to return all victuallers and alehouſe-keepers that are unlicenſed; and all ſuch perſons as entertain inmates, who are likely to be a charge to the pariſh. He muſt likewiſe preſent the faults of petty conſtables, headboroughs, etc. who neglect to apprehend rogues, vagrants and idle perſons, whores, night-walkers, mothers of baſtard children like to be chargeable to the pariſh, etc. And alſo all defects of highways and bridges, and the names of thoſe who ought to repair them: ſcavengers who neglect their duty; and all common nuſances in ſtreets and highways; bakers who ſell bread under weight; brewers ſelling beer to unlicenſed alehouſes; foreſtallers, regrators, ingroſſers, etc. And at every quarter-ſeſſions they are to pay to the treaſurer of the county all ſuch money as hath been levied and received by them, of the churchwardens, etc. for the relief of priſons and hoſpitals. Dalt. Ca. 28. Lamb. 125. By ſtatute, high conſtables now collect a general county rate, made by the juſtices in ſeſſions, and aſſeſſed upon every pariſh, etc. which the churchwardens and overſeers, out of the money raiſed for the poor, ſhall pay to them within thirty days, or may be levied by diſtreſs; and then they pay the ſame to the treaſurers appointed, as the public ſtock for repairing bridges, gaols, houſes of correction, etc. Stat. 12 Geo. 2. cap. 29.

The authority of petty conſtables, in their ſeveral towns, tithings, and boroughs, is generally the ſame as the high conſtable hath in his hundred: they are to keep the peace in the abſence of the high conſtable; and aſſiſt him in making preſentments at the aſſiſes and quarter-ſeſſions, of every thing that is amiſs: they may command affrayers to keep the peace, and depart, &c. And may break into a houſe to ſee the peace kept; make freſh purſuit into another county, &c. Alſo they may command all perſons to aſſiſt them, to prevent a breach of the peace; juſtify beating another if aſſaulted; and if they happen to be killed, doing their duty, it will be taken to be premeditated murder. They may, without warrant from a juſtice of peace, take into cuſtody any perſons whom they ſee committing a felony or breach of the peace; but if it be out of their ſight, as where a perſon is ſeized by another, &c. they may not do it without a warrant from a juſtice. A conſtable cannot detain a man at his pleaſure; but only ſtay him to bring him before a juſtice to be examined, &c. And this detaining of an offender by the conſtable may be for a day, (if he has reaſonable cauſe for ſo doing,) without warrant, and be juſtified. Dalt. c. 1. 8 Lamb. 125. H. P. C. 135. 1 Leon. 307. Moor 408.

If one abuſes a conſtable in the execution of his office, he cannot commit him to priſon there to remain till puniſhed for the offence; but muſt carry him before a juſtice, who may commit him, &c. 2 Danv. Abr. 149. But it is ſaid, by the original power in the conſtable, he may for breach of the peace, and ſome other miſdemeanors, leſs than felony, impriſon a man: and if an offence be committed, for which a conſtable may arreſt, he may conveythe offender to the ſheriff or his gaoler; though the ſafeſt way in all caſes is to bring them to a juſtice, to be bailed or committed, as the caſe ſhall require. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 88, 90. The conſtable's office being miniſterial and relative to the juſtices of peace, coroners, ſheriffs, &c. their precepts ought to be executed by him, or on default he may be indicted and fined. Ibid.

Petty conſtables are to execute all warrants of juſtices, and not diſpute it where the juſtice hath juriſdiction, and the warrant is lawful: and being ſworn officers, they need not ſhew their warrants when they come to arreſt any one. 10 Rep. 76. If any juſtice ſends his warrant to a conſtable, &c. to bring a perſon before him to anſwer all ſuch matters as ſhall be objected againſt him by another, and doth not ſet forth the ſpecial matter in the warrant, the warrant is unlawful, becauſe it doth not give the offender time and opportunity to find ſureties; and the conſtable, if he executes it, is liable to an action of falſe impriſonment. 2 Inſt. 521. So if a juſtice of peace ſends a warrant to a conſtable to take up one for ſlander, &c. the juſtices having no juriſdiction, in ſuch caſes, the conſtable ought not to execute it.

The conſtable is the proper officer to a juſtice of peace, and bound to execute his lawful warrants; and therefore where a ſtatute authoriſes a juſtice to convict a perſon of any crime, and to levy the penalty, &c. without ſaying to whom ſuch warrant ſhall be directed, the conſtable is the officer to execute the warrant, and muſt obey it. 5 Mod. 130. 1 Salk. 381. If a warrant be directed to a conſtable by name, commanding him to execute it, though he is not compellable to go out of his own pariſh, yet he may if he will, and execute it in any place in the county, and ſhall be juſtified by the warrant for ſo doing; but if the warrant be directed to all conſtables, &c. generally, no conſtable can execute the ſame out of his precinct. 1 Salk. 175. 3 Salk. 99.

It is at the election of a conſtable to carry an offender before any other juſtice than him who iſſued the warrant; if the warrant be not ſpecial, to bring the offender before the juſtice that granted it. 5 Rep. 59. By the Stat. 24 G. 2. c. 55. A conſtable may execute a warrant in any other county, &c. if indorſed by a juſtice of ſuch other county, &c. and carry the offender before a juſtice of ſuch other county, &c. and if the offender ſhall give bail, the conſtable is to deliver the recognizance, examination or confeſſion of the offender, and all other proceedings relating thereto to the clerk of aſſiſes, or clerk of the peace of the county, &c. where the offence was committed, under the penalty of 10 l. But if the offence ſhall not be bailable, or the offender ſhall not give bail, the conſtable ſhall carry the offender before a juſtice of the county where the offence was committed. A conſtable is not obliged to return a juſtice's warrant to the juſtice, but may keep the ſame for his own juſtification, in caſe he ſhould be queſtioned for his acting; but he muſt give the juſtice an account of what he hath done upon it. 2 Ld. Raym. 1196. And by Holt Chief Juſtice, where the conſtable returns want of diſtreſs upon a warrant to diſtrain; the juſtice ought to make a record of it, and then give judgment for corporal puniſhment. Ibid.

Conſtables, headboroughs, &c. out of purſe in their offices, they and the inhabitants may tax all perſons chargeable, by the 43 El. c. 2. as every occupier of land, &c. which rate being confirmed by two juſtices, the conſtables may levy it by diſtreſs and ſale of goods. Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. A conſtable, by warrant from a juſtice of peace, may ſell the goods of an offender apprehended, to diſcharge the expence of carrying him to priſon: if the offender hath no goods, then the town where he was apprehended muſt be at the expence, and the conſtable with three or four of the principal inhabitants, may impoſe a tax on every inhabitant, &c. which being allowed by a juſtice, the conſtable by his warrant may levy it: and if the inhabitants refuſe to make a tax, two juſtices may by warrant, compel them to do it. 3 Jac. 1. c. 10. But ſee 27 Geo. 2. c. 3.

The following is, the further particular duty of conſtables:

The objects of their duty being ranged alphabetically; diſtinguiſhed by italics, and divided into ſeperate clauſes.

Conſtables are not only to command affrayers to depart, but call others to their aſſiſtance to ſuppreſs affrays; and they may put affrayers in the ſtocks, till they can convey them before a juſtice, &c. Dalt. 33. Lamb. 135, 141. Conſtables are to levy the penalties on perſons keeping alehouſes without licence, ſelling leſs than meaſure, &c. or forfeit 40 s. &c. 1 Jac. 1. c. 9. They are to ſtop ſuch perſons as go or ride unlawfully armed, in terror of the people; take away their arms, and carry them before a juſtice of peace. Dalt. 338. To take up artificers going out of the kingdom, by juſtice's warrant. 5 Geo. 1. c. 27.

Conſtables ſhall levy penalties on bakers, making or ſelling bread wanting weight, deficient in goodneſs, &c. and ſelling large bread at a higher price than ſet by mayors, &c. 1 Geo. 1. c. 26. 3 Geo. 2. c. 29. The conſtable of a pariſh is to apprehend mothers of baſtard children. Dalt. A conſtable may, with others called to his aſſiſtance, enter bawdy-houſes, and arreſt perſons with lewd women, for breach of the peace. Mich. 13 Hen. 7. The conſtable, and two moſt able inhabitants in the pariſh, are to make an aſſeſſment for the repairs of bridges, to be allowed by juſtices. 22 H. 8. c. 5. The forfeiture for mixing corrupt butter with good, and opening caſks, &c. is leviable by conſtables. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 26. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 7. By a juſtice's warrant, conſtables ſhall levy penalties for uſing cloth buttons, &c. upon clothes. 4 Geo. 1. c. 7. 7 Geo. 1. c. 12.

Conſtables ſhall provide carriages on the marching of ſoldiers, by virtue of a juſtice of peace's warrant, being allowed by the officers 1 s. a mile for a waggon, &c. See the Table to the Statutes, tit. Soldiers. They may ſeize cattle brought from Ireland, and cauſe them to be killed, and the fleſh diſtributed among the poor. 18 Car. 2. c. 2. High conſtables may hear and determine complaints of clothiers, and their work-people; ſearch for and ſeize ropes, engines, &c. for the ſtretching of cloth: ſpinſters, &c. imbeziling wool from clothiers, ſhall make ſatisfaction, or be whipped by conſtables, &c. and conſtables, by warrant of two juſtices, may enter and ſearch houſes of clothiers for ends and refuſe of yarn, which may not be worked up again, under penalties leviable by the conſtables; and they alſo levy by diſtreſs the forfeiture for taking away cloth from the tenters, or yarn, wool, &c. left abroad to dry in the night. 4 E. 4. c. 1. 39 Eliz. c. 20. 7 Jac. 1. c. 16. 13 Geo. 1. c. 23. 14 Geo. 2. c. 35, &c. Where coals are ſold by ſacks not lawful meaſure, &c. conſtables ſhall levy the forfeiture inflicted. 3 Geo. 2. c. 26. Alſo the penalty for ſelling coals, at higher price than appointed, by juſtice's warrant, &c. 11 Geo. 2. c. 15. Conſtables, headboroughs, &c. are to levy the fines impoſed on thoſe who ſhall be preſent at unlawful conventicles; and by virtue of a juſtice's warrant may enter ſuch places, break open doors upon their being refuſed entrance, and take into cuſtody perſons unlawfully aſſembled, &c. 22 Car. 2. c. 1. To levy penalties on curriers who do not carry leather ſufficiently, or that neglect the ſame within certain times. 1 Jac. 1. c. 22. 12 Geo. 2. c. 25. They are to be aſſiſting to all perſons appointed by the King for the collecting and management of the cuſtoms; and to perſons having a warrant from the lord treaſurer, &c. to make a ſearch for goods that have not paid the cuſtoms. 12 Car. 2. c. 19. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 11. 9 Geo. 2. c. 35, &c.

The penalties on deer-ſtealers are to be levied by conſtables, by virtue of a juſtice's warrant: and the penalties are 20*l.* for hunting deer in any place incloſed; and 30*l.* for each deer killed, &c. And they may enter any ſuſpected place, and carry away veniſon, ſkins of deer, toils, &c. 13 Car. 2. ſtat. 1. c. 10. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 10. By a juſtice's warrant to levy the penalty on diſtillers, &c. ſelling brandy about the ſtreets, on any bulks or ſheds, &c. 6 Geo. 2. c. 17. And conſtables, and other officers of the peace, are to carry unlawful retailers of ſpirituous liquors before a juſtice, &c. and refuſing to be aiding in executing the acts againſt diſtillers, ſhall forfeit 20*l.* 11 Geo. 2. c. 26. Conſtables are to aſſiſt landlords in taking diſtreſſes for rent in arrear; and in the appraiſement of the goods, ſale, &c. if the ſame are not replevied in five days. 2 W. & M. c 5 They ſhall give aſſiſtance to ſearchers of dyed cloths, in entering and examining whether the cloths or ſtuffs are deceitfully dyed, &c. 13 Geo. 1. c. 24. They are to levy the penalty of 5*s.* on drunkards, for the uſe of the poor; or ſhall forfeit 10*s.* 4 Jac. 1. c. 5.

Conſtables are to attend officers of the exciſe, and enter with them into brew-houſes, private houſes, &c. for diſcovery of frauds: and by warrant from juſtices, they are to levy the penalties on offenders againſt any law of exciſe, by diſtreſs, &c. See Exciſe Laws A conſtable, permitting a felon to eſcape, before arreſted, is guilty of a miſdemeanor, for which he may be indicted and fined; and if the felon be actually in cuſtody, and then he voluntarily permits him to eſcape, it is felony in the conſtable; but if the eſcape be involuntary, it is only fineable: he may put a felon in the ſtocks, and lock him in; or put irons upon him, or pinion him, to prevent an eſcape.

A conſtable may diſcharge any perſon arreſted on ſuſpicion of felony, where no felony is actually committed. Dalt. 272 Cro. Eliz. 202, 752. Conſtables ex officio are to apprehend felons, may call other perſons to their aſſiſtance therein, and apprehend any upon ſuſpicion, and carry them before a juſtice, &c. A conſtable, upon complaint or common fame of a felony, may ſearch ſuſpicious houſes, both for the felon and goods ſtolen; and may juſtify breaking open a houſe to take a felon; and if the felon fly, he is to make an inventory of his goods, ſend hue and cry after him, &c. Dalt. 289, 340. 27 El. c. 13. Conſtables muſt levy the penalty of 10*s.* for fiſhing in a river, without the owner's conſent; and ſearch for unlawful nets, engines, &c. Alſo levy forfeitures for uſing engines to deſtroy the breed of fiſh; and ſelling ſea fiſh under certain lengths. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 25. 3 Jac 1. c. 12. 1 Geo. 1. c. 18, &c. They are to give aſſiſtance to juſtices of the peace, in removing forcible entries, &c. or ſhall be commited and fined. 5 Rep. 2. To prevent foreſtallers of markets, ingroſſers, &c. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 14.

Conſtables are to carry higlers, chapmen, victuallers, &c. before a juſtice, who have in their cuſtody any hare, or other game; and by a juſtice's warrant are to ſearch ſuſpected houſes for game, &c. They may carry perſons, not qualified to kill game, before a juſtice, for keeping greyhounds, ſetting-dogs, &c. See the Game Acts. They are to make a ſearch monthly for gaming houſes, where unlawful games ſhall be kept; and they may commit the maſters of ſuch houſes, and the gameſters found therein; though it is beſt to carry them before a juſtice of peace: Conſtables neglecting their duties in this particular, forfeit 40*s.* They likewiſe levy penalties on perſons for playing at unlawful games, ace of hearts, faro, &c. adjudged to be a kind of lotteries. 33 Hen. 8. c. 9. 12 Geo. 2. c. 28. If gaolers refuſe to receive a felon, the conſtable may either ſecure the priſoner in his houſe, or carry him back to the town where apprehended; and to defray the charge of carrying him to gaol, &c. Conſtables have power to ſell the offender's goods, &c. or the ſame may be levied by a tax. 10 H. 4. Dalt. 340. 3 Jac. 1. c 12. In London and Weſtminſter the conſtables, &c. ſhall make a ſearch for gunpowder, in the houſes of perſons keeping a greater quantity than allowed by ſtatute, and remove the ſame. 5 Geo. 1. c. 26. 11 Geo. 1. c. 23. And they are to levy the penalty for putting gunpowder on board ſhips, &c. above Blackwall in the river Thames. 5 Geo. 1. c. 26.

If any conſtable refuſe to aſſiſt in putting the laws in execution againſt hawkers and pedlars, that travel without licences, and are thereby liable to penalties, he ſhall forfeit 40*s.* 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 25. The penalties of ſelling truſſes of hay, &c. under due weight in the Haymarket, are leviable by conſtables. 2 W. & M. ſtat. 2. c. 8. Conſtables are to whip hedge breakers, &c for not making ſatisfaction ordered by a juſtice: they may apprehend perſons ſuſpected of hedge-breaking, or of having in their poſſeſſion any underwood, poles, gates, ſtiles, &c. and carry them before a juſtice, &c. 43 El. c. 7. 15 Car. 2. c. 2. To be aiding and aſſiſting in putting the acts in execution relating to the repairing of the highways; under the penalty of 40*s.* And they are to return liſts of perſons qualified for the office of ſurveyor, to the juſtices in their ſeſſions on the 3d of January yearly, under the penalty of 20*s.* See the Highway Acts, and 22 Car. 2. c. 12, &c. To levy the penalty for privately conveying away hops, to avoid paying duty; and forfeiture for adulterating hops, &c. 9 Ann. c. 12. 1 Geo. 1. c. 12. 7 Geo. 2. c. 19. Conſtables are to be aſſiſting in driving off commons, foreſts, &c. horſes and cattle; on pain of 40*s.* 32 H. 8. c. 13. They are to make hue and cry after offenders where a felony or robbery is committed: to call upon the pariſhioners to aſſiſt in the purſuit; and if the criminal be not found in the precinct of the firſt conſtable, he is to give notice to the next conſtable, and he to the next, who are to do as the firſt, and continue the purſuit from town to town, and county to county, &c. 13 Ed. 1. ſtat. 2. c. 6. 27 Eliz c. 13. Purſuers of the hue and cry may ſearch ſuſpected houſes, and arreſt all ſuſpicious perſons. And where offenders are not taken, conſtables ſhall levy the tax to ſatisfy an execution, on recovery againſt a hundred, and pay the ſame to the ſheriffs, etc. and neglecting to make hue and cry, ſhall forfeit 5*l.* 8 Geo. 2. c. 16.

A conſtable, on complaint, is to cauſe an innkeeper to be indicted and puniſhed, for refuſing to lodge a traveller, or to provide him victuals, etc. who offers to pay for the ſame. See 1 Jac. 1. c. 9. and Wood's Inſt. 460, 461. Conſtables muſt give in to the juſtices at Michuelmas ſeſſions yearly, a liſt of perſons qualified to ſerve on juries; and neglecting to return liſts, incurs a forfeiture of 5*l.* 7 and 8 W. 3. c. 32. ſect. 4. And ſee 8 and 9 W. 3. c. 10. 3 and 4 Ann. c. 18. ſect. 5. And 3 Geo. 2. c. 25. Theſe liſts of jurors are to be made from the rates of each pariſh; and conſtables, etc. wilfully omitting perſons qualified, or inſerting wrong perſons, ſhall forfeit 20*s.* 3 Geo. 2. c. 25.

In the time of harveſt a conſtable may ſet labourers, artificers, and ordinary tradeſmen on work, and put thoſe in the ſtocks who refuſe. 5 El. c. 4. To levy the forfeiture for breaking down lamps, ſet up in the ſtreets of London, by virtue of a juſtice's warrant. 9 Geo. 2. c. 20. But ſee 17 Geo. 2. c. 29. Conſtables are to give their aſſiſtance in collecting the land tax; and take diſtreſſes for it, etc. when refuſed payment. See the Land tax Acts. By warrant from juſtices conſtables are to levy the penalties and forfeitures for ſelling inſufficient leather, etc. 1 Jac. 1. c. 22.

They have power to ſearch for bad malt, and if they find any bad mingled with good, they may, with the advice of a juſtice, cauſe the ſame to be ſold at reaſonable rates. 2 and 3 Ed. 6. c. 10. And there are divers penalties for making bad malt, and frauds concerning the duty, leviable by conſtables. 9 and 10 W. 3. c. 22. 1 Geo. 1. ſtat. 2. c. 2. But ſee 3 Geo. 2. c. 7. ſect. 13. And 6 Geo. 1. c. 21. And 2 Geo. 2. c. 1. Conſtables are to ſearch and examine if any perſons uſe other meaſures than ſuch as are Winchester meaſure, and agreeable to the ſtandard. 22 Car. 2. c. 8. By warrant from the lieutenancy, conſtables are to commit perſons to gaol, refuſing to provide arms for horſe and foot ſoldiers, for the militia, if no diſtreſs can be taken. See the Militia Acts.

Night walkers of ill fame may be taken up by conſtables, and carried before a juſtice of peace, who may bind them to the good behaviour, &c. See 5 Ed. 3. c. 14.

Robbers of orchards, &c. ſhall be whipped, by order of a juſtice, by the conſtable of the place. See the 43 El. c. 7. 9 Geo. 1. c. 22.

Conſtables may complain to, and carry before a juſtice of peace, perſons ſuſpected to be papiſts. See the Statutes againſt Papiſts. In the city of London they are to be aſſiſting to the college of phyſicians, &c. in putting their laws in execution. 14 and 15 H. 8. c. 5. They may command and oblige perſons infected with the plague to keep within their houſes, &c. And are to levy money, appointed by juſtices, for relief of poor perſons infected. 1 Jac. 1. cap. 31. Conſtables ſhall preſent popiſh recuſants, within their liberties, &c. and certify to the ſeſſions, ſuch popiſh recuſants convict, who, within twenty days after the arrival at the place of their birth, give in their names to the parſon of the pariſh; and neglecting, to forfeit 20*s.* 35 Eliz. c. 2. 7 Jac. 1. c. 6. To levy money due for poſtage of letters, under 5 l. by juſtice's warrant. 9 Ann. c. 10. They are at the quarter-ſeſſions to take preſentment of all things againſt the peace, and belonging to their offices, &c. The conſtables ſhall levy a tax on pariſhes, for relieving poor pariſhioners. 43 Eliz. c. 2:

Conſtables are to ſuppreſs riots, and they may ex officio commit offenders, &c. 17 R. 2. c. 8. And by 1 Geo. 1. c. 5. Rioting, where twelve rioters continue together an hour after proclamation, is made felony. They are to make a tax and aſſeſſment by warrant from two juſtices on the inhabitants of their pariſhes where a robbery on the highway is committed in the hundred. 27 El. c. 13.

See 8 Geo. 2. c. 16. Conſtables are to whip wandring rogues, &c. by ſtripping them from the middle upwards, and cauſing them to be laſhed till their bodies be bloody. 1 Jac. 1. c. 7.

The penalties for ſelling ſalt under weight, &c. and not entering ſaltpits, are to be levied by conſtables. 9 and 10 W. 3. c. 6. and 44. 7 Geo. 2. c. 6. Scavengers rates in London ſhall be made by conſtables and church-wardens, &c. and the conſtables to levy forfeitures for defaults of ſcavengers in not carrying away dirt, &c. 2 W. and M. ſtat. 2. c. 8. 1 Geo. 1. ſtat. 2. c. 52. Conſtables and two houſholders of towns, pariſhes, &c. by an old law were to give teſtimonials to ſervants: and ſervants not procuring ſuch were not to be retained, but puniſhed as vagrants. 5 Eliz. c. 10. By virtue of a juſtice's warrant conſtables ſhall ſearch after ſhoes, leather, &c. imbezilled or pawned by journeymen ſhoemakers in London, who ſhall make ſatisfaction, &c. 9 Geo. 1. c. 27. Conſtables are to quarter ſoldiers in inns, alehouſes, victualing houſes, &c. Refuſing to billet ſoldiers, they are to be fined not exceeding 40s. nor leſs than 10*s.* and receiving any reward to excuſe quarterage; or if victuallers, etc. refuſe ſoldiers quartered, they ſhall forfeit not above 5 l. nor under 40*s.* If they quarter the wives, children, or ſervants of officers or ſoldiers, in any houſe, without conſent of the owner, they forfeit 20*s.* The conſtables, etc. ſhall give in liſts to the juſtices of the houſes and perſons obliged to quarter ſoldiers, with their names and ſigns, and the number of officers and ſoldiers billeted on them. 1 Geo. 1. c. 47. 7 Geo. 1. c. 6. See the ſtatutes concerning ſoldiers. Perſons ſuſpected of deſertion, may be taken up by conſtables, and carried before a juſtice: and 20*s* reward is given for taking up a deſerter. They are to levy the penalty of 5 s. on perſons reſorting to wreſtling, dancing, or other ſports on a Sunday; and on perſons doing any worldly labour on that day, etc. Alſo 6*s.* 8*d.* on butchers killing meat; and 20*s.* upon carriers, drovers, etc. travelling on Sunday. 1 Car. 1. c. 1. 29 Car. 2. c. 7. On receiving a ſuperſedeas from another juſtice, &c. Conſtable ſhall diſcharge a perſon taken up by warrant. Dalt. To levy the penalty for profane ſwearing; which is 1 s. for a ſervant, labourer, &c. and 2 s. for others; and as the crime is repeated, the penalty is to be doubled. 6 and 7 W. 3. c. 11. 19 Geo. 2. c. 21.

Conſtables ſhall levy the penalty of 5 l. on taylors giving greater wages than allowed; likewiſe the wages of journeymen by diſtreſs, by a juſtice's warrant. 7 Geo. 1. ſtat. 1. c. 13. By warrant from two juſtices, conſtables, &c. are to levy ſmall tithes, refuſed payment, by diſtreſs and ſale. See 7 and 8 W. 3. c. 6. and the ſtatutes concerning tithes. Conſtables, on information, are to deſtroy tobacco planted contrary to the Stat. 22 and 23 Car. 2. c. 26. or be liable to a forfeiture of 5 s. for every rod not deſtroyed: and upon warrant to make ſearch, and preſent offences of planting tobacco, &c. See 12 Car. 2. c. 34. 15 Car. 2. c. 7. ſect. 18. 22 and 23 Car. 2. c. 26. 5 Geo. 1. c. 11. ſect. 19. and the ſtatutes concerning tobacco. To execute warrants of commiſſioners for turnpikes; and levy the penalty for paſſing through them without paying the toll, &c. See 1 Geo. 1. ſtat. 2. c. 19. 5 Geo. 2. c. 33.

Conſtables, &c. are to apprehend vagrants, and carry them before a juſtice; and to convey them, by the juſtice's paſs and certificate, to their place of birth or ſettlement, &c. being paid the allowances mentioned in the certificates: they are to pay 10 s. to any perſon apprehending a vagrant by order of juſtices, which is to be repaid by the high conſtable, &c. and refuſing to pay it ſhall forfeit 20*s.* Vagabonds lodging in houſes or barns are alſo to be apprehended by conſtables, &c. And if they refuſe, or neglect to do their duty, they ſhall forfeit not above 5 l. nor leſs than 40*s.* See 13 and 14 Car. 2. c. 18. 11 and 12 W. 3. c. 18. 12 Ann. ſtat. 2, c. 23. 13 Geo. 2. c. 24. 13 Geo. 1. c. 24. 17 Geo. 2. c. 25.

Conſtables of towns ſhall ſee that night watches be kept, from ſun-ſetting to ſun-riſing, who muſt be able perſons, inhabitants of the place, and watch by turns; and not doing it, may put them in the ſtocks, &c. 13 Ed. 1. ſtat. 2. c. 4. And conſtables in the large pariſhes of Weſtminſter are twice or oftener in every night to go their rounds, and ſee that the watch do their duty, and uſe endeavours to prevent fires, murders, robberies, &c. and apprehend malefactors, and perſons ſuſpected. See 2 Geo. 2. c. 11. 8 Geo. 2. c. 15. 9 Geo. 2. c. 8. c. 13. c. 17. c. 19. 23 Geo. 2. c. 35. 25 Geo. 2. c. 23. 26 Geo. 2. c. 97. 29 Geo. 2. c. 53. They are to execute all warrants of juſtices, being lawful, and not out of the juſtices juriſdiction. See the ſtatutes relating to juſtices of the peace. Conſtables, being head officers of places, ſhall have in their cuſtody ſealed weights, &c. under penalties: perſons buying or ſelling by falſe weights or meaſures, forfeit 5 s. leviable by conſtables. 8 H. 6. c. 5. 16 Car. 1. c. 19. And conſtables are to call together aſſiſtance to ſave ſhips from wreck; and no perſons ſhall enter any ſuch ſhips, without leave from the commander, conſtable, &c. 12 Ann. cap. 18.

By the Stat. 26 Geo. 2. c. 31. Conſtables, by the order of the high conſtable, are to give notice to the ſeveral inn-keepers and alehouſe-keepers, within their reſpective conſtablewicks, of the day and place appointed by the juſtices for granting licences.

If a conſtable doth not his duty, he may be indicted and fined by the juſtices of peace; on the other hand, he is protected by law, in the execution of his duty.

By 7 Jac. 1. cap. 5. If any action is brought againſt a conſtable, for any thing done by virtue of his office, he, and alſo all others who in his aid, or by his command, ſhall do any thing concerning his office, may plead the general iſſue, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence, and if he recovers he ſhall have double coſts. And ſee 21 Jac. 1. c. 5.

By the Stat. 24 Geo. 2. c. 44. No action ſhall be brought againſt any conſtable, or other officer, or any perſon acting by his order, and in his aid, for any thing done in obedience to any warrant of a juſtice of peace, until demand of the peruſal and copy of ſuch warrant, and the ſame hath been refuſed or neglected by the ſpace of ſix days; and in caſe after ſuch demand, and compliance therewith, any action ſhall be brought againſt ſuch conſtable, &c. without making the juſtice a defendant; then on producing and proving ſuch warrant, the jury ſhall give a verdict for the defendant, notwithſtanding any defect of juriſdiction in ſuch juſtice; and if ſuch action be brought jointly againſt ſuch juſtice, and alſo againſt ſuch conſtable, &c. then on proof of ſuch warrant, the jury ſhall find for ſuch conſtable, &c. and if the verdict ſhall be given againſt the juſtice, the plaintiff ſhall recover his coſts againſt him, to be taxed ſo as to include coſts plaintiff ſhall be liable to pay to ſuch defendant, &c. No action ſhall be brought againſt any conſtable, &c. unleſs commenced within ſix calendar months after the act committed.

Stat. 27 Geo. 2. cap. 20. ſect. 2. The conſtable executing a juſtice's warrant for levying a penalty, or other ſum of money directed by any act of parliament, by diſtreſs, may deduct his own reaſonable charges of taking, keeping, and ſelling the goods diſtrained; returning the overplus on demand, after ſuch penalty or ſum of money, and charges deducted. See Commitment, County-rate, Juſtices of peace.

Penalty on conſtables taking money to excuſe from quartering ſoldiers. 4 Geo. 3. c. 3. ſect. 26 and 66.—— High conſtable to obey the orders of the court to be held in purſuance of 31 Geo. 2. c. 17. ſect. 12.—None to be conſtables who are ſixty-three or upwards. 31 Geo. 2. c. 17. ſect. 13.

Conſtables of London, (which city is divided into twenty-ſix wards, and every ward into the like number of precincts, in each whereof is a conſtable), are nominated by the inhabitants of each precinct on St. Thomas's day, and confirmed, or otherwiſe, at the court of wardmote; and after they are confirmed, they are ſworn in their offices at a court of aldermen, on the next Monday after twelfth day. The ſubſtance of their oath is,

"To keep the King's peace to the utmoſt of their power; to arreſt affrayers, rioters, and ſuch as make conteſts to the breach of the peace, and carry them to the houſe of correction or compter of one of the ſheriffs; and in caſe of reſiſtance, to make outcry on them, and purſue them from ſtreet to ſtreet, and from ward to ward, till they are arreſted: to ſearch for common nuſances, in their reſpective wards, being required by ſcavengers, &c. and upon requeſt to aſſiſt the beadle and raker in collecting their ſalaries and quarterage; to preſent to the Lord Mayor and miniſters of the city, defaults relating to the ordinances of the city; to certify once a month into the mayor's court, the names and ſurnames of all freemen deceaſed; and alſo of the children of ſuch freemen, being orphans."

And by the articles of the wardmote inqueſt, conſtables are to certify the names, ſurnames, place of dwelling, poſſeſſion and trade of every perſon, who ſhall newly come to inhabit in their precincts, and to keep a roll thereof; in order to which, they are to make inquiry at leaſt once a month into what perſons are come to lodge and ſojourn there; and if they find by their own confeſſions, or the record of the aldermens books, that ſuch new comers are ejected from any other ward for bad living, or any miſdemeanor, and refuſe to find ſureties for their good behaviour, warning is to be given to them and their landlords, that they depart; and, on refuſal, they may be impriſoned, and the landlords fined a year's rent agreed for by ſuch new comers. Calth. Rep. 129, 138.

Conſtables of London, in each ward, are to attend the watch by turns, and go the rounds; and with the beadles every night are to warn ſuch perſons as are to ſerve upon the watch in their ſeveral precincts; and if they refuſe to appear, the conſtable may hire others in their ſtead, and they ſhall pay him according to the cuſtom of the city: but the common council appoint the watchmen. Watchmen are to apprehend night walkers, vagabonds, perſons going armed, &c. and may arreſt ſtrangers in the night, and carry them before the conſtable to be examined, and finding cauſe of ſuſpicion ſecure them till the morning; and whether they are horſemen or footmen, or drivers of carriages, or perſons that carry burdens, the watch may ſtay them till the morning, unleſs they can render a good account of themſelves, their company and carriage, &c. and conſtables, &c. are to be aiding and aſſiſting to the watch; and the watchmen are to obey their orders, in conveying offenders to the compter, which is the common priſon for offenders for the breach of the peace, till they are examined, and puniſhed by the Lord Mayor, &c. But conſtables ought to be careful whom they ſend to the compter, for fear of action for falſe impriſonment; proſecution for damages, &c.

If any will not obey the arreſt of the watch, they may make hue and cry after them; and for ſuch arreſt of a ſtranger, (eſpecially one ſuſpected), none is liable to puniſhment. Dalt. 240. The court of common council are to meet the firſt of October yearly, and order a proper number of watchmen, beadles and nightly conſtables for the city of London and liberties, and determine ſums to be levied to bear the charge thereof upon each ward; and for raiſing money, the aldermen and common-councilmen of wards, ſhall make a rate and aſſeſſment upon the inhabitants, leviable by diſtreſs; and ſhall appoint their watchmen, ſet down in writing their ſtands and number of rounds, and make orders for regulating the watch, &c.

Conſtables to keep watch and ward, from the 10th of Sept. to the 10th of March, from nine in the evening, till ſeven the next morning, and from 10th of March to 10th of Sept. from ten in the evening till five next morning. The conſtables ſhall uſe their beſt endeavours, for preventing fires, robberies and diſorders, and arreſt malefactors; and go twice or oftener about their wards, in every night; and the watchmen are to apprehend all ſuſpected perſons, etc. and deliver them to the conſtable of the night, who ſhall carry them before a juſtice of peace; conſtables miſbehaving themſelves, to forfeit 20*s.* and the Lord Mayor, or two juſtices for the city, may hear and determine offences, and levy penalties by diſtreſs and ſale of goods, etc. Stat. 10 Geo. 2. c. 22.

Conſtables are to certify to the lord mayor, and common council of the city, the names of all ſuch perſons as ſhall interrupt them in the diſcharge of their offices: and a conſtable of London has power to execute warrants, etc. throughout the whole city, upon occaſion. Such as are choſen into the office are obliged to place the King's arms, and the arms of the city over their doors; and if they reſide in alleys, at the end of ſuch alleys, towards the ſtreets, to ſignify that a conſtable lives there, and that they may be the more eaſily found when wanted. See Comp. Pariſh Officer, 6 Edit. p. 7, 8, etc.

Conſtat, (Lat.) Is the name of a certificate, which the clerk of the pipe, and auditors of the Exchequer, make at the requeſt of any perſon who intends to plead or move in that court, for the diſcharge of any thing: and the effect of it, is the certifying what does conſtare upon record, touching the matter in queſtion. 3 and 4 Ed. 6. c. 4. and 13 Eliz. c. 6. A conſtat is held to be ſuperior to an ordinary certificate, becauſe it contains nothing but what is evident on record. And the exemplification under the great ſeal, of the inrolment of any letters patent, is called a conſtat. Co. Lit. 225.

Conſtructive Treaſon. The Stat. 25 Ed. 3. c. 2. was made to define treaſon, and prevent the ſubject from being condemned for conſtructive treaſon. See Black Com. 4 V. 75, 76, 85, etc.

Conſuetudinarius, A ritual or book, containing the rites and forms of divine offices, or the cuſtoms of abbeys and monaſteries: it is mentioned in Brompton.

Conſuetudinibus & Serviciis, Is a writ of right cloſe, which lies againſt the tenant that deforceth his lord of the rent or ſervice due to him. Reg. Orig. 159. F. N. B. 151. When the writ is brought by the party in the right only, he ſhall count of the ſeiſin of his anceſtor, and the writ be in the debet; but when he counts of his own ſeiſin, then the writ is in the debet et ſolet, etc. And if the party ſay in the writ ut in redditibus et arreragiis, theſe words prove that the demandant himſelf was ſeiſed of the ſervices; and then if he count in ſuch writ of ſeiſin of his anceſtors, and not of his own ſeiſin, the writ ſhall abate: ſo that if he will bring a writ of cuſtoms and ſervices of the ſeiſin of his anceſtors, he ought to leave theſe words ut in redditibus, etc. out of the writ. Where a perſon brings a writ of cuſtoms and ſervices againſt any tenant, and by count demands homage, the writ ought to make ſpecial mention thereof; as ut in homagio, etc. or the writ ſhall abate. New Nat. Brev. 338. If this writ be brought againſt tenant for life, where the remainder is over in fee, there the tenant may pray in aid of him in the remainder, etc.

Conſul, (Lat.) In our law books ſignifies an earl. Bract. lib. 1. c. 8. tells us, that as comes is derived from comitatu, ſo conſul is derived from conſulendo: and in the laws of Edward the Confeſſor, mention is made of vicecomites and viceconſules. Blount. Conſuls among the Romans, were chief officers, of which two were yearly choſen, to govern the city of Rome: but this government of Rome has long ſince been abrogated. Our Conſuls abroad take care of the affairs and intereſts of merchants, in foreign kingdoms where they are appointed by the King; as at Liſbon, etc.

Conſulta Eccleſia, A church full, or provided for, according to Cowel.

Conſultation, (conſultatio) Is a writ whereby a cauſe being removed by prohibition from the eccleſiaſtical court, to the King's court, is returned thither again; for if the judges of the King's court, upon comparing the libel with the ſuggeſtion of the party, find the ſuggeſtion falſe, or not proved, and therefore the cauſe to be wrongfully called from the eccleſiaſtical court, then upon this conſultation or deliberation they decree it to be returned; whereupon the writ in this caſe obtained is called a conſultation. Reg. Orig. 44, etc. Statute of writ of conſultations, 24 Ed. 1.

This writ is in nature of a procedendo; but properly a conſultation ought not to be granted, but in caſe where a man cannot recover at the Common law, in the King's courts. New Nat. Br. 119. Cauſes of which the eccleſiaſtical or ſpiritual courts have juriſdiction, are of adminiſtrations, admiſſions of clerks, adultery, appeals in eccleſiaſtical cauſes, apoſtacy, general baſtardy, blaſphemy, ſolicitation of chaſtity, dilapidations and church repairs, celebration of divine ſervice, divorces, fornication, hereſy, inceſt, inſtitution of clerks, marriage rites, oblations, obventions, ordinations, commutation of penance, penſions, procurations, ſchiſm, ſimony, tithes, probate of wills, &c. and where a ſuit is in the eccleſiaſtical court, for any of theſe cauſes, or the like, and not mixed with any temporal thing; if a ſuggeſtion is made for a prohibition, a conſultation ſhall be awarded. 5 Rep. 9.

To move for a prohibition in another court, after motion in the Chancery, &c. on the ſame libel which is granted, is merely vexatious, for which a conſultation ſhall be had. Cro. Eliz. 277. Where a conſultation is granted upon the right of the thing in queſtion, there a new prohibition ſhall never be granted on the ſame libel; but where granted upon any default of the prohibition, in form, &c. there a prohibition may be granted upon the ſame libel again. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 485. A conſultation muſt be purſuant to the libel, &c. Vide Prohibition. See Black. Com. 3 V. 114.

Contempt, (contemptus) Is a diſobedience to the rules and orders of a court, which hath power to puniſh ſuch offence; and one may be impriſoned for a contempt done in court; but not for a contempt out of court, or a private abuſe. Cro. Eliz. 689. But for contempt out of court, an attachment may be granted. Attachment alſo lies againſt one for contempt to the court, to bring in the offender to anſwer on interrogatories, etc. and if he cannot acquit himſelf, he ſhall be fined. 1 Lill. 305. If a ſheriff, being required to return a writ directed to him, doth not return the writ, it is a contempt: and this word is uſed for a kind of miſdemeanor, by doing what one is forbidden; or not doing what he is commanded. 12 Rep. 36. And as this is ſometimes a greater, and ſometimes a leſſer offence; ſo it is puniſhed with greater or leſs puniſhment, by fine, and ſometimes impriſonment. Dyer, 128, 177. 1 Bulſt. 85. See Attachment. See Black. Com. 4 V. 280.

An attachment of contempt may iſſue againſt a biſhop, or other peer: but for not returning a fieri faciat de bonis eccleſiaſticis, it is proper to move againſt the chancellor, commiſſary, or official. Rex v. Biſhop of St. Aſaph, Wilſ. par. 1. p. 332.

One committed for a contempt of the Houſe of Commons cannot be bailed by the court of King's Bench, the Honourable Alexander Murray's caſe, ib. p. 299, 300.

It is a contempt to inſtitute a ſuit fictitiouſly, though the demand is real, either to hurt any perſon, or to get the opinion of the court. Coxe and Phillips. Rep. Temp. Hardw. per Annaly, 237, 239.

Contenement, (contenementum) Is ſaid to ſignify a man's countenance or credit, which he hath together with, and by reaſon of, his freehold: in which ſenſe, it is uſed in the ſtatute of 1 Ed. 3. and other ſtatutes: and Spelman in his Gloſſary ſays, Contenementum eſt æſtimatio et conditionis forma, qua quis in repub. ſubſiſtit. But contenement is more properly that, which is neceſſary for the ſupport and maintenance of men, agreeable to their ſeveral qualities, or ſtates of life: and ſeems to be freehold land, which lieth to a man's tenement, or dwelling-houſe, that is in his own occupation. For by Magna Charta, cap. 14. it is enacted, that a freeman ſhall not be amerced, but ſecundum magnitudinem delicti, ſalvo ſibi contenemento ſuo; et mercator eodom modo, ſalva merchandiſa; et villanus ſalvo wainagio; that is, as Glanvil tells us, he ſhould be amerced, ſecundum quantitatem feodorum ſuorum et ſecundum facultates, ne nimis gravari inde videantur vel ſuum contenementum amittere. Lib. 9. c. 8.

Contingent Legacy. If a contingent legacy be left to any one; as, when he attains, or if he attains the age of twenty-one, and he dies before that time; it is a lapſed legacy. Dy. 59. 1 Eq. Caſ. Abr. 295. But a legacy to one, to be paid when he attains the age of twenty-one years, is a veſted legacy, an intereſt which commences in præſenti, although it be ſolvendum in futuro: and if the legatee dies before that age, his repreſentatives ſhall receive it out of the teſtator's perſonal eſtate, at the ſame time it would have become payable, in caſe the legatee had lived. Black. Com. 2 V. 513.

Contingent Remainder, Contingent or executory remainders (whereby no preſent intereſt paſſes) are where the eſtate in remainder is limited to take effect, either to a dubious and uncertain perſon, or upon a dubious and uncertain event; ſo that the particular eſtate may chance to be determined, and the remainder never take effect. 3 Rep. 20. Black. Com. 2 V. 169. And ſee 10 Rep. 85.

Contingent Uſe, Is a uſe limited in a conveyance of land, which may, or may not happen to veſt, according to the contingency expreſſed in the limitation of ſuch uſe: a uſe in contingency is ſuch which by poſſibility may happen in poſſeſſion, reverſion or remainder. 1 Rep. 121. A remainder contingent is ſaid to be an eſtate veſted; but on ſuch remainder in executory deviſes, the eſtate deſcends till the contingency happens, and nothing is veſted till then. 1 Vent. 189.

Continual Claim, Is a claim made from time to time, within every year and day, to land, or other thing, which in ſome reſpect we cannot attain without danger: as if a perſon be diſſeiſed of land, into which, though he hath a right of entry, he dare not enter for fear of beating, etc. it behoves him to hold on his right of entry at his beſt opportunity, by approaching as near it as he can, once a year, as long as he lives, and to ſave the right of entry to his heir. Lit. lib. 3. c. 7.

Continual claim is where it is made, and repeated yearly, ſo as to be within a year and a day before the death of him that hath the lands; and if after he dies ſeiſed, ſo that his heir is in by diſcent, yet he that makes the claim may enter, etc. but if no claim be made, then the entry of the perſon diſſeiſed, etc. is taken away, 32 H. 8. cap. 33.

Though by the ſtatute the diſſeiſor is to have peaceable poſſeſſion for five years, without entry or continual claim, for a diſcent on his death, to take away the entry of the diſſeiſee, or his heir; after the five years, the diſſeiſee is to make continual claim, as before the ſtatute: the feoffee of a diſſeiſor, abators, etc. are out of the ſtatute. As to this claim, though the tenant die within the year and day, and it be but once made, it ſhall preſerve the entry of him that maketh it: and if the anceſtor claim, and the diſſeiſor die, and then the anceſtor dieth, now his heir may enter: but if an anceſtor or predeceſſor make a continual claim, and dieth, and the ſon or ſucceſſor make no continual claim, and within the year and day after the claim made by the anceſtor, the diſſeiſor dies; this ſhall take away the entry of the ſon or ſucceſſor, for the diſcent was caſt in his time. Co. Lit. 250, 251.

If there be tenant for life, remainder for life, the remainder in fee, and the tenant for life alien in fee: if he in remainder for life maketh continual claim, before the dying ſeiſed of the alienee, and after the alienee die ſeiſed, and after that the remainder man for life dieth before any entry made by him: in this caſe he in remainder in fee ſhall have benefit by the claim of tenant for life, and he may enter upon the heir of the alienee, &c. Lit. Sect. 416.

This claim ſhall not avoid a diſcent, unleſs it be made by him that hath title to enter, and in whoſe life the dying ſeiſed was: and ſo it is for the continual claim of a tenant for life, to give him in remainder advantage, except the diſſeiſor, &c. die in the life-time of tenant for life. Co. Lit. 250. See Black. Com. 2 V. 316. 3 V. 175.

Continuance, Is the continuing of a cauſe in court, by an entry upon the records there for that purpoſe. There is a continuance of the aſſiſe, &c. And continuance of a writ or action is from one term to another, in caſe where the ſheriff hath not returned a former writ, iſſued out in the ſaid action. Kitch. 262. Continuances and eſſoins are amendable upon the roll, at any time before judgment: they are the acts of the court, and at Common law they may amend their own acts before judgment, though in another term; but their judgments are only amendable in the ſame term wherein they are given. 3 Lev. 431. Upon an original, a term or two or three terms may be meſne between the teſte and the return; and this ſhall be a good continuance; for the defendant is not at any prejudice by it, and the plaintiff may give a day to the defendant beyond the common day if he will:

But a continuance by capias ought to be made from term to term, and there cannot be any meſne term, becauſe the defendant ought not to ſtay ſo long in priſon. 2 Danv. Abr. 150. If a man recovers upon demurrer, or by default, &c. and a writ of inquiry of damages is awarded, there ought to be continuances between the firſt and ſecond judgment, otherwiſe it will be a diſcontinuance; for the firſt is but an award, and not compleat till the ſecond judgment upon the return of the writ of inquiry of damages. Ibid. 153. If the plaintiff be nonſuit, by which the defendant is to recover coſts; if the plaintiff will not enter his continuances, on purpoſe to ſave the coſts, the defendant ſhall be ſuffered to enter them. Cro. Jac. 316, 317. The courſe of the court of King's Bench is to enter no continuance upon the roll, till after iſſue or demurrer, and then to enter the continuance of all upon the back, before judgment: and if it is not entered, it is error. Trin. 16 Jac. B. R. Vide Diſcontinuance.

Continuando, Is a word uſed in a ſpecial declaration of treſpaſs, when the plaintiff would recover damages for ſeveral treſpaſſes in the ſame action: and to avoid multiplicity of ſuits, a man may in one action of treſpaſs recover damages for many treſpaſſes, laying the firſt to be done with a continuando to the whole time, in which the reſt of the treſpaſſes were done; which is in this form, Continuando tranſgreſſionem prædictam, &c. a prædicto die, &c. uſque talem diem, including the laſt treſpaſs. Terms de Ley.

In treſpaſs with a continuando of divers things, though of ſome of thoſe things there could be no continuando; yet it ſhall be good for thoſe things for which the continuando could be, and not for the others: but if the continuando had been particularly of ſuch things whereof a continuando could not be, then it had been nought. 3 Lev. 94. Every day's treſpaſs is ſaid to be a ſeveral treſpaſs; tho' a continuando may not be of men's continuing a treſpaſs day and night, for ſome time together; for mankind muſt take ſome reſt: where cattle do treſpaſs upon ground, they are continually treſpaſſing night and day, and therefore the continuando in that caſe is good. 1 Lill. Abr. 307. Treſpaſs for breaking an houſe with a continuando, is good; and until a re-entry is made, the continuation of the poſſeſſion, is a continuing of the treſpaſs. Lutw. 1312.

Contraband Goods, (from contra, and the Ital. bando, an edict or proclamation) Are thoſe which are prohibited by act of parliament, or the King's proclamation to be imported into, or exported out of this into any other nation: as during the late war with France, French wines, &c. were prohibited by ſtatute to be imported here from thence: and wool, &c. is not to be exported from hence to other kingdoms. Stat. 27 E. 3. c. 3. 13 & 14 Car. 2. 7 & 8 W. 3. &c.

Contracauſator, A criminal, or one proſecuted for a crime: this word is mentioned in Leg. H. 1. cap. 61.

Contract, (contractus) Is a covenant or agreement between two or more perſons, with a lawful conſideration or cauſe. Weſt. Symb. part 1. As if a man ſells his horſe or other thing to another, for a ſum of money; or covenants, in conſideration of 20 l. to make him a leaſe of a farm, &c. theſe are good contracts, becauſe there is a quid pro quo, or one thing for another: but if a perſon make promiſe to me, that I ſhall have 20 s. and that he will be debtor to me therefore, and after I demand the 20 s. and he will not give it me, yet I ſhall never have any action to recover this 20 s. becauſe this promiſe was no contract, but a bare promiſe, or nudum pactum; though if any thing were given for the 20 s. if it were but to the value of a penny, then it had been a good contract.

Every contract doth imply in itſelf an aſſumpſit in law, to perform the ſame; for a contract would be to no purpoſe, if there were no means to enforce the performance thereof. 1 Lill. Abr. 308. Where an action is brought upon a contract, and the plaintiff miſtakes the ſum agreed upon, he will fail in his action: but if he brings his action on the promiſe in law, which ariſes from the debt, there, although he miſtakes the ſum, he ſhall recover. Aleyn 29. Aſſumpſit in deed muſt be fully proved. Gilb. Law of Evid. 193. Aſſumpſit in law, proof of any part is good. Ib. 172. See Gilb. Law of Evidence, 204, 205. 2 Vent. 154.

There is a diverſity where a day of payment is limited on a contract, and where not; for where it is limited, the contract is good preſently, and an action lies upon it, without payment; but in the other not: If a man buys 20 yards of cloth, &c. the contract is void, if he do not pay the money preſently; but if day of payment be given, there the one may have an action for the money, and the other trover for the cloth. Dyer 30, 293. Where a ſeller ſays to a buyer, he will ſell his horſe for ſo much, and the buyer ſays he will give it; if he preſently tell out the money it is a contract; but if he do not it is no contract. Noy's Max. 87. Hob. 41. The property of any thing ſold is in the buyer immediately by the contract; though regularly it muſt be delivered to the buyer, before the ſeller can bring his action for the money. Noy 88. If one contract to buy a horſe or other thing of me, and no money is paid, or earneſt given, nor day ſet for payment thereof, nor the thing delivered; in theſe caſes, no action will lie for the money, or the thing ſold, but it may be ſold to another. Plowd. 128, 309.

All contracts are to be certain, perfect, and compleat: For an agreement to give ſo much for a thing as it ſhall be reaſonably worth, is void for incertainty; ſo a promiſe to pay money in a ſhort time, etc. or to give ſo much, if he likes the thing when he ſees it. Dyer. 91. 1 Bulſt. 92. But if I contract with another to give him 10*l.* for ſuch a thing, if I like it on ſeeing the ſame; this bargain is ſaid to be perfect at my pleaſure: Though I may not take the thing before I have paid the money; if I do, the ſeller may have treſpaſs againſt me; and if he ſell it to another, I may bring an action on the caſe againſt him. Noy 104. If a contract be to have for cattle ſold 10 l. If the buyer do a certain thing, or elſe to have 20 l. it is a good contract, and certain enough: And if I agree with a perſon to give him ſo much for his horſe, as J. S. ſhall judge him to be worth, when he hath judged it, the con- tract is compleat, and an action will lie on it; and the buyer ſhall have a reaſonable time to demand the judgment of J. S. But if he dies before his judgment is given, the contract is determined. Perk. Sect. 112, 114. Shep. Abr. 294.

In contracts, the time is to be regarded, in and from which the contract is made: The words ſhall be taken in the common and uſual ſenſe, as they are taken in that place where ſpoken; and the law doth not ſo much look upon the form of words, as on the ſubſtance and mind of the parties therein. 5 Rep. 83. 1 Bulſt. 175. A contract for goods may be made as well by word of mouth, as by deed in writing; and where it is in writing only, not ſealed and delivered, it is all one as by word. But if the contract be by writing ſealed and delivered, and ſo turned into a deed; then it is of another nature, and in this caſe generally the action on the verbal contract is gone, and ſome other action lies for breach thereof. Plowd. 130, 309. Dyer 90.

Contracts, not to be performed in a year, are to be in writing, ſigned by the party, etc. or no action may be brought on them: But if no day is ſet, or the time is uncertain, they may be good without it. Stat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. And by the ſame ſtatute, no contract for the ſale of goods for 10*l.* or upwards, ſhall be good, unleſs the buyer receive part of the goods ſold; or gives ſomething in earneſt to bind the contract; or ſome note thereof be made in writing, ſigned by the perſon charged with the contract, &c.

If two perſons come to a draper, and one ſays, let this man have ſo much cloth, and I will pay you; there the ſale is to the undertaker only, though the delivery is to another by his appointment: But if a contract be made with A. B. and the vendor ſcruples to let the goods go without money, and C. D. comes to him and deſires him to let A. B. have the goods, and undertakes that he ſhall pay him for them, that will be a promiſe within the ſtatute 29 Car. 2. c. 3. and ought to be in writing. Mod. Caſ. 249.

A contract made and entered into upon good conſideration, may for good conſiderations be diſſolved. See Agreement and Sale. Uſurious contracts, vide Uſury.

Contrafaction, (Contrafactio) A counterfeiting; as contrafactio ſigilli Regis, counterfeiting the King's ſeal. Blount.

Contra formam Collationis, Is a writ that lay where a man had given lands in perpetual alms, to any late houſes of religion, as to an abbot and convent, or to the warden or maſter of any hoſpital and his convent, to find certain poor men with neceſſaries, and do divine ſervice, &c. If they aliened the land, to the diſheriſon of the houſe and church, then the donor or his heirs, ſhould bring this writ to recover the lands. It was had againſt the abbot or his ſucceſſor; not againſt the alienee, though he were tenant of the land: And was founded upon the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. c. 1. Reg. Orig. 238. F. N. B. 210.

Contra formam Feoffamenti, A writ that lies for the heir of a tenant enfeoffed of certain lands or tenements, by charter of feoffment from a lord to make certain ſervices and ſuits to his court, who is afterwards diſtrained for more ſervices than are mentioned in the charter. Reg. Orig. 176. Old Nat. Br. 162.

Contra formam Statuti, Is the uſual concluſion of every indictment, &c. laid on an offence created by ſtatute.

If one ſtatute be relative to another, as where the former makes the offence, the latter adds a penalty, as the ſtatutes of 1 & 23 Eliz. the indictment ought to conclude contra formam ſtatutorum. 2 Hale's Pl. C. 173. cap. 24. cites Paſch. 42 Eliz. B. R. Croke, n. 6. Dingley v. Moore.

Where there are ſeveral ſtatutes and it does not appear on which the information is founded, the concluding contra formam ſtatuti is ill. Cro. Jac. 142. pl. 19. Broughton v. Moor, cited as adjudged in Talbot & al'. Where one act makes the offence, and another gives the penalty, an information muſt be contra formam ſtatutorum, in the caſe of Talbot and Sheldon, indicted for recuſancy contra formam ſtatuti, 23 Eliz. c. 1. and the judgment reverſed becauſe the penalty was demanded; for the 10 Eliz. made the offence, and the 23d gave the penalty: But, if the information had been for the offence only, it had been good; per Coke. Ow. 135. Trin. 9 Jac. See 5 Vin. Abr. 552—556.

Contramandatio Placiti, Signifies a reſpiting or giving a defendant further time to anſwer; or a countermand of what was formerly ordered. Leg. H. 1. c. 59.

Contramandatum, Is ſaid to be a lawful excuſe which the defendant in a ſuit by attorney alledgeth for himſelf, to ſhew that the plaintiff hath no cauſe of complaint. Blount.

Contrapoſitio, A plea or anſwer.——Si quis in placito per juſtitiam poſito ſui vel ſuorum cauſam injuſtis conterminationibus vel contrapoſitionibus diſſorciet, hanc perdat. Leg. Hen. 1. c. 34.

Contrarients. In the reign of King Edw. 2. Thomas Earl of Lancaſter taking part with the Barons againſt the King, it was not thought fit, in reſpect of their great power, to call them rebels or traitors, but contrarients: And hence we have a record of thoſe times, called Rotulum Contrarientium.

Contratenere, To with-hold. Si quis decimas contrateneat. Leg. Alfredi apud Brompton, c. 9.

Contribution, (Contributio) Is where every one pays his ſhare, or contributes his part to any thing. One parcener ſhall have contribution againſt another; one heir have contribution againſt another heir, in equal degree: And one purchaſer have contribution againſt another. Alſo conuſors in a ſtatute ſhall be equally charged, and not one of them ſolely extended. 3 Rep. 12, 13, &c. On a ſtatute or recogniſance, there is a contribution and ſtay till the full age of the heir, &c. and this doth extend to the leſſee for life, or years of the conuſor, who has part of the land liable, and the heir within age the reſidue; for the land of every one them ought to be charged equally, becauſe the whole is liable to the judgment; and this cannot be, if during the nonage, the burden ſhall fall upon one only. Jenk. Cent. 36. If lands are mortgaged, and then deviſed to one perſon for life, with remainder to another; both deviſees ſhall make contribution to payment of the mortgage-money. Chan. Caſ. 224, 271.

Where goods are caſt into the ſea, for the ſafe-guard of a ſhip, or other goods, &c. aboard in a tempeſt; there is a contribution among merchants, towards the loſs of the owners. 32 H. 8. c. 14. And where a robbery is committed on the highway, and damages are recovered againſt one or a few perſons, in an action againſt the hundred, the reſt of the inhabitants ſhall make contribution to the ſame. 27 Eliz. c. 13.

Contributione facienda, Is a writ that lieth where there are tenants in common, that are bound to do one thing, and one is put to the whole burden; or who jointly hold a mill pro indiviſo, and take the profits equally, and the mill falling into decay, one of them will not repair the mill; now the other ſhall have a writ to compel him to contribute to the reparations. And if there be three coparceners of land, that owe ſuit to the Lord's court, and the eldeſt performs the whole; then may ſhe have this writ to compel the other to make their contribution. So where one ſuit is required for land, and that land being ſold to divers perſons, ſuit is demanded of them all, or ſome of them by diſtreſs, as entirely as if all the land were ſtill in one. Reg. Orig. 175. F. N. B. 162.

Controller, (Fr. Contrerolleur, Lat. Contrarotulator) Is an overſeer or officer relating to public accounts, &c. And we have divers officers of this name; as controller of the King's Houſhold; of the Navy; of the Cuſtoms; of the Exciſe; of the Mint, &c. And in our courts, there is the controller of the Hamper, of the Pipe, and of the Pell, &c. The office of Controller of the Houſhold is to control the accounts of the Green Cloth; and he ſits with the Lord Steward and other Officers in the counting-houſe, for daily taking the accounts of all expences of the houſhold. The Comptroller of the Navy controls the payment of wages; examines and audits accounts; and inquires into rates of ſtores for ſhipping, &c. Controllers of the Cuſtoms and Exciſe, their office is to control the accounts of thoſe revenues: And the Controller of the Mint controls the payment of wages, and accounts relating to the ſame. Controller of the Hamper is an officer in the Chancery attending the Lord Chancellor daily in term-time, and upon ſeal days; whoſe office is to take all things ſealed from the Clerk of the Hamper, incloſed in bags of leather, and to note the juſt number and effect of all things ſo received, and enter the ſame in a book, with all the duties appertaining to his Majeſty, and other officers for the ſame. The Controller of the Pipe is an officer of the Exchequer, who writes out ſummons twice every year to the ſheriffs to levy the farms and debts of the Pipe; and keeps a controlment of the Pipes, &c. Controller of the Pell is alſo an officer of the Exchequer; of which ſort there are two, who are the Chamberlains clerks, that do or ſhould keep a controlment of the Pell, of receipts and goings out: And this officer was originally ſuch as took notes of other officers accounts or receipts, to the intent to diſcover if they dealt amiſs, and was ordained for the Prince's better ſecurity. Fleta, lib. 1. cap. 18. Stat. 12 Ed. 3. cap 3. This laſt ſeems to be the original uſe and deſign of all Controllers.

Controver, (Controuveur) Signifies in our law one that of his own head deviſes or invents falſe news. 2 Inſt. 227.

Convenable, (Fr.) Agreeable. Stat. 27 Ed. 3. c. 21. See Covenable.

Convenient, (Conveniens) Of the uſe of this word, the Lord Coke in his inſtitute ſays,—Non ſolum quod licet ſed quod eſt conveniens eſt conſiderandum, nihil quod eſt inconveniens eſt licitum. 1 Inſt. 66.

Convent, (Conventus) Signifies the fraternity of an abbey or priory; as ſocietas doth the number of fellows in a college. Bract. lib. 2. c. 35.

Conventicle, (Conventiculum) A private aſſembly or meeting for the exerciſe of religion; firſt attributed in diſgrace to the meetings of Wickliffe in this nation, above two hundred years ſince: and now applied to the illegal meetings of the Nonconformiſts: It is mentioned in the ſtatutes 2 Hen. 4. c. 15. 1 H. 6. c. 3. and 16 Car. 2. c. 4. which ſtatute was made to prevent and ſuppreſs conventicles: And by 22 Car. 2. cap. 1. It is enacted, that if any perſons of the age of ſixteen years, ſubjects of this kingdom, ſhall be preſent at any conventicle, where there are five or more aſſembled, they ſhall be fined 5 s. for the firſt offence, and 10 s. for the ſecond; and perſons preaching incur a penalty of 20 l. Alſo ſuffering a meeting to be held in a houſe, &c. is liable to 20 l. penalty. Juſtices of peace have power to enter ſuch houſes, and ſeize perſons aſſembled, &c. And if they neglect their duty, they ſhall forfeit 100 l. And if any conſtable, &c. know of ſuch meetings, and do not inform a juſtice of peace, or chief magiſtrate, he ſhall forfeit 5 l But the 1 W. & M. c. 18. ordains that proteſtant diſſenters ſhall be exempted from penalties: Though if they meet in a houſe, with the doors lock'd, barr'd, or bolted, ſuch diſſenters ſhall have no benefit from that ſtatute. Officers of the government, &c. preſent at any conventicle, at which there ſhall be ten perſons, if the Royal Family be not prayed for in expreſs words, ſhall forfeit 40 l. and be diſabled. Stat. 10 Ann. c. 2. See Hereſy.

Conventio, Is a word uſed in ancient law-pleadings, for an agreement or covenant: As A. B. queritur, &c. de C. D. &c. pro eo quod non teneat conventionem, &c. There is a pleaſant record of the court of the manor of Hatfield, in Com. Ebor. held Anno 11 Ed. 3. which runs thus: Robertus R. qui obtulit ſe verſus Johannem J. de eo quod non teneat conventionem inter eos factam, & unde queritur, quod certo die & anno apud, &c. convenit inter prædictum Robertum et Johannem, quod prædictus Johannes vendidit prædicto Roberto diabolum ligatum in quodam ligamine pro iii d. ob et prædictus Robertus tradidit prædicto Johanni quoddam obolum earles (i. e. earneſt-money) per quod proprietas dicti Diaboli commoratur in perſona dicti Roberti ad habend deliberationem dicti Diaboli, infra quartam diem prox. ſequent. Ad quam diem idem Robertus venit ad præfatum Johannem, et petit deliberationem dicti Diaboli, ſecundum conventionem inter eos factam; idem Johannes prædictum Diabolum deliberate noluit, nec adhuc vult, etc. ad grave dampnum ipſius Roberti lx. ſol. Et inde producit ſectam, etc. Et prædictus Johannes venit, etc. Et non dedicit coventionem prædictam. Et quia videtur curiæ quod tale placitum non jacet inter Chriſtianos, Ideo partes prædicti adjournantur uſque in infernum, ad audiendum judicium ſuum. et utraque pars in Miſericordia, etc.

Conventione, Is a writ that lies for the breach of any covenant in writing, whether real or perſonal: And it is called a Writ of Covenant. Reg. Orig. 115. F. N. B. 145.

Convention, Is properly where a parliament is aſſembled, but no act is paſſed, or bill ſigned, etc. See Parliament.

Convention Parliament. On the abdication of King James II. Anno 1689. The aſſembly of the ſtates of the kingdom, to take care of their rights and liberties, and who ſettled King William and Queen Mary on the throne, was called the Convention: And the Lords and Commons thus convened were declared the two houſes of parliament, notwithſtanding the want of any writ of ſummons, etc. Stat. 1 W. and M.

Conventuals, Are thoſe religious men who are united together in a convent or religious houſe. Cowel.

Conventual Church, Is a church that conſiſts of regular clerks, profeſſing ſome order of religion; or of Dean and Chapter, or other ſocieties of Spiritual Men.

Converſion, Is where a perſon finding or having the goods of another in his poſſeſſion, converts them to his own uſe, without the conſent of the owner, and for which the proprietor may maintain an action of Trover and Converſion againſt him.—And refuſal to reſtore goods is, prima facie, ſufficient evidence of a converſion, tho' it does not amount to a converſion. 10 Rep. 56. Black. Com. 3 V. 152.

Converſos. The Jews here in England were formerly called Converſos, becauſe they were converted to the Chriſtian religion. King Hen. 3. built an houſe for them in London, and allowed them a competent proviſion or ſubſiſtence for their lives; and this houſe was called Domus Converſorum. But by reaſon of the vaſt expences of the wars, and the increaſe of thoſe converts, they became a burden to the crown; ſo that they were placed in abbeys and monaſteries for their ſupport and maintenance. And the Jews being afterwards baniſhed, King Ed. 3. in the 51ſt year of his reign, gave this houſe which had been uſed for the converted Jews, for the keeping of the Rolls; and it is ſaid to be the ſame which is at this time enjoyed by the Maſter of the Rolls. Blount.

Conveyance, Is a deed which paſſes land from one man to another. Conveyance by feoffment, and livery, was the general conveyance at common law; and if there was a tenant in poſſeſſion, ſo that livery could not be made, then was the reverſion granted, and the tenant always attorned: Alſo upon the ſame reaſon, a leaſe, and releaſe was held to be a good conveyance, to paſs an eſtate; but the leſſee was to be in actual poſſeſſion, before the releaſe. But the leaſe is now conſidered as operating ſo as to give the poſſeſſion, which it does in point of law.

By the common law, when an eſtate did not paſs by feoffment, the vendor made a leaſe for years, and the leſſee actually entered; and the leſſor granted the reverſion to another, and the leſſee attorned: Afterwards, when an inheritance was to be granted, then likewiſe was a leaſe for years uſually made, and the leſſee entered (as before) and then the leſſor releaſed to him: But after the ſtatute of uſes, it became an opinion, that if a leaſe for years was made upon a valuable conſideration, a releaſe might operate upon it without an actual entry of the leſſee; becauſe the ſtatute did execute the leaſe, and raiſed an uſe preſently to the leſſee: And Serjeant Moor was the firſt who practiſed this way. 2 Mod. 251, 252.

The moſt common conveyances now in uſe are deeds of gift, bargain and ſale, leaſe and releaſe, fines and recoveries, ſettlemnets to uſes, &c. A ſon did give and grant lands to his mother, and her heirs; though this was a defective conveyance at common law, yet it was adjudged good by way of uſe, to ſupport the intention of the donor, and therefore, by theſe words, an uſe did ariſe to the mother by way of covenant to ſtand ſeiſed. 2 Lev. 225. A feoffment without livery and ſeiſin, will not enure as a grant; but where made in conſideration of a marriage, etc. it has been adjudged, that it did enure as a covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to uſes. 2 Lev. 213.

Tenant in fee, in conſideration of marriage, covenanted, granted, and agreed all that meſſuage to the uſe of himſelf for life, then to his wife for life, for her jointure, then to their firſt ſon in tail male, etc. Now by theſe words it appeared, that the huſband intended ſome benefit for his wife, wherefore the court ſupplied other words to make the conveyance ſenſible. 1 Lutw. 782. the words give and grant, etc. are proper for a conveyance at Common law; but it has been held, that though ſome books warrant that conveyances ſhall operate according to the words, yet of late the judges have a greater conſideration of the paſſing the eſtate, than the manner by which it is paſſed. 2 Lutw. 1209.

A conveyance cannot be fraudulent in part, and good as to the reſt: For if it be fraudulent and void in part, it is void in all, and it cannot be divided. 1 Lil. Abr. 311. Fraudulent conveyances to deceive creditors, defraud purchaſers, etc. are void, by Stat 50 Ed. 3. cap. 6. 13 Eliz. cap. 5. 27 Eliz. cap. 4. Vide Deeds.

Convict, (Convictus) Is he that is found guilty of an offence by verdict of a jury. Staund. P. C. 186. Crompton ſaith, That conviction is either when a man is outlawed, or appeareth and confeſſeth, or is found guilty by the inqueſt: And when a ſtatute excludes from clergy perſons found guilty of felony, etc, it extends to thoſe who are convicted by confeſſion. Cromp. Juſt. 9. The law implies a conviction, before puniſhment, though not mentioned in a ſtatute: And where any ſtatute makes a ſecond offence felony, or ſubject to a heavier puniſhment than the firſt, it is always implied that ſuch ſecond offence ought to be committed after a conviction for the firſt. 1 Hawk. P. C. 13, 107.

Judgment amounts to conviction; though it doth not follow that every one who is convict, is adjudged. Ibid. 14. A conviction at the King's ſuit may be pleaded to a ſuit by an informer, on a penal ſtatute; becauſe while in force it makes the party liable to the forfeiture, and no one ought to be puniſhed twice for the ſame offence: But conviction may not be pleaded to a new ſuit by the King. Ibid. 18. A perſon convicted or attainted of one felony, may be proſecuted for another, to bring acceſſaries to puniſhment, etc. Fitz. Coron 379.

On a joint indictment or information, ſome of the defendants may be acquitted, and others convicted. 2 Hawk. 240. Perſons convicted of felony by verdict, &c. are not to be admitted to bail, unleſs there be ſome ſpecial motive for granting it; as where a man is not the ſame perſon, &c. for bail ought to be before trial, when it ſtands indifferent whether the party be guilty, or not. Ibid. 99. 114. Conviction of felony, and other crimes, diſables a man to be a juror, witneſs, &c. By our books, conviction and attainder are often confounded.

Conviction, before juſtices of peace. When an act of parliament orders the conviction of offenders by juſtices of peace, &c. it muſt be intended after ſummons to bring them in, that they may have an opportunity of making their defence; and if it be otherwiſe, the conviction ſhall be quaſhed. Mich. 2 Ann. B. R. Mod. Caſ. 41.

Convict Recuſant, According to the ſtatutes. See Recuſants.

Convivium, Signifies the ſame thing among the laity, as procuratio doth with the clergy, viz. When the tenant by reaſon of his tenure is bound to provide meat and drink for his lord once or oftener in the year. Blount.

Convocation, (Convocatio) Is the aſſembly of all the clergy, to conſult of eccleſiaſtical matters in time of parliament: And as there are two houſes of parliament, ſo there are two houſes of convocation; the one called the Higher or Upper Houſe, where the archbiſhops and all the biſhops ſit ſeverally by themſelves; and the other the Lower Houſe of Convocation, where all the reſt of the clergy ſit, i. e. All deans and archdeacons, one proctor for every chapter, and two proctors for all the clergy of each dioceſe, making in the whole number one hundred and ſixty-ſix perſons. Each convocation houſe hath a prolocutor, choſen from among themſelves, and that of the lower houſe is preſented to the biſhops, &c.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury is the Preſident of the Convocation, and prorogues and diſſolves it by mandate from the King. The convocation exerciſes juriſdiction in making of canons, with the King's aſſent: For by the Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 19. the convocation is not only to be aſſembled by the King's writ; but the canons are to have the royal aſſent: They have the examining and cenſuring of heretical and ſchiſmatical books, and perſons, &c. But appeal lies to the King in Chancery, or to his delegates. 4 Inſt. 322. 2 Rol. Abr. 225. The clergy called to the convocation, and their ſervants, &c. have the ſame privileges as members of parliament. Stat. 8 H. 6. c. 1.

Conuſance of Pleas, A privilege that a city or town hath to hold pleas. See Cogniſance.

Conuſant, (Fr. Connoiſant) Knowing or underſtanding: As if the ſon be conuſant, and agreed to the feoffment, &c. Co. Lit. 159.

Coopers, Shall make their veſſels of ſeaſonable wood, and mark them with their own marks, on pain of 3*s.* 4*d.* forfeiture; and the contents of veſſels are appointed to be obſerved under like penalty, as the beer barrel ſhall contain 36 gallons, a kilderkin 18, and firkin 9, &c. The wardens of the Coopers company in London, with an officer of the mayor, are to ſearch all veſſels for ale beer, and ſoap to be ſold there; and to mark them that are right, and they may burn thoſe that be not ſo: And if any Cooper, &c. diminiſh a veſſel by taking out the head, or a ſtaff thereof, it ſhall be burnt, and the offender forfeit 3*s.* 4*d.* Alſo Coopers are to ſell their veſſels at ſuch rates as ſhall be ordained by juſtices, mayors, &c. 23 H. 8. c. 4. This laſt clauſe is repealed by 8 Eliz.. cap. 9.

Coopertio, The head or branches of a tree cut down; though Coopertio Arborum is rather the bark of timber trees felled, and the chumps and broken wood. Cowel.

Coopertura, A thicket or covert of wood. Chart. de Foreſta, cap. 12.

Coparceners, (Participes) Otherwiſe called Parceners, are ſuch as have equal portion in the inheritance of an anceſtor; and by law are the iſſue female, which, in default of heirs male, come in equality to the lands of their anceſtors. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 30. They are to make partition of the lands; which ought to be made by coparceners of full age, &c. And if the eſtate of a coparcener be in part evicted, the partition ſhall be avoided in the whole. Lit. 243. 1 Inſt. 173. 1 Rep. 87. The crown of England is not ſubject to coparcenary; and there is no coparcenary in dignities, &c. Co. Lit. 27. Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 22. Vide Parceners.

Copartnerſhip, Is a deed of covenants between merchants, or others, for carrying on a joint trade, &c.

Cope, Is a cuſtom or tribute due to the King, or lord of the ſoil, out of the lead mines in ſome part of Derbyſhire; of which Maniove ſaith thus:

Egreſs and regreſs to the King's Highway,
The miners have; and lot and cope they pay:
The thirteenth diſh of ore within their mine,
To the lord, for lot, they pay at meaſuring time;
Six-pence a load for cope the lord demands,
And that is paid to the berghmaſter's hands, &c.

Agreeable to this you may find in Sir John Pettus's Fodinæ Regales, where he treats on this ſubject. This word, by Domeſday Book, as Mr. Hagar hath interpreted it, ſignifies a hill: and Cope is taken for the ſupreme cover, as the cope of heaven. Alſo it is uſed for the roof and covering of a houſe; the upper garment of a prieſt, &c.

Copia Libelli deliberanda, Is a writ that lies where a man cannot get the copy of a libel at the hand of a judge eccleſiaſtical, to have the ſame delivered to him. Reg. Orig. 51.

Coppa, A cop or cock of graſs, hay or corn divided into titheable portions; as the tenth cock, &c. This word, in ſtrictneſs, denotes the gathering or laying up the corn in copes or heaps, as the method is for barley or oats, &c. not bound up, that it may be the more fairly and juſtly tithed: and in Kent they ſtill retain the word, a cop or cap of hay, ſtraw, &c. Thorn in Chron.

Copper and Copper Ore. Copper plates and copper fully wrought, to what duties liable, 4 and 5 W. and M. c. 5. ſect. 2. All copper may be exported paying the lawful duties and cuſtoms, 5 W. and M. c. 17.

Copy, (copia) Is in a legal ſenſe the tranſcript of an original writing; as the copy of a patent, of a charter, deed, &c. A clauſe out of a patent, taken from the chapel of the Rolls, cannot be given in evidence; but you muſt have a true copy of the whole charter examined: it is the ſame of a record. And if upon a trial, you will give part of a copy of an office in evidence to prove a deed, which deed is to prove the party's title to the land in queſtion that gives it in evidence; if that part of the office copy given in evidence, be not ſo much of it as doth any ways concern the land in queſtion, the court will not admit of it: for the court will have a copy of the whole given, or no part of it ſhall be admitted. 1 Lil. Abr. 312, 313. Where a deed is inrolled, certifying an atteſted copy is proof of the inrolment; and ſuch copy may be given in evidence. 3 Lev. 387. A common deed cannot be proved by a copy or counterpart, when the original may be procured. 10 Rep. 92. And a copy of a will of lands, or the probate, is not ſufficient; but the will muſt be ſhewn as evidence. 2 Rol. Abr. 74. Copies of court rolls admitted as evidence. See Evidence.

Copyhold, (tenura per copiam rotuli curiæ) Is a tenure for which the tenant hath nothing to ſhew but the copy of the rolls, made by the ſteward of the lord's court; on ſuch tenant's being admitted to any parcel of land or tenement belonging to the manor. 4 Rep. 25. It is called baſe tenure, becauſe held at the will of the lord: And Fitzherbert ſays, it was anciently tenure in villenage, and that copyhold is but a new name. Some copyholds are held by the verge in ancient demeſne; and though they are by copy, yet are they a kind of freehold; for if a tenant of ſuch copyhold commit felony, the King hath annum diem et vaſtum, as in the caſe of freeholders: ſome other copyholds are ſuch as the tenants hold by common tenure, called meer copyhold, whoſe land, upon felony committed, eſcheats to the lord of the manor. Kitch. 81. But copyhold land cannot be made at this day; for the pillars of a copyhold eſtate are, That it hath been demiſed time out of mind by copy of court-roll; and that the tenements are parcel of or within the manor. 1 Inſt. 58. 4 Rep. 24. A copyhold tenant had originally in judgment of law but an eſtate at will; yet cuſtom ſo eſtabliſhed his eſtate, that by the cuſtom of the manor it was deſcendible, and his heirs inherited it: and therefore the eſtate of the copyholder is not merely ad voluntatem domini, but ad voluntatem domini ſecundum conſuetudinem manerii; ſo that the cuſtom of the manor is the life of copyhold eſtates; for without a cuſtom, or if copyholders break their cuſtom, they are ſubject to the will of the lord: and as a copyhold is created by cuſtom, ſo it is guided by cuſtom. 4 Rep. 21. A copyholder, ſo long as he doth his ſervices, and doth not break the cuſtom of the manor, cannot be ejected by the lord; if he be, he ſhall have treſpaſs againſt him: but if a copyholder refuſes to perform his ſervices, it is a breach of the cuſtom, and forfeiture of his eſtate.

Copyholds deſcend according to the rules and maxims of the Common law, (unleſs in particular manors, where there are contrary cuſtoms, of great antiquity); but ſuch cuſtomary inheritances ſhall not be aſſets, to charge the heir in action of debt, &c. Ibid. Though a leaſe for one year of copyhold lands, which is warranted by the Common law, ſhall be aſſets in the hand of an executor. 1 Vent. 163. Copyholders hold their eſtates free from charges of dower, being created by cuſtom, which is paramount to title of dower. 4 Rep. 24. Copyhold inheritances have no collateral qualities, which do not concern the deſcent; as to make them aſſets; or whereof a wife may be endowed; a huſband be tenant by the curteſy, &c. But by particular cuſtom, there may be dower and tenancy by the curteſy. Cro. Eliz. 361. There may be an eſtate-tail in copyhold lands by cuſtom, with the cooperation of the ſtatute W. 2. And a copyhold may be entailed by cuſtom, ſo by cuſtom the tail may be cut off by ſurrender. 1 Inſt. 60.

A copyhold may be barred by a recovery, by ſpecial cuſtom; and a ſurrender may bar the iſſue by cuſtom. A fine and recovery at Common law will not deſtroy a copyhold eſtate; becauſe Common law aſſurances do not work upon the aſſurance of the copyhold: though copyhold lands are within the Stat 4 H. 7. c. 24. of fines and proclamations, and five years non-claim, and ſhall be barred. 1 Rol. Abr. 506.

A plaint may be made in the court of the manor, in the nature of a real action, and a recovery ſhall be had in that plaint againſt tenant in tail, and ſuch a recovery ſhall be a diſcontinuance to the eſtate-tail. 1 Brownl. 121. And the ſuffering a recovery by a copyholder tenant for life in the lord's court is no forfeiture, unleſs there is a particular cuſtom for it. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 507. Copyholders may entail copyhold lands, and bar the entails and remainders, by committing a forfeiture, as making leaſe without licence, &c. and then the lord is to make three proclamations, and ſeize the copyhold, after which the lands are granted to the copyholder, and his heirs, &c. This is the manner in ſome places, but it muſt be warranted by cuſtom. 2 Danv. Abr. 191. Sid. 314.

Cuſtoms ought to be time out of memory; to be reaſonable, &c. And a cuſtom in deprivation or bar of a copyhold eſtate, ſhall be taken ſtrictly; but when for making and maintaining, it ſhall be conſtrued favourably. Comp. Cop. ſect. 33. Cro. El. 879. An unreaſonable cuſtom, as for a lord to exact exorbitant fines; for a copyholder for life to cut down and ſell timber-trees, &c. is void. A copyholder for life pleaded a cuſtom, that every copyholder for life might, in the preſence of two other copyholders, appoint who ſhould have his copyhold after his death; and that the two copyholders might aſſeſs a fine, ſo as not to be leſs than had been uſually paid; and it was adjudged a good cuſtom. 4 Leon. 238. But a cuſtom to compel a lord to make a grant, is ſaid to be againſt law; though it may be good to admit a tenant. Moor 788.

By the cuſtom of ſome manors, where copyhold lands are granted to two or more perſons for lives, the perſon firſt named in the copy may ſurrender all the lands. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 497. There are cuſtoms ratione loci, different from other places: but though a cuſtom may be applied to a particular place; yet it is againſt the nature of a cuſtom of a manor to apply it to one particular tenant. 1 Nelſ. 504. 1 Lutw. 126.

There are uſually cuſtom rolls of manors, exhibited on oath by the tenants; ſetting forth the bounds of the manor, the royalties of the lord, ſervices of the copyhold tenants, the tenures granted, whether for life, &c. concerning admittances, ſurrenders, and the rights of the copyholders, as to taking timber for repairs, fire-boot, &c. Common belonging to the tenants, payment of rent, ſuing in the court of the manor, taking heriots, &c. All which cuſtoms are to be obſerved. Comp. Court Keep. 21.

When an act of parliament altereth the ſervice, cuſtoms, tenure, and intereſt of land, in prejudice of the lord or tenant, there the general words of ſuch an act ſhall not extend to copyholds. 3 Rep. 7. Copyholds are not within the Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 10. of jointures; nor the 32 H. 8. c. 36. of leaſes, copyholds being in their nature demiſable only by copy: they are not within the ſtatute of uſes; nor are copyholds extendible in execution: but copyholds are within the ſtatute of limitation of actions; and the 13 Eliz. c. 7. &c. againſt bankrupts. The lord ſhall have the cuſtody of the lands of ideots, &c. And a copyholder is not within the act 12 Car. 2. c. 24. to diſpoſe of the cuſtody and guardianſhip of the heir; for if there be a cuſtom for it, it belongs to the lord of the manor. 3 Lev. 395. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 492, 522.

Copyholders not to vote for knights of the ſhire. 31 Geo. 2. c. 14. ſect. 1. Aſſignees of inſolvent debtors to pay fines for copyholds. 1 Geo. 3. c. 17. ſect. 14. Copyholders ſhall neither implead nor be impleaded for their tenements by writ, but by plaint in the lord's court held within the manor: and if on ſuch plaint, erroneous judgment be given, no writ of falſe judgment lies, but petition to the lord in nature of a writ of falſe judgment, wherein errors are to be aſſigned, and remedy given according to law. Co. Lit. 60.

Where a man holds copyhold lands in truſt to ſurrender to another, &c. if he refuſes to ſurrender to the other accordingly, he may be compelled by bill exhibited in the lord's court, who, as chancellor, has power to do right. 1 Leon. 2. A copyholder may have a formedon in deſcender in the lord's court. Leſſee of a copyholder for life for one year, ſhall maintain an ejectment. 4 Rep. 26. Moor 679. It is every day's practice to bring ejectments, to recover the poſſeſſion of copyholds, for defendant by the rule, obliging himſelf to confeſs leaſe, entry, and ouſter, the title only can come in queſtion on the trial. But leſſor of plaintiff, before he brings his ejectment, ſhould be admitted.

A manor is loſt when there are no cuſtomary tenants or copyholders: and if a copyhold comes into the hands of the lord in fee, and the lord leaſes it for one year, or half a year, or for any certain time, it can never be granted by copy after: but if the lord aliens the manor, &c. his alienee may re-grant land by copy. If the lord keeps the copyhold for a long time in his hand, it is no impediment but that he may after grant it again by copy. 2 Danv. Abr. 176, 177. A copyholder in fee accepts of a leaſe, grant, or confirmation of the ſame land from the lord, this determines his copyhold eſtate. 2 Cro. 16. Cro. Jac. 253. If a copyholder bargains and ſells his copyhold to a leſſee for years, &c. of the manor, his copyhold is extinguiſhed. 2 Danv. 205. A copyholder may grant his eſtate to his lord, by bargain and ſale, releaſe, &c. for between lord and tenant the conveyance need not be according to cuſtom. 1 Nelſ. 504. A copyholder in other caſes cannot alien by deed: though he that hath a right only to a copyhold may releaſe it by deed. And if a copyholder ſurrenders upon condition, he may afterwards releaſe the condition by deed. 2 Danv. 205. Cro. Jac. 36. Alſo one joint copyholder may releaſe to another, which will be good without any admittance, &c. Ibid.

A copyholder cannot convey or transfer his copyhold eſtate to another, otherwiſe than by ſurrender; which is the yielding up of the land by the tenant to the lord, according to the cuſtom of the manor, to the uſe of him that is to have the eſtate: or it is in order to a new grant, and further eſtate in the ſame.

As to copyhold grants; which are made either in fee, or for three lives, &c. the lord of the manor that hath a lawful eſtate therein, whether he be tenant for life or years, tenant by ſtatute merchant, &c. or at will, is dominus pro tempore, and may grant lands, herbage of lands, a fair, mill, tithes, etc. and any thing that concerns lands, by copy of court-roll, according to cuſtom; and ſuch grants ſhall bind thoſe in remainder: the rents and ſervices reſerved by them ſhall be annexed to the manor, and attend the owner thereof after their particular eſtates are ended. 4 Rep. 23. 11 Rep. 18. And if a lord of the manor for the time being, leſſee for life, years, etc. take a ſurrender, and before admittance he dieth, or the years or intereſt determine, though the next lord comes in above the leaſe for life or years, or other particular intereſt, yet he ſhall be compelled to make admittance according to the ſurrender. Co. Lit. 59. But a lord at will, of a copyhold manor, cannot licence a copyhold tenant to make a leaſe for years; though he may grant a copyhold for life according to the cuſtom: if a lord for life gives licence to a tenant to make a leaſe for years, this leaſe ſhall continue no longer than the life of the lord. 2 Danv. Abr. 202

If he that is dominus pro tempore of the manor admits one to a copyhold, he diſpenſes with all precedent forfeitures; not only as to himſelf, but alſo as to him in reverſion; for ſuch grant and admittance amount to an entry for the forfeiture, and a new grant; but a lord by tort cannot by ſuch admittance purge the forfeiture as to the rightful lord. 1 Lev. 26. Grants by copy of court-roll by infants, etc. will be binding: and if a guardian in ſocage grants a copyhold in reverſion, according to the cuſtom of the manor, this ſhall be a good grant; for he is dominus pro tempore. 2 Rol. Abr. 41. If baron and feme ſeiſed of a manor in right of the feme grant a copyhold, this ſhall bind the feme notwithſtanding her coverture. 4 Rep. 23. An executor may make grants of copyhold eſtates, according to the cuſtom of the manor, where a deviſe is made that the executor ſhall grant copies for payment of debts. 2 Danv. 178.

A manor may be held by copy of court-roll, and the lord of ſuch manor grant copies; and ſuch cuſtomary manor may paſs by ſurrender and admittance, etc. A cuſtomary manor may be holden of another manor, and ſuch cuſtomary lord may grant copies and hold courts: but a copyholder lord of ſuch a manor cannot hold a court baron to have forfeitures, and hold pleas in a writ of right, etc. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 524.

All grants of copyhold eſtates are to be according to the cuſtom of the manor; and rents and ſervices cuſtomary muſt be reſerved; for what acts of the lord in granting copyholds are not confirmed by cuſtom, but only ſtrenghened by the power and intereſt of the lord; have no longer duration than the lord's eſtate continueth. Comp. Court. Keeper 421. If by the cuſtom, a copyhold may be granted for three lives, and the lord grants it to one for life, remainder to ſuch woman as he ſhall marry, and to the firſt ſon of his body; but theſe remainders are void; and a remainder limited upon a void eſtate in the creation, will be likewiſe void. But if by cuſtom it is demiſable in fee, a ſurrender may be to the uſe of one for life, remainder in tail, remainder in fee. 2 Danv. Abr. 203. Cro. Eliz. 373. It is held, where by the cuſtom of a manor the lord can grant a copyhold for three lives, he may grant it for an eſtate coming within the intent of the cuſtom; as to A. B. and his aſſigns, to hold to him and his aſſigns for the lives of three others, and of the longer liver of them ſucceſſively, etc. 2 Ld. Raym. 994, 1000.

The lord of a manor may himſelf grant a copyhold eſtate at any place out of the manor; but the ſteward cannot grant a copyhold at a court held out of the manor. 4 Rep. 26. Though the ſteward may take ſurrenders out of the manor, as well as the lord. 2 Danv. Abr. 181. A ſteward is in place of the lord; and without a command to the contrary may grant lands by copy, etc. But if a lord command a ſteward that he ſhall not grant ſuch a copy, if he grants it, it is void: and if the ſteward diminiſhes the ancient rents and ſervices, the grant will be void. Cro. Eliz. 699.

Things of neceſſity done by a ſteward, who is but in reputed authority, are good if they come in by preſentment of the jury; as the admittance of an heir upon preſentment, &c. Though acts voluntary, as grants of copyhold, &c. are not good by ſuch ſtewards. Ibid. If an under-ſteward hold a court without any diſturbance of the lord of the manor, though he hath no patent nor deputation to hold it, yet it is good; becauſe the tenants are not to examine what authority he hath, nor is he bound to give them an account of it. Moor 110. A deputy ſteward may authoriſe another to do a particular act; but cannot make a deputy to act in general. 2 Salk. 95.

In admittances, in court upon voluntary grants, the lord is proprietor; in admittances upon ſurrender, the lord is not proprietor of the lands, but only a neceſſary inſtrument of conveyance; and in admittances by deſcent the lord is a mere inſtrument, not being neceſſary to ſtrengthen the heir's title, but only to give the lord his fine. 4 Rep. 21, 22. The heir of a copyholder may enter, and bring treſpaſs, before admittance, being in by deſcent; and he may ſurrender before admittance: but he is not compleat tenant to be ſworn of the homage, or to maintain a plaint in the lord's court. And if the heir do not come in and be admitted, on the death of his anceſtor, where the ſame is preſented and proclamation made, he may forfeit his eſtate. Cro. El. 90. 4 Rep. 22, 27.

On ſurrender of a copyhold, the ſurrenderor or perſon making the ſame, continues tenant till the admittance of the ſurrendree; and the ſurrendree may not enter upon the lands, or ſurrender before admittance, for he hath no eſtate till then; though it is otherwiſe of the heir by deſcent, who is in by courſe of law, and the cuſtom caſts the poſſeſſion upon him. Comp. Court Keep. 436. A ſurrender is not of any effect until admittance, and yet the ſurrendree cannot be defrauded of the benefit of the ſurrender; for the ſurrenderor cannot paſs away the land to another, or make it ſubject to any other incumbrances; and if the lord refuſe the ſurrendree admittance, he is compellable in Chancery. Comp. Cop. ſect. 39. A grantee hath no intereſt veſted in him till he is admitted: but admittance of a copyholder for life is an admittance of him in remainder, for they are but one eſtate; and the remainder man may, after the death of tenant for life, ſurrender without admittance. 3 Lev. 308. Cro. El. 504.

Every admittance upon a deſcent or ſurrender may be pleaded as a grant; and a perſon may alledge the admittance of his anceſtor as a grant; and ſhew the deſcent to him, and that he entered, &c. But he cannot plead that his father was ſeiſed in fee, &c. and that he died ſeiſed, and the land deſcended to him. 2 Danv. 208. Admittance on ſurrender muſt, in all reſpects, agree with the ſurrender; the lord having only a cuſtomary power to admit ſecundum formam & effectum ſurſum redditionis. 4 Rep. 26. If any are admitted otherwiſe, they ſhall be ſeiſed according to the ſurrender: yet where a voluntary ſurrender is general, without ſaying to whoſe uſe, a ſubſequent admittance may explain it. 2 Danv. 187, 204.

In voluntary admittances, if the lord admits any one contrary to cuſtom, it ſhall not bind his heir or ſucceſſor. If a copyholder ſurrender to the uſe of another, and after the lord, having knowledge of it, accepts the rent of ſuch other out of court, this is an admittance in law: and any act, implying the conſent of the lord to the ſurrender, ſhall be adjudged a good admittance. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 493. If the ſteward accept a fine of a copyholder, it amounts to an admittance. 2 Danv. 189. But delivering a copy is no admittance.

Where a widow's eſtate is created by cuſtom, that ſhall be an admittance in law: and her eſtate ariſing out of that of her huſband's, his admittance is the admittance of her. Hut. 18. And ſhe who hath a widow's eſtate by the cuſtom of the manor, upon the death of her huſband, need not pay a fine to the lord for the eſtate; for this is only a branch of the huſband's. Hob. 181. When a cuſtom is, that the wife of every copyholder for life ſhall have her free bench, after the death of the baron, the law caſts the eſtate upon the wife, ſo that ſhe ſhall have it before admittance, &c. 2 Danv. 184. But if a wife is entitled to her free bench by cuſtom, and a copyholder in fee ſurrenders to the uſe of another, and then dies; it has been adjudged, that the ſurrendree ſhould have the land, and not the wife; becauſe the wife's title doth not commence till after the death of her huſband; but the plaintiff's title begins with the ſurrender, and the admittance relates to that. 1 Inſt. 59. 1 Salk. 185.

The widow's title commenceth not by the marriage; if it did, then the huſband could do nothing in his lifetime to prejudice it: but it is plain he may alien or extinguiſh his right, ſo as to bind the eſtate of the widow: the free bench grows out of the eſtate of the huſband; and it is his dying ſeiſed which gives the widow a title, and as the huſband has a defeaſible eſtate, ſo the wife may have her free-bank defeated. 4 Mod Rep. 452, 453.

Admittances are never by attorney, for the tenant ought to do fealty: though ſurrenders are oftentimes by attorney. 2 Danv. 189. A copyholder in fee may ſurrender in court, by letter of attorney: but not out of court, without a ſpecial cuſtom. 9 Rep. 75, 76. If one cannot come into court to ſurrender in perſon, the lord may appoint a ſpecial ſteward to go to him, and take the ſurrender. 1 Leon. 36. A copyholder being in Ireland; the ſteward of a manor here made a commiſſion to one to receive a ſurrender from him there, and it was held good. 2 Danv. 181.

The intent of ſurrenders is, that the lord may not be a ſtranger to his tenant, and the alteration of the eſtate. As a copyholder cannot transfer his eſtate to a ſtranger, by any other conveyance than ſurrender; ſo if one would exchange a copyhold with another, both muſt ſurrender to each other's uſe, and the lord admit accordingly: and if any perſon would deviſe a copyhold eſtate, he cannot do it by his will: but he muſt ſurrender to the uſe of his laſt will and teſtament, and in his will declare his intent. Comp. Cop. ſect. 36, 39. Alſo where a copyholder ſurrenders to the uſe of his will, the lands do not paſs by the will, but by the ſurrender; the will being only declaratory of the uſes of the ſurrender. 1 Bulſt. 200. But in caſe of a will, the Chancery will ſupply the defect of a ſurrender, in the behalf of children, if not to diſinherit the eldeſt ſon; and for the benefit of creditors, where a copyhold eſtate is charged by will with the payment of debts, though there is no ſurrender to thoſe uſes, it will be good in equity. 4 Rep. 25. 1 Salk. 187. 3 Salk. 84. Yet it is held, that equity ſhall not ſupply the want of ſuch ſurrender in favour of a grandchild; or baſtard, who is not conſidered as a child; or a wife againſt the heir; nor in behalf of legatees: but where the ſurrender is refuſed, a will of copyhold may be ſufficient without it. Abr. Caſ. Eq. 122, 124. Sed qu. If courts of equity have not ſupplied the want of a ſurrender, in favour of the widow; againſt the heir?

A ceſtui que truſt may deviſe an intereſt in land, &c. without ſurrender; and if copyhold lands are in mortgage, the mortgagor can diſpoſe of the equity of redemption by will, without any ſurrender made; becauſe he hath at that time no eſtate in the land, whereof to make a ſurrender. Preced. Canc. 320, 322. One jointenant may ſurrender his part in the lands to the uſe of his will, &c. And where there are two jointenants of a copyhold in fee, if one of them make a ſurrender to the uſe of his will, and die, and the deviſee is admitted, the ſurrender and admittance ſhall bind the ſurvivor. 2 Cro. 100.

A ſurrender may not be to commence in futuro; as after the death of the ſurrenderor, &c. though copyholds may be ſurrendered to the uſe of a man's will. March 177. A copyholder cannot ſurrender an eſtate abſolutely to another, and leave a particular eſtate in himſelf: though he may ſurrender to uſes, &c. A copyholder ſurrendered to the uſe of his wife and younger ſon, without mentioning what eſtate; and adjudged, that they had an eſtate for life. 4 Rep. 29. If a man having bought a copyhold to himſelf, his wife and daughter, and their heirs, afterwards ſurrenders it to another and his heirs, for ſecuring a ſum of money; after his death, the ſurrendree ſhall not be intitled to the land, it being an advancement for the wife and daughter. 2 Vern. 120.

A feme covert may receive a copyhold eſtate, by ſurrender from her huſband, becauſe ſhe comes not in immediately by him, but by the admittance of the lord, according to the ſurrender. 4 Rep. 29, b. A feme covert is to be ſecretly examined by the ſteward, on her ſurrendering her eſtate. Co. Lit. 59. An infant ſurrendered his copyhold, and afterwards entered at full age, and it was held lawful, though the ſurrendree was admitted. Moor 597.

By the general cuſtom of copyhold eſtates, copyholders may ſurrender in court, and need not alledge any particular cuſtom to warrant it: but where they ſurrender out of court, into the hands of the lord by cuſtomary tenants, &c. cuſtom muſt be pleaded. 9 Rep. 75. 1 Rol. Abr. 500. And ſurrenders out of court are to be preſented at the next court; for it is not an effectual ſurrender till preſented in court. Where a copyholder in fee ſurrenders out of court, and dies before it is preſented, yet the ſurrender, being preſented at the next court, will ſtand good, and ceſtui que uſe ſhall be admitted: ſo if ceſtui que uſe dies before it is preſented, his heir ſhall be admitted. But if the ſurrender be not preſented at the next court, it is void. Co. Lit. 62. 2 Danv. 188. If the tenants by whoſe hands the ſurrender was made ſhall die, and this upon proof is preſented in court, it is well enough. 4 Rep. 29.

Tenants refuſing to make preſentment, are compellable in the lord's court. And by ſurrender of copyhold lands to the uſe of a mortgagee, the lands are bound in equity, though the ſurrender be not preſented at the next court. 2 Salk. 449. When a copyholder ſurrenders upon condition, and this is preſented abſolutely, the preſentment is void; but where a conditional ſurrender is preſented, and the ſteward omits entering the condition, on proof thereof the condition ſhall not be avoided; but the rolls ſhall be amended. 4 Rep. 25. A copyholder may ſurrender to the uſe of another, reſerving rent with a condition of re-entry for non-payment, and in default of payment may re-enter. Ibid. 21.

If a copyholder of inheritance takes a leaſe for years of his copyhold eſtate, it is a ſurrender in law of his copyhold. Where there is a tenant for life, and remainder in fee, he in remainder may ſurrender his eſtate, if there be no cuſtom to the contrary. 3 Leon. 329. If a ſurrender is made with remainders over, caſe lies for him in remainder againſt a copyholder for life, who commits waſte, &c. 3 Lev. 128. A ſurrendree of a reverſion of a copy-a copyhold is an aſſignee within the equity of the Stat. 32 H. 8 c. 34. to bring action of debt or covenant againſt leſſee, &c. 1 Salk. 185. A copyholder in fee ſurrenders to the uſe of one for life, with remainder to another for life, remainder to another in fee; as the particular eſtates and remainders make but one eſtate, there is but one fine due to the lord. 2 Danv. 191.

Fines are paid to the lord on admittances; and may be due on every change of the eſtate by lord or tenant: in caſe of a ſurrender, the lord may make what fine he pleaſes; but fines are to be reaſonable; they are either certain, by cuſtom, or uncertain; a fine certain is to be paid preſently; but if it be uncertain, the copyholder is to have notice and time to pay it. The lord may have an action of debt for his fine; or may diſtrain by cuſtom. 4 Rep. 27. 13 Rep. 2.

An heriot is a duty to the lord, rendered at the death of the tenant, or on a ſurrender and alienation of an eſtate: and is the beſt beaſt or goods, found in the poſſeſſion of the tenant deceaſed, or otherwiſe, according to cuſtom. And for heriots, reliefs, etc. the lord may diſtrain, or bring action of debt. Plowd. 96.

Relief is a ſum of money which every copyholder in fee, or freeholder of a manor pays to the lord, on the death of his anceſtor; and is generally a year's profits of his land.

Services ſignify any duty whatſoever accruing unto the lord from tenants; and are not only annual, and accidental; but corporal, as homage, fealty, etc. Comp. Court. Keep. 7, 8, 9, etc.

Copyholds eſcheat, and are forfeited in many caſes; eſcheat of a copyhold eſtate, is either where the lands fall into the hands of the lord for want of an heir to inherit them; or where the copyholder commits felony, &c. But before the lord can enter on an eſtate eſcheated, the homage jury ought to preſent it. Forfeitures proceeding from treaſons, felonies, alienation by deed, etc. a preſentment of them muſt be alſo made in court, that the lord may have notice of them. A copyholder refuſing to do ſuit of court, being ſufficiently warned, is a forfeiture of his eſtate; unleſs he be prevented by ſickneſs, inundations of water, etc. If the lord demandeth his rent, and the copyholder being preſent denies to pay it at the time required, this is a forfeiture; but if the tenant be not upon the ground when demanded, the lord muſt continue his demand upon the land, ſo that by continual denial in law, it may amount to a denial in fact: though it is ſaid there muſt be a demand from the perſon of the copyholder, and a wilful denial, to make a forfeiture.

A copyholder, not performing the ſervices due to his lord; or if he ſue a replevin againſt the lord, upon the lord's lawful diſtreſs for his rent or ſervices, theſe are forfeitures. If the lord upon admittance of a copyholder, the fine by the cuſtom of the manor being certain, demandeth his fine, and the copyholder denieth to pay it upon demand, this is a forfeiture.

Upon the deſcent of any copyhold of inheritance, the heir by the general cuſtom is tied, upon three ſolemn proclamations, made at three ſeveral courts, to come in and be admitted to his copyhold; or if he faileth therein, this failure worketh a forfeiture; but if an infant come not in to be admitted at three proclamations, it is no forfeiture: ſo of one beyond ſea, etc.

An ideot, lunatick, &c. though able to take copyholds, yet they are unable to forfeit them: and in reſpect to others, forfeitures may be mitigated by cuſtom, and the copyholder only amerced. By Stat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 29. On default of infants and feme coverts appearing to be admitted tenants to copyhold lands, the lord or his ſteward may name a perſon to be guardian or attorney for them, and by ſuch guardian, etc. admit them: and if the uſual fine thereon be not paid in three months, being demanded in writing, the lord may enter on the copyhold, and receive the rents, etc. till the fine is paid with all charges. And by this ſtatute no infant or feme covert ſhall forfeit any copyhold lands for their neglect to come to court to be admitted, or refuſal to pay any fine.

The general cuſtom of copyholds allows a copyholder to make a leaſe for one year of his copyhold eſtate, and no more, without incurring a forfeiture; but a copyholder may make a leaſe for one year, and covenant with the leſſee, that, after the end of that year, he ſhall have the ſame for another year, and ſo de anno in annum during the ſpace of ſeven years, &c. and be no forfeiture. Cro. Jac. 300. For this does not amount to a leaſe, but is only a covenant, ſubjecting the covenantor to an action for damages. Though a copyholder may not make a leaſe to hold for one year, and ſo from year to year during his life, excepting one day yearly, &c. which will be a forfeiture, being a mere evaſion. But a licence to leaſe may be had. A woman who was a copyholder in fee married, her huſband made a leaſe for years, not warranted by the cuſtom, which was a forfeiture; the huſband died; and adjudged that the lord ſhall not take advantage of this forfeiture after his death, but the wife ſhall enjoy the eſtate. Cro. Car. 7. And ſee 4 Rep. 21 to 25, &c.

Livery upon any conveyance of a copyhold eſtate amounts to a forfeiture. And yet if a copyholder for life ſurrender to another in fee, this is no forfeiture; for it paſſeth by the ſurrender to the lord, and not by livery.

If copyholder for life cuts down timber-trees, it is a forfeiture of his copyhold: though ſuch copyholder may take houſe-boot, hedge-boot, and plough-boot, upon his copyhold, of common right, as a thing incident to the grant; if he be not reſtrained by cuſtom, to take them by the aſſignment of the lord or his bailiff. Where a copyholder for life fells timber-trees, the lord may take them, and the eſtate is forfeited: but if under-leſſee for years of a copyholder cut down timber, this ſhall not be a forfeiture of the copyhold eſtate, but the lord is put to his action on the caſe againſt the leſſee. 1 Bulſt. 150. Style 253. A copyhold granted to two for their lives ſucceſſively, where the cuſtom of the manor is, that they ſhall not fell trees; if the firſt copyholder for life cut down trees, &c. it is not only a forfeiture of his own eſtate for life, but of him in remainder. Moor 49.

In other caſes, a copyholder for life, committing waſte, ſhall not forfeit the eſtate of him in remainder. Cro. Eliz. 880. If copyholder for life, where the remainder is over for life, commits a forfeiture by waſte, &c. he in remainder ſhall not enter, but the lord. 2 Danv. 198. A copyholder committing waſte voluntary, or permiſſive, this is a forfeiture: voluntary, as if he pull down any houſe, though built by himſelf; lop trees, and ſell them, plough up meadow, whereby the ground is made worſe, &c. Permiſſive, if he ſuffer the roof of the houſe to let in rain, or the houſe to fall; or if he permit his meadow ground to be ſurrounded with water, ſo that it becomes marſhy, or his arable land to be thus ſurrounded and become unprofitable, &c. theſe and the like are forfeitures. See 2 Danv. Abr. 192, 193, 196, &c. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 509, 510, &c. But it muſt be by his wilful default.

If a feme copyholder for life takes huſband, who commits waſte and dies, the eſtate of the feme is forfeited: Though not if a ſtranger commit the waſte, without the aſſent of the huſband. 4 Rep. 37. Sed. qu. the difference between copyholder for life, and copyholder in fee, in this reſpect; unleſs waſte is diſtinguiſhed from other forfeitures?

Moſt forfeitures are cauſed by acts contrary to the tenure: But a ſucceeding lord of a manor, ſhall not have any advantage of a forfeiture, by waſte done by a copyholder in the time of his predeceſſor. 2 Sid. 8. And if a preſent Lord doth any thing whereby he acknowledges the perſon to be his tenant after forfeiture, this acknowledgment is a confirmation of his eſtate. Coke's Cop. 61.

The Court of Chancery will not relieve a copyhold tenant, againſt a voluntary forfeiture, on committing waſte, &c. But it doth for permiſſive waſte; and when the eſtate is forfeited for non-payment of rent, a fine, or ſuch things, where a value may be ſet on them, and compenſation made the Lord on any laches of time, the tenant may be relieved; for there the land is but in nature of a ſecurity for thoſe ſums. Preced. Chanc. 569, 572.

In caſe of making a leaſe for years, without licence, and not warranted by cuſtom, found to be a forfeiture at law, equity has nothing to do with it, to give any remedy;

medy; it is like to a ſeoffment made, or fine levied by particular tenants, againſt which there can be no relief. Ibid. 574. Where copyhold lands are purchaſed in fee, in truſt for an alien, the lands are not ſeizable by the King; nor is the truſt forfeited to him; for if the lands were forfeited as purchaſed for ſuch alien, then the lord of the manor would loſe his fines and ſervices, &c. Hard. 436.

Corody, (Corodium) Signifies a ſum of money or allowance of meat, drink, and clothing due to the King from an abbey, or other houſe of religion, whereof he was founder, towards the ſuſtentation of ſuch a one of his ſervants as he thought fit to beſtow it upon. The difference between a corody and penſion ſeems to be, that a corody was allowed towards the maintenance of any of the King's ſervants in an abbey: A penſion is given to one of the King's chaplains, for his better maintenance, till he may be provided of a benefice: And of both theſe you may read Fitz. Nat. Br. fol. 250. where are ſet down all the corodies and penſions that our abbies, when they were ſtanding, were obliged to pay to the King.

Corody is ancient in our laws: And it is mentioned in Staundf. Prærog. 44. And by the ſtat. of Weſtm. 2. c. 25. it is ordained, that an aſſiſe ſhall lie for a corody. It is alſo apparent by 34 & 35 H. 8. cap. 26. that corodies belonged ſometimes to biſhops, and noblemen, from monaſteries: And in the New Terms of Law, it is ſaid that a corody may be due to a common perſon, by grant from one to another; or of common right to him that is a founder of a religious houſe, not holden in Frank Almoine; for that tenure was a diſcharge of all corodies in itſelf: By this book it likewiſe appears, that a corody is either certain or uncertain, and may be not only for life or years, but in fee. Terms de Ley. 2 Inſt. 630. See the Monaſticon Anglicanum, for the form of a grant of a corody.

Corodio Habendo, A writ to exact a corody of an abbey or religious houſe. Reg. Orig. 264.

Corona Mala, or Mala Corona, The clergy who abuſed their character, were formerly ſo called. Blount.
